Resolutions.

The President; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

[The discussion on the Resolutions on the Revised Financial Statements was resumed.],

THE PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chandra Mitter is unable to be here at present owing to a public engagement elsewhere, and he has therefore asked my permission to the postponement of Resolution No. XIX until a later period in the day. I have agreed to postpone it and also No. XX which deals with the same subject. The first item this morning will be Resolution No. XXI, and I call upon the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move it."

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXI.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 2 lakhs be provided for grants for buildings of Secondary Schools ; and
- (b) the said sum be met out of the allotment of Rs. 1,04,308 for additional temporary force for Intelligence Branch (Police) and Rs. 2,13,446 for increase of temporary force for District Intelligence staff.

He said :—

"My Lord, I desire to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government to the fact that under the present regulations of the University, when schools cannot admit a large number of boys, and even in the interests of education itself, it is not desirable that classes should be crammed by a large number of students, it is necessary to have a larger number of schools for the education of our boys. It is admitted, as was stated by the Rev. Dr. Howells that there is a great thirst for education in the country especially, in this Province yet several schools cannot be affiliated to the University for the Matriculation examination and even some secondary schools cannot be approved by the Department on account of their buildings being unsuitable for the purpose. Prior to the regulations passed both by the Department of Public Instruction and the University, schools used to be held in all sorts of houses, brick-built, mud-built and thatched houses as well ; but nowadays special attention is paid to school buildings and necessarily before sanction is granted to the affiliation of a school by the University great stress is laid upon the building regulations, and it has been found impossible by public bodies to establish these schools without some aid from Government. In one particular instance, there was a union school started at Rampur Hât. It had been in existence for the last six or seven years and it had on its roll 500 students. An affiliation has not been granted to it, because they have not been able to build a suitable house for its location. This is one of the many schools in the Presidency which suffer for want of a proper building for its accommodation.

My resolution therefore, is a modest request for the provision of funds for the building of schools in this Presidency. I have suggested that the amount may be met from a reduction in the allotment for an additional temporary force for the Intelligence Branch. In this connection, I wish to explain that it is not my intention, and I do not believe that it is the intention of any of my non-official colleagues, to object to any expenditure on the police administration, as we are all interested in the efficiency of the police administration, for the protection of our own person and property, that the police force should be maintained in an efficient state; but when we object to the extravagant expenditure on police, we say that the expenditure is not commensurate with the work done by the police, and the efficiency cannot be secured only by a large amount of expenditure on the police. It has been stated that the urgent demands of the police have to be met in order to keep the force in efficiency and carry on the Government, but if the Director of Public Instruction and the Sanitary Commissioner be asked, they will also be able to say that there are many urgent schemes ready for sanction and which cannot be sanctioned for want of funds. But the difference between the police department and other departments is that the police department always attribute all their shortcomings to the want of proper funds and facilities to carry on their business, whereas other departments have not this excuse. I, therefore, submit that provision should be made for 2 lakhs for grants for buildings of secondary schools.

I may also mention, in this connection, that more than a year ago I had the honour of moving a resolution in this Council, to the effect that a Government high school be established at the headquarters of the district of Burdwan. The Hon'ble Mr. Hornell, who was then the Director of Public Instruction, accepted my resolution, and in his speech he stated that such a school was urgently needed in the Burdwan town. Burdwan is one of the two districts in this Presidency where there is not a middle school maintained by Government; but some progress has been made in making the school, a site has been selected, but we cannot proceed further with the school, absolutely for want funds. We have been told that the orders of the Government of India are that we cannot draw on our balance or enter into new expenditure which is not absolutely necessary or of an urgent character. I submit, my Lord, that the starting of secondary schools in this Presidency is of a more urgent and necessary character than the provision of facilities for the police. We all believe that the Police do their work properly with the facilities that are placed at their command at the present moment and that with additional grants they can do much better. But what I would like to urge in this connection is, that the superior officers in the Police department should not show a great anxiety when the actions of their subordinates are criticised; in that case only the police force will materially improve. With these few words, I beg to commend my resolution to the acceptance of this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, in opposing this Resolution on behalf of Government, I wish to make two things clear; one, that we have, in our Provincial Education budget, allotted the sum of money for which the Hon'ble Member presses; the other, that even if we had greater resources given to us this coming year, we could not spend them. This is not in any way a criticism of any department, certainly not of my own department; it is merely a regret. One Hon'ble Member, in moving yesterday a proposal for the erection of a hostel at Kanchrapara, referred to the want of celerity with which schemes can develop and his animadversion was appreciated by the Council.

"Building schemes progress less rapidly than any others. Their rate of progress is determined by many factors, none of which makes for acceleration. There are the difficulties of finding and purchasing sites, of the preparation and approval of plans and, above all, of securing those local contributions which by Government policy are necessary to secure grants-in-aid from Government. We have considerable experience of our spending power in this matter, and the grants that have come to us have for some years been found sufficient. We have not asked for more than the usual provision for the next year because we have calculated our possibilities, and do not expect to be able to spend more in the coming year than we have in recent years. The figures that I have for capital grants to non-Government schools and colleges in recent years are :—

Resolutions.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

						Rs.

and in the coming year, we contemplate spending a lakh on grants to schools, both aided and un-aided. This means that we have a number of schemes which are so far advanced that we can reasonably expect them to be brought, during the coming year, to that point at which Government grants to this extent may be made. It is not probable that any schemes not yet outlined will advance to that point during the year. The present times are peculiarly difficult for schools ; building is expensive, material difficult to obtain, and the local contributions necessary are not forthcoming to the same degree as they were a few years ago. For these reasons the majority of high schools are deciding to postpone building operations until a more convenient time. I trust I have made it clear that the department of Education and Government are in full sympathy with the Hon'ble Member. We shall do what we can ; if we have miscalculated and if it appears that we shall be in a position to use more money in grants than the provision already made in our budget, we shall take steps, in the ordinary administrative way, to meet the position. The figures in our budget are—

					Rs.
for grants-in-aid to Indian schools and colleges, for building and purchase of sites, for hostels	1,75,000
ditto to European schools	30,000

It is not probable that we shall require more than this, and on behalf of the Government, I oppose the resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :— .

"The reply given by the Director of Public Instruction on behalf of Government has, I am sorry, come upon me as a surprise. This is the first time that we hear that there is difficulty in spending the money that may be allotted for the purpose of building high schools or grants-in-aid to high schools. So long we have been under the impression that there was no money to be spent. I know that schemes are to be matured before any grant can be made, but very few schemes have been taken in hand and other schemes could not be taken up simply because there was no money to be had. What is the good of drawing up schemes if there is no money ? It has been stated by the Director of Public Instruction that it is difficult to get local contributions. I cannot speak with any authority about other schools but the union school at Rampur Hât, in the district of Birbhum. I am sure the local contribution is forthcoming and the Committee has collected money for the purposes of the building, and with a reasonable grant from Government they will be able to build their school and get it affiliated. The only other school which I know of, is the zilla school at Burdwan ; there a site has been selected and the only difficulty is that building operations cannot be commenced before we get the necessary money from Government for starting it. I am, however, glad to find that Government and the Department of Education are in sympathy with this resolution and I trust that if we are able, so far as my part of the province is concerned, to come forward with some scheme the Director will give it a sympathetic consideration and that he will be in a position to grant us some money for it, therefore, beg leave to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXII.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 50,000 be set apart for creating a provident fund for the benefit of guru training and primary school pandits ; and
- (b) the amount be met by curtailing a portion of the sums set apart for the last two items under head "20—Police".

He said :—

"My Lord, I plead the cause of the very poorly paid teachers in the primary schools. We have got a large Imperial recurring grant of 9 lakhs and it was hoped that a large portion of it would go to the benefit of these primary school pandits but unfortunately nothing has been done this year ; I have not been able to find any special provision in the budget for the next year also. Something is, no doubt, proposed for the teachers in Government Schools and some Madrassah teachers but nothing for the teachers of the guru training or primary schools. These pandits generally get Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a month whereas even a coolie earns Rs. 20 a month. Provision has been made for grain compensation allowance to menials but nothing has been done for these poorly paid pandits. I don't know why it is impossible to do anything for them. If something could be done for them it will be much appreciated. I ask in this resolution that a sum of Rs. 50,000 may be set apart for starting a provident fund. As far as I know there is no such provision at present. To give a start, a special sum should be granted and if proper arrangements be made with the help of District Boards these teachers will be largely benefited and when they retire after a service of 20 or 25 years they will have something like Rs. 250 or Rs. 300 to their credit as provision in their old days. This year there was a provision of 98 lakhs in the Education budget but in the Revised budget we see only 81 lakhs ; so there is a saving of 17 lakhs. For the next year's budget I see a provision of practically the same amount plus a special grant received from the Imperial Government for primary education ; so I think if this modest sum could be set apart and a start given to this much-needed reform it will greatly benefit the poor teachers and they will greatly appreciate the concession. My prayer is very modest and there can be no objection to its being granted. Though it was not clearly stated in my resolution but I had in my mind the curtailment of expenditure on two new proposals, one for the reorganisation of the river police in Eastern Bengal, and another for the establishment of police-stations. There might be some delay in doing these works and also a large sum has been provided under the Police head of the Budget—we may not be able to spend the whole amount. Anyhow the sum may be obtained either from the savings under the head "Education" or the head "Police", and I hope there will be no difficulty in granting the sum. With these few words I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, the proposal before the Council is that Government should set apart half a lakh to start a provident fund for teachers employed in primary schools or guru training schools. I may explain, as some Hon'ble Members may not be aware of it, that a guru training school is a school in which a primary school teacher is trained in the art of teaching. As the Council knows, a provident fund is, as a rule, a matter in which employers and employed alone are interested, and before you start a fund, a number of points of principle have to be settled. In some cases the employé's contribution is optional—he may or may not join the fund and be admitted to its benefits—in other cases it is compulsory and a condition of his employment. A contribution up to a certain percentage of pay may be obligatory; a contribution of more than that percentage may be optional. Many employers do not admit low-paid employés to the benefits of a provident fund, either, it may be, because their pay is so small that they cannot be expected to subscribe, or because they have no continuity of service, i.e., they may be employed one week and leave their employment the next. I am afraid I am stating somewhat elementary principles, but I wish to show that the establishment of a provident fund is not a simple matter which can be settled out of hand, especially when a large body of employés is concerned. You have to determine a number of important points. For instance, shall the fund be compulsory or optional? What shall be the contribution of the employer and the employé? What shall be the lowest pay at which an employé shall be allowed to join a provident fund?

Resolutions.

Mr. O'Malley.

Another point, to which I want to draw the attention of the Council, is that a provident fund is, as a rule, started by employers for the benefit of their own employés. The proposal before the Council is that Government should start a provident fund for primary school teachers whether in its employ or not. The number of primary school teachers in Government service in this Presidency is comparatively small. There are, in round figures, 40,000 primary school teachers in Bengal. The great majority are employed in aided schools, i.e., schools which receive grants-in-aid either from Government direct or from local boards or district boards and are maintained with the help of those grants and the income from fees. Teachers in these private schools draw their pay from the school funds, which are, made up of the grants-in-aid and the income from fees. They do not get pay from either Government or the district boards, and are not in their employ. A minority are in the employ of local bodies such as district boards. The latter have their own provident funds, but only employés drawing a certain amount of pay are admitted to them. Other teachers again are employed in unaided schools.

The object of the resolution, so far as I can gather, is that Government should supplement the grants they already give for maintaining schools, and also for increasing the pay of teachers in aided schools, by starting a provident fund for teachers, including those who are neither in the employ of Government nor in that of local bodies, without reference to their rates of pay and without knowing whether their employers will join such a scheme. This proposal, to my thinking, raises complicated issues.

Provident funds have already been started for a few colleges and a certain number of schools without Government aid. In the Presidency Division, they have been started in four selected non-Government schools and the total number of teachers who have joined them is over 1,100. In Chittagong, the Municipal High School has got a provident fund. Other high schools elsewhere have also got a provident fund. These benefit a few teachers and are admittedly a drop in the ocean. Government recognize that there is much to be said for starting provident funds for teachers. It would be an important step in improving the condition of a body of men who perform valuable functions of a public nature—I say public nature as education is a matter of public concern. It would help to create a regular profession by making the prospects of teaching so attractive as to prevent men using it merely as a stepping stone to other employment. At the same time, I think the Council will realize that a number of knotty questions arise, on which Government are not at present prepared to make any pronouncement of policy. For instance—Should Government start a provident fund at the expense of the State for all teachers? Should a start be made with only certain classes of teachers, e.g., those who have a more or less definite status, who have made teaching their regular profession, and who have a rate of pay which will enable them to subscribe without hardship? How far should employers other than Government, i.e., local bodies, school committees, etc., be required to join in a scheme? These, I venture to submit, are considerations of importance. I trust that the Council will realize that the question is one of real complexity.

Government have, however, endeavoured to tackle the problem. Some time ago it made definite proposals for the establishment of a provident fund for certain institutions. The scheme was submitted to the Government of India, but they directed that it should be reconsidered in the light of proposals for the establishment of a general provident fund for teachers not only of colleges and secondary schools, but also of primary schools. The Director is now engaged in preparing an estimate of cost and seeing to what classes of institutions and teachers such a scheme can be extended. This is a very difficult business, considering the large number of teachers in Bengal (20,000 secondary and 40,000 primary), some under Government and some under local bodies, but most in private employ, their different rates of pay, some fixed and some fluctuating. Some, moreover, have no permanency of employment, being engaged for the term only and then dismissed. Actuarial calculations are necessary, and these are very troublesome.

There is also the question to be considered whether low-paid primary school teachers should be compelled to contribute out of their slender salary. The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri has stated that pandits get from Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a month. I am afraid that in some parts of the Presidency they do not get as much. I have here a statement which will show that Pandits in schools under private management get a great deal less. For instance, in the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions (excluding Calcutta), the average rate of pay is :—

Burdwan	7 8
Presidency (excluding Calcutta)	7 8 and in the remaining divisions the average rate is :—

					Rs. A.
Dacca	7 1
Chittagong	6 7
Rajshahi	7 9

In the case of teachers drawing such low rates of pay I submit that it is more important at present to raise the pay than to deduct money for a provident fund from a small salary.

Sir, I regret that I am unable to accept this resolution in view of these facts. We have no scheme before us for starting provident funds : we must first know what the cost will be, what teachers are to be admitted to it and whether local bodies are likely to join in it. While Government cannot accept the resolution, the Hon'ble Moyer may be satisfied that the question is receiving close attention. In the meantime, Government are ready to agree. When provident funds are actually started, to set aside a part of the 9 lakhs recurring grant for a Government contribution for primary and secondary school teachers."

The Hon'ble BABU KISORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I have heard the reply of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley. I know that there are difficulties in the way of accepting my proposal, as a large number of teachers work under local bodies and the latter should be consulted. My idea, however, is that if something be done by Government the local bodies will be able to come forward and the employes also will appreciate the action of Government. I do not mean that anything should be deducted from the pay of the teachers ; but my idea is that even if we cannot pay a large sum, at least we should arrange to pay in some cases direct and in some cases through the help of the local boards for the provision of this fund. I am, however, glad to learn that some scheme is going to be matured and that Government will consider this question sympathetically, and in that view I do not wish to press this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXIII.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 50,000 be provided in the Budget for contribution towards creation of a Professors' and Teachers' Insurance and Provident Fund ; and
- (b) the said sum be taken out of the provision of Rs. 96,58,000 under head Police, District Executive Force.

He said :—

"My Lord, this resolution is somewhat larger in scope than the one that has just been disposed of ; it recommends that a sum of Rs. 50,000 be provided in the budget for contribution towards creation of a Professors' and Teachers' Insurance and Provident Fund and that the said sum be taken out of the Police budget. This is a matter to which I made detailed reference at the last budget debate and I am glad that my Hon'ble friend Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, has brought forward a resolution dealing with part of this very large question. I was wondering, Sir, how these educational resolutions came to be classed under the head Police. Of course the official explanation would be that we have sought to interfere with police expenditure and that is why it is found its way under that category. But when I looked at the heading first there appeared to my mind the larger principle that good education is really police work. When the teacher is abroad the police work is naturally less. And more schools and better teachers would or ought to mean less crime and thus be a higher form of police work. My Lord, the question of school education is one of the acutest in our present educational policy—whether it touches the University education, or whether it touches industrial, commercial or agricultural education or whether it touches the larger question of primary education, for which, by the way, I am grateful to notice a large provision has been made. That is the feeling everywhere—even where University education is very much at a discount. There can be no difference of opinion that upon the spirit and quality of school education depends very much the future of the country. That is why I and many other members of this Council have taken the opportunity of bringing before it some of the problems intimately connected with school education. I am responsible for three resolutions on this paper, one dealing with teachers' and professors' provident fund, another with the housing of schools and the third about the text-books—all intimately connected with the success of the scheme that we all have at heart. After the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's very full explanation with regard to the previous resolution I should not have thought of going into details about this resolution. I realize very much the difficulties which the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has suggested in regard to primary schools and what my Hon'ble friend Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri kept back has been brought out by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley. Our teachers get what we do not venture to offer to our menials. For along time we have not paid them what may be considered a reasonable salary and yet it is necessary that this class of very useful public servants should be better provided for. It stands to reason that they cannot be expected to continue to do good work unless something better is done for them. If we cannot substantially add to their pay, we should try to make them free from those worries and troubles which a family man always has in mind. That is the object of this resolution. I know that there are no ready and formulated schemes before us, but the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has told us that the question has long been engaging the attention of the Government and there are already some suggestions for schemes before the Government. Would it not be possible, with the materials before us, to formulate a scheme by which some relief could be given at least for the present. We are attempting to organize village unions, we are attempting to organize co-operative societies very properly, but is it not much more our duty to organize a teachers' guild? Mr. O'Malley has mentioned one difficulty—the lack of continuity of service of teachers. But if we can give them some sort of scheme it will probably be possible to secure continuity of service. If they can make a fairly substantial provision for their families they will naturally stick to their posts and not risk losing the benefits under the scheme. That in itself would be a reason, to my mind, that there should be some effort in this direction. The difficulties that Mr. O'Malley has referred to do not affect the question in the case of high school teachers and college professors. He has given us figures which are more or less correct. There are, we are told, twenty thousand teachers in high schools. But the largeness of this figure strengthens my case.

Then there is the body of professors and teachers in our colleges and schools whose number would be something like 2,000. These useful and important public servants—for though in private service they are public servants in the highest sense of the term are all insufficiently paid. It is a matter of the utmost importance to draw up a scheme to make these men free from pecuniary worry. The way that I propose to work the scheme is as follows:—It makes no difference to a man whether he gets Rs. 19 or Rs. 20 a month, and if that one rupee from his pay goes to the Provident Fund, it would mean much. And as much as he pays in should be paid by his employer. I would have 5 per cent. or even 10 per cent. of this pay divided between the provident fund and the insurance fund. The scheme of insurance may not be favourably looked at, but the insurance scheme would be useful to his unprovided family in case of premature death. If we have a fairly satisfactory insurance scheme of our own added to the provident fund scheme, the result would be very encouraging. At present if his father is dead, the teacher goes quietly to a money lender and borrows money from him for the ~~small~~ at an interest of Rs. 150 per cent. per annum, and from his pay of Rs. 20 a month, he has got to pay the interest and he has got very little left for the maintenance of the family. But if there is a scheme like this and if he is in need of the money he can go to the Secretary and take a loan which he will repay within a fixed period. Another feature of the scheme would be that you make the teacher more independent. The question of compulsory provision will naturally come in. About the continuity of the service, if the teacher left before a certain time he would lose the contribution made by the employing agency and would have to be content only with the return of his own contribution with interest. This would be a sort of premium on the continuity of the service. The question of the continuity of service is far more acute in private, than in Government, institutions. The problem is difficult no doubt, but the very difficulty of it makes it obligatory on us to formulate a scheme. The difficulty of there not being a completely—ready scheme is one that must be reckoned with. No scheme however can be ready till the initiative is taken and in order to do so I suggest that this fifty thousand rupees be earmarked as a part of organising expenses. Sir Edward MacLagan has suggested a scheme but it is purely a provident fund scheme and there is no reason why an insurance scheme should not also be introduced. For all these reasons it appears to me that although the scheme for gurus and pandits may have defects that have been pointed out in connection with the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri's resolution, in the case of the scheme that I venture to suggest the difficulties are to a certain extent minimized and they are capable of being effectively dealt with. For all these reasons I venture to commend this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Dr. HOWELLS said :—

"My Lord, I would like to give my hearty support in a general way to the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor in proposing this resolution. It seems to me—and I have thought over it for a long time—that it is really at the root of educational progress in this country. The problem has been recognized for a long time in England and those who have been following educational progress and educational schemes in England know the very big part that problems of this character have played and are playing in all proposals for furthering and improving educational plans for the future. The problem is, as I have seen it for years, a very pressing one in this country. I feel some hesitation in the form of the proposal to take away from the police fund for the furthering of education for I am not for decreasing the efficiency of the police. I believe in making the police force more efficient and better paid, especially in the lower ranks. But as the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor has pointed out this problem of sound elementary education under proper conditions has a very definite bearing on the life of the community and even on matters of general morale of the country as a whole. All will admit that the foundations of national progress are in the schools and there is no hope of getting thoroughly well equipped and thoroughly efficient schools from all points of view if the teachers are of the lower type. There is in India a real respect for the teachers' calling and the old traditions of the teachers' calling as a sacred one are still to a large degree existent. On the other hand the pressure of modern life is very considerable and even in the teachers' profession the labourer is worthy of his hire. At present I think all will admit that the teachers' calling is most inadequately paid, most inadequately provided for and the general tendency is for the teachers to take a post in a school or college for the time being and to clear out as soon as they are able to do so. We cannot of course compete, it is undesirable to compete from the material point of view with other calling like the police force or like the executive service, but still it is highly desirable if we are to enable men of really high ideals to come in as teachers without feeling that they may be deprived at any time of the bare necessities of life, it is highly important that something should be done and done soon in the direction proposed by this resolution. What I should like to feel is that Government is seriously tackling the problem. Some years ago at Serampore College we had certain proposals sent to us by the Government regarding a provident fund for teachers and professors. We were at the time considering our own provident fund in connection with the College and we thought that Government were really contemplating something on a much bigger and better scale and so for the time we let things drop. Of course in a matter of this nature it is not desirable to be unduly hasty, but the matter is being pressed upon us and for the present we are delaying things. We want to feel that Government are really tackling the problem and tackling it in a far more thorough and satisfactory way than is possible in the case of private institutions. I do think that Government have very great responsibility in the matter and it would be a very real help to those responsible for educational work in this country if we feel that we have the general sympathy of the Government in this problem and that things are really coming to a head and that we may safely postpone for the present our own smaller schemes with the full confidence that before very long a great advance will be made in the direction of formulating a scheme with the intention of making provisions for teachers in this country.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, the resolution of the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor appears to be of a somewhat larger scope than that moved by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri. I take it that the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor makes three substantive proposals; first, that there should be an insurance as well as a provident fund; secondly, that these shall not be confined to primary schools but also be extended to professors in colleges and teachers in secondary schools. I am sorry that the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor has not been able to agree to my figures."

The Hon'ble Dr. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My figures were based on guess. I accept the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's figures."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"The third point of the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor is the most important one. So far as I can gather, what the Hon'ble Vice-Chancellor really desires is that the pay and prospects of the teachers should be improved. If we take one rupee from the pay of a teacher on Rs. 20, the net pay will be Rs. 19, so that he can contribute, say, one rupee to the provident fund; and then Government should raise the pay to Rs. 20. I gather that he means that the pay of all teachers should be increased by 5 per cent. and that they should contribute 5 per cent. of their present pay to the provident fund. I think that the intention is that not only should Government but also private employers, and I presume also local bodies, contribute the 5 per cent. addition. It is somewhat difficult at present to say how far the employers can be compelled to do this. I do not understand also what contribution Government should make when the fund is started, or what rate local or private bodies should make contributions. All this is, if I may say so, without disrespect to the Hon'ble Member, somewhat indefinite; what is wanted is a practical scheme and that, as I have already told the Council, is now being enquired into by the Director of Public Instruction.

"However, the idea is that Government should start by giving Rs. 50,000 for increasing the pay of teachers. A general all-round increase of 5 per cent. would involve a large sum, the number of secondary teachers in

Resolutions.Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

Bengal is over 20,000 and there are 40,000 primary teachers. If you take the average pay of secondary teachers at as low a figure as, say, Rs. 200 a year or under Rs. 20 a month, the increase would be 2 lakhs a year. If you assume that the average pay of the primary school teachers is Rs. 100 or a little over Rs. 8 a month, the amount required would be another two lakhs. The grand total for both would on this basis be 4 lakhs a year.

"I may perhaps remind the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor of what Government has already done in recent years to increase the pay of teachers owing to the Imperial grants. First, take the case of secondary schools; 1½ lakh is distributed annually among teachers in Government and aided secondary schools so as to bring up their salaries to an adequate scale. Local allowances of Rs. 50 a month are also given to head-masters and head-mistresses of high schools who are in the Subordinate Educational Service and of Rs. 20 to assistant head-masters and head-mistresses of high schools who are in the same Service. Allowances of Rs. 30 a month are also given to head-masters of Middle English schools. It is also proposed to spend over 3 lakhs out of the 9 lakhs grant on increasing the salary of teachers in Government High and Middle English schools and Rs. 1,20,000 in raising the salary of teachers in aided and unaided High and Middle English schools. Our proposals require the sanction of the Secretary of State and his orders are awaited.

"As regards aided primary schools and maktabs, the pay was undoubtedly low and had been raised by 1908 owing to the receipt of what is called the Durbar grant, by Re. 1 in the case of untrained, and by Rs. 3 in the case of trained teachers. Since then the salaries of untrained teachers have been increased by Re. 1 a month and of trained teachers by Rs. 4 a month, at a total cost of 5½ lakhs a year, bringing up their pay to Rs. 8 and Rs. 11, respectively; besides this, the stipends of teachers under training have been raised to the uniform rate of Rs. 10 a month. Thanks to the 9 lakhs grant, the pay of trained teachers in boys' schools has now been raised by Rs. 2 a month so as to bring up their pay to Rs. 13 a month, while Rs. 35,000 have been allotted for increasing the pay of teachers in girls' primary schools. These figures will, I trust, be sufficient to show that Government have done their best to raise the pay of teachers in recent years. The increase in the case of untrained teachers is 33½ per cent. while the pay of trained teachers has nearly been doubled. I am afraid that without larger funds, Government cannot do more at present.

"The creation of a provident fund is, as I have already said, under consideration, but Government is not yet in a position to say what teachers will be admitted to its benefits and on what terms. Government is, however, ready to set aside from the 9 lakhs grant the sum mentioned by the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor for a teachers' provident fund as soon as it can be started."

The Hon'ble Dr. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My Lord, I am very sorry to be at cross purposes with my Hon'ble friend opposite. So far as I recollect, we have never been so. It is a case of clear misunderstanding and the whole of his methodical argument is lost on the situation. I did not for a moment think of pressing for an increase in the salary of teachers either of Government or of private schools. My resolution asks for a contribution towards the creation of a provident and an insurance fund. I am aware that a large amount of spade-work is to be done; that is why I ask for initial organising expenses; a special officer may have to be appointed, perhaps more than one officer may have to go into the whole question and consider as to which schools or colleges ought to be admitted into the scheme, what class of teachers ought to be admitted and so on. And there is also the question of compulsory admission to be considered. And it is for this purpose that I am asking for a fairly small amount of money. I do not know what the scope of the Government scheme is, but if it covers all the ground I have suggested, and if a reasonable scheme is likely to be ready soon, there is no use of my asking for any additional sum for the purpose. Four lakhs of rupees, as the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley suggests, would be nothing like adequate towards increasing the pay of the teachers. That is not the idea at all. The idea is to start a fund with small contributions from the teachers as well as the employers. As regards compulsion, the trained teachers of recognized schools shall belong to the scheme—so also in the case of professors of recognized colleges. In the case of primary schools the matter will not certainly be easy, because there will be no corresponding controlling authority. The question whether the primary schools for which my Hon'ble friend, Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri has urged, should be allowed to participate in the scheme or not, may be left over if there be insuperable difficulty for present; if we cannot tackle the whole question, there is no reason why we should not try to tackle at least a part of it.

Regarding the police expenditure, I am quite at one with the Hon'ble Dr. Howells. We should do nothing that would weaken or be detrimental to the police force, but I must say that if only Rs. 50,000 is taken out of Rs. 96,58,000, the whole of which I am assured cannot be spent this year, it will not make much difference.

We have it on the authority of the Hon'ble Dr. Howells that other people are sitting with their hands tied because of the expectation that Government are going to do something at the earliest possible opportunity. Government cannot of course fully finance the scheme, nor do I invite the Government to do so. But I do invite them to start the fund as soon as possible to which teachers as well as their employers will have to contribute. The Government may be considering a bigger scheme in connection with the whole question; but the question cannot be taken up unless you first make the special provision for organisation which I have suggested. However, if we are assured that the scheme is being considered in all its aspects, and will soon be ready my object is gained. I do not see that any useful purpose would be served by pressing my resolution. I therefore beg to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXIV.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum be set apart for the free distribution of quinine in all municipal towns in the Province especially affected by malaria; and
- (b) the additional sum required over and above the sum of Rs. 3,000 already allotted for this purpose be met from General Reserve under head "32.—Miscellaneous" and by reduction of a portion of the sums set apart for the last two items under head "20.—Police".

Resolutions.Mr. O'Malley.

He said :—

" My Lord, in this resolution I suggest that distribution of quinine, as proposed in the budget, should be more liberal. In August last my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, brought forward this question before Your Lordship and the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell suggested that the question should be properly dealt with at the budget time. Some assurance was then given that the Government would do the needful. That is my excuse for bringing forward this resolution now. I come, my Lord, from a district (Rajshahi) which suffers from malaria. I have seen the report of Dr. Bentley, the Sanitary Commissioner, for the year 1915 and it has been noticed that the death-rate from fever in most of the districts of North Bengal (Birbhum, Nadia and some other districts are also very great sufferers) is more than 38 per mille in comparison with the death-rate of Calcutta, which comes to no more than 5 per mille as far as I remember. It is now an admitted fact that a large use of quinine is the proper remedy for checking the progress of fever. At Malda a travelling dispensary was started and in the report I notice it did useful work. Rs. 3,000 or so is provided in the next year's budget but the sum is very inadequate especially as the price of quinine has gone up very high. I think the most important duty of the Sanitary Department is to fight out malaria first and I cordially acknowledge Your Lordship's great sympathy in this direction. I therefore, hope that a liberal grant will be made for the free distribution of quinine. I know that in mufassal dispensaries there is a great demand for large supplies of quinine but the funds at their disposal are not enough to cope with the difficulty. I have not named a definite sum ; all I suggest is that as far as possible a larger grant should be made than is needed and that by curtailment from " Miscellaneous " under head 32 and some portion may be taken out of the grant for police. In whatever way it may be found my earnest request is, —I am a sufferer from malaria myself and my district is the greatest sufferer (after Rajshahi comes Rangpur, Dinajpur, Bogra and Malda),—that sufficient funds should be provided. With these words I commend my resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

" My Lord, I am afraid that the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution is under a misapprehension as to the object of the provision made for the distribution of quinine to municipalities. This grant was first made about three years ago when the Surgeon-General drew attention to the fact that the amount of quinine given to patients at dispensaries was not enough to cure even mild cases of malarial fever. Inadequate doses being given, patients got no relief, and not unnaturally people suspected the value of quinine. On the other hand, patent medicines containing large doses of quinine found a ready market and were sold at a much higher price. The Surgeon-General urged that doses should be sufficient to ensure recovery and cure, and that not less than one treatment, i.e., 80 grains, should be given to patients suffering from malaria. It was obvious that if these instructions were given effect to, some municipalities would have to spend a good deal more on the supply of quinine to their dispensaries. It was realized that some poorer municipalities might need financial assistance, and therefore Government expressed its readiness to consider applications for grants-in-aid for municipalities whose income was insufficient to meet the additional charge.

" At the same time—and I would lay stress on this principle—it was laid down that the cost of quinine in adequate doses was legitimate charge upon the municipalities and should be borne by them. There was no idea that

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

Government should supply quinine free but merely that it should help poor municipalities to provide enough to cure fever when otherwise patients would not get enough. Government must adhere to this principle. It is the duty of municipalities to see to the medical relief of those persons in municipal limits who cannot afford private doctors and to provide quinine like other medicines. Government cannot accept the proposition that it should distribute quinine free to municipalities regardless of their circumstances. The criterion must be the means of municipalities and not the prevalence of malaria. Unfortunately, malaria is prevalent in most parts of Bengal, and if this resolution was accepted, it might be held to mean that Government was expected to provide nearly every municipality with quinine. This is scarcely practicable. Rich municipalities are perfectly well able to provide quinine and cannot expect Government to relieve them of this part of their duty. On the other hand, Government steps in where expenditure is necessary for the relief of fever which a municipality cannot meet. It rests with the municipalities to apply for a grant when they want it. I have examined the returns for the last 3 years and find that one out of every six municipalities has had a quinine grant. The amounts vary according to the financial circumstances of the municipalities. Though the price of quinine has risen, most municipalities can give sufficient supplies without assistance; as a rule needy municipalities only require a small grant. The amount of Rs. 3,000 has generally been found sufficient. In one year it was not sufficient but supplementary grants were made to the municipalities. It is fully expected that the allotment will be found sufficient. If it is not, I have no doubt that Government will by the usual method of administrative routine manage to provide the extra amount required. I regret that I cannot recommend this resolution to the Council."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I am opposed in this prayer. I know at least that for the Municipal dispensary at Rampur Boalia, where the municipal fund is not sufficient to make a special grant to the dispensary for very useful purposes, district board's assistance is sought, and through there is a rule to the effect that no grant should be made from the district board fund for any expenditure within municipal limits yet simply because the municipal dispensary benefits a large number of persons residing outside municipal areas more than Rs. 1,000 annually is granted for the District Board for the purchase of quinine. It is in this way that the municipal dispensary is in a position to meet the demand. Our most important duty is to combat the progress of malaria and Dr. Bentley's report has made it quite clear that a large use of quinine is the most effective remedy. If that is so—and when a large amount is going to be spent for sanitary purposes—I fail to understand why adequate provision should not be made to fight against malaria. I am told that more than Rs. 3,000 will not be required, but as I have just now submitted there is a necessity, and I know of some municipal dispensaries, as for instance, Dinajpur, where more quinine is necessary, but the municipal fund is not sufficient. Moreover, the price of quinine has gone up and that is an additional reason why help should be given. All I suggest is that provision be made: if there is no special demand and if the Council think that it can be met in any other way the money will not be spent. But for emergency a larger provision is necessary. I cannot accept that a provision of Rs. 3,000 will be sufficient for the whole province and therefore I press for the decision of the Council."

*Resolutions.Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter.APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XIX.

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHUNDER MITTER moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the sum of Rupees six lakhs and sixty-four thousand provided for the construction of buildings in connection with the partition of the district of Midnapur be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, I am aware that the details of the partition scheme were settled after full discussion; but I believe that these schemes were settled before the Bengal Government, with the approval of the Government of India, decided upon the experiment of appointing non-official chairmen of District Boards and also before the announcement of the progressive realization of responsible government was made by the Secretary of State for India in Council in August last year. These are two very important aspects regarding the future administration of the various districts in this Province.

As regards the administration of District Boards by non-official chairmen there are two important points which bear upon the administration of a district. In the first place, a good deal of the magistrate-chairman's time used to be taken up by the administration of the affairs of District Boards.

In the second place, if the official-chairman has to discharge his duties without the assistance of a whole-time official he will find himself in a position of great difficulty if his charge be a very heavy one, such as the district of Midnapur with an area of 5,114 square miles, a population of 20,82,000 and an income of six lakhs of rupees. Under the proposals which found acceptance with the Government this district is to be divided into two portions—one with an area of 2,688 square miles and a population of a little over one million and the other with an area of 2,467 square miles and a population of one million seventy thousand and odd. If a non-official chairman has to discharge his duties satisfactorily, an area and a population like the above will be too much for him, unless, he has some permanent official to assist him. If the Government proceeds with the buildings at Kharagpur, the proposed headquarters of one of the two districts and if it is afterwards found that the districts should be divided into three, and if the non-official chairman has no official assistance, the result will be that the money will be thrown away. We have examples of such waste—if I may make use of that expression—about the buildings of the new capital of Dacca.

I desire to make it clear that I am not opposed to the partition of districts if necessities of the situation require such partition. But I am opposed to spending money in bricks and mortar where there is a very reasonable chance of such money being thrown away.

Then, my Lord, the reforms as well as the experiment of appointing non-official chairmen may affect the district administration in other ways. It may be that when the District Magistrate is relieved of his important duties with regard to the administration of the District Board and when some other department is created as a sequence of the reforms, divisions of the districts on other lines may become necessary. For these reasons I ask that this work be kept in abeyance for the present. I may mention incidentally that there are two partition schemes—one regarding Mymensingh and the other regarding Midnapur. In the case of the former, arrangements have been made for the acquisition of land. I do not object to this as you will have land instead of money; but I am opposed to spending on bricks and mortar because there is a chance of the money being thrown away. I therefore, suggest to the Council that the amount may be kept in abeyance for the present.

Resolutions.Mr. Kerr.

The Hon'ble Mr. KERR said :—

"My Lord, before I deal with the points raised by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Mitter, I should like to make a few general observations on the course of this debate regarding these partition schemes. The Council will remember that last year, as on the present occasion, we had a large number of resolutions proposing that the money allotted for the partition of these two districts, Mymensingh and Midnapur, should be diverted to other purposes, useful and laudable purposes no doubt in most cases, but purposes entirely outside the schemes for which provision has been made in the budget, with the sanction of the Government of India and the approval of the Finance Committee of this Council. This year we have exactly the same position, and apparently some of the Members of this Council contemplate that we should have a full dress debate or a whole series of full dress debates annually on the whole question of the policy of partitioning these heavy districts. Now, these partition schemes will cost a great deal of money, and they cannot be carried out in a single year. Provision will have to be made in the budget for several years to come, and I suggest to the Council that it is rather a waste of time to have a full dress debate annually on the propriety of providing funds for these schemes. It is also a very unbusinesslike proceeding from other points of view. The Council decided by a large majority last year that provision for these schemes should stand, and that Government should go ahead with the schemes. Well, we have gone ahead with the schemes. In Midnapur, we have begun burning bricks, we have completed the lay-out of the new station at Hijli, and we are ready to start putting up buildings next financial year; in Mymensingh, we have had a small army of officers of all departments, sanitary officers, public works officers and so on, examining sites, taking levels, and carrying out all those preliminary arrangements which have to be gone through before building operations can begin in a swampy district like Mymensingh. Just think what it would mean, now that we have embarked on this programme, if the officers of Government who have to carry out these schemes never know from year to year whether funds would be provided for the proposal. If Government refused them funds after the schemes had made a start, they would have to discharge their contractors, paying them compensation no doubt, disband their staff, relinquish their brickfields and let valuable materials lie rotting in the open. This way of doing business is clearly impossible, and I submit that as a business like body this Council ought to let these schemes proceed and not interfere with the modest sums which have been put in the budget for the coming year.

"In these circumstances, it is not necessary for me to repeat what was said last year in justification of these schemes. I only want to say one thing and it is relevant to what the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has said, that the main object of these schemes is not to relieve over-worked officials or to make them more comfortable. The main object is to increase the welfare and comfort of the inhabitants of the districts concerned. Reforms are in the air. We hope, in a few weeks, to introduce a Bill which contains our proposals for a comprehensive scheme of local self-government, under which the people in the villages will be able to manage their own affairs and make such improvements, as they may desire, in the matter of sanitation, primary education and so forth. It is quite clear that no schemes of this kind can be worked in overgrown districts like Midnapur and Mymensingh. The District Officer, under existing conditions, can barely carry out his current work. He has no time to initiate any new departures and he has no leisure to get into touch with the leaders of the rural population who ultimately will be responsible for carrying out these reforms in local self-government from which this Council rightly hopes a great deal.

Resolutions.Mr. Kerr.

"Then, the Hon'ble Member has mentioned the case of non-official chairmen of district boards. I think he probably realizes that it is quite impossible for a non-official chairman, however capable and self-sacrificing, to take charge of a district like Midnapur or Mymensingh, even if he was willing to give up the whole of his time to the service of the Board.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has said, as he said last year, that he is no enemy to partition schemes as such. I only wish I could count on him as a real warm-hearted friend. At the present time, it seems to me that he is highly neutral rather than really friendly. Last year, his reason for moving the postponement was that the estimates were not ready and that the future financial position was uncertain. He now suggests that the Midnapur scheme should be indefinitely postponed, in view of the fact that the coming constitutional changes may necessitate the reconsideration of the policy of partition of districts. Now, there are two ways in which the changes may be taken to affect the size of districts; one is that by a re-distribution of work, and making over a large amount of work to non-official agencies, it may be possible for the District Officers to run big districts like Mymensingh and Midnapur. I may say at once that there is not the slightest doubt that, whatever form the changes may take, the work of the District Officers, as such, is bound to be increased. I cannot prophecy anything about the political changes which may come in this Council and in the higher branches of the administration, but whatever may happen, we shall certainly have a great development of activity in the matter of rural self-government, and that is bound to throw an enormous amount of work on the District Officer. Moreover, unless the District Officer is in a position to attend to that sort of work, we cannot hope for success within the next generation at any rate. I think, therefore, that the Council may at once dismiss from its consideration any idea that it will be possible to maintain these large districts in their present form when the constitutional reforms come into force.

"The other alternative, which is mentioned by the Hon'ble Mover, is that it may be found necessary, in view of these reforms, to subdivide districts into smaller units than are proposed in the scheme which is now before the Council. All I have to say about this, is that the scheme for the partition of Midnapur involves the creation of two districts of about 2,500 square miles each, one with a population of over a million, and the other with a population of over a million and a half. If the constitutional reforms necessitate our dividing districts into smaller units than this, then the expenditure will be enormous. There are 16 districts with an area of over 2,500 square miles and 13 districts with a population of over a million and a half. Districts not exceeding 2,500 square miles in area and with a population not exceeding 1½ millions may be regarded as fairly manageable districts under the present system of administration. If we are to create another 20 or 30 districts in the Presidency as it stands, I am afraid the realization of the reforms will be indefinitely delayed. This, my Lord, is surely not a consummation which is desired by most Hon'ble Members of this Council.

"Coming down to the practical effects of the proposals in regard to Midnapur, the non-recurring expenditure of six lakhs, which is referred to in the resolution, will be incurred in erecting buildings in two places. There is first the new district headquarters at Hijli near Kharagpur and, secondly the new subdivisional headquarters at Jhargram. It happens that I am well acquainted with the local conditions of Midnapur, as it was my good fortune to serve there as District Officer. I can, therefore, tell the Council something about these places. Kharagpur is undoubtedly at the present day the most important place in the district and its importance is likely to increase. It is, as Hon'ble Members may be aware, the junction of the railway lines from Calcutta to Madras and from Calcutta to Bombay, and there is also a line running up to the coal fields. It is also an important pilgrim centre and emigration centre, and its position as a railway junction must make it an increasingly important trade centre. So far as we can judge, it is a place which will always be suitable for a district headquarters, whatever further developments in the way of new divisions of the district may become necessary. Even if in the dim future it should be found necessary to divide the southern Midnapur district further, perhaps by the creation of a district with its headquarters at Contai along the Bay of Bengal, it may be regarded as certain that Kharagpur will always be a suitable place for the headquarters of the district containing the thickly populated areas of Tamluk, Panchkura and Sabang.

"The case of Jhargram is rather different. It is in the centre of the aboriginal area. A subdivision is urgently required for this area, and is indeed a necessary corollary of the recent legislation which has been passed in this Council, restricting the alienation of land by Santhals. That legislation will, as the Council have realized, throw a great deal of work on the executive officers of Government, and it would be quite impossible for that work to be dealt with so long as the subdivisinal headquarters of the aboriginal area is at Midnapur, 30 or 40 miles away, and so long as the Sadar subdivision of Midnapur is an unwieldy area of over 2,000 square miles. For the proper working of the new Act, the presence of responsible executive officers of Government on the spot in the aboriginal area is absolutely essential; and the Council may be assured that once a subdivision has been created there, there will be no necessity for its removal for generations to come. As a Scotsman myself, I sympathize with the caution displayed by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Mitter, but I think he is showing himself unduly cautious. I can assure the Hon'ble Member and the Council that there are no grounds for apprehending that we shall be prejudicing the constitutional reforms or laying up trouble for our successors if we go ahead with the scheme as it stands. There is no reason for hesitating to carry out this scheme which is the result of more than ten year's investigation and consideration. I trust, therefore, that the Council will endorse the decision which was passed last year and allow this provision to stand, so that we can get on with the schemes."

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHUNDER MITTER said :—

"My Lord, my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, has pointed out that there was a discussion last year on this question, and in view of the criticisms of Government, it was hardly necessary to raise this discussion this year. But I submit that the two points I have raised are points which have arisen since the discussion took place last year. That being so, the first few observations of my Hon'ble friend have hardly any bearing on the points I have raised. I have not, for example, suggested that the money saved by keeping this scheme in abeyance, be spent on sanitation or other matters as some of my friends have said. I have not, for example, suggested that the object of these schemes is to make the District Officer more comfortable; I did not say this either this year or last year. I may remind my friend that my object is just the object he has, namely, to make the administration more efficient. The whole question of the location of the principal towns in the districts may have to be revised. I have put forward my point of view before the Council as I feel it my duty to do so. I do not want to press this resolution to a division, and I leave the matter at the hand of the Government so that it may not be said afterwards that this money was thrown away and that the point was not raised."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

*Resolutions.Maulvi Abul Kasem ; The President ; Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XX.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the amount allotted for the construction of buildings in connection with the partition of Midnapur and for acquisition of lands in Mymensingh be not spent during the next year.

He said :—

"My Lord, after the discussion that has taken place on the last resolution I do not think it will serve any useful purpose by moving this resolution. I think Your Excellency is convinced that the consensus of opinion, so far as the non-official members are concerned, is that they think that expenditure on the partition of Midnapur and Mymensingh could be delayed for a year or so and that the money be spent on other matters, but as we have had a full discussion on this matter I beg leave to withdraw the resolution".

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I have received a request from the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq for the postponement of resolutions Nos. XXV and XXVI to a later period in the day on the ground that he is detained by professional duty in the High Court. I am anxious to go, as far as I can, in meeting the convenience of the Hon'ble Members, and I am willing to accede to his request on this occasion, but I would ask the Council not to regard this a precedent which is to be followed in future. Alterations made in the order paper of business, cause considerable inconvenience to other Hon'ble Members ; and I think it is undesirable that such alterations should be made unless very good reason for so doing can be shown. In this connection, I draw a distinction between a request for postponement by a Hon'ble Member on the ground that he is detained by an engagement of a public or semi-official character and that of an Hon'ble Member who asks for postponement on the grounds that he is detained by an engagement of a professional or private character. There is to my mind a clear distinction between the two cases ; in the case of Mr. Provash Chandra Mitter he was unable to be present at the meeting of Council because he was detained by an engagement of a public or, we may say, of a semi-official character. I hope, therefore, as I have said before, that though I am going to accede to the request of the Hon'ble Maulvi on this occasion, Hon'ble Members will not perhaps regard this as a precedent for the future. Under these circumstances, the next item (No. XXVII) will be moved by the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor."

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXVII.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following Resolution—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a provision may be made in the Budget for Rs. 2,00,000 to be divided between Calcutta and the municipalities in such proportion as the Government may think fit for giving building grants to unaided high schools ; and
- (b) the said sum be taken out of the grant of Rs. 75,000 for works in progress and new works in connection with the reorganisation of the subordinate police in Eastern Bengal.

Resolutions.

Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

He said :—

"My Lord, I listened to the reply of the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction in connection with the resolution of the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem higher up in the list. But the ground covered by this resolution is somewhat different from that of the Hon'ble Maulvi. My suggestion is not to devote the whole of this grant for the purpose of financing any one scheme of building, but to give such assistance to deserving private schools as may possibly help them to complete any scheme that they may have in view. I indicated some features of that scheme last year and have also done so this year elsewhere and I crave leave to bring it before this Council in order to enable it to judge whether help of the kind that I ask for ought not to be granted. My Lord, it is well known that most of our schools are very badly housed. I do not think any one can claim exemption from the blame in this respect. We needed and need no elaborate results to arrive at that result. The question is entirely one of resources. I recognize that Government have their own burden with regard to their own institutions. I also recognize that they are doing their best to cope with the responsibility. But there is a large number of other schools with regard to which such help ought not to be altogether withheld. The second class of schools, namely, aided schools gets Government help under certain conditions. But a large number of private unaided schools are very badly housed and under no circumstances can they cope with the housing problem unless some help of the kind that I am asking for on their behalf is forthcoming. I recognize, my Lord, that it is not possible for Government or any public body to finance them to the fullest extent or anywhere near it. It is only small sums that can be granted to them and that is what I ask for. My scheme would be shortly somewhat as follows :—

Where a school is doing fairly good work, is able to show some funds to its credit and is able to induce some building syndicate or company to build a school-house for it, according to approved plans—there I would invite help of the kind that I am suggesting. If a school is able to show that help would be necessary for building a school-house and if it is able to induce some one to take up the building work and invest thirty-five thousand rupees, I would invite Government to grant it ten, fifteen or twenty thousand rupees, as the case may be, so that the syndicate in question may have what we call in legal parlance a margin of security to start with and with this margin and the first charge on the property to be built the building firm or syndicate will be expected to make the necessary advances, and to build the house. Seemingly complicated as the scheme may appear, it is really simplicity itself when applied. It is not every school that can do it but some would be prepared to do it—certainly in Calcutta, if not in the mufassil. That is why I have not indicated what the proportion of the grant will be in mufassil. The firm which takes up the building work could be paid a settled amount every month to cover interest at a rate agreed upon, to cover the municipal taxes, repairing charges and cost of upkeep; and there should be a sinking fund out of which the balance of debt due to the builder may be paid in a number of years that may range from twenty to twenty-five years. More than the present scale of rent would be necessary in order to cover the various charges I have indicated, and a slight increase in the school fee may also be necessary to meet the extra cost. This increase will have to be insisted on in all the schools within the area, otherwise there will be unhealthy competition and educational efficiency will suffer. A scheme like this would provide in time suitable houses for all the schools at a reasonable cost, towards which the present generation as well as the future, the Government and the public will alike have contributed.

There are general outlines which I venture to place for the consideration of this Council and of the Department. I have been anxiously thinking long about this housing scheme and I could not think of a better scheme than this. We are always complaining of bad houses regarding various schools. There are schools which cannot be helped in any way but in this; there are good schools which are very badly housed and it is particularly so in Calcutta. And my object is to help these schools.

Reference has been made about the difficulty of building in war time. I am not aware that even after the war we shall be in a better position. It will make very little difference whether we build now or four or five years hence. The remedy is the help that I have suggested in my resolution. A good beginning may be made even with a lakh of rupees. If my scheme is accepted the details can be worked out later on. I have discussed my scheme with many gentlemen and they have agreed with me. At least no better scheme has yet been suggested, and I would therefore commend this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

" My Lord, the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor is well aware of the efforts that the officers of the Education Department are making and have made for years to bring about improvements in this respect, and Hon'ble Members will be aware that the Inspectors of the Education Department have been strongly attacked here and elsewhere for these efforts. If, therefore, on behalf of Government I oppose the resolution brought forward by the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor, he and the Council will clearly understand that I do so not through any want of sympathy with the object which the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor has at heart. I have already this morning indicated the policy of Government in the matter of assisting schools to obtain sites, buildings and hostels, and it is unnecessary for me to repeat what I have said. We have our policy definitely laid down in our grant-in-aid rules. These are not merely regulations for convenience in spending money but denote the definite policy of Government in the matter of assisting schools to remedy defects by grants-in-aid. They do not preclude a school from receiving a building grant because it is technically an unaided school, or in other words because it does not receive a recurring maintenance grant. Any school may apply for and obtain a building grant if it is prepared to accept the obligations which such a grant must impose under our grant-in-aid rules. What the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor now asks us to do is to depart from our policy in the interest of certain schools in Calcutta, where practically all schools are unaided. We have a policy which is clear and definite by which we work, and from which we are now asked to depart in favour of a scheme which is but faintly outlined and at present does not appear to offer any prospect of success. I should be diffident about saying this if I were to trust entirely to my interpretation of the remarks with which the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor has supported his resolution but I find that the matter was discussed in this Council a year ago and that it has also formed the subject of correspondence between the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor and the Director of Public Instruction. The proposals have been communicated to the Education Department by the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor. They have been examined both within the Director's office and outside; they have received careful attention, and I find that the decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell is, that the scheme is unworkable, and that this decision has been reported to Government. I need not go into elaborate details but I would inform the Council that to build any satisfactory school in Calcutta on a new site is estimated to cost on a rough calculation at least 1½ lakhs. If Government gave towards this that part of the cost which at present its grant-in-aid rules permit, there would still remain two-thirds of the capital cost to be met by the school, apparently in the form of a mortgage. This mortgage will be given to a building society. A building society, I understand, is not likely to take up the work in a purely disinterested way and the scheme will have to be put on a firm financial basis. To meet this the school would pay rent covering the cost of repairs, taxes and other expenses. I find a suggestion in our correspondence that this rent should be fixed at ten per cent. To pay this, the school will have to make a large working profit every year. Now, my Lord, it is our contention that no school can make this profit if it is properly worked, and that no school ought to be in a position to make this profit. If a school is prepared, as suggested by the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor, to raise its fees with a view to some such scheme, it is difficult to see why it is not prepared to raise its fees to create a nucleus which in a few years would enable it to come forward to Government and ask for a grant under our grant-in-aid rules. I repeat the scheme has been examined in the Director's office and as a result of that examination I am not able to recommend to the Council to accept the resolution.

Resolutions.

Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

Unaided schools, that is, schools which do not receive regular monthly grants, may be unaided for various reasons, perhaps because inefficiency stands in the way, perhaps because funds are not available; perhaps because they are not anxious to come under the Education Department, preferring their own way to the obligation of working according to the standards laid down by Government. For these last, I respectfully submit, we should not incur any obligation. If they wish us to incur obligation, they should on their part be prepared to accept what corresponds to that obligation; if a school is not prepared to ask for a grant on the terms on which Government is prepared to give one, I do not see why Government should contemplate departing from these terms in its interest. As I have said, we are prepared to give unaided schools building grants if they are prepared to accept the obligations that we consider desirable in the interests of educational efficiency. We have during the last five years given unaided schools building grants to the total of Rs. 1,04,000, while a grant of Rs. 15,000 remains to be paid as soon as a particular school has completed its building. When an unaided school comes up with a reasoned scheme and is prepared to accept the obligation we shall give it full consideration. But for the reasons already indicated, I am unable to accept this resolution. I would also mention a further special reason, that a survey of the schools and of the educational conditions of Calcutta is at present being completed by a capable officer of the department. It is expected that his report will soon be submitted, and from what he has already told me of his enquiry, it is probable that improvements will demand much bolder measures than those the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor has recommended to the Council this morning."

"My Lord, a reference has been made to the attacks on Mr. Wordsworth's Inspectors here and elsewhere. If I were he I should not mind them, but go on doing my work. Whenever there has been occasion here or elsewhere, I have borne willing testimony to the excellent work that the Inspectors do and the assistance that we receive from them, but for which our work in the University would have been well nigh impossible. So far as he and I are concerned, that question does not arise.

"With regard to the grant-in-aid for buildings and their conditions, I do not suggest that they should be relaxed, except in so far as the buildings society may have to be given priority of charge for the purpose of finding a large balance that has been provided for. This is a matter capable of easy adjustment. Then in Calcutta for the very modest school-houses, for which Rs. 1,50,000 is estimated, that can easily be put down. We have our experiences of these things. If matters are closely scrutinized I know we ought to be able to build cheaper than Mr. Wordsworth's advisers are prepared to do.

"Then again no interest will have to be paid on what the school committees will be asked to bring and the Government will be prepared to grant. That will make the interest charge less than it would otherwise be. And if between the school contribution and the Government contribution, we can contribute one-third or one-fourth of the requisite sum it will be the balance upon which the interest in favour of the building society will run. Therefore that need not present insuperable difficulties in the way. It is not a question of profit the schools will be making with regard to any portion of the working expense and it goes without saying that they will have to pay better for having better school-houses. Of course if the building survey to which reference has been made is proceeded with and a larger measure of help results after that survey, then my object will have been more than obtained. But we cannot conceal from ourselves the fact that each day lost in bettering our schools is a day lost in improving education in general. Two eminent civilians and an Inspector of Schools have been told off to find out the obvious. And when they find it and report on it we shall be no better off if we are not prepared to find means for improvement. These survey would be worse than useless if the result is mere stifling of useful but badly housed and badly managed institutions. Of course larger problems are now confronting us and engaging the careful attention of the experts. But better housing must take the first place in the items of school improvement schemes. Rupees 1,75,000, to my mind, will be inadequate for the purpose and that is why I have suggested that more may be provided so that in regard to schemes which may commend themselves to the authorities they may be at once taken up. Having regard to the survey to which Mr. Wordsworth has referred and awaiting its result I do not wish to press the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS ITEM—No. XXVIII.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRANAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 50,000 be provided in the Budget for preparation of text-books in English and vernaculars for use in Classes I to VIII in High Schools, including text-books on sanitation and hygiene :
- (b) the said sum be taken out of the provision of Rs. 96,58,000 under head Police, District Executive Force.

He said :—

Lord, the reason why I thought of wording the resolution 'for preparation of text-books in English and vernaculars' is that the books in vernacular may be used in the lower classes and that the English books may be used in some of the higher classes. That is in accordance with the scheme that I should like to put forward for more efficient teaching in our schools. As Your Excellency observed, elsewhere the other day the teaching of English in our schools is weak. Till we can secure a better class of teachers and can think of methods that will be more effective, the scheme that I should like to put forward might have a trial. The scheme is shortly this. If we divide the school course roughly into three periods of three years each the first three years of teaching would be principally in vernacular and the readers that I should like to prescribe during these years would cover a large range, readers that will be literature first and text-books afterwards, readers that would deal with short and simple truths of science and history and without unduly loading the young mind give him a range of knowledge which will be useful to him in after-life and might not have to be studied as examination subjects. In order to do that we would want a very carefully prepared series of text-books. While doing that he may be taken over the elements of the English language through the medium of a vernacular under a system similar to that which was in vogue many years ago and with excellent results. In the second stage of three years we would like to have some readers in simple English covering the ground covered by the Vernacular readers and framed in a way that even the terminology in the vernaculars can be identified easily. Thus the subjects can be taught again through the medium of English and during the same period of three years a more difficult series of vernacular readers would be given covering grounds that the boy would have to take during the last three years of his study. In that way there will be simultaneous teaching through the medium of English and Vernacular and this would go on right through the nine years of school-course. We had a system like this many years ago when I claim that English was better taught than now. Proofs of that system are visible even to-day. I do not suggest that private enterprise should at all be interfered with, but when once the pace has been set there is no doubt requisite books would be forthcoming. If this principle commends itself to Government, we might make a small beginning with regard to subjects about which there can be no doubt, namely, books of the kind that I suggest here—books on sanitation and hygiene and subjects which has not been attempted yet. Rs. 50,000 will not be at all too much for an object like this and it would serve a secondary purpose as well—it would provide readers on subjects that could not otherwise be secured. I hope the Council would be unanimous over the question of hygiene readers although I remember there was a dissentient voice when Mr. Irwin's proposal was before the Council. If hygiene and sanitation are to be taught in schools they cannot be more effectively taught than in the way I suggest. Those who remember Babu Radhika Prassanna Mukherjee's book on hygiene which was a text-book thirty or forty years ago, remember how simple truths were conveyed. Since then we have had excellent books by Dr. Chunilal Bose and others. But my object will not be accomplished by the books that we are speaking of, namely, that the same subject should be taught through the medium of Vernacular and English at different school stages. To consider this question at close quarters I ask for a small subsidy to be used for organising the work. There is a text-book committee and the departmental machinery, too, is there and a subsidy will hasten the work I have in view. With these words I move the resolution which I have read out already."

Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, the speech of the Hon'ble Member raises two questions—(1) the question of the organisation of our work in schools and (2) the policy of the Education Department in the matter of text-books. I think the former can scarcely be considered with advantage here and I would ask the Hon'ble Member to be content with my assurance that what he has said to-day will receive our careful attention in the Education Department.

"In the matter of text-books the policy of the Department has been and is to discourage monopoly. It is true that at times special reasons have persuaded us to embark upon the preparation of certain model text-books. This, for instance, was the policy followed when we reorganised our vernacular education about 10 years ago and when it was felt that there were no books available for giving effect to our new curricula. So the Department made arrangements for the production of model text-books. These books were intended to be and do what the name signifies, i.e., to stimulate the production of books that could be considered satisfactory under the new scheme. Government at that time was prepared to consider and prescribe for use any other satisfactory books that were brought forward and every opportunity was given to would-be authors and publishers to examine the books so that they might have guidance before they themselves embarked upon the work of publication. Nor does there appear at present any necessity for a change of policy. The supply of text-books written by private authors is not at all small and much of it is satisfactory; with the result that there is at present in subjects other than English, Indian History and Geography a wide range of satisfactory text-books from which a choice may be made for use in schools, and in these three subjects matters are steadily improving. It is a part of the same policy that educational officers of Government who may have written text-books that have been accepted for use in schools are forbidden to retain any interest in these books. Educational officers are discouraged from embarking on this kind of work and the exclusive prescription of selected books is being abandoned. We issue large supplementary lists out of which selections may be made. These lists give some indication of the books that we consider best for specific purposes, but we allow a school a free choice in the matter of selection.

Resolutions.

Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari; Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter.

"In the matter of books on hygiene and sanitation, I may state that a small committee of experts is now examining the existing books on these subjects and if it is the finding of the committee that no book is satisfactory, the preparation departmentally of a satisfactory text-book will be taken in hand."

"My Lord, I am glad to find that what I had in mind has to a certain extent been anticipated by the Director of Public Instruction in the matter of books on hygiene. But I am afraid that the object of my resolution will not be attained thereby. I have admitted and I admit again that there are excellent books on those subjects which from certain points of view are quite acceptable, but that is not the point of view which I am trying to impress upon the Council. I have in mind vernacular and good English books with their counterpart in vernaculars and English as a means of teaching the languages as well and for that purpose specially prepared reader—in duplicate as it were—would be necessary." The men who have made their mark in these lines—the very authors I have named, may well be deputed. If the Director also takes up that point of view I do not think that any useful purpose would be served by pressing this resolution so far as text-books on hygiene is concerned. I am quite at one with the Director that nothing would be more prejudicial to the best educational and literary interest than to allow any kind of monopoly. At the same time Director has stated that model text-books of certain standard have to be published from time to time and the time would come when education in schools will have to be placed upon a basis like this if there is to be a real teaching of English. If the text-books as written in English and Bengali uses the same terminology a great deal will have been achieved and on those lines books on other subjects can be treated. I would not press this resolution having regard to what the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth has told us, but I would only suggest that in dealing with the matter the point of view that I have suggested may be borne in mind."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXIX.

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHUNDER MITTER moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a provision for Rs. 5,000 be made for instructing teachers and Inspectors in sanitary knowledge with a view to the spread in future of sanitary knowledge in educational institutions and in populous localities by means of public lectures ; and
- (b) this sum be met by reducing the provision for Rs. 17,280 for the appointment of Shorthand Writers in the High Court under head "19A—Law and Justice—Courts of Law."

Resolutions.

Mr. Wordsworth; Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter; Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

He said :—

"My Lord, I have had a conversation with the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth and I am glad to say that, so far as the purpose of my resolution goes, it meets with the approval of Government. Government may not be prepared to provide the fund from the head I have suggested, but that is a matter for Government to consider. I formally place this resolution before the Council without a speech."

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, I welcome this opportunity of informing the Council that we have lost no time in endeavouring to give effect to the resolution which the Council accepted a little time ago. The outlines of the scheme have already been drawn up in consultation with the Sanitary Department and under the scheme we shall be enabled to introduce at once the teaching of sanitation and hygiene in our guru-training schools by the agency of health officers and sanitary inspectors of municipalities, and in some cases of district boards. We hope to be able to make arrangements also for the lecturer on sanitation for the training of health officers to give instruction in our training colleges and perhaps normal schools, which I may describe as our intermediate training schools, as soon as that officer is appointed. I hope also that we shall be able to make early arrangements for the introduction of this subject in one or more of the girls' school in this province. This is an earnest of what we intend to do; we have done our best and the work will shortly commence.

It is not necessary to consider the second part of the resolution because the Hon'ble Member will remember that the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha, in discussing the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin's resolution, informed the Council that there had been in recent years three peripatetic lecturers teaching sanitation in high schools. The provision of Rs. 5,000 that was made for expenditure on that head has been retained in our budget, and will be available for the purpose contemplated by the Hon'ble Member. I think, therefore, that it will be unnecessary for him to press the resolution to a vote."

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHUNDER MITTER said :—

"I beg to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXX.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 20,000 be added to the amount of the grant to the University for Calcutta Messes; and
- (b) the said sum be taken out of the provision of Rs. 96,58,000 under head Police, District Executive Force.

He said :—

"My Lord, in moving this resolution, I desire to bring certain facts before the Council. The total number of students reading in all the Calcutta Colleges. Arts, Law and Medical, is a little over 15,000, excluding the female students. At the lowest estimate, at least half the number comes from mufassil and so the University and the college authorities have to provide accommodation for 7,500 students. Of this number, 900 have been accommodated in Government and private college hostels (Eden Hindu, Scottish Churches College, University Law College, C. M. S. College and St. Xavier's College Hostels) and 400 in non-collegiate hostels (Elliot Madrasah, Baker Madrasah, Y. M. C. A. Baptist Mission, Oxford Mission and Taylor Hostels). If we deduct 900 + 400 = 1,300 from 7,500, the remaining 6,200 students have still to be provided for in hostels and attached messes. The new hostels that have been constructed for the private colleges and the Carmichael Hostel will accommodate about 950 students from next session, so the remaining 5,250 (6,200—950) students are to be accommodated in houses hired by the University called attached messes or in unattached messes—houses which the students themselves engage. During the current session, provision for about 1,900 students has been made in attached messes. Then again 3,350 (5,250—1,900) students have still to be provided with accommodation in hostels or attached messes. The total number of students that has been housed in unattached messes this year, is about 1,300. If we deduct 1,300 from 3,350 then we see that the remaining 2,050 students are living in private messes or with guardians unknown to the University. Mr. R. N. Gilchrist and Mr. J. R. Banerji, who were appointed to enquire into the working of the Calcutta Mess Scheme in 1914, remarked in their report :—“It is most advisable to discontinue unattached mess system altogether. The attached messes are in every way more desirable just as hostels are more desirable than messes. But in the absence of funds for building hostels, it is advisable that the students should live under as healthy condition as possible and the unattached mess system is by no means a healthy system. We accordingly strongly recommend that the Students' Residence Committee should receive a grant sufficiently large to enable them to house all the students who are not living with their parents or with guardians (guaranteed as really such), or in hostels (or in recognised non-collegiate hostels) or in attached messes.” The total number of students living in unattached messes or in private boarding houses or with guardians is 3,350. If all of them have to be drafted into attached messes then the fixed annual Government grant will have to be increased to Rs. 30,000 per annum. Considering all these points Mr. Gilchrist and Mr. Banerjee suggested some more elastic method for the development of the scheme. They said : ‘It is obvious that with the rapid increase of the number of students some more elastic method of working must be found. At present Government grants a certain fixed amount, based on a general estimate made some years ago. Since the grant was first sanctioned great increases have taken place in the numbers of students and no corresponding change has been made in the grant. An inelastic grant of this kind enables the Students' Residence Committee of the University to house satisfactorily only a small proportion of the students requiring accommodation.’ They suggested that 30 per cent. of the total amount of house-rent paid by the University to the owners of the attached messes should be borne by the Government and the remaining 70 per cent. should be met from the seat rent to be charged from boarders.

The Government has recognized its duty in the matter of housing and that is why it pays ten thousand rupees. But a committee of experts consisting of men like Messrs. Gilchrist and J. R. Banerjee do not think the sum adequate. This is quite borne out by our experience also. The University cannot do very much in the matter without further assistance and therefore I recommend that the grant asked for may be provided.”

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXX.

The HON'BLE MR. O'MALLEY said :—

“My lord, I should like to explain in the first place what help Government at present gives to the University in working what is called the Calcutta mess scheme. The system is that the University hires houses for students of private colleges, who cannot obtain accommodation elsewhere. Last year, I think, it hired 29 houses, which had accommodation for 1,096 students. For the supervision of these messes there is an officer, called the Inspector of Messes. Government pays the whole of his pay, his conveyance allowance, his establishment and contingent allowance, which amount, altogether to about Rs. 4,000 a year. There is a risk of the University suffering loss owing to seats in the messes not being occupied and to students not paying their rents. To protect the University against any loss Government is ready in any year to make good any deficit caused by receipts being below expenditure up to a limit of Rs. 9,000. Adding the Rs. 4,000 on account of the Mess Inspector, Government is ready to incur expenditure up to Rs. 13,000 in any one year in helping the University in managing their mess scheme.

Government is not strictly responsible for the housing of the students of private colleges or bound to come to the help of the University in providing for their accommodation. Under the Universities Act and Regulations the responsibility for the provision of proper accommodation and for the supervision and physical welfare of the students devolves on the University and the colleges affiliated to it. Government has, however, not been backward in helping the University. Recently a special grant of ten lakhs have been given by the Government of India to the University for building hostels attached to private colleges. Besides this, private institutions have been given grants of about seven lakhs out of special grants made in 1911-12 and 1912-13. Altogether, therefore, Government has given 17 lakhs in the last eight years for hostels attached to private colleges. The mess scheme, which I have already mentioned, was also started by Government in 1905 with the object of improving the conditions of students' residence in Calcutta. Two years later, the working of the mess scheme was handed over to the University with its own consent, Government agreeing to give a grant up to a maximum of Rs. 9,000 to cover any deficit on condition that the University did its best to recover the rents in full from the students, and so render the scheme self-supporting. There have, however, been deficits and Government has given considerable sums, over and above Rs. 9,000, to enable the University to clear off those deficits.

Of late matters have greatly improved. The University increased the seat rents, and the result was that in 1916-17, the deficit was only Rs. 6,112 or Rs. 2,887 less than the grant of Rs. 9,000 up to which Government is ready to finance the scheme. Surely, my Lord, if the University can work the scheme with the assistance of a grant of about Rs. 6,000, it is not necessary for its working to allot another Rs. 20,000, as proposed in this resolution, so as to make its total contribution Rs. 29,000 besides Rs. 4,000 for the Mess Inspector.

I gather from the Hon'ble Vice-Chancellor that what he is anxious to do is to get the help of Government in providing for an increasing number of students who come to Calcutta. I think I have shown sufficiently that Government has been generous in providing for the residence of college students in Calcutta. Government is already incurring an annual expenditure on Arts Colleges of about 18 lakhs and a further sum of ten lakhs on account of professional colleges; and Rs. 6½ lakhs have to be found from provincial revenues. Government, as I have said before, is not really responsible for students' residence in Calcutta and it cannot very well accept an unlimited liability for providing Calcutta students with their lodging in addition to education within college walls. I regret, therefore, my Lord, that I cannot recommend the Council to accept this resolution.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My Lord, it is rather late in the day to say that Government has no responsibility with regard to the students' messing scheme. It has accepted that responsibility and has given effect to a policy which is laudable and which is necessary in the interest of education. As the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said the scheme was that of the Government and it was in order to relieve the Government of responsibility over the matter that the University consented to take it over. My Lord, the regulations framed under the Universities Act laid down a policy which, as is well known, could not be carried out with the resources either of the University or the colleges and that is why in regard to this matter and other matters the Government of

Resolutions.Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

India and Your Excellency's Government determined to come to the assistance of the University. And if you go on constantly reminding us of the past favours, the moment something extra is necessary the position becomes difficult. Increasing number and the altered circumstances of the situation are entailing more expenditure that must be met somehow. The report of the Committee which was appointed consisting of Messrs. Gilchrist and J. R. Banerjee says that the scheme cannot be properly given effect to for less than Rs. 30,000. It is not only my duty as the Vice-Chancellor—the Vice-Chancellor has no place here—but as the representative of the University on Your Excellency's Council to bring this matter before the Council and if the Government says that it has no responsibility in the matter the University knowing that it can expect no further assistance must shape its course accordingly. Of course the safe course for the University some suggest will be to say to the students, about 3,500 in number, that they will have to go out of the colleges as residence under the rules cannot be provided for them. Is that the state of things that we are going to tolerate? If so, the University might be told about it. But the University does not think that that is the policy of the Government nor does the country.

Resolutions.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXI.

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 10,000 be provided in the Budget for the improvement of the Calcutta Commercial Institute ; and
- (b) the said sum of Rs. 10,000 be taken out of the provision of Rs. 96,58,000 under head Police District Executive Force.

He said :—

“The Calcutta Commercial Institute, which has been in existence for a few years, has been doing excellent work and its work has highly been appreciated in commercial circles. It was my privilege to attend one of its prize meeting under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray and I gather that the good work of the school was to a certain extent hampered on account of want of funds. I realise that in the present circumstances it is not possible to find large sums of money for schools and even when the money is forthcoming, it is not easy to have men of the right sort. In fact, I have been told there is some provision, but it is not possible to get the proper men. At the same time, when one is told that lack of funds has retarded the development of this institution, I think it may fairly be claimed that all that can be done under existing circumstances to strengthen a school of this kind should be done. Commercial and technical education has been engaging the public attention very prominently for some time and the time is fast coming when it can scarcely be neglected. A good beginning has already been made in the Commercial Institute, but it should be strengthened. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray and the Principal told us on that occasion that all the commercial houses were glad to take trained pupils from the school. Sir Hugh Bray paid a high compliment on the work of the school and said that it should be placed on a sound footing. I have no doubt that a better class of men will be appointed as teachers when it ultimately forms part of the University scheme as I hope it will soon do ; but that has nothing to do with the present occasion. I think the school should be strengthened as it is so that the pupils should be better grounded and be valuable to the commercial houses who are appreciating the outturn of the school so much. In that view I commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council. I am sure the Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood, who is on the Board of management of this institution, will bear me out that the present difficulty is due to lack of funds.”

The Hon'ble MR. ARDEN WOOD said :—

“My Lord, as a member of the Board of Management of the Calcutta Commercial Institute, I think I ought to say that the Board was not aware of the benevolent intentions of the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor towards the Commercial Institute, though I have no doubt that it will be grateful to him for brining this matter before the Council, because it really is a matter of some public importance. The Board of the Commercial Institute has long made up its mind about it. I find that so long ago as the 19th November, 1912, a resolution was passed in which it was stated that the work hitherto done by the Institute in the face of difficulties and adverse circumstances was such as to justify the belief that the Institute provided commercial education of a character that was of use to the commercial community, and that as it had now passed the experimental stage it should be placed on a proper and permanent footing. In order to extend the usefulness of the Institute, it was desirable to raise its status, and the Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth ; Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

Board considered that a Principal should be brought out from Great Britain who would have had special experience of commercial education. The Board was of opinion that if this were not done it would be better to close the institute rather than to continue the work in the experimental fashion in which it had hitherto proceeded. This was in 1912. On the 19th February, 1915, the Board had again this matter under consideration and resolved that steps ought to be taken at once to give practical effect to the opinion expressed at its meeting of the 19th November, 1912. The Board desired to press upon the Government the extreme importance of proceeding without further delay to the appointment of a highly qualified person as Principal of the Government Commercial Institute. The Board considered that the Principal should be a graduate of a British University and that he should have himself specialised in some way that would be useful to him as the head of such an institution. He should be appointed to the Indian Educational Service on a special pay of not less than Rs. 800 a month. These resolutions have all been communicated to the Director of Public Instruction. The present situation is that the institution has still no Principal, and has had no Principal since January, 1911. And this means that the institution, which seven years ago had made a satisfactory start and had really begun to establish itself in the public confidence, is now in a situation which can only be regarded as thoroughly unsatisfactory. The Acting Principal has loyally done his best for the institution, but it is not fair to any man to keep him in an acting appointment for so long a time as seven years. I was under the impression that the difficulty in providing a Principal was due to financial conditions. But I find this year savings on the Budget allotment for the institute of upwards of Rs. 9,000, and I suppose that the real difficulty of doing what is right in this matter is the difficulty there is at present in recruiting a Principal from England. I am not satisfied that it would not be possible to recruit a Principal in India, and I certainly think that really vigorous action should be taken to ascertain if a suitable Principal could not be obtained in India. The present state of things is not fair either to commercial education or to the Government Commercial Institute, and it should be brought to an end."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, in opposing this resolution, I welcome the Vice-Chancellor's interest in the welfare of the institution. We are conscious, painfully conscious, of what the institution might be doing, if we had been able to carry out our intentions. Some years ago the possibilities of developing the institution were considered and the unsatisfactory progress is due to circumstances that are at present beyond the power of this Government to modify. My opposition to the Vice-Chancellor's resolution is based upon the consideration that his proposal is far vaguer than what we have already under our consideration and I think it will meet the case if I undertake that we shall return to the consideration of our scheme and do what we can once more to have improvements carried into effect. It is too soon to consider any possible improvement in this institution in relation to the facilities that may be offered by the University in the scheme projected for the encouragement of commercial education, but I undertake that we shall, as a department, do our best to get those improvements made possible to which we have already given our attention. I think perhaps in these circumstances the Vice-Chancellor will not wish to press his resolution."

The Hon'ble Dr. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My Lord, what Mr. Wordsworth and Mr. Arden Wood has told this Council will suffice for the present ; but one consideration that I should like to press upon the department and the governing body of this institution is that it is not the Principal alone that would make the college better. There are many chairs that could be filled here even if the Principal from England is not forthcoming for the present. Mr. Wordsworth has told us that it would not be possible to have a fairly good Principal now. But chairs in English, Geography and some other subjects could be at once strengthened locally. Mr. Wordsworth speaks of the University giving facilities, but I think it is quite the other way. The University is looking out for facilities and so far as that goes, my interest in the scheme, which Mr. Wordsworth welcomes, is not wholly disinterested. I have the larger interest of the commercial community and of the public at heart. However, having regard to what Mr. Wordsworth has said, I do not press this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXII."

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 80,000 non-recurring and Rs. 10,000 recurring be allotted for making arrangements in the Presidency College for teaching Zoology by providing accommodation and equipment for theoretical as well as practical teaching of the subject and by appointing one Professor and two demonstrators ; and
- (b) the non-recurring expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 6,75,000 provided for Works and Progress and New Works in connection with the reorganisation of the Subordinate Police in Eastern Bengal under District Police ; and the recurring expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 6,48,000 provided for Contingencies under District Police Force.

He said :—

"My Lord, when a similar resolution was moved last year by myself, the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell said that from his point of view it was desirable that the study of Zoology should be introduced into the Presidency College ; he objected on financial grounds, but he said he would refer the matter to the governing body of the Presidency College. The governing body of the Presidency College have since considered the matter. They have decided against my proposal.

My Lord, the financial difficulty in regard to any proposal varies inversely with the sense of importance of it. I am concerned, therefore, in proving here that this proposal is an important one. At present out of 68 Universities in the British Empire, whose names are registered in the Year Book of the British Empire, 62 have Professors of Zoology on their staff. In India all the Universities, except Calcutta, have Professors to teach Zoology in the graduation stage to non-medical students ; Calcutta is the only exception. In one University, the Principal of the Government Arts College is a Zoologist—I mean Colonel Stephenson of Lahore.

Then, my Lord, the study of Zoology is a discipline of the first order ; besides that it has a scientific and cultural value. To-day I am, however, even more concerned with its economic than with its scientific value. In no school of agriculture can the study of Entomology, Veterinary Zoology, Agricultural Zoology, Bacteriology or Cattle-farming be neglected as economically unimportant. On the scientific side, a knowledge of Zoology forms the basis of some of the more important sciences of the day such as Anthropology, Evolution, Sociology and Eugenics. The importance of the study of this subject cannot be overestimated.

The sum required for this object need not be very large. Though I have asked in my resolution for a provision of Rs. 80,000 (non-medical) with a little arrangement this sum can be materially reduced. If a couple of rooms can be spared in one of the corners of the Presidency College ; and if the laboratories of the Botanical Department be allowed to be used by Zoological students as well, whose number is not likely to be large, then the capital expenditure may be materially curtailed. All that I pray for is, that the importance of the subject be properly realised, and that a first beginning, however small, in the study of this subject, be made in Calcutta."

"My Lord, the hon'ble mover of this resolution has explained that this proposal is not new and that it has already been considered carefully by the governing body of the Presidency College. I fear, however, that he has misunderstood the position taken by that body ; and I can speak with authority on the point, as I was at the time the Principal of the College. The governing body of the Presidency College have no objection at all to the introduction of the study of Zoology into the Presidency College. They would not place any obstacles in the way nor would they hesitate to remove any obstacles from the way, if they saw their way to do so. But the Presidency College, even with its excellent laboratories, is already working up to the full standard of its equipment in the other sciences, viz, Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Physiology and Botany. The governing body, after careful consideration, came to the conclusion that they could do nothing for Zoology, except at the expense of some one of these sciences, which, in their opinion, had a greater weight to consideration. In arriving at this opinion they were guided by the judgment of a prominent Indian gentleman, who is specially competent to speak for the Indian community in these matters and who is the Vice-President of the governing body, that there does not exist such a demand for the study of Zoology as would justify them in interfering with the facilities now offered for the study of any one of the other sciences. I admit that this is only a partial argument, and that it is a part of the duty of a University and a College to stimulate an interest in the higher studies and to offer facilities for pursuing that interest. This is, however, a question of practical difficulty, and the governing body of the Presidency College feel that when opportunity arises, their first consideration must be provision for teaching Botany in the first year and second year classes. I should explain that the other sciences are taught from the first year to the sixth year classes, but Botany is only taught in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth year classes. The authorities of the Medical College have recently requested the Presidency College to provide facilities for teaching Botany in the first and second year classes. They have pointed out that the Presidency College students at present are at some disadvantage in the keen competition for admission to the Medical College and that this disadvantage is likely to increase in the near future. If, therefore, it were possible to provide extended facilities for science of the equipment, the first consideration must be provision for teaching Botany in the first and second year classes.

"I can, therefore, only assure the Hon'ble Mover, as I have assured him repeatedly, that the utmost the Presidency College, situated as it is, can do is to bear his point of view in mind, so that, when the College extension scheme is taken up once more and the financial stringency is removed, the building of a laboratory for the teaching of Zoology may then receive full consideration."

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My Lord, I am somewhat concerned to hear that it has been stated by responsible persons that there is no demand for the study of Zoology. I cannot prove this matter because there is no chair for Zoology at present. I believe, however, that there is a demand. Apart from that, I may point out that many of the higher studies have to be unless without a preliminary Zoological teaching, for instance, the University introduced the study of comparative Pshycology. It is now rather amusing to think of comparative Pshycology without a study of comparative Anatomy. Then again there is such a subject as higher Zoology in the University curriculum. Of course there is no graduation in Zoology, but there is Zoology in the higher stage. However, I gain nothing by prolonging this quarrel with the Director of Public Instruction. I shall be quite content if he remembers the thing and when the time comes, he will make arrangements for the introduction of the study of Zoology in the Presidency College."

Resolutions.

Dr. Nilratan Sarkar ; Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXIII.

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR withdrew the following resolution which stood in his name :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 50,000 non-recurring and Rs. 10,000 recurring be provided for making arrangements for the theoretical and practical teaching of Physics, Chemistry, Botany and Zoology in the I. Sc. standard in the Bethune College by equipping suitable laboratories and appointing two lecturers and two demonstrators ; and
- (b) the non-recurring expenditure be met from the lump provision of Rs. 6,75,000 for Additional Force and Police Reforms under District Police Force—20—Police, and the recurring expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 6,48,000 provided for Contingencies, under District Police Force.

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR withdrew the following resolution which stood in his name :—

He said :—

"My Lord, the items of expenditure which I propose to exclude from the Budget mainly concern the Police Department although certain items under the head 'Miscellaneous' have been also included. These items amount to Rs. 21,71,335. The Hon'ble the Financial Secretary in introducing the Budget said : 'War conditions still prevail and the principle that our expenditure should not exceed our total income had again to be followed.' He then pointed out that the Government of Bengal had obtained the sanction of the Government of India to draw upon the financial balance to the extent of 40 lakhs. The principle that the expenditure should not exceed the total income is sound not only in war conditions, but it applies to all conditions and can be departed from only on account of extraordinary circumstances. The question therefore arises whether there have been circumstances to justify expenditure of such a large amount above the income at the present time. It appears that inspite of the very large expenditure incurred by the late Government of Bengal and of Eastern Bengal and Assam on the police to carry out the recommendations of the Police Commission, the total expenditure on the same item for the year 1912-13, the first year after the formation of the new Presidency was little less than 84 lakhs. It should also be remembered that the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam and old Bengal incurred large expenditure on the police, both recurring and non-recurring, to carry out a policy of repression of the Swadeshi movement arising out of the anti-partition agitation from 1905 onwards."

In the Budget estimate for the year 1904-05 for old Bengal, which comprised the territories administered by the recent Government of Bengal and of Behar and Orissa, Rs. 65 lakhs were only allotted for the police or roughly the cost of the police of Bengal as at present constituted may be taken to be Rs. 35 lakhs and within 8 years the charges increased to 84 lakhs or an increase of 250 per cent. But during the last 5 years the expenditure on the police has again increased from Rs. 84 lakhs a year to 1 crore and 22 lakhs or by 45 per cent. and the Budget estimate for the next year is Rs. 1 crore and 37 lakhs or an increase of 63 per cent. in five years. It is interesting to compare the figures on certain other items of expenditure which directly concern the people of this Presidency, e.g., Education, Sanitation and Irrigation. It appears that in 1912-13 the total charges under head 'Education' amounted to Rs. 73½ lakhs and in 1917-18 of Rs. 81 lakhs or an increase of less than 10 per cent. and this after the receipt of the large amounts expressly granted by the Government of India for that purpose. The expenditure on Sanitation for the same period was Rs. 7½ lakhs and Rs. 5 lakhs, respectively, or a decrease of 34 per cent., while the expenditure on irrigation is practically the same. I may also be permitted here to refer to some other relevant facts. In the Budget for 1914-15 large sums were provided for the spread of education and improvement of sanitation, but on the breaking out of the war it was intimated that all works of improvement should be stopped and that it might also be necessary to curtail the expenses of general administration. The non-official members of this Council were also urged not to hamper the Government during the time of war by pressing the claims of sanitation or of education. But so far the result has been that in this malaria-stricken country the only establishment that has been curtailed is the Sanitation Department. The large sums set apart for the improvement of education has also not been spent under the orders of Government. But year after year we find fresh and new schemes brought forward in connection with the police and this can only mean that it is the deliberate policy of the Government to favour expenditure on the police at the expense of education and sanitation. My Lord, I think the time has come when we should cry 'halt' to this state of things. Have the Government any idea as to how many projects for the improvement of sanitation are being hung up for financial reasons? 19 schemes, which have been administratively approved and costing about Rs. 31½ lakhs, have been postponed on account of financial stringency and 40 other schemes estimated to cost Rs. 95½ lakhs could not be finally submitted even for administrative approval principally for these reasons. These are schemes for the improvement of water-works and drainage of only certain of the municipalities in Bengal to which under the existing rules Government make a contribution of only one-third of the cost, but in some cases, e.g., the Dacca sewerage, amounting to Rs. 10 lakhs or the water-works of the Ruparian Municipalities, amounting to Rs. 35 lakhs Government will have to meet a large part of the cost ultimately. These projects only concern certain municipalities only and do not include large schemes of sanitation which the Sanitary Commissioner will soon have to bring forward before Government for the amelioration of the general condition of the people of this Presidency. Schemes of irrigation and reclamation of silted-up rivers and waterways, which have already been taken up by your Lordship's Government, will also have to be carried out if the scourge of malaria is to be driven out of the country. When just five years ago I moved in this Council to set apart the sum of Rs. 20 lakhs granted by the Government of India for sanitation for the purpose of supplying of pure drinking water, Sir William Duke said that the Government were quite willing to spend money for the supply of drinking water, but that the local bodies could not take advantage of the assistance of Government because they were not ready with their projects. Now it appears that the municipalities of this Presidency were ready with 16 projects for the supply of drinking water and 40 projects for drainage, involving a cost of Rs. 1,26,50,000, but there is very little money in the till available to carry them out. Projects for improving the conditions of other municipalities and of district boards are being formed, though at present, as already stated, the number of schemes not yet carried out is very large. Then as regards primary education. It has practically become the fashion to take for granted that the cost for its extension should be met by a direct tax which is always unpopular and the responsibility for which should be taken by the local bodies. My Lord, while I do not shrink from the fact that the local bodies should take the responsibility that is properly theirs, but that does not imply that it is necessary or equitable that the whole cost of primary education should fall upon their shoulders. The resources of local bodies in Europe and America are not limited to rates as in Bengal, but in many places they enjoy a part or even the whole of the income derived from Excise and also part from income-tax and other sources, which in India are treated as properly belonging to the general revenue of the country. Besides, they also, in most instances, get additional help from the national treasury for the improvement of primary education. The Government will therefore have to contribute substantial sums towards the improvement of primary education. The question of secondary and University education are also bound to draw a larger share of the general revenues of the Presidency in the near future. I therefore do not see how can the Government be justified in incurring such a large and increasing expenditure at the present time and year after year on the police. This point of view is still more accentuated by the fact that the Government proposed to draw on the balances to the extent of Rs. 40 lakhs. During the present financial stringencies no new expenditure should be allowed that can possibly be postponed. I am fully aware of the fact that peace and order should be maintained in this country, but when police charges have increased in the course of some 10 or 12 years from Rs. 35 lakhs a year to 1 crore and 37 lakhs a year or more than four times, it is time that the charges should be carefully scrutinised and curtailed if possible. Every year we are practically told that this new and additional police charges must be sanctioned or Government will not be responsible for law and order in the country. Such arguments might hold good for one or two years, but when the same stock argument of 'the wolf' 'the wolf' is repeated year after year people are justified in being sceptical about them and cannot take them for granted. Really we are at a loss to think where the cost of the police administration would lead us and whether it will not practically swallow all increase of revenue in future.

Last year we thought that all that the Government wanted to spend on the police had been provided for in the Budget. It cannot be said that the anarchical crimes have increased within the last 12 months or that there have been new developments, necessitating the increase of expenditure on the police. We see an increase of expenditure in the police among others under the additional temporary posts for Intelligence Branch Rs. 1,04,308. Increase of the temporary posts for District Intelligence Staff Rs. 2,13,446. Where is the urgent necessity for spending Rs. 80,000 for construction of launches for river patrol arrangements in the Calcutta Police and a lakh of rupees for the construction of steam launches for the River Police in Eastern Bengal? Where again is the necessity, and this necessity must be of an urgent nature, to justify the expenditure of such a large amount of money as Rs. 6,75,000 provided in the Budget in this war time and all necessary improvements are held over till the return of normal times for works in progress of the Police Department in connection with the reorganisation of the Eastern Bengal Police. No case has been made out by Government for this increased expenditure on the head of 'Police.' Then again Government want to draw Rs. 2 lakhs for the Bhowanipore Asylum on the ground that it is necessary to have an Observation Hospital for lunatics in or near Calcutta. If it is needed it can be taken from the amount allotted for the Lunatic Asylum at Ranchi. But I do not press for this item. Have the Government considered the effect of mortgaging future increases in revenue on all schemes of improvement? Have the Government considered the possible demands of education and of sanitation on the resources of the State in the near future and their urgency and can the Government say, after a careful comparison of the relative claims of different items of expenditure, that they are justified in incurring such heavy and additional expenditure on the Police Department year after year? Have the Government ever considered the effect of sanctioning without much scrutiny heavy items of expenditure on a single department of the State year after year and as to whether it does not lead to a wrong and wasteful idea of the value of money and even loss of efficiency in the Department? Have the Government even considered the fact that heavy expenditure is not synonymous with increased efficiency and that in many cases such a policy leads to abuse and relaxation of effort in future which cannot be got rid of under the law at present. My Lord, I am fully conscious that the non-official members of this Council have no vote in passing the Budget and the Executive Government is alone responsible for all expenses, but I think we should not be justified as representatives of the people in silently acquiescing without protest in a policy which practically mortgages our future resources. I do not know what shape the promised reforms will take, but with promises of responsible Government and also the necessity of very large expenditure on education and sanitation in the near future Government can never be justified in drawing upon the balances for current expenditure. Cut your coat according to your cloth is a well known maxim. A depleted treasury and a heavy recurring liability is not a very pleasant state of things to contemplate."

The Hon'ble Mr. CRUM said :—

"My Lord, regarding this resolution, I feel that something more than a mere vote is required to give expression to the feelings of the Chamber of Commerce on the subject of police. When I received my papers two days ago I found that out of 35 resolutions no less than 22 proposed a reduction in the Police Budget, and many of the primary parts of these resolutions met with considerable favour from me, that is to say, as far as their primary portions were concerned, I felt that they were deserving in many cases of consideration; but when I considered that combined with these very excellent resolutions there was a question of the reduction of the Police Budget, I decided undoubtedly to vote against them. I naturally tried to find whether the Hon'ble Members who moved these resolutions put forward any very cogent reasons for the reduction in the Police Budget and I have not been able to find any at all. The first reason put forward, and it was put forward by several Hon'ble Members, was that they wanted money and it would not matter very much if a little was taken out of the Police Budget. Well, the accumulated effect of all these resolutions, before we come to this particular one, amounted to Rs. 18 lakhs, so that it was really a very large sum which the Hon'ble Members wanted to take out of the Police Budget.

The second reason put forward was that the efficiency of the police was not commensurate with the expenditure. That, my Lord, is a matter of opinion. We non-officials do not know whether the expenditure on the police is commensurate—I think it is—and there are other gentlemen who may not be of the same opinion. We must be guided in this matter by Your Lordship in consultation with your official advisers. Therefore, for this reason, I consider that we cannot bring forward that argument in favour of the reduction in the amount budgetted for the police. The Hon'ble Mover of this resolution has asked for a wholesale reduction in the Police Budget, because, I understand, there are several other deserving objects to which this sum may be devoted, and because the expenditure on the police had been so very large during the last few years. My Lord, we, members of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, consider that the first duty of Government is to maintain an efficient and able police force, and we do not believe that the police can be maintained as efficient as they should be without expenditure. We also believe that, in order to increase the efficiency of the police force, efforts should be made to get a better class of men into the force, to improve their surroundings and to make them more contented; in that case only will very many of the undoubted police evils disappear.

"Finally, I would like to pay a tribute to the splendid work which the police of Bengal have done during the last 3 or 4 years. The Hon'ble Mr. Kesteven mentioned this in speaking at Delhi last week, and it is a subject which I would like to enlarge upon and to assure the police here that they have our entire support. My Lord, with regard to any motion which has as a part of its proposition a reduction in the amount budgetted for the police, I should like to say that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce will certainly vote against any such reduction."

The Hon'ble Dr. HOWELLS said :—

"My Lord, I do not quite sympathise with the attitude of my Bengali friends as I have seen it in this Council in regard to police affairs and the maintenance of the police in a state of real efficiency. With the previous speaker I take it that the first duty of the Government is to maintain law and order and the maintenance of the police force in a state of the most thorough efficiency is absolutely necessary for that purpose. Now how far the police force under present conditions has succeeded in helping the Government to realize the first purpose of its being may be doubtful and I cannot but feel that the attitude of so many in Bengal towards the police is to some extent responsible for this state of affairs. The police are so far as I can see largely recruited in the country and there is a feeling that they have not the sympathy of their own people in carrying on their work. The result of this is in some cases really serious. Some little time ago I was talking with a missionary friend who has been for more than thirty years in very close touch with village life of Bengal and he expressed to me the deliberate opinion that in the course of his experience he has come to hold the view that it is practically impossible for a poor man to get justice done in Bengal. That is a very serious thing to say. But in the main I should say it is justified and justified largely because of the corrupt methods in vogue in the police—specially in its lower ranks. Government may have and has the very best intentions for maintaining law and order, but it is manifestly dependent upon the efficiency of the lower ranks of the police as well as the higher ranks if it is to carry out the object it has in view. I do not understand how my Bengali friends complain of the corruption and wrong methods of the police force and yet at every turn object to money being spent on the police. It seems to me that if we are to maintain law and order in a thorough way, a further and continuous expenditure on the police force is absolutely necessary otherwise Government has no right to continue its existence and I trust that my Bengali friends will realize that if they are to have a really efficient police force they must give them more sympathy than they do at present. The police force of London are the pride of London and why? Because the people of London give them every sympathy and help and there is a real co-operation between the police and the people. I should like to see that spirit of co-operation between the people and the police in Bengal—a real desire, when a crime is committed not to keep it away from the police, a real desire for its thorough detection and punishment. It is only when that spirit enters into the people of Bengal and when they are ready to co-operate with their own countrymen and with the Government in detecting and punishing crimes and when the police force feel they are to help and not oppress the people it is then that we will have a police force here like that of London. The police will then become the pride of Bengal. The police force of a country must be very largely dependent on the ideas in vogue regarding the police in that country. The police will not in themselves be higher in ideals and in methods than the ideals and methods which the people of the country entertain regarding what the police force ought to be."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, the course of this debate on the Financial Statement in its relation to the police, reminds me somewhat of the daily events which happen in the sphere of war. From such news of the war as is vouchsafed to us by Reuter we are now all familiar with the daily raids which happen over a period of time; they are small things individually, but they continue for some weeks, until we wake up one morning to find that the attack in force has taken place. There is some analogy between these telegrams and the course of this debate. Yesterday and earlier to-day we have had the minor but incessant raids, taking various forms and delivered in various places, but mostly checked before they reached the financial trenches by the barrage put up by the various Departments in whose favour expenditure on the police was sought to be reduced. Now we come to the attack in force which, if it does not annihilate the object assailed would, if successful, at any rate have very serious results on its efficiency.

"The first reason adduced for the acceptance of the resolution, Sir, as I understand the Hon'ble Mover, is a financial one—that we are going ahead too fast having regard to the financial situation, and therefore on grounds of economy and prudence should curtail our expenditure generally, especially in view of the large sum by which our expenditure for the year exceeds our income. As regards this, I would only say that the prudential motives for husbanding our financial resources at the present moment are mainly based upon considerations of Imperial finance. These have been explained on various occasions by the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, and it would be inappropriate to go into them here. If, therefore, we have received the sanction of the Government of India to our Budget, I think that we may fairly take it that the Government which is primarily interested in the accumulation of the provincial balances is, on its part, satisfied that our needs justify the step we propose to take in incurring expenditure from them. Although we have exceeded our income by a considerable sum, I would further draw the attention of the Council to the fact that we anticipate to close this year with a balance of Rs. 3,37,32,000, out of which Rs. 81 lakhs is a free balance, not earmarked for particular purposes. Considering that our prescribed minimum provincial balance is Rs. 20 lakhs, I think we may reasonably say that, as a province, we are in a sound financial position. So much for the general financial question.

"Coming to the particular matter of the police, the argument, as the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has said, falls under two heads; first, that our expenditure on the police is very large and is growing at a most undesirable rate; and secondly, that there are very many other deserving objects in the province to which our funds should be devoted. It is undeniable that there are a thousand things which we would like to see done if we had money; but as regards the contention that it is only the expenditure on the police which is going up by leaps and bounds, while everything else is unduly retarded, I would like to call the attention of the Council to a few figures which show that on many of the more popular Departments expenditure in recent years has equally gone up very rapidly. Taking the figures for the two years 1912-13 (actuals) and for 1918-19 (Budget) as given in the papers which have been distributed to Hon'ble Members, we find that within that interval the charges under the head of 'Education' have risen from Rs. 73½ lakhs to Rs. 103 lakhs. The expenditure under the head of 'Medical' in 1912-13 was Rs. 22½ lakhs; it is nearly Rs. 27 lakhs for 1918-19; the cost of Sanitation was Rs. 7½ lakhs in 1912-13, it is now 11½. Agriculture, which accounted for Rs. 7½ lakhs in 1912, now totals Rs. 14 lakhs. Therefore it does not prove that the expenditure on police is excessive merely because it has been going up rapidly. There are other Departments, as to the utility of which there is little difference of opinion, towards which money is being devoted in an ever-increasing way. That the expenditure on police is large, I admit; and on broad lines the justification is that we are only now making up the leeway of previous years. All those who have investigated the provision for the police, especially in Eastern Bengal, in the matter, for instance, of equipment and buildings, agree that it is below the level of, I would not say comfort, but efficiency, and we are now trying to make these and other deficiencies good. Illustrations of the fact can be drawn from the particular items to which the Hon'ble Member has drawn attention, and I will briefly explain their character, but I do not propose to expand upon the general merits or demerits of the police. I think the work of the Department would proceed more efficiently and smoothly if it was recognised both by this Council and by the public that the sole desire of Government is to see that the work entrusted to the police is done honestly and efficiently, and this, too, is the sole desire of the superior officers of the force; it is with that desire only that we make proposals for increased expenditure. We believe we have done much to attain that object, and although much still remains to be done, we shall persevere and progress steadily towards that end.

"Turning to these particular schemes I would point out that the Hon'ble Member has by inadvertence made one or two errors. In the first place his opening item of one lakh is really included in his item no. 15 of Rs. 1,48,596. Secondly, his item nos. 3 and 5, i.e., the amounts of Rs. 80,000 and Rs. 79,996, are similarly included in item no. 11 for Rs. 1,26,765. The Hon'ble Member has duplicated the items by a mistake which I can explain to him personally later.

As regards the first item, which is really part of the total of Rs. 1,48,596, this concerns a very old scheme. The urgent need of the better policing of the large rivers of Eastern Bengal and Assam was emphasised by the Police Commission as far ago as 1904, and if this can be ensured it is obviously a matter by which the people of Eastern Bengal will benefit. The frequent incidents which are reported in the papers show that the outlying reaches of these large rivers are largely at the mercy of dacoits. The late Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam elaborated a scheme in 1910 at a capital cost of Rs. 11,24,000 and recurring cost of Rs. 4,48,000. The heavy capital items were for headquarters, floating thanas and launches, with recurring charges for establishments and cost of running the boats. The outlay is necessitated by the circumstances of the country which distinguish it from other parts of the province. The proposal was sanctioned by the Government of India, after some curtailment, in 1911, and they promised and gave Rs. 10,38,000 non-recurring and Rs. 3,60,000 recurring. The Council will therefore see that to that extent money was actually given to us for this particular object. Since then, the late Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam and the present Government, have gradually been trying to introduce these reforms. The very slow progress made attracted the unfavourable attention both of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State; so instead of undue extravagance, we have been accused in higher quarters of undue delay. But the difficulties are great, especially at the present moment; they are due partly to the want of funds and partly to the inability of the dockyard authorities to construct launches, which are in urgent demand for military purposes. Even, at the present moment, it will be observed that we are not now giving the Inspector-General all for which he asks, and he will only get Rs. 1 lakh non-recurring against Rs. 2,38,000 wanted.

"I dealt with items 2, 6 and 7 yesterday in connection with another resolution, and I do not repeat what I then said.

"I now come to item no. 3 which, as I have already said, is included in item no. 11. The whole provision is in pursuance of a scheme which was initiated as the result of enquiries which have been made since the war into the efficiency of the arrangements at the port of Calcutta for the detection of smuggling. An enquiry was made by a special officer, deputed by the Government of India, who visited Calcutta along with other ports. In pursuance of his recommendations proposals were framed in consultation with the local officers, and the whole scheme contemplates the provision of six launches with the necessary boat establishments. The net ultimate extra cost involved is Rs. 49,368 recurring and Rs. 2,69,951 non-recurring. Of this amount, we have already incurred certain expenditure during 1916-17 and 1917-18, and the provision in the Budget is therefore, in respect of a project to which effect is already being given, and it cannot be eliminated. It is a reasonable proposal designed to maintain the efficiency of our Customs arrangement.

"As regards the Bhowanipur Asylum I gather that the Hon'ble Mover withdraws his opposition to it, and I will not discuss it at length although the expenditure can easily be justified.

"The next item is for temporary boat establishments. This small provision (Rs. 5,193) is an old scheme and has been pending since 1914. In 1913, the temporary boat establishments were revised in Eastern Bengal and Assam. This was never done in Western Bengal. In 1914, proposals were made by the Inspector-General of Police consequent on the rise in the wages of labour and the rates of boat hire, and the necessity for more boats and for their retention for longer periods. It is in consequence of the existence of so many rivers in Bengal that it has been found necessary to maintain a large number of boats for the efficient working of the police.

"The next item is for hire of launches, and Rs. 27,600 has been provided on this account, owing to the fact that since the war many of our launches have been requisitioned by the military authorities and sent to Mesopotamia, with the result that they have had to be replaced by hired vessels. We are glad to be able to help the military authorities, and I suppose we shall get back the money in some form or other, when the military authorities pay us for the boats they have taken from us.

"We come next to the item touching the increase in the pay of the constables of the Calcutta Police. At present, these men draw Rs. 11, Rs. 12, Rs. 13 and Rs. 14, after varying periods of service. Their pay was last revised in 1914. Subsequent enhancements in the cost of living have shown that these rates are inadequate to produce recruits, and last year we were, at one time, faced with a deficiency in the force of 5 to 600 men; in a large city of the importance of Calcutta, where the property interests at stake are so enormous, this is obviously a great danger. Necessarily, then, we considered how recruitment could be revived, and we examined various expedients, amongst them the payment of a war bonus. We came to the conclusion, however, that as the conditions were really of a permanent character, since once we increased the rates of pay we could never go back to the old scale after the war, it was best to give an all round increase of Rs. 2 per mensem at the different stages, the cost of which is estimated approximately at Re. 1 lakh per annum. Even at that, I think it can scarcely be said that the constables have been given an excessive living wage.

"The next item of Rs. 1,30,759 is for the raising of the proportion of the ordinary reserve of head-constables and constables. It is merely a provision for an obvious incident in the working of the Department; that is to say, we have always a number of men ill, in the unhealthy districts especially, a certain number under training and a certain number on leave, and for these we must make provision. The matter was dealt with by the Police Commission, which put the proportion of the reserve at 15 per cent. of the strength. They admitted that the basis of their calculations was not very satisfactory, and they recommended that the figures should be adjusted in the light of subsequent experience. We have now gained that experience, and, since 1912 the inadequacy of the reserve has been prominently represented in the annual reports. In 1915, a scheme of revision was prepared, and we classified the districts on a more scientific basis according to their relative degrees of unhealthiness. Subsequently this has been scrutinised at considerable length, and we have finally submitted proposals to the Government of India grouping districts in three classes, in the highest of which the reserve should be 25 per cent. and in the lowest 21. The Police Commission, basing their conclusions on the circumstances affecting India as a whole, had never given sufficient weight to the unhealthiness of many districts which now form part of Bengal. The reform is estimated to involve a recurring expenditure of Rs. 3,47,840 per annum, and a non-recurring expenditure of Rs. 64,715, excluding buildings.

The next item is for the regrading of sub-inspectors and head-constables which amounts to Rs. 60,308. This was mentioned yesterday in connection with a resolution, with the criticism that we were hurrying on this matter to the prejudice of other things which were equally urgent. I would only represent that this reform dates back to 1905. It was recognised and admitted at the time that the rates of pay of head-constables and sub-inspectors were inadequate and a better scale was laid down, but it could not be given effect to in full for financial reasons. This provision is merely in pursuance of that very ancient scheme.

"The next item is a proposal to raise the pay of head constables which accounts for Rs. 54,114, and relates to a grade about which every province has in recent years experienced considerable difficulty. It is probably in respect of this class that the recommendations of the Police Commissioner were least satisfactory, among many other useful recommendations which they made in other respects; and, as I have said, every province has been obliged to look further into this matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission were to fix the grades of head-constables at Rs. 15, Rs. 20 and Rs. 25. Unfortunately, the Government of India, in considering the proposals, did not even give what the Police Commissioner recommended, but in 1914 sanctioned Rs. 17-8, Rs. 20 and Rs. 22-8. The Inspector-General of Police has now come up with a long report, pointing out that we shall have to go higher still, and I think that there is prima facie justification for his proposals. He has further pointed out that our maximum of Rs. 22-8 is lower than that of Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces and Behar and Orissa, the maximum in Bombay being Rs. 35. If these provinces have found it necessary to increase their rates of pay, it is obvious that in Bengal, with its high cost of living, the necessity for raising the maximum is still greater.

"I will now refer to a less controversial matter regarding the Secretariat Press. Here again the scheme is an old one, and it is practically at the same point at which I left it when I was transferred from the province in 1912. In 1909, a committee sat, of which I had the honour of being a member, and which pointed out the need of better press accommodation. In 1912, we thought that we were almost getting a move on, the idea being to remove the press to the old Board of Revenue office at Bankshall Street which then fell vacant. The removal of the Government of India turned the question into other channels as it was thought that we might be able to make use of some of their buildings. Unfortunately we could not get the buildings we hoped for. An unsatisfactory expedient was eventually adopted of placing a part of the press in a very noisy and unsuitable building near the Sealdah Station, which was kindly made over to us by the Eastern Bengal Railway. The splitting up of the press made supervision difficult and the opportunities of confusion appreciable. We, therefore, decided to try to settle this matter once for all. We have taken up land this year near the new Presidency Jail and near the Forms Department, thus facilitating work by having these two buildings in close proximity ; and we made this small provision in the hope of getting on with the preparation of the site. The future demands on the Secretariat Press are not likely to decrease and in fact will probably increase. Merely to take one possibility, that of having more frequent meetings of Council in future, it is obvious that the demands on the press would thereby increase very much. It is only common prudence to take the necessary steps to meet them in advance.

" I trust, Sir, that I have justified in brief outline these entries in the Budget and have established to the satisfaction of the Council that in making these provisions we can scarcely be accused of prodigality."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

" My Lord, after the speeches that have been delivered on this resolution, I think we shall be failing in our duty if we are only to give a silent vote on it. I rise to-day simply to say that although we support the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend, Babu Surendra Nath Ray, still we want to assure Your Excellency's Government that we are as anxious as anybody else, if not more, to have an efficient, strong and popular Police in this country. We have been told that the London police is the pride of London and we wish we could say the same of the Indian police. If the police is not popular in this country, my Lord, the fault certainly does not lie with my countrymen ; the police must be to some extent responsible for their unpopularity. If there is no co-operation between the police and the people in this country, I cannot help feeling, my Lord, that the police must be held responsible for that want of co-operation, for, why should not the people co-operate with those who protect their lives and property from being endangered by criminals ? It is certainly strange that the very people whose lives are threatened and whose properties are destroyed or stolen are the people who do not co-operate with the police who exist in this country for their protection. Who gains by this ? Certainly not the people of this country. Our grievance is not that more money should not be spent on the police, but that we should see that the money is not mis-spent. No doubt this year also ' a good deal of eloquence ', of indifferent eloquence has been expended during these few days. But, my Lord, I want to impress upon Your Excellency's Council that we all representing various interests in this Council—some representing Municipalities, some District Boards, others again special electorates coming from different parts of the presidency—we all agree in thinking that the expenditure on the police is extravagant and ought to be curtailed. There must be some cogent reasons for this. This is not the first time that we are entering our protest—we did it last year and this year also we have to represent it again and we hope and trust that whatever may be the fate of the resolution, at any rate we have made it clear that there is a good case for inquiry into the matter—a careful inquiry about the working and the efficiency of the Police Department. My Lord, we, the real people, are afraid even to lodge complaints before the police when there is a theft in the house or in the village because the presence of the police in an outlying part of the district is considered as a visitation. Those who have any experience of the rural areas will agree with me in this statement of mine. The other day I had the honour of being one of a party who went to investigate cases of alleged police oppression in connection with the looting of hâts. We were told that in a certain district an inquiry was held by a Magistrate who found no cases of oppression, but when we told him about specific cases and after another inquiry he found it necessary to suspend some police officers and start prosecutions against them. But before the non-official agency was there, no case was found against the police. Complaints from various parts of the district reached us where villagers would not dare complain against the police and some of us had to go to these places to make investigations on the spot. I hope, however, that this extra expenditure will make the police more efficient and more popular with my countrymen."

Resolutions.Maulvi Fazl-ul Haq.

The Hon'ble MAULVI FAZL-UL HAQ said :—

"My Lord, I must first apologise for my late appearance in Council to-day, but at the same time I consider it somewhat fortunate that I dropped in at an opportune moment and have got an opportunity of saying a few words with reference to a resolution which raises a question of some importance not merely to the Government but also to the people of this country.

My Lord, I may at once begin by saying that the expenditure of eloquence on the budget allotment on the police will this year be of a somewhat aggravated character as compared with that expenditure in the past. Or to put it briefly, we shall try to keep pace with the increased expenditure shown by Government in the budget allotment as compared with previous years. If those who are responsible for running the department, if those who are responsible for framing the budget, want to cut down non-official eloquence on this point, my advice to them is that they should also try to cut down a little of the wasteful expenditure on this particular department of Government. I have already committed myself by saying wasteful expenditure, but I hope I shall be able to make good the charge even at this late hour of the day. I dropped in at a time when Dr. Howells was speaking, and I heard him appealing to the Bengali Members of this Council to show a little sympathy for this department, if we are all agreed that this department should be honest, upright and efficient. I will only say that we are prepared to show our sympathy, and sympathy in an abundant measure, but we also stipulate that while we are prepared to extend a little more of our sympathy, Government should also discontinue showing unmerited sympathy so far as this particular department is concerned. I have often wondered how it is, so far as the Police Department is concerned, that the people and the Government are almost invariably ranged against each other; the more Government wants to justify expenditure on the police, the more Government want to justify the action of the police, the more Government want to whitewash the acts of the police, the greater seems to be the persistent and popular outcry that the expenditure on the police is wasteful, and that the sympathy which the Government is showing is absolutely misplaced. Is there in any country a parallel to what we find in India, where the divergence of Government and popular views sometimes amounts to a positive scandal? The fact cannot be ignored that it is not against the European members of the police that the public raise their voice; the fact cannot be ignored that we do not mean the European Superintendents or Assistant Superintendents when we say that the police are corrupt—we mean the constables, the head-constables, the sub-inspectors and sometimes even the inspectors but nothing beyond that. Everybody knows that this class of public officers comprises wholly Indians and nobody else. How is it, My Lord, that we, holding responsible positions in this country, raise our voice against our own countrymen? How is it that we do not say anything against the European members of this force, but when the sub-inspectors or inspectors are concerned, we do not hesitate to say that these men must be presumed to be corrupt unless and until it is shown that they are honest. As a matter of fact it is somewhat incredible to hear that a police officer is honest. If anybody such as a sub-inspector is said to be honest at present, he is considered something like a prodigy. He is considered as an exception to the general rule. How is it, My Lord, that such a state of things prevail here without a parallel in any other part of the world? I think I may submit for the consideration of your Excellency one little fact which is often overlooked, but which will go a great way to explain this particular state of things. In my opinion the fact that the police is ill-paid may be a reason, but the real reason why the police are corrupt lies in the fact that to them is extended a sympathy which is sometimes unmerited and often misplaced, and which in almost all cases is inexcusable. Almost every one of us as a father of children has to deal with our own household and we know how it is that children are spoilt. I do not know what the custom is in Europe, but in India the children are spoilt by the excessive zeal on the part of parents showing them undue favour and not punishing them when they deserve it. This unmerited favour, undeserved sympathy and want of punishment is indeed the reason why children get spoilt. Indeed, what are these police officers under this system of administration—they are the spoilt children of Government.

I may quote some facts and figures : Sometime after these hat-looting disturbances took place we had been hearing reports from almost all parts of the Presidency of oppressions by the police, we have been hearing that the police had been arresting villagers and had been releasing some of them after taking money, and had been committing all sorts of oppression. These are the kinds of complaints we always hear against the police. We did not at first believe them, but when the reports became persistent and report after report began to come in, we thought it our duty to hold some sort of enquiry to find out the true facts, and to place those facts before the Government. My friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and I went over to Nakhali and the Hon'ble Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhury to Rangpur. We went to see the District Magistrate—the District Magistrate is an European whom I happened to know before, and I knew also that if I could make out a good case he was not the man to shirk his duty but would bring the offenders to justice. At first when we went and told him what had happened he would not believe me. He said 'I am the District Magistrate, if there was anything in the district I certainly would have known it. How is it that you gentlemen who came from Calcutta know what I do not know.' I told him what had happened and also why it is that the Magistrate knows little of these things. It is because the District Magistrate seems always to be surrounded with a majesty of authority. To get to him one has to overcome several chaprasis and a lot of mastifs and grey hounds, and that was the reason probably why people could not approach the District Magistrate. He listened to us very sympathetically and he promised that he would hold some enquiry provided I could give some specific instances. My friend, Maulvi Abul Kasem, took the statements of about 20 persons and we told these people that if these statements were not borne out on enquiry they would be prosecuted under sections 182 and 211. They took the risk of that prosecution. The result was the District Magistrate went into the locality and as soon as he found that these allegations were specific, he held enquiries with the result that he has prosecuted 2 constables, 5 head-constables, 10 chaukidars and half-a-dozen daffadars and also 3 sub-inspectors.

Similarly we heard complaints from Rangpur. My friend, Mr. Asraf Ali, Khan Chaudhury, recorded some statements and he submitted them to the District Magistrate there. Somehow or other nothing has yet been done there, and having regard to the fact that these statements are definite allegations, I gave notice of a resolution, requesting the appointment of a committee to enquire into those allegations. Unfortunately I was unable to be present that day and my friend Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that resolution on my behalf, but the resolution was not accepted. I put this question without prevarication to Sir Henry Wheeler : Was it not the duty of the Government to accept that resolution without comment? We wanted an enquiry and we wanted some responsible officer to hold that enquiry. Was it not also the duty of Government to hold the enquiry in the interests of the Police Department itself, to justify the action of the police and to show that the allegations that we made were unjustifiable? The attitude however taken by the Government was this; as soon as the notice of that resolution was given instead of looking into the fact whether those allegations were well-founded or not, Government took up an attitude of definite obstruction and constituted themselves guardians or trustees for the police. I submit that this is not the right attitude to take up and the result of this is that the police think that they may commit oppression in the villages, even though their action may be challenged in the Legislative Council in the presence of Your Excellency. They get an idea that they are safe so long as they can get the Superintendent of Police duped, and so long as they can convince the District Magistrate that they are doing nothing wrong, they can do whatever they like and there is no earthly power to challenge their actions. I, therefore, think that Government unnecessarily shows sympathy where sympathy is inadvisable and often misplaced. Secondly, My Lord, we are told there are very many undesirable things, with regard to police administrations and Sir Henry Wheeler has told us that very many of these undesirable things will disappear if only we had the money. I submit that better pay may obviate some of the difficulties of the present day, but it will not get over all the difficulties, nor would a mere increase of pay render the police officer more honest. I will cite, My Lord, one instance of a personal character. I have got two houses in Calcutta—one in which I hold my office and the other in which my family lives. One member of my family fell ill and I sent my servant to fetch me some money from my office in order to pay the doctor. The man went running breathlessly because he knew the necessity was urgent. He was challenged by a constable; he told the constable that he was my servant and his particular purpose, still the constable accompanied him, came to my clerk to verify his statement, but in spite of that the servant was dragged to the thana and kept confined till the next morning. I complained about that constable to a sub-inspector but I found that he was not particularly prepared to prosecute or to punish him because it was a trifling matter. As I did not want to create a scandal I did not carry the matter further. I ask you if that constable who behaved towards my servant in that way would be a better officer if he was paid Rs. 25 a month instead of Rs. 12, certainly not. The reason is this: the constable knows that whatever he may do, if he can only get the bara sahib to back him, he can defy the whole world and with impunity. Lastly, there is another reason why the police are corrupt and continue to be corrupt. I do not hesitate to say that the practice of declining to hold enquiries even when Government have been cognisant of the fact that these people are corrupt. Mr. Beatson Bell knows more than anybody else that in the district of Bakarganj a police officer is required to keep a hired boat throughout the year. It is essentially a river district, and a police officer who does not keep a boat cannot do his touring. A sub-inspector gets some Rs. 50 or 60 as boat allowance on an average but he has to pay for boat hire Rs. 60 or 70—this is the usual charge for a kosh boat. Therefore the amount he gets from Government as allowance is not sufficient to keep a boat, and he has got to pay for other things besides. But every body knows that a police officer in Bakarganj lives in a style which is not possible for a man who draws Rs. 40 or 50 a month. How is that a police officer can live beyond his means?"

Resolutions.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

[At this stage the bell rang as the time limit had expired. The Hon'ble Member resumed his seat.]

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, I scarcely think that the remarks of the Hon'ble Member who has just spoken, have any relation to the Financial Statement; and I, therefore, do not propose to follow him into much of what he has said. As, however, he has asked me a direct question on one point, may I shortly answer it, especially as, not having been present at the meeting to which he refers, he has given the Council an account of what took place, which, I submit, would be recognised by all those who were here as entirely misleading. I gather that he takes exception to our attitude towards a recent resolution regarding hat-look cases on the ground that we refused an enquiry. The whole force of the argument which I then placed before the Council, was that the moment we heard of these allegations we directed our officers to make enquiries; enquiries were in fact made in all districts in which specific charges had been brought, and whenever there were reasons to believe that police officers had been guilty of misconduct they were prosecuted and punished. This fact is entirely inconsistent with the Hon'ble Member's reference to the police as 'spoilt children' of Government."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My Lord, I wish to say only a few words in reply. There is a general impression that my resolution seeks to curtail expenditure on police. As a matter of fact what I meant to say is this: for the last five years there has been an increase under the head 'Police' by about ten or twelve lakhs. Again this year we find that it has increased by fifteen to sixteen lakhs. I have already told the Council that this increase is not justified because there has been law and order in the land for the last twelve months. Where is the necessity for an increased expenditure by nearly fifteen lakhs again this year? Why go on increasing the expenditure under this head—some recurring and some non-recurring? If there was disorder in the land, I would have been the first to support this heavy expenditure; but I do not find any necessity for it now. There must be a limit to everything—limit even to expenditure by Government on the police. But instead of that they are going on increasing the expenditure every year. If a good portion of the Government income is going to be spent on the police, I am afraid very little will be left for other necessary expenditure. Let us be told once for all where you are going to put the limit—what is going to be the total expenditure on police, so that we shall know where we stand. This is all I have to say in reply."

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXV.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 1,50,000 be provided for the establishment of hostels for Muhammadan students outside Calcutta and Dacca; and
- (b) the sum be met out of the funds provided for the construction of steam launches for the River Police in Eastern Bengal (1 lakh) and for River patrol in the Calcutta Police (Rs. 50,000).

He said—

"My Lord, the want of hostels for Muhammadan boys has been felt for a very long time, and it was my privilege, and I may add my misfortune, to move a similar resolution in this Council on two previous occasions during the discussion of the Financial Statement, and I am afraid that this year also I am moving it with no better hopes of success. In this resolution I ask for hostels for Muhammadan students not only because I happen to represent a Muhammadan constituency, but because I feel that it is indeed to the general interest of the country that Muhammadan education should advance and progress at a more rapid rate than it has done in the past and is doing at present."

Resolutions.Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri.

Muhammadans are said to be handicapped and a dead weight in the progress of the country at large for want of education. Whenever we ask for better representation on Local-Self Government bodies, or representative institutions, or assemblies, or in the public service we are generally told sometimes in a patronising way that the Muhammadans should educate themselves better before they could claim better rights and privileges. We now ask for better opportunities for educating ourselves and for the progress of education. I at any rate expect the sympathy of Government and the Department of Education. I do not care from what allotment the fund is to be provided. We have said enough and more than enough on the expenditure on police, and everybody has tried to draw out of the police fund and the allotment for the partition of Mymensingh and Midnapore, simply because by a study of the Financial Statement we have found that these two items only are likely to be available for more urgent schemes. My Lord, everywhere the officers of the department go on inspection, they have felt that the want of a hostel for Muhammadan boys is very keenly felt and that a hostel is demanded everywhere by the people of the locality. We were told yesterday by the Hon'ble Member-in-charge of education that it would not be reasonable to have a Muhammadan College at the present moment, when the University Commission was sitting, and I therefore ask that the Government may be pleased to provide funds for the establishment of a Muhammadan hostel outside Calcutta and Dacca, as besides Calcutta and Dacca the other districts are not likely to be affected by the results of the University Commission whatever form these recommendations may take. I am afraid there is very little chance of this resolution being either accepted or carried, and I am only moving it in the hope that it will meet with a sympathetic consideration of the Department and that attempts at any rate will be made to provide for the establishment of hostels in the next year's budget. With these few words I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name.

The Hon'ble MR. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

My Lord, I rise to support the resolution moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the hope that even if the resolution be not accepted in full, it will receive a sympathetic treatment. It might not be accepted as regards as the amount asked for—but a lesser amount may be provided. We have very reasonable ground for asking this? Now that we are not going to have a Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta, the students are bound to remain in the districts where there are colleges but no hostels. In the districts the students do not hire houses and mess together but they are obliged to apply the charitably inclined gentlemen of the locality for their accommodation. We do find in some districts that the people are trying to raise funds for the erection of hostels, but they fail to realise a large amount because the Muhammadans are generally very poor. In the district of Rajshahi, where I come from, there was a Muhammadan hostel only for college students. In 1905 when Sir Bampfylde Fuller went to inspect the Rajshahi College the Muhammadan community prayed for a Muhammadan hostel and the first question he asked was whether we would be able to fill it up. I may tell the Council that as soon as the hostel was built it was filled up—there was accommodation only for 125 students. This resolution may be opposed by Government on the ground that if we build hostels in districts they might not be enough students to fill them up. What I would ask them to do is not to build big hostels in every district but to build small hostels to accommodate, say, some 12 students. And then if we find that there are more students seeking accommodation in hostels we might extend the building. We might also induce charitable people to subscribe to the building fund. Another reason which might be urged by Government is that funds are not available. I would only say that if it is not possible to give us much give us something. I do not care from what head the money may be deducted, but what I ask for is that less urgent schemes should give place to more urgent ones, as this resolution asks for an urgent need to be supplied funds may be provided from less urgent schemes.

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, I think it will satisfy the Hon'ble Members who have moved and spoken on this resolution, if I state briefly what has been done recently and what we intend or hope to do in the immediate future. The resolution Nos. XXV and XXVI deal with the same subject but with a territorial division. The Hon'ble Members in charge of these resolutions do not mean to suggest that Government has a different policy for the mufassal and for the two capital towns, and it will be convenient, if, in my brief survey, I deal with the matter as relating to the whole province. There is this difference in our attitude, though not in policy, towards schemes for the mufassal and for Calcutta, that we have always been and always shall be ready to recognise the special urgency of difficulties in Calcutta, because of the concentration of students in Calcutta. We have recognised this in the last three years, and the figures that I have collected are these :—

In 1915-16, we spent Rs. 2,64,000, on the three Muhammadan hostels —the Baker, the Taylor and the Carmichael hostels.

In 1915-16, we spent Rs. 1,27,000, on the Baker and Carmichael Hostels.

In 1917-18, we spent Rs. 41,000, on the Baker and Carmichael Hostels.

This, so far as we have information, has met the requirements of Muhammadan students in Calcutta for the time being; at least no representation has been made to the Director of Public Instruction as to any further needs of the community in this direction, and as a member of the Syndicate and as one who has every opportunity of being cognizant with the work of the University, I am able to state that no representation has been made to the University, which is primarily interested in hostels for colleges. Another small piece of evidence I may mention in this connection. Some years ago there was a Muhammadan mess attached to the Presidency College, but that mess has not existed during the two years that I have been Principal of that College, and no representation was made to me during this time of the desirability of providing additional accommodation for Muhammadan students of the College, although we have on the Governing Body a very prominent Muhammadan gentleman who is well acquainted with and competent to speak for the needs of his community. I think, therefore, we may take it that the urgent and immediate needs of the community have been satisfied. In regard to Calcutta these three Muhammadan Hostels accommodate—

Taylor Hostel	73
Baker Hostel	184
Carmichael Hostel	200

making in all 457 students. In the mufassal, we have spent in the same years—

	Rs.
1915-16	24,000
1916-17	36,000
1917-18	44,000

The difference in figures is due to the fact that there is not the same concentration in the mufassal centres, that hostels are smaller and buildings less expensive.

Resolutions.Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The whole policy of Government, in this matter, was reviewed recently and in the Government resolution of the 3rd August, 1916, the Muhammadan community were addressed in these terms :—

“As regards hostel accommodation, His Excellency desires that Muhammadans should be in as favourable a position, and have the same facilities, as Hindus, and he therefore accepts the principle that Government should establish hostels for Muhammadan students in Government high schools, where their number is sufficient to call for separate accommodation. This, however, is entirely a question of the funds at the disposal of Government, and for financial reasons it cannot be adopted generally. In other than Government high schools, the provision of hostels for Muhammadans must, as in the case of Hindus, be regarded as a fitting object for private munificence rather than for the expenditure of public funds, though Government will continue to give grants to supplement private contributions.”

I have explained what has been done in this connection, at least the outlines of the policy of Government. Under that policy, we are proceeding with the building of hostels for Muhammadan pupils in Government schools and are considering grants-in-aid for Muhammadan hostels of other high schools. We have in hand schemes for the establishment of Muhammadan hostels for six Government schools in the mufassil, one for a Government College and one for a Normal School. For non-Government institutions, we have under consideration, and are pressing forward, schemes for seven Muhammadan hostels attached to high schools. As I have indicated already, these schemes are dependent on circumstances and acceleration is not always in our power. But I can assure the Hon'ble Members who have spoken on this resolution, that we are doing and shall do whatever we can to expedite these schemes, and that if any other schemes are put up and brought to our notice, we shall do our best to expedite them. But as we are situated at present, we do not believe that we can get through more in the next 12 months than those schemes that I have outlined above, and I oppose the resolution on the ground that we cannot budget for schemes that we do not expect to be able to carry out.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM, said :—

“My Lord, I have to express our thankfulness to the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction for the sympathetic attitude that he has taken up with reference to the question of Muhammadan hostels in the mufassal. His remarks about the accommodation of the Muhammadan students in Calcutta hostels does not affect my resolution and I would leave them alone. I am glad to hear that the Department of Education is prepared to consider any scheme. But there have been no dearth of schemes which, however, either for lack of funds or for some other reasons, could not be pushed through. I cannot speak with much experience of other district towns, but in my district of Burdwan we have got a scheme for a Madrassah in the interior of the district and another for a non-collegiate hostel at Burdwan. Mr. Hornell visited the place in 1916. It was proposed that the Inspector of Schools should come and see things for himself and then send a report to Government. But within the last two years the Inspector has not found time to visit the places, although he has found time to visit Suri several times and also Burdwan in connection with other matters. I now learn that the Assistant Director also will not have much time to inspect these places. I have taken the assurance of the Director of Public Instruction and beg to withdraw the resolution, especially as there is no help for it.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Resolutions.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXVI.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a lump provision of Rs. 1,20,000 be made for the construction of new and the improvement of existing hostels for Muhammadan students in Calcutta ; and
- (b) the expenditure be met in the following manner :—
 - (i) Rs. 1,00,000 to be taken out of the grant for Calcutta Hostels (Budget provision—Rs. 3,39,000) ;
 - (ii) Rs. 20,000 to be taken out of the lump provision for the construction of steam launches for the River Police in Eastern Bengal (Budget provision—Rs. 1,00,000).

He said :—

“ My Lord, I do not wish to say many words in support of this resolution, because this again is one of our ‘hardy annuals’ and hardly any year had elapsed when some one had not given notice and discussed a resolution of this character. It is not necessary for me to demonstrate the necessity of hostels for Muhammadan students in Calcutta. It is admitted that the necessity does exist but the Director of Public Instruction seems to think that so far, at any rate as Calcutta is concerned the urgent and immediate needs of the community have been satisfied. I am extremely obliged to him for his sympathetic reply in connection with the resolution which has been moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, and I can assure him that his sympathetic words and his promise to do all that he can possibly do, have disarmed all hostility that we could possibly put forward. I do not think it will serve any useful purpose for me to press this resolution, if only the Director of Public Instruction will take the trouble of repeating the promise in so far as Calcutta is concerned and if in the near future we go up to him with cut and dried schemes for the establishment of Muhammadan hostels in connection with the colleges, he will try to give our proposals the consideration which they demand.

As regards the remark of the Director of Public Instruction that some of the messes attached to colleges, as the Presidency College, have been dissolved, I would like to point out that the inference he draws from it that there is no necessity for a mess of that character is not quite justified. If he will just look over the statistics of the number of Muhammadan students in Calcutta—I find roughly speaking there are some 1,500 college students including students in the Law College not more, a little more than half of that number is accommodated in the Elliot, Baker, Carmichael and Taylor Hostels. Making allowances for the students in attached messes there still remain a residue of about 600 or 700 students, some of whom live with so-called guardians, but I can assure the Director of Public Instruction that I know also of students who are living in most undesirable surroundings—boys prefer to live in places where they can be as free as possible and they fight shy of hostels and messes where there is some sort of supervision ; they let their guardians know that there are no available seats in the hostels or messes. They try to shelter themselves in most undesirable messes and some how or other manage to hoodwink the institution by making them believe that they are living with guardians. That accounts for a large number of students who live in undesirable surroundings and if we had hostels we could get hold of these boys and put them in the hostels. The fact that a mess does not exist shows that there has been something wrong in the management or that the boys try to fight shy of messes for reasons best known to themselves. From the mere fact that the Presidency College mess did not exist, the inference could not be drawn that there was no urgent or immediate necessity for a mess for the students of that College. I shall say nothing more and I am perfectly willing to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Director of Public Instruction. I understand that he is going to say a few words so far as the Calcutta mess is concerned, so I do not wish to take up the time of the Council any further."

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, I think I need not repeat the figures that I gave about Calcutta. I wish only to refer to the Hon'ble Member's criticism of my inference from the disappearance of the one particular mess. I merely gave it as one of many indications that led me to the view that there is no great demand at the present moment for hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students in Calcutta. I have been for sometime Principal of a big Government College, I have been connected with the administration of the Calcutta University, I have been a member of the Governing Bodies of one or two Government and non-Government Colleges. I have had ample opportunities of getting into touch with Muhammadan students and with the leaders of the Muhammadan community. In our own department, we have a branch which exists specially to learn and satisfy the needs of the Muhammadan community. and not from one of these directions has it been suggested that any real difficulty obtains in the matter of accommodation for Muhammadan students in Calcutta. Obviously, I cannot accept the argument that because students may have outwitted the Inspector of Messes, they, therefore, deserve or require special consideration in the way of hostel accommodation at Government expense. Messes are not so popular as hostels for obvious reasons; but if students disdain to accept whatever humble assistance authority has been able to offer them, if they evade discipline and defy regulations, we can not well be expected to accept an argument of this kind as a reason why we should regard their needs as specially pressing."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, as I have already stated, we are quite satisfied with the statement that was made by the Director of Public Instruction that that department is doing all that can be done. Representing the Muhammadan constituency we feel it our duty to discuss these matters from time to time. With these few words, I ask Your Excellency's permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXV.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a lump provision of Rs. 24,000 (twenty-four thousand), or as much as may be necessary, be made in the Budget for the improvement of the Civil Court Buildings at Perozpur (Bakarganj); and
- (b) the expenditure be met by taking the amount from out of—
 - (i) the provision of Rs. 45,000 for the reconstruction of Police headquarters in the Northern Division of Calcutta;
 - (ii) the provision of Rs. 60,000 for Minor Works (Police) in the mufassal; and
 - (iii) the provision of Rs. 15,000 for Minor Works (Police) in Calcutta, either by revision of estimates or by curtailing the expenditure on these three items by 20 per cent.

Resolutions.

Mr. Panton; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul Haq; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

He said :—

"My Lord, I moved this resolution on two occasions. The Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell knows all about the case. I believe these buildings were built when he was in the district himself. The sum to improve these buildings will not be very heavy, and I submit that in view of the fact that this improvement is very much needed, Government will see their way to accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. PANTON said :—

"My Lord, I share with the Hon'ble Mover the regret that people who have to use the Perozpur Courts should still have to undergo this inconvenience. But I am inclined to think that the Hon'ble Member has rather exaggerated the necessity for improvements, because I understand that the buildings of this Court are of a type that is prevalent in that part of the country, and what people experience in the buildings they experience in a very large number of other buildings in that part of the country. But at the same time Government themselves recognize the necessity for improvements and for that reason they have had a scheme prepared for the improvement of the existing buildings which is estimated to cost Rs. 88,000. That is one of a number of schemes for the improvement of judicial courts. A large number of these schemes were prepared and we are only waiting for funds to put them into execution. In a matter of this sort we cannot proceed in a haphazard way. This particular scheme is one of five for the district of Bakarganj. We must take all these cases systematically and as soon as funds are forthcoming the work will be taken in hand. For this reason I am unable to accept the resolution of my Hon'ble friend, but I would say this that the proposal—so far as the buildings are concerned—has the sympathy of the Government and it will not be lost sight of. Perhaps after this assurance, the Hon'ble Member will not press his resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZIL-UL-HAQ said :—

"After what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Panton I do not wish to press this resolution."

The resolution was then by, leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXVII.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor-in-Council that—

- (a) the Dispensary Fund for the Raja P. N. Ray Charitable Dispensary at Rampore-Boalia be exempted from paying the monthly contribution of Rs. 290 on account of the Assistant Surgeon in charge of the said dispensary; and
- (b) the amount be met from some item under head "24A—Medical".

He said :—

"My Lord, in this resolution I pray for the exemption of the Dispensary Fund for the Raja P. N. Ray Charitable Dispensary at Rampur-Boalia from paying a monthly contribution of Rs. 290 on account of the Assistant Surgeon in charge of the Dispensary. This is a local fund dispensary under class III A of the Dispensary rules and deals directly with the Treasury with the charitable fund and a grant from the Rampur-Boalia Municipality. The fund is so very limited that it cannot manage to have even the minimum opening or working balance. A Lady Doctor is provided, year after year but the provision being inadequate no appointment can be made, and this saving is utilised as the closing or opening balance. Though it is situated in a municipality, the municipal fund does not take the full responsibility, and the District Board is often appealed to and its special help is obtained on the ground that large number of persons residing without the municipal jurisdiction are benefited by it. It will be a surprise to the Council to learn that though this Municipality spends over Rs. 1,500 a year over diet money the number of indoor patients being always over 30, it is obliged to manage the dieting of the patients with 6 pice a day. The special circumstances justifying special concession to this Dispensary are that the Assistant Surgeon in charge has to perform a large proportion of Government work which is very heavy here ; he therefore, cannot be expected to perform all the duties of the Dispensary which he could have performed otherwise. The Government also are obliged to depute generally a Sub-Assistant Surgeon to do the Dispensary works for the Assistant Surgeon. This is a very useful Dispensary. The District Board is obliged to grant Rs. 1,000 a year for quinine alone. Under the circumstances it is but reasonable that Government should come to its relief in the way suggested. I hope the Council will accept the resolution under the special circumstances of the case."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, this resolution deals with a small local affair, and from the Hon'ble Mover's speech I do not gather that there are any circumstances about it different from those which could be urged in respect of many other dispensaries in this Presidency. The provision of local medical relief is a local obligation. Government, however, lend to local bodies either assistant surgeons or sub-assistant surgeons on the condition that their pay is met by an average contribution which stands now at Rs. 280 for an assistant surgeon and Rs. 52 for a sub-assistant surgeon ; the previous rates were Rs. 290 and Rs. 57 respectively, and these still obtain in certain cases. Government do not make any profit over these transactions ; they merely realise the cost which the entertainment of these men involves. The inadequacy of the pay of assistant and sub-assistant surgeons has often been urged in, and has received the sympathy of, this Council. In recent years, their pay has been revised, and, as a result, the contribution rates just mentioned are higher than those which were at one time required. But it is only reasonable that Hon'ble Members who urge improvements in the prospects of these officers should not try later to shirk the consequent obligation. In fact, in 1898, when the pay of assistant surgeons was enhanced, it was distinctly laid down by the Government of India that the new arrangements were introduced on the understanding that municipal and local bodies should pay at the higher rates.

"This particular case of the Rampur Boalia municipality is not a new one. In 1911, the dispensary got into very bad arrears, and in applying for help they said : 'Let us have an assistant surgeon, but let us only pay for a sub-assistant surgeon.' The Hon'ble Member now goes further and says : 'Let them have an assistant surgeon but do not require them to pay anything.' That is not a position which we can accept. The municipality is merely in the position of many other bodies, and it must pay for the medical assistance which it receives. If it prefers to have a better medical agency (and they were previously offered the cheaper agency of a sub-assistant surgeon which they declined), it is only reasonable that they should pay for such an arrangement.

"In this connection, I would draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to the fact that it was pointed out in 1912 that the local subscriptions to this dispensary only amounted to some Rs. 300 or Rs. 400. The Hon'ble Mover could assist the dispensary materially by exerting his local influence to secure greater popular support to the institution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I could not explain clearly the situation. There is a charitable fund and it goes by the name of the Raja P. N. Ray

Resolutions.Maulvi Abul Kasem.

Dispensary Fund, but that fund is not enough to maintain the Dispensary. It is therefore obliged to come up to Government and sometimes to the District Board for assistance. There is also a special circumstance connected with this matter. The Assistant Surgeon in charge of the Dispensary has also to perform good deal of Government work, as the work of the Civil Surgeon is very heavy. In that view of the matter, I asked that some Government contribution be made. I know of course that on account of the increment of the pay of Assistant Surgeons, the charge has been raised and I have nothing to say about that. I only appealed for certain help under the peculiar circumstances I have explained. I hope that something may be done, as although the Dispensary pays a heavy charge for the pay of the Assistant Surgeon, it does not get his services for the whole time. For these reasons, I urge that your Excellency's Government will consider this matter."

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXVIII.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that out of the recurring assignment of Rs. 5½ lakhs for the development of primary education Rs. 50,000 be allotted for the extension and improvement of Maktabas and Rs. 50,000 be allotted for the training of Muallims.

He said :—

"My Lord, in moving this resolution I think it necessary to mention that these Maktabas are primary schools where the introduction to the ordinary subjects of study in such schools a little bit of Urdu and Arabic is taught. Therefore these institutions are more costly than ordinary primary schools; and a scheme, which is now known as the Earle Scheme, was formulated at the time of Sir Archdale Earle when he was Director of Public Instruction of Bengal. By this scheme it was said that these Maktabas would get 50 per cent. of the grant-in-aid more than ordinary primary schools. A Government resolution was issued approving the scheme, but unfortunately for want of funds, effect has not been given to that recommendation of Sir Archdale Earle. Latterly, the Department has abolished the distinction between Maktabas and primary schools, classing them under the head of primary schools. The result of this is that these Maktabas are not getting that amount of grant-in-aid encouragement which they deserve and which they ought to get according to the sanction of Government. I think that an opportunity will now be taken of the Imperial grant of Rs. 5½ lakhs in furtherance of primary education to improve the position of these primary schools and to put them in a more flourishing condition. I believe that this demand on my part is a very modest one, especially in a province where the Muhammadans form a majority of the population. The difficulty in the case of the Muhammadan community is that they cannot send their boys in their early days to the ordinary schools, simply because they feel it absolutely necessary that their children should receive during their tender years some sort of religious education which will make them understand their religious principles, at least the religious rights and ceremonies.

My Lord, I have also asked for a further grant of Rs. 50,000 for the training of Muallims. We cannot make these Maktabas useful institutions unless we have got trained Muallims. A good deal has been said about the utility of training teachers. On behalf of the Department, and I need not repeat what has been said, I can only say that there are a few trained Muallims in this Presidency and that more are wanted for Eastern Bengal. Additional classes in ordinary guru-training schools will be more useful. Whatever may be the nature of the institution, it is absolutely necessary that a large number of Muallims to run these Maktabas should be organised and started in order to popularise education amongst the Muhammadan community. I move this resolution, at any rate, with the hope that it will be accepted by the Government. A similar resolution moved by me last year was accepted by then Director of Public Instruction. As my present resolution does not interfere with any amount allotted for any purpose, I have hopes that it will be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

My Lord, I am afraid that Government is not in a position to accept this resolution. The reason is simply that no orders have yet been received from the Government of India about the objects on which the new recurring assignment is to be spent and the terms attached to it. We have no information beyond the brief reports of the Budget debate in the Imperial Legislative Council which have appeared in the daily newspapers. If the report of the speech of the Hon'ble Member in charge of Education in the Government of India, Sir Sankaran Nair, is correctly reported, the grants made to the different provinces are intended for the extension of primary schools on the present voluntary footing. This would seem to imply that the grant is to be available for increasing the number of schools, but not for increasing the pay of teachers like the nine lakhs grant given last year. Trained teachers in aided maktab have already benefited from the nine lakhs grant, and we have also made proposals for the training of muallims, as well as gurus. This will require the sanction of higher authority and that sanction has not been received. Pending receipt of sanction, I have no doubt that the Education Department will make adequate provision for any increase in the number of muallims who offer themselves for training. At present, therefore, Government cannot undertake to earmark any definite sums out of the new assignment.

It is quite possible that the Local Government will not have a free hand in this matter. In the case of the nine lakhs recurring assignment made last year the Government of India required the Local Government to submit proposals for the distribution of the grant before any expenditure was undertaken. Government is not aware whether any such condition will be made this year. I would only ask the Hon'ble Mover to accept the assurance that, subject to the instructions of the Government of India, the claims of maktab will receive full consideration in common with those of ordinary secular primary schools.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, I beg to withdraw this resolution in view of the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley. I would only like to say that these Muktab are secular institutions and not religious schools ; there is only some instruction given which help Muhammadan boys to get some sort of preliminary education. I hope and trust that if the Government of Bengal send up a scheme to the Government of India, the question of the training of Muallims will receive adequate consideration."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XXXIX.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a lump provision be made for raising the pay and prospects of the lecturers who are engaged in teaching up to B.A. and B.Sc. courses both Pass and Honours either by including them in the Provincial Educational Service or by granting them a special allowance ; and

Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth.

- (b) the amount required for giving effect to this resolution be met from the undistributed Balance of the Imperial Grants of "Lump Grant" and "Further Grant" for Education under head "22—Education" and from General Reserve under head "32—Miscellaneous."

He said :—

"My Lord, this resolution speaks for itself. Those lecturers in the Subordinate Educational Service, who are engaged in teaching up to B. A. and B. Sc. Courses, both Pass and Honours, for several years, deserve promotion. These lecturers, we can take it, have been found competent to discharge the duties entrusted with, to the satisfaction of the higher authorities; otherwise they would not have been allowed to remain in that position. They naturally expect that whenever there is any vacancy in the Provincial Educational Service they would be promoted. But instances are not rare when their just claim has been overlooked and they have been superseded by their inferiors. I can at least point out to a recent case of such promotion in the Chittagong College and another in the Chittagong Normal School. The recent arrangement of making appointments and granting promotions on the recommendation of the Governing Body of the College in which the vacancy occurs is, no doubt, responsible for this, but I cannot understand why the general question of promotion should be decided on the recommendation of a particular governing body. Though it is but natural that the local claim and recommendation are given preference in such cases, the Director of Public Instruction should be the proper authority to consider the claim of all his subordinates independent of any local consideration. To my mind grave injustice is being done in overlooking the claims to promotion of these hardworking and meritorious officers.

In reply to my question on the subject it has been stated that the claims of these officers would be considered at an early date. I have, therefore, thought it proper to raise the question with a definite proposal for granting some relief to these deserving officers. The revised Budget provision for education shows a saving of about 17 lakhs this year, so there cannot be any difficulty in finding out the money required for the purpose. With these few words I commend this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, the explanation with which the Hon'ble Mover has supported his resolution was a clear and able analysis of the situation as it would be if it were exactly as he has allowed himself to be persuaded that it is.

I offer this criticism in friendliness and believe that it will be accepted in friendliness. The arcana of educational administration with its grades and services are not easy to follow, and the Hon'ble Member does not appear to have been well served in information by those whose cause with his unvarying tenderness of heart he has set himself to champion. The case of these officers has been put forward on various occasions and in various ways and there are in the department petitions from all or most of these officers, which it has not been possible yet to dispose of because the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, though they do not touch the Subordinate Educational Service, nevertheless touch College education in a way that may ultimately change the position of these officers. I would, therefore, crave the indulgence of the Council, if I deal with the matter at some length because this is a convenient opportunity of illuminating—if I can illuminate—a subject which has been made difficult merely because its simplicities have been lost sight of. It was decided long ago that college staffs should be composed of two classes of officers, professors, doing responsible work and holding a responsible position, and assistant professors, who might be regarded as assistants in the sense of doing less responsible work and of looking to the professors for guidance. These assistant professors came into existence and have remained in existence in our Government Colleges under another name, namely, lecturers. Professors, if Indians, are usually in the Provincial Educational Service, enjoying the pay and status of that service, and lecturers are placed in the Subordinate Educational Service, usually in the grade of which the pay is Rs. 125, and have the status of that service. Thus there are two classes of officers, distinct in responsibilities, status, duties, and pay. But in course of time the distinction of responsibility has largely been lost sight of. There are various reasons for this, one of which is the economic reason. The lecturerships though not so attractive as professorships, nevertheless compare not unfavourably with professorships in private colleges and in the matter of prospects, compare favourably with those in the majority of private colleges. Thus when a lecturership is vacant we get a large number of applicants, many of whom may be fit for a superior appointment which, however, they have been unable to obtain. The Director of Public Instruction or the Principal of the College, or the Governing Body, is quite justified in appointing to any post the best man who applies and if a man applies and is appointed as a lecturer, whose qualifications might secure a professorship if such a post were available, then I think we may reasonably recognize his disappointment, but I do not think we can be called upon to recognize anything else. In many cases it has come about that these lecturers have been allowed to take part in the more responsible work because they are qualified for it and because as a rule it has been a pleasure for them to do so. Also although it was originally contemplated that these lecturers should be regarded as subordinate to the professors, and to some extent take their instructions or at least receive suggestions from the professors, it has been found that there is in practice subordination only as between the members of a staff and their Principal. We have, therefore, approximated to a position in which lecturers and professors are doing the same kind of work and the Hon'ble Member's resolution proposes that we should recognize this approximation by administrative action at the cost of the Indian tax-payer. The lecturers have pressed this for some years, and a petition from them still remains undisposed of, as the proposals of the Public Services Commission, relating to educational officers, are still under consideration.

The Hon'ble Member has suggested, and at other times I have heard it said, that the promotion of these lecturers to the superior service is a matter both of justice and utility. We may frankly recognize the disappointment, we may sympathise with the disappointment, of men who, considering themselves fit for higher appointments, have, through the accidents of life, succeeded in obtaining only the subordinate posts. We may sympathise with them, but I think we should be misrepresenting the case if we lent ourselves to any discussion in which the word "grievance" played a large part. The use of the word "grievance" suggests that the employer has failed in his duty and that there has been a breach of faith. This, on behalf of Government, I repudiate. These lecturers hold appointments which they have sought. They have never been given an assurance that they will receive promotion to a higher service. Even if they are doing duties expected from men in the higher service, as they are doing in some places, it is their pleasure to do them. I submit that there is no case for action of the character proposed. To promote a number of officers merely because they are disappointed, would be an injustice to the general tax-payer.

I now turn to the argument about utility and I would first repudiate the argument which the Hon'ble Member has not advanced but which has been used elsewhere that the general promotion of these officers in the way suggested would be a public utility because it would remove their dissatisfaction and so increase their efficiency as public servants. If a man having deliberately sought and obtained a particular appointment is unable to do his best work in that appointment through dissatisfaction at not having obtained a better, he should be dealt with otherwise than by promotion. There is, however, another aspect of the case. It may be urged that the work of our Colleges has so grown in importance that it is necessary in the interests of higher education that there should be a larger number of officers of superior status, superior position and superior responsibility, and a less number of men of less status and less responsibility. That is a matter about which there may be difference of opinion and it is on that ground, when the time comes, that the whole case will be considered. but as I have already indicated we cannot at present deal with the case of these lecturers because the question of the reorganization of our colleges is now under consideration. More than that I cannot say. It may be necessary to change some of these lectureships into professorships, to abolish some less responsible appointments and establish some more responsible appointment but I would remind the Hon'ble Member that this is not necessarily the same thing as promoting these lecturers to professorships. Appointments in Colleges are now made in effect by Governing Bodies and when a Governing Body has a professorship to fill it will be its duty to make the best appointment in the interest of the College. A Governing Body will naturally give full consideration to the claims of these lecturers, but if a better candidate is forthcoming from any other quarter it will be its duty to select him for appointment. In this connection I may say that I have been the Principal of the Presidency College, I have served on the Governing Bodies of various Colleges and I have had considerable experience of the work of the Director's office, and I can assure the Hon'ble Member that wherever a College has a post of professor vacant the first care of its Governing Body is to consider scrupulously the claims of all lecturers already in the service of the Department. They are entitled to consideration, and they receive it, but it must be emphasised, because it is frequently forgotten, that a claim for consideration for an appointment is not the same thing as a claim to secure the appointment. They receive that consideration, and a lecturer, who is well qualified and has proved capable and zealous, has a reasonable prospect of selection for the higher service. The Hon'ble Member has pointed out that some of these lecturers are doing the same work as the professors of a superior status. It is true also that in qualifications they are sometimes no less well-equipped, though in general they are less well-equipped. Yet they receive full consideration for vacancies that occur and the figures that I have looked up show that during the past three years, four lecturers and demonstrators, as the corresponding officers on the science side of colleges are called, have been substantively promoted to the Provincial Educational Service and 23 have received officiating appointments. I hope, My Lord, that I have made it clear to the Council that what we have to deal with is not a case of legitimate grievance, but a case of disappointment with which we all sympathise. We are asked to remedy the inequalities of life by administrative action. Even if all our lecturers were equally qualified with our professors academically and in zeal and utility this action could not be regarded as called for on that account. The complexities of human life do not ensure the same material reward to all who are equally qualified academically or in other ways. But even if we were in a position to remedy the inequalities, which we are now asked to remedy, we should still be far from finality. If of brothers equally well qualified one might be so fortunate as to secure an appointment of professor in the Provincial Educational Service and another less fortunate secures an appointment as lecturer in the subordinate service, still a third failing to obtain either of these, might have to satisfy himself with the more arduous post of teacher in a Government school on the pay of Rs. 50, rising progressively to Rs. 250. Administrative action can never remedy such inequalities of fortune.

Finally, I may refer to a recent discussion in this Council on a resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend, in the course of which the Hon'ble Member in charge of education, stated that an enquiry will be made as soon as possible about the desirability of reorganizing the Subordinate and Lower Subordinate Educational Services. Pending such enquiry it appears undesirable to consider this special case in which only one class of officer in the subordinate service, and that not the most unfortunate, is concerned. For these reasons, My Lord, I oppose the resolution on behalf of Government.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am extremely sorry for the attitude taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth. I remember well I was assured on another occasion that the case of these officers will be taken into favourable consideration at an early date and, I hoped and still hope that it would be done as early as possible. It is somewhat consoling to me, however, that the same assurance has been given to me again by my Hon'ble friend that their case would be considered at no distant future. But the thing is this, I do not say that because they are dissatisfied something ought to be done for them. Everybody may want special consideration and promotion, but it is not for that that I am urging their case. The fact is if they are made to do the same kind of work as the members of the Provincial Educational Service, they naturally think they should be entitled to the same consideration. It may be that when they were hard pressed and when there were no vacancies in the Provincial Service, they were obliged to accept the posts that were offered, but when they are asked to do the same kind of work as the Provincial Service men do, they naturally hope that special considerations would be shown towards them. I take it that these officers have been doing the superior work creditably, otherwise they would not be retained in their posts. But I submit that if proper remuneration is not given for the work they do, it will have a demoralizing effect on them. Whenever there is a vacancy, the Governing Body of the College, I understand, are only inclined to recognize the claims of the professors who are serving under them directly. In case of a new appointment, I understand, the presumption is that it is not left with the Governing Body to fill the post. I understand that a Government circular has issued to the effect that the claims of those who have rendered good service should be considered when any new arrangements are made. In the Subordinate Service too the claims of those who are doing superior work should be considered, at least when occasion arises. However, after the assurance of the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, I do not press the resolution and I beg to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"We have now finished Resolution No. XXXIX and there are still 10 resolutions standing on the order paper. Unless Hon'ble Members are prepared to speak somewhat more concisely than they have, I think the prospects of concluding the proceedings to-night are not bright; but I am anxious to meet the convenience of Hon'ble Members in the matter of adjournment; and I am quite prepared to continue the proceedings or I am prepared to adjourn, as is most convenient to Hon'ble Members. I propose to ascertain quite informally what the wishes of Hon'ble Members are, by asking them to raise their hands who are in favour of adjournment."

The majority of the Hon'ble Members being in favour of an adjournment, the Council was then adjourned to 11 A.M., on Saturday, the 16th March, 1918, Government House, Calcutta.

(b) This sum be met from the grant under the Government of Assam.

Resolutions.

Mr. O'Malley; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

He said :—

"My Lord, there is a bund alongside the Kaffian river, which is maintained by the District Board, but almost every year it is overflowed, and the inhabitants of the portion of the municipal town just to the east of the protective bund suffer awfully from the results thereof. Besides, the sufferings of the residents of the adjoining tracts to the north thereof, viz., the quarters known as Ramnagar and Gobrapara, where there is no protective bund, during the recent floods of the last two years, knew no bounds, and the distress of the people was more than what could be described. Some of the houses and cattle, etc., were swept away by the flood and some others were under water for days together. Limited as the resources of this Municipality are, it is quite beyond the ordinary means of the municipal Commissioners to extend the existing bund to a length of about two miles and to raise the existing portion of the bund sufficiently for the protection and relief of these distressed people. The estimated cost of construction and repairs of the bund may be Rs. 4,000. The District Board of Dinajpur was moved for extending the existing bund, but as under the Local Self-Government Act, the District Board is not entitled to spend any sum within municipal area, it has expressed its inability to do anything.

The District Board of Dinajpur was appealed to, but under the provisions of the Local Self-Government Act the District Board is not entitled to spend any sum on such a project. Consequently nothing has been done by the District Board. I, therefore, propose that a sum of Rs. 15,000 be granted to the Dinajpur Municipality for this project. My impression was that the District Magistrate of Dinajpur had submitted his proposals to Government, but I am sorry to learn from the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley that Government have no information about it. I am sorry to find that the Dinajpur Municipality did not appeal to Government direct. If there is any difficulty in making the grant immediately, I am sure the needful will be done after the necessary enquiry. In this view of the matter, I have brought up this resolution and with these words I commend it to the acceptance of this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, as the Hon'ble Mover has explained to the Council, this is a scheme about which Government have no information. The Municipality has not approached Government, and Government are at present unaware whether plans and estimates have been prepared. A drainage scheme of an anti-malarial nature has been prepared, which provides for earthwork on the roads and on a protective bund round the town. I am not certain whether it is the same bund that the Hon'ble Mover has in his mind. If a scheme of construction and repair comes before the Government, it will have to be considered in relation to this drainage scheme. At any rate, for the present, it is scarcely feasible to make provision for a scheme of which nothing is known. If the work is to be undertaken, the engineering details will have to be settled, plans and estimates prepared and the financial basis of the project determined, e.g., how much the municipality can contribute and whether it requires a loan or grant. I can assure the Hon'ble Mover that if the Municipality comes up, Government will be very glad to consider the scheme, and, after examining plans and estimates, to see whether any assistance is required and in what form it should be given."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"I am glad to hear that Government is prepared to do the needful in the matter. I am sorry the Municipality did not move the Government. However, after the assurance of the Hon'ble Member, I do not think I should press the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLI.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) the monthly fee rates in the Hooghly, Krishnagar, Chittagong and Rajshahi Colleges be reduced to Rs. 5 in the case of the two former colleges and to Rs. 4 in the case of the two latter colleges, the estimate of receipts from Government Colleges—General—being correspondingly reduced; and
- (b) a corresponding reduction be made in the provision for miscellaneous and unforeseen charges under "32—Miscellaneous."

He said :—

"My Lord, recently the monthly fee rate for the Sanskrit College has been raised from Rs. 5 to Rs. 6 with certain exceptions and for the Krishnagar College from Rs. 5 to Rs. 6, and for the Chittagong and Rajshahi Colleges from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6. The Government letter ordering the increments with the reasons for the same has also been published in reply to my unstarred question No. X put on the 4th September last. The number of students in March 1916 and the per head Government expenditure in these colleges are given in the following table :—

	Number of students.	Per head expenditure.			Increased monthly fee.
		Rs.	A.	P.
Krishnagar College	... 184	175	1	5	184
Rajshahi "	... 774	52	12	2	1,548
Chittagong "	... 264	140	13	6	528
Hooghly "	... 242	134	1	3	...
Sanskrit "	... 214	56	14	9	214
Dacca "	... 820	171	9	6	...
Presidency "	... 975	237	5	7	...

Thus it appears that the Government gain by this increment amounts to Rs. 2,474 a month, or Rs. 29,688 only a year. The Budget provision for this year for education is Rs. 98,13,000. The provision in the revised Budget is Rs. 81,14,000. Thus the saving amounts to Rs. 16,99,000. So we can take it that it is not on account of any pressure on the Provincial revenue that this increment order has been passed, and we fail to understand why Government took this unusual course and why higher education, upon which the solution of the bread question of the bhadralok classes of limited means solely depends, should be taxed to its utmost. One might naturally think that it is simply putting a premium upon high education, so that its door might be closed to the people of ordinary means. One argument that has been advanced for this increment is that there should be a uniformity of fee rates. But uniformity, I think, is not always practicable or possible. Varying conditions control varying necessities and it needs no showing that circumstances are not the same in Calcutta, Hooghly, Dacca, Chittagong, Krishnagar and Rajshahi. If, however, uniformity is indispensable, why not make it by reduction rather than by increment? Moreover, an exception has been made in the case of the Bethune College and for the sons of the bond fide pundits of the Sanskrit College. Is it not because female education has not much progressed and the bond fide pundits find it hard to meet the exorbitant charges? If it is necessary to make some concession for these two classes, what concession Government are prepared to make for the poorer section of the general public and for those who are very backward in high education. The mofussil colleges are obliged to work at a great disadvantage? That these colleges are steadily growing in importance is simply because the poorer sections are in large numbers now-a-days resorting to these colleges for the sake of economy. Residence in Calcutta is very expensive, and it is hardly possible for the poorer sections to avail themselves of the advantages of training in Calcutta where students get the help, directly or indirectly, of first-rate Professors and well-equipped Laboratories and Libraries. If uniformity could be secured in Government expenditure per head for all the Government colleges in the Province, the position would have been rather intelligible and consistent. Admittedly, in that case it would be necessary for the Government to make larger grants to all the mofussil colleges. The Hon'ble Mr. Hornell said in reply to my question that the fee rates were raised because they were too low. I do not understand, my Lord, what this phrase 'too low' means. Does it mean that high education must be highly paid for? Are we to take it after all that education is a marketable thing to be disposed of to the highest bidder?

One may say that it is a question of a rupee or two a month, so it is not of much importance. He does not know how many poor students will have to give up their studies for this increment by a rupee or two. If there has been no appreciable decrease in the number of admissions this year, the discouraging effect is sure to be felt at no distant future. Surely, this is not the time for increment in educational expenses when all the bhadralok classes are hard pressed on all sides by the abnormal rise in the price of ordinary necessities of life. Then, my Lord, the ideal of high education must have undergone a thorough change in this country in recent years. When the B.A. classes in the Rajshahi College were first opened in the year 1877 or 1878, through the liberality of the late Raja Promothanath Ray of Dighapatia with an endowment of a lakh and-a-half for the purpose, it was arranged that if at least eight students continue to read in each of the third and fourth-year classes, the college would be maintained by Government, and then there was an European Principal of the Indian Educational Service posted there. Now there are more than three hundred students in the B.A. classes of the Rajshahi College. North Bengal is proverbially backward in education. It is practically a Mahomedan Division, mostly of the cultivating class. The fee rate in the Rajshahi College was originally fixed at Rs. 3 a month and it has now been doubled. Indian instinct, my Lord, is always opposed to make education costly. India had a system of education of her own and it was on a residential basis; but it was the least expensive to the guardians. The educational institutions were maintained by grants either State or private, and pupils were required to live with their preceptors during the period of their education. The tendency in modern civilised countries also is to make education as cheap as possible. In England, I believe, the University Extension system has been introduced and is being tried with success. This is a method which has been in operation for a number of years for extending University teaching to young people outside the University who would otherwise be unable to avail themselves of University advantages. Under this scheme lectures are given and classes opened in chief centres of population and the high education of the University is thus brought within popular reach.

I have not taken the case of the Sanskrit College into consideration, as the students there get the advantages of Calcutta education. I also think the Houghly College should be placed on the same level with the Krishnagar College.

I am aware that some of our Anglo-Indian friends, even with their strong sympathy for Indian aspirations, suffer from education phobia. Perhaps they think—and I have heard it said sometimes—that the root cause of anarchism lies in the spread of high education in the land. To say the least of it, I can safely assert that it is absolutely without any foundation in fact. High ideals given by high education can never create anarchism. I may quote here the 'Message of Hope' graciously announced by His Majesty the King-Emperor which runs thus:—

'It is my wish that there may be spread over the land a network of schools and colleges from which will go forth loyal, manly and useful citizens able to hold their own in industries and agriculture and all the vocations of life; and it is my wish too that the homes of my Indian subjects may be brightened by the spread of knowledge with all that follows in its train—a higher lever of thought, comfort and health.'

Disaffection, my Lord, lies in economic causes and the growing poverty of the people, and therefore the remedy lies not in closing the door of high education but in opening new avenues of employment to the youthful generation.

If, my Lord, I have spoken rather strongly against this recent increment order, my excuse is that I feel very strongly about it, and I am firmly convinced that it will seriously interfere in mofussil towns with the rapid progress of education.

For all these reasons I say that this increment in fee rates is absolutely unjustifiable, and I appeal to Your Excellency to remedy it at once, and in that hope I have taken the earliest opportunity of bringing this matter before this Council."

"My lord, the resolution is practically an appeal against the orders passed by Government about nine months ago raising the fees of the four colleges to Rs. 6 a month. Government then examined the position as regards fees paid in Government Colleges, and I may explain to the Hon'ble Member the reasons which led to the raising of fees. Until last year there was considerable variety in the rates prescribed at the different colleges. They were Presidency College, Rs. 12; Hooghly, Rs. 6; Dacca, Rs. 6; Sanskrit, Rs. 5 except for sons of bona fide pandits who paid Rs. 2; Rajshahi, Rs. 4; Chittagong, Rs. 4; Krishnagar Rs. 5. So far as could be seen, there was no justification for the low fee rates in the four Colleges, viz., Rajshahi, Krishnagar, Chittagong and the Sanskrit Colleges. There was no reason why education should be cheaper in some colleges than in others. When we compared the rates paid in private colleges we found that several charged more than the four Government colleges. For instance the St. Xavier's and Scottish Churches Colleges charged Rs. 6 a month for all students and the Ripon College charged Rs. 7 for B. Sc. students. After carefully considering the matter, Government came to the conclusion that the fees should be raised to the same rate as in the Hooghly and Dacca Colleges, i.e., to Rs. 6 a month. The rate was raised by Re. 1 only for the Krishnagar and Sanskrit Colleges—in the latter sons of pandits continued to pay the same low preferential rate—and by Rs. 2 in Rajshahi and Chittagong. It was thought that this would not be an excessive charge for the classes of students who receive collegiate education.

The Government of Bengal has not been singular in its action. The Government of the Central Provinces raised the fees at the Jubbulpore College from Rs. 5 to Rs. 6-4 in 1911-12, while in 1916 it raised the fees in both its colleges from Rs. 6-4 to Rs. 7-8, which is more than is paid in any Government college in Bengal except the Presidency College. The Central Provinces Government, indeed, went further than the Government of Bengal, for it also laid down that the minimum fee which could be accepted in aided colleges should be Re. 1 less than that charged at the Government colleges.

The principle kept in view by Government in raising the fees was they should not be too much for families of the middle classes, and should also be enough to cover a substantial portion of the cost of the colleges. Government considered itself justified in doing this in view of the large and increasing expenditure which it has to incur on collegiate education. I mentioned certain figures yesterday and I do not propose to repeat them here. I may just mention that the cost of Arts Colleges is no less than 18 lakhs; and every student costs the provincial revenues Rs. 140 a year. It is probable that the expenditure on colleges may be increased. We have the Dacca University scheme, which has merely been postponed, and there is the scheme for a Mahomedan Arts College in Calcutta, which is also postponed; I may add that in the case of the college in which the Hon'ble Mover is particularly interested, viz., the Rajshahi College, there is a scheme for hostels still to materialise. I think the Hon'ble Member has underestimated the increase of income which will accrue from the raising of colleges fee. I think as a matter of fact, the increase of income is about eight times the sum he mentions.

The Hon'ble Mover has also referred to the policy in England, particularly in regard to University education. I am not prepared to go into a discussion of general principles as to the proportion of educational expenditure which should be devoted to colleges. I only wish to remark that in this country Government has done a great deal for collegiate or University education. If the Council will permit me, I would like to quote a paragraph from the remarks of Mr. Gilchrist, who is known to be a brilliant young educationist. This is what he says:—

'Perhaps in no country in the world at any period in history have greater relative demands been made upon Government for education than in India. Nor has any Government been so responsive. The idea of Government subsidy which permeates the whole University scheme of things in India has led many thinking men to consider whether in this extensive subsidy of University education there is not economic danger. Education is indeed a factor of production of the first importance, but in India many other urgent factors are to be considered; and while one must always insist on the supreme importance of primary and secondary education, it is difficult to sympathise with wholesale Government expenditure on University education. University education in the West depends largely on private sources, but in India Government is looked on as responsible alike for University, secondary and primary education.'

I merely cite these remarks to show that educationists recognise that Government have been generous in regard to collegiate education; and I do think it may fairly be accepted as reasonable that Government should raise the monthly fees to a figure which will not be too much for the students or their parents. The question is:—Does that cause hardship to students? Does it tend to diminish the demand for these colleges? Does it prejudicially interfere with collegiate education? Well, since these orders were passed—nine months ago as I have already said—Government have received no complaints and they believe that no hardship has been caused. Unfortunately, I have not got the figures for the Chittagong College, but I have got the figures for the Krishnagar College and they show that since the fees were raised, the number of students of the college has risen from 218 to 245. This does not show that the raising of the fees has had any bad effect. For the Rajshahi College, in which the Hon'ble Member and I myself are interested, I have no exact figures. But I have good authority for saying that since the orders were passed, the number of applicants for admission has increased. The maximum number admissible in the Rajshahi College is limited to 750, and for some time past the number of applicants has been in excess of this maximum, the result being that 100 students apply but are unable to obtain admission. The demand is greater than the actual accommodation available. Since these orders were passed, the number of applications for admission which have had to be rejected for want of accommodation has risen from 100 to 150. In these circumstances, my Lord, I am sorry I cannot recommend this resolution to the Council."

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I have carefully listened to the reply, but on one point I have not heard anything in justification. It is this : why should an exception be made in the case of Bethune College? Is it necessary that this exception should be made in this case simply because the College is not able to meet the necessary expenses and because education has not made much progress among females? I do not understand why that consideration should not be shown towards the poorer classes of the community among whom also education has not made much progress. The immediate effect would be slight, but I am sure at no distant future it will tell heavily upon the poorer section. Very little progress has been made in English education, specially in Bengal. It is in that view that we have been trying for some time to make education cheaper. As I have shown, the tendency in all civilized countries, including England, is to make education cheaper, and I cannot understand why it should be otherwise in this country, at least in Bengal. I am not satisfied, therefore, with the explanation given. As I have shown the Provincial revenue has not been benefited much by this, and there is no reason why a special tax should be imposed upon education. I can understand a special tax upon excise revenue. But education is neither a vice nor will the special tax benefit the Provincial Government much. If any appreciable income would have been derived from this there would have been some justification, but simply because in the Presidency College the 'per head' expenditure is very high, there is no reason why in the case of Dacca College the fee should be raised to Rs. 6. I have not purposely mentioned the case of Dacca College in my resolution because there is shortly going to be a University there. But in the case of the colleges I have mentioned I do not understand why the rate has been increased. The explanation offered is not at all satisfactory, and I hope the House will accept my resolution.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLII.

The Hon'ble Babu KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum be allotted for the appointment of two additional Lecturers in English and Chemistry and a Laboratory Assistant in Physics in the Rajshahi College ; and
- (b) the said sum be met from General Reserve—" 32—Miscellaneous."

He said :—

"My Lord, this resolution is based upon the recommendation of the University Inspectors. They have been insisting since 1914 on the appointment of two additional Lecturers in English and one additional Demonstrator in Chemistry. Only one additional Lecturer in English was appointed in 1915. In this year's Budget there is provision for appointment of one additional Lecturer in English for the Rajshahi College. But no appointment has as yet been done. A curious suggestion was made sometime ago that the number of students in the college should be reduced by at least 100. The Governing Body, however, represented that this should not be done, as in that case the college would suffer a loss of about Rs. 5,000 a year according to the former rate of fees. In last September also the University Inspectors (Messrs. Ghose and Das Gupta) strongly urged for the appointment of one additional Lecturer in English and one additional Demonstrator in Chemistry. They also pointed out the unsatisfactory result of English in the last University Examination for this college. The Rajshahi College is the least expensive Government college in the Province. The per head expenditure in this college was Rs. 52 and odd annas in 1915-16. The fee rate has since been increased from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 a month. A Laboratory Assistant in Physics is also, I understand, urgently necessary in the Rajshahi College. The number of students reading Physics in the I. Sc. and B. Sc. classes is over 225. Under these circumstances, I hope, this resolution should meet with the approval of the Government and will be accepted by this Council."

Resolutions.

*Mr. Wordsworth; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri;
Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.*

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, the matter is simple and scarcely merits the dignity of a resolution in Council. Our colleges are staffed according to the requirements of the University. Not long ago, I think at the end of 1916, the staff of this college was settled by an understanding with the University. Recently, the University addressed us in terms inconsistent with this understanding. We requested of the University an explanation of the inconsistency. The explanation has arrived, and is not consistent with any of the preceding correspondence. As soon as we arrive at a settlement we shall take whatever action is necessary in the ordinary course of administrative routine, and the necessary expenditure will be provided from the ordinary source available. I trust, therefore, the Hon'ble Member will not find it necessary to press this resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, in view of this assurance, I am not anxious to press for the immediate acceptance of this proposal, but I hope that the earliest opportunity will be taken to provide for this."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLIII.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

(a) a lump provision of Rs. 1,00,000 (Rs. 50,000 recurring and Rs. 50,000 non-recurring) be made for the development of the Unani system of medicine; and

(b) the expenditure be met by taking the amount from—

(i) the lump provision of Rs. 1,50,000 for the development of industries;

(ii) the Director of Industries and his office; and

(iii) the grant for fish culture;

by reducing expenditure under head (i) by 50 per cent., by dropping the whole of the expenditure under head (iii) and taking the balance from the provision under head (ii).

He said :—

"My Lord, it is with some diffidence that I rise to speak a few words on this resolution. The suggestion contained in this resolution is somewhat of a novel character, and I confess that the idea never struck me till my Hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray informed me that he had given notice of a similar resolution which he is presently going to move. I thought, My Lord, that when a Hindu member of this Council gives notice of a resolution for provincial revenues to be ear-marked for expenditure for the development of a Hindu system of medicine, a Muhammadan member, representing a Muhammadan constituency, might well justify his seat in Council by putting in a similar plea for the Muhammadan system of medicine. But since I gave notice of this resolution I have considered the matter, and I confess that I find there are certain difficulties in the way of my pressing this resolution on the Government. In the first place, there is no institution at the present moment to which any money could be handed over for the study and research of the Unani system of medicine; but at the same time I would earnestly appeal to Government to remember that the Unani system of medicine contains the elements of extraordinary development as an indigenous system of medicine and Provincial revenues might, therefore, be properly spent in the development of such a system, provided the ways and means are arranged and provided the University, for instance, makes it a business to encourage this particular system of medicine. Many of the witnesses who have been examined by the University Commission, particularly the Muhammadan witnesses, have urged upon the University Commission the importance of recommending the practical study of the Unani system as a medical science, and it may be that on the recommendation of the University Commission, the University may be induced to create a chair or some such thing for the development of this system of medicine. If that is done, the recommendation contained in my resolution may be considered by Government, whether some sort of subsidy cannot be given for the development of this system of medicine. I need not spend the time of the Council any further, and I will not press my resolution if I get an assurance that this resolution will receive sympathetic consideration at the hands of the Government.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, I am extremely sorry that in this instance, at any rate, I cannot support my Hon'ble friend Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq. He himself admits that he never thought of moving such a resolution, but that the idea came to him because a Hindu Member of the Council gave notice of a resolution connected with the Hindu system of medicine. I am sorry to say that I cannot approve of the spirit in which the resolution has been framed. We are here to represent Muhammadan interest certainly, but we are not here simply to press our claims on the ground that a Hindu member has put forward his claim on his own account. Consequently, I do not think, the Government will be well-advised to accept this resolution, because if the Unani system is to be encouraged it should be encouraged at Delhi in which ancient and Imperial city this system is still in vogue, and the Imperial revenue may be diverted towards the purpose. Delhi is associated with the Unani system, but even then I doubt whether a sufficient number of students will be available to fill up a first grade college, not to speak of Calcutta or Dacca or Noakhali. With these words I oppose the resolution. We have got many important matters for which funds are wanted and we cannot at present take up such an useless question as this."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, the remarks of the Hon'ble Member who has just spoken relieve me from the obligation of replying to this resolution at any length, and I do not now propose to undertake an examination of the Unani system of medicine ; but I would like to draw the attention of the Council to a remark which I read in our papers connected with this resolution and which struck me, though a non-medical man, as eminently sound. This was a comment by Surgeon-General Edwards, who has just left us, deprecating the use of the word 'system' in connection with this question. He said :—

'There are really no separate systems of medicine The art of medicine should know no boundaries. We do not want one medical system for India, another for China, a third for France and so on ; what we want is one school teaching and assimilating the best from all over the world.'

In the light of the discussion to-day we might equally say that we do not want one system for Hindus, another for Muhammadans, and a third for Europeans.

The question, therefore, reduces itself to one of medical education. The medical education which is at present being imparted in Bengal is on lines which, I think, commend themselves to all of us. So far as a sound knowledge of surgery, anatomy, physiology, pathology and midwifery is at the basis of any system which is designed to relieve human bodily ills, we are probably all agreed that we are proceeding on sound lines. Whatever may have been the case in the past, instruction in the two indigenous systems of Unani and Ayurvedic medicine does not now prevail to any extent in Bengal. If, therefore, we divert our energies to an attempt to resuscitate these ancient teachings, we necessarily detract from the possibilities of improving the existing methods, and even in the course of this financial debate, we find that there are unsatisfied demands for improvements in different directions in our present medical institutions.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has mentioned another point, viz., that there are possibilities of this matter being tackled at Delhi, and I would refer the Council to an answer which was given at the Imperial Legislative Council on the 18th of February last, in which it was stated that the Government of India had under consideration the question whether it was possible to place the Unani and Ayurvedic systems on a scientific footing and whether it would be possible to increase their usefulness; the Government of India were then awaiting a representation from the All-India Ayurvedic Conference.

In the light of these facts, I think the Council will be well advised to wait and see what might result from this development, while should the Universities Commission touch on the point their recommendations will necessarily receive the careful consideration of the local Government.

In these circumstances, I do not propose to deal at length with the suggestion as to the sources from which the money is to be found for the purpose contemplated by the resolution, though in so far as the diversion of funds indicated is likely to prejudice the industrial development of the province, it is scarcely likely to commend itself to those who desire more rapid progress in that direction."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, the attitude taken up by my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Abul Kasem has been 'the most unkindest cut of all'. If he had told me that he was going to oppose it I would not have moved the resolution at all. After hearing Sir Henry Wheeler, I beg to withdraw my resolution.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLIV.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) provision be made for making an annual contribution of Rs. 9,000 recurring and an initial non-recurring grant of Rs. 9,000 to the Astanga Ayurvedic College of Calcutta ; and
- (b) the same be met by reducing the amount provided in the Budget under the head Calcutta Collectorate (Office) from Rs. 52,776 to Rs. 42,800 and from the item of Rs. 15,000 for taxi cab stand on the maidan.

He said :—

"My Lord, from the days of Warren Hastings Sanskrit learning has received an impetus at the hands of the British Government. Sincere love and regard for the ancient learning of India by men like Sir William Jones and Professor Max Müller have brought the knowledge of the East to the doors of the West. As has been said by Professor Houghton nearly a century ago a course of events, unparalleled in the history of mankind, has placed, among the subjects of the British Empire, a people renowned from the remotest antiquity for wisdom, civilisation and steadfast adherence to their peculiar religious opinions. That the Indians had not only a literature but mathematics and science of a high order is admitted on all hands. It must also be admitted that we owe the revival of our ancient learning to the patronage of the British Government and love of learning of some of the savants of the West. Sanskrit poetry and drama, philosophy and logic have received very great encouragement from the British Government. The Sanskrit Colleges in Calcutta, Navadwip or at Benares, the stipends paid to the pandits of Bengal and the holding of an annual title examination in Sanskrit all testify to Government support. But Hindu science, specially medical science, has not unfortunately received its fair share of support and patronage from Government. Time, however, has come when Government ought to encourage Indian medical science, specially when people themselves have been taking a keen interest not only in its revival but in shaping it according to modern ideas and methods. From a very long time Government have been patronising Indian drugs and have been insisting upon the use of indigenous herbs and vegetables prescribed by the Ayurvedic system of medicine in all medical institutions, in outdoor dispensaries and in hospitals. In fact, Government have prepared a list containing the names of Indian herbs with directions for their use and which are used as a guide to the medical officers in charge of these dispensaries. But unfortunately Government have done so without, at the same time, properly studying the Indian system of medicine or the therapeutical value of these medicines. Allopathic Doctors have made preparations of Indian drugs, such as Neem, Chirata, Anantmul and have been selling their preparations by thousands. Why, the best allopathic Doctors of this Presidency have been using a well-known medicine of the Ayurvedic system known as makaradhaj, generally in cases of typhoid and low fever, thus admitting the efficacy of Indian drugs and Indian system of medicine. We have, no doubt, been taught in Western learning from our boyhood, but we are believers in the indigenous system of medicine, as the best suited for Indian climate and conditions and suited to our own constitution; as a matter of fact people from the highest to the lowest avail themselves of Kaviraji medicines.

Resolutions.Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

Your Lordship was pleased to make the following remarks at the last Convocation of the Calcutta University: 'What did surprise me was to learn that up to the B.A. degree Indian philosophy finds no place in the curriculum. It is Western philosophy only that is taught and it is only those who proceed with their studies beyond the B.A. degree who receive at the hands of their University a draught from those springs of profound philosophic thought which have welled up in such rich measure from the intellectual soil of their own country. Frankly that strikes me as a stupendous anomaly.....' Your Lordship further remarked: 'I should have expected to find the deep thought of India, which has sprung from the genius of the people themselves being discussed and taught in the normal course of an Indian University, and the speculations and systems of other people from other lands introduced to the students at a later stage after he has obtained a comprehensive view of the philosophic wisdom of his own country.' It will be perhaps a surprise to Your Lordship to hear that most of the physicians who come out of the Government Medical Colleges do not know anything about the Hindu system of medicine—of the great works of Susruta and Charaka though there is ample evidence to show that the first principles of the science of medicine were originally preached in Arabia by Indian physicians and Professors and that the Charaka and Susruta were translated into the Arabic language. Dr. Wise in his history of medicines says: 'With some hints from the Egyptians, the Grecians were the originators of both the medical science and art of Europe. A more extended knowledge of history, proves that this is not correct, their own most ancient records proving that they obtained much of their knowledge from a mysterious nation of the East, which we have proved was the Hindu, among whom the arts and sciences were successfully cultivated, and whose great progress in medicine attracted attention, and was communicated through the Egyptian priesthood to the philosophers of Greece. After perusing a translation of 'Charaka Sanhita' Dr. Clarke of Philadelphia observed : 'If the physicians of the present day would drop from the pharmacopœia all the modern drugs and chemicals and treat their patients according to the methods of Charaka there will be less work for the undertakers and fewer chronic invalids in the world.'

Hindu system of medicine known as the Ayurvedic system flourished some centuries before the birth of Christ under the auspices of Hindu kings. Various have been the causes owing to which everything remained at a standstill for more than one thousand years. There was no support, no encouragement from the Government of the day. In fact dark days intervened, without hope, without light. As a consequence there was no progress. Moreover, on account of the innate conservatism of the Hindu race there was no experiment or observation and truths remained neglected. Hindu chemistry, Hindu botany, Hindu materia medica might have been ahead of those sciences in the West at one time, but it is not so now, and it is absolutely necessary that they should be resuscitated according to the high standard of scientific knowledge now prevailing. The rust which has accumulated must be brushed away and proper steps should be taken to make the system as efficient as possible. The Government have been doing a great deal for the encouragement of the Western method, I mean the allopathic mode of medical treatment in this country. It was in 1913 that it was elicited by the questions put by me in this Council that out of nearly 500 applicants for admission in the Calcutta Medical College every year, only one-fourth of the candidates got admission and the applications of nearly three-fourths of the candidates were rejected. Through the exertion of my Hon'ble friend Dr. Nilratan Sarkar and a few others supported by Lord Carmichael and the late lamented Sir Parde Lukis the Belgachia Medical College is now an accomplished fact, and Government have contributed and have made adequate provision for the upkeep of the College. This I, think, has also been done with other medical schools of the Presidency. It is, therefore, meet and proper that Government should encourage the indigenous medical school of this country.

I am fully alive to the fact that at the present time Ayurveda, the Hindu system of medicine and surgery, has ceased to be cultivated as a science and the result has been that the system has, more or less, degenerated into empiricism. Anatomy, surgery and pathology which require systematic observation and experiment for their development have made no progress, and the orthodox Hindu physicians are unfortunately ignorant of many of the great truths discovered by the latter-day physicians of the West. It was necessary even for the conservative Hindu physicians to march with the times and not to lag behind. An Ayurvedic College has been established in Calcutta by some of the competent Kavirajes of the Presidency, a few of whom are also passed graduates of the Calcutta Medical College. The object of the institution is the cultivation of the science of medicine as was taught in ancient India, with all the advantages and accessories derivable from modern science. The Professors will each be in charge of a special subject and will teach his own selected branch, both theoretically and practically. Thus we shall have different instructors in chemistry, physics, botany, physiology, anatomy, medicine, surgery and midwifery. Surgeon-General Edwards, who visited this institution about a year and a half ago, along with the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell, whom I am glad to see here to-day,

Resolutions.

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

was pleased to make the following remarks with reference to this institution :—

‘I visited this school with the Hon’ble Mr. Beatson Bell and was much interested in what I saw. It is a beginning which will, I hope, lead to greater things.

Kaviraj Jamini Bhushan Roy believes in a thorough preliminary training on the Western lines. He would teach all that the West knows and add to that the knowledge of the East. This seems very sound method of education. He says that in the old days there were regular schools, teaching all that was known in the intellectual world, whether East or West did not matter, and he would like to see this state of affairs again reproduced. He himself has had a splendid education and is Bachelior of Medicine of the Calcutta University as well as a great Kaviraj Doctor.’

The College imparts scientific and systematic teaching, both theoretical and practical, in all the eight branches of the Ayurveda, at the same time it endeavours to combine secular with the moral and religious training of the students in conformity with the past traditions of the country. The College is divided into two separate departments, viz., the Sanskrit Department and the Vernacular Department. The courses of study for both the departments are the same and the only difference is that in the Vernacular Department teaching is imparted in Bengali and Hindi. For students in the Sanskrit Department the course of study covers a period of five years, of which four years are devoted to the study of the general college course and one year to higher study of the philosophical portion of Ayurveda with practical work meant for advanced students. The course of study for students include anatomy, physiology, materia medica, chemistry, botany, pathology, surgery, midwifery, diseases of the eye, ear, throat, hygiene, &c. The College has a free outdoor dispensary attached to it with the medical and surgical departments. The college is provided with (1) a chemical laboratory, (2) a museum for materia medica and pharmacy, (3) an anatomical museum, (4) a collection of surgical instruments for demonstration and operation, (5) a pathological museum, (6) a herbarium and (7) a library. With a view to promote the cause of Ayurveda study the College authorities have started a monthly medical journal which deals with subjects, which are of special interest to the students of Ayurveda and in which a systematic attempt is made to popularise the laws of sanitation and hygiene for the prevention of diseases. An indoor hospital will be attached to the College as soon funds would be available for the purpose. For the present clinical training is imparted to the students at the Marwari Hindu Hospital. The present number of regular students on the rolls is 56. Besides there are five casual students. In accordance with the time-honoured custom of the country the College authorities have to bear the boarding and lodging expenses of the poor deserving students and provide for their free tuition. Those who take admission in the Sanskrit Department must have passed the Government Title Examination or must satisfy the Principal that they possess sufficient knowledge of Sanskrit to be able to read and understand the Ayurvedic literature in Sanskrit. For those who join the Vernacular Department a sound knowledge of vernacular language is always essential. A fair knowledge of English too is always recommended. No student is, however, admitted to the College in any department unless he successfully passes a preliminary test held by the College authorities.

An institution such as this deserves support from Government. A start has been made by private enterprise and it behoves the Government to foster and encourage it by all means. I would, therefore, propose that for the present a monthly grant of Rs. 750 be given by Government to aid this institution in its noble work and a sum of Rs. 9,000 as a contribution for the proper equipment, etc. The monthly expenditure is more than Rs. 1,000.

Resolutions.Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

It will be money well spent indeed. But while I ask Your Lordship's Government to support this institution, I also ask if the Government so desire they can appoint members on the Committee of the Institution to look after its affairs. I would like that the Surgeon-General of the Government should have a voice in the management of its affairs.

Suggestion has been made that the students of the Campbell Medical School in Calcutta may be taught as an optional subject Sasruta and Charaka—the two well-known works on Hindu medical science. I have discussed this matter with some of the members of the Ayurvedic Institute. Their objection is that the Hindu system or Hindu school of medicine would then lose its individuality and be merged in the allopathic system of medicine. It is necessary that the Ayurvedic system should flourish as an independent system. The Government has partially recognised this for the title of Vaidyaratna was founded by the Government of India in 1911 for the purpose of recognising the services of Hindu physicians of eminence who practise the Ayurvedic system of medicine. I have been informed that there is an Ayurvedic institution attached to the Dyanund Anglo Vedic College in the Punjab. It is under the Punjab University and the expenses are defrayed by Government. The Government of Bihar and Orissa have given the assurance that at the Sanskrit College to be established at Puri and Muzaffarpur, Ayurveda will be included as a subject of study.

Next as to the ways and means. From the financial statement we come to learn for the first time that in future the Collectorship of Excise in Calcutta will be filled up by a member of the Indian Civil Service holding the position of a second grade District Magistrate. The Collectorship of Calcutta has been held at least for the last twenty-five years by a member of the Provincial Executive Service and generally by an Indian. I know Rai Bahadur Durga Gati Banerjee, Rai Bahadur Chandra Narain Singh, Mr. Babonau, Rai Bahadur Banshidhar Banerjee, Mahananda Gupta, Rai Bahadur Jamini Mohon Dass. All of them held the appointment and Babu Nrityananda Bhur is the present holder of the post. Except in one single instance I think these officers have discharged their duties honestly, conscientiously and without a stain on their character. For the last twenty-five years that they have successfully held the office the work, I think, has gone on smoothly. It is, therefore, surprising to see that provision has been made for a second grade District Magistrate as Collector of Calcutta. In those days when the question of the wider employment of Indians in offices of trust and responsibility has been engaging the attention of the Government we are generally sorry to see that a post held for more than a quarter of a century by Indians and by a member of the Provincial Executive Service should be taken away from them. One would like to know if it is not a fact that about three years ago an attempt was made to give it to an European gentleman though a member of the Provincial Executive Service, but that it could not be given to him because he was junior in service. I move that the present system of appointing Indian members of the Provincial Executive Service on the present salary be continued and the proposal for the appointment of a District Magistrate of the second grade as Excise Collector of Calcutta with a higher salary be rejected and that the amount budgetted for the latter proposed appointment in excess of the present salary be given as a contribution to the Ayurvedic College.

It further appears that an increase of Rs. 9,000 has been made under the expenditure heading of Income Tax and we find in the column of remarks 'Budget provides for the appointment of an Indian Civil Service Officer as Collector with conveyance allowance and for the additional establishment sanctioned for increase of work.' We are ready to concede that conveyance allowance and additional establishment for increase of work and consequent increase of expenses would be necessary in this head. But why appoint a member of the Indian Civil Service to the post."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, there is no intention of appointing a member of the Indian Civil Service to the post of Collector of Income Tax, Calcutta."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY continuing said :—

"My Lord, I shall show it to the Hon'ble Member later on.

I can very well understand that the officer henceforth will have to do more with the European mercantile firms than has hitherto been the case, but I think experienced and trusted members of the Provincial Executive Service will be able to carry on the work efficiently. If, however, for the present and in order to make preliminary arrangements about super-tax, etc., it is necessary to have a member of the Indian Civil Service to fill up the appointment, I would propose that the initial grant of Rs. 9,000 for equipment etc., for the Ayurvedic Institution be met from the proposed grant of Rs. 15,000 for a taxi cab stand on the maidan. It is the duty of the Corporation of Calcutta to make provision for such stands and not of the Government."

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My Lord, I confess that it is with some amount of nervousness that I rise to oppose my Hon'ble friend. In considering our relation with the indigenous system of medicine we are confronted with two important questions—(1) whether it is possible to rehabilitate the indigenous system of medicine with the ideas of modern sciences and (2) how far we can gradually and rightly introduce truths and theory found in the Eastern sciences into our curriculum of studies of the medical schools. My Lord, as regards the latter, that is, introducing these subjects into our curricula, we have to look at matters from two points of view, one is primarily historical and the other is primarily scientific. From the historical point of view, all the accumulated wisdom of the races which has culminated in different kinds of art has their roots in some instincts, and in the case of the healing art these instincts—hygienic, sanitary or medicinals—have their roots deep in the depth of the pre-historic times. This is common with many other biological and sociological instincts. My Lord, all these have root in the instincts of the past. Our ancestors did not exactly stop at these instincts and they advanced to empirical recipes in the first place based upon extensive observation of generations. These empiricisms are the empiricisms of a pre-scientific era. Then, they further proceeded by methodical observation to inductions and classifications mixed, of course, with inevitable errors and superstitions; and next there came an era of hypothesis and speculation embodied in comprehensive sutras, that is enunciations, each of which covers with formal precision a vast assemblage of observation of facts. Thus a stage of professional science was reached. This is all that I can claim for the splendid system of therapeutics that was brought into existence by our ancestors and no more. I dispute the claim of such a system to positive science, because it is wanting in that precision of a quantitative measurement and that experimental verification based upon quantitative measurement which is the essence of all science. This is the important element that is wanting in this, but, My Lord, the professional science of the individual school has done yeomen's service in the past in helping to cultivate medical and therapeutical resources of India in Indian climate and under Indian environments; that is to say, in relation to the diseases that prevailed in India in former times. Thus, a system of therapeutics was built up and it is my hope that these precious heirloom of ours will not be allowed to be merged in the obstinate Western system on the one hand and in the obscurity and credulity of the East on the other, and thus be lost to us for ever. But I believe that in course of time much of the truth that is contained in this system will be incorporated in the curriculum of our students ; but in order to do that a good deal of preliminary research work will have to be done to separate a large mass of dross from the pure gold that is there. I believe it is a mere conviction with me that the future therapeutics of the world is neither a Western therapeutics as is now in use, nor the Eastern therapeutics as it has existed for the last 2,000 years or so, but it will be an universal therapeutics which is to come in which the Eastern, Western and many more will have their part in the contributions. I would, therefore, whole heartedly support my friend for a scientific study of the indigenous system of medicine, but such a study can be conducted only in the light of facts of modern allopathy, modern chemistry, modern physiology, modern biology and modern pathology, and I may also say of the principles of modern surgery and medicine. Therefore, I fail to understand what my friend means by individual system of medicine ; individuality in any science may mean an aloofness and therefore those which necessarily means restrictions which may be based upon bias or prejudice or something else. It would be undesirable, therefore, from my point of view, to have a separate school for teaching Ayurvedic or Unani system of medicine or for the matter of that for the teaching of Ayurvedic medicine, and even though it is assured that in the study of Ayurvedic medicine subjects, such as anatomy, physiology, etc., will be introduced there. It would be undesirable therefore to leave scientific institutions to those whose methods cannot be resolutionised and made free from bias or prejudice. What I object to is this : These institutions will be unable to raise their voice against the principle of mediæval authority. When they plead for individuality they take their stand upon that principle of authority, that has no place in science.

I submit that the analogy between pleaders and muktears, Aurvedic and Unani schools does not hold good. This is a proposal for practical recognition of a professional school in that help means recognition. Before extending help to a medical institution Government has hitherto considered several questions ; for instance the preliminary qualifications, the course of study and the arrangements for teaching and many questions that do not arise in connection with a non-professional school. These questions will have to be considered before anything can be decided. I would cordially support a proposal for a school where Ayurvedic and Unani system of medicine might be taught to passed students of medical schools. I would also appreciate an attempt to start an Ayurvedic and Unani school in connection with the existing system of schools—that is a sort of mixed school—but to attempt to build a scientific Ayurvedic school apart from a medical school would be doomed to failure so far as I can see. If it is conceded that anatomy, physiology and chemistry are to be taught to the students, then why object to Western materia medica, therapeutics, biology and pathology, including Western surgery and Western medicine, and if the necessity of these subjects be admitted then an ordinary medical school with a chair or two for the Ayurvedic therapeutics and some beds in a part of the hospital, where some persons may be treated according to the Ayurvedic system, would serve the purpose : and that would be a mixed school and not a pure Ayurvedic school. With these words, My Lord, I protest against the resolution that has been moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, I rise to say a few words not only because I wish to give my whole-hearted support to my Hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray to whom, as I have said, I was indebted for the idea of moving the previous resolution, but also because I wish to take the earliest opportunity of repudiating the insinuation contained in the speech of my Hon'ble friend

Resolutions.

Mr. Arun Chandra Singha ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

Maulvi Abul Kasem that I was induced to move my resolution in a spirit of hostility to the Hindu members of the Council. What I thought was that the time had come when we might well ask Government to divert a portion of the Provincial revenues to the practical study and research of the indigenous systems of medicine. On the merits of the case I do not think I need say much, after the elaborate discourse of my Hon'ble friend. It may be fairly said that he has exhausted all that could be said in support of the resolution. I, therefore, would not take up the time of the Council, but only say that I heartily support the resolution. There are no such difficulties in the way of Government accepting this resolution as there were in mine. Here we have already an institution in working order. In this view of the matter I think my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, has made out a much stronger case than I could claim to have made out regarding the Unani system.

The Hon'ble Mr. ARUN CHANDRA SINGHA said :—

" My Lord, I beg to support the resolution. The object of this Ayurvedic institution is to revive and modernise an ancient Indian science, which has a following amongst a very large percentage of our countrymen. The conductors of the institution have maintained it with the greatest difficulty up to this, and they are now appealing to the Government for assistance to enable them to keep the school alive and make it possible for them to attain the ideal which they have set before them, of so remodelling the Ayurvedic system of medicine, a system which is best suited to the people of the country by its origin and environment, on the basis of modern discoveries and conceptions, as to render it capable of completely fulfilling the functions which are expected of such a science.

I trust the appeal will not be in vain, and the Government will see its way in accepting the resolution.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

" My Lord, I find that several members are supporting this resolution, but I am sorry to say that on this occasion also I find myself in the opposite camp. After an elaborate statement made by my Hon'ble friend Dr. Nilratan Sarkar, I think my friend, the Mover, will be well advised to withdraw his resolution. I cannot, of course, speak with any authority on this or that system of medicine, and although I may have a great admiration for the indigenous system, as a tax-payer I object to our money being spent at the present moment on objects like this, however noble they may be. For the last two days we have been crying ourselves hoarse on the questions of Police and the partition of Midnapore and Mymensingh, and if the partition of Midnapore can wait for two or three years, I think this Ayurvedic Medical School may also wait till the end of the war. I hope, My Lord, the resolution will not be accepted, because at present we can ill afford to direct the Provincial revenue towards such purposes.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

" Sir, I should be content to refrain from reply after the admirable speech made by the Hon'ble Dr. Nilratan Sircar, who speaks with professional knowledge to which I obviously cannot lay claim, but it is necessary that I should briefly indicate the attitude of Government in this matter. It follows from what I have said in reference to the previous resolution that we should judge this proposal, primarily, by the criterion whether it is likely to improve medical education as now imparted in Bengal, and I am bound to say that from such information as we have been able to obtain, I am doubtful whether that result would ensue.

In the first place, in theory, as I think, Hon'ble Members will allow the kabiraji system, that is the traditional kabiraji system, is one which scarcely lends itself to the system of education in schools, colleges and hospitals, as we understand it. Under the traditional kabiraji system, kabirajes of standing attract around themselves a number of pupils whom they maintain and educate, free of board and lodging, combining medical teaching with instruction in Sanskrit and also, as I gather, with moral and religious education. At the same time, they impart a knowledge of the preparation of drugs. I am told that no particular courses of instruction are prescribed; certain text-books are used in association with the teaching of the kabiraj, but the system is generally dependent on the teacher's own methods of instruction. There is no particular fixed period for a complete course of study, but it generally extends to 4 or 5 years, after which the preceptor gives his own certificate to the pupil, though no special tests and no special form of certificate are prescribed. That is, I understand, an outline of the present system, and, as I say, it scarcely lends itself to the machinery of schools and colleges as we know it.

In the second place, in respect of the kabiraji treatment, there is another difficulty, and that is that there is a cleavage of opinion between the orthodox and the more advanced as to what is expedient. The orthodox practitioner is apparently of opinion that a course of combined instruction on indigenous and Western lines, which to the outside world would seem beneficial both for the Ayurvedic system and the better equipment of the practitioner, will not prove successful. I quote from a report of a few years ago:—

'The true Ayurvedic practitioner maintains that any assistance from Government in aid of schools of this kind will not advance Ayurvedic practice, and that if Government desires to revive and encourage the system, it must be on orthodox lines. The kabiraj must be trained as a kabiraj pure and simple: no advantage would be gained by imparting instruction in Western science. The people have more confidence in the true kabiraj who practices quietly without ostentation than in the practitioner who has superimposed on an education on Western lines a course of instruction in Ayurvedic medicine.'

That, Sir, seems to me to be another particular reason for proceeding cautiously.

In the light of these facts, and if these obstacles do exist, are we well advised in diverting from the medical education that we now impart funds which can be well applied to it in favour of an untried experiment which does present obvious difficulties? In so far as the fundamental elements of medicine require a knowledge of the human body and so on, the Ayurvedic system is perhaps admittedly defective, and I think we are all agreed that in these directions instruction is already being given as efficiently as is possible.

As regards the matter of the special drugs which are used by Ayurvedic practitioners and with which Western practitioners are probably less acquainted, it was the intention and hope of this Government, had it not been for the war, to have directed an enquiry, somewhat on the lines which the Hon'ble Dr. Nilratan Sircar suggests, into the value of these drugs, with the idea of preparing an indigenous pharmacopeia and ascertaining the true value of these remedies judged in the light of Western science. After the war, we hope that intention may be revived, and as I have already mentioned in connection with the previous resolution, the Government of India are evidently contemplating the possibility of some advance on central as opposed to provincial lines. These, therefore, seem to be adequate general arguments for not accepting the resolution.

Coming to the particular case of the institution to which we are now asked to give assistance, it is true that in February last, it submitted an application for help, and it gave an account of its activities generally on the lines which the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has explained to the Council to-day. On the other hand I am bound to say that an enquiry which was recently made by Surgeon-General Robinson does not altogether bear out the contention that, whatever their enthusiastic ideals may be, they have yet succeeded in entirely realising them. I do not wish to read the report on the institution in full, but I may tell the Council generally that it is not a favourable one. The Surgeon-General was not favourably impressed with the standard of equipment, building or anything else; and, in fact, he left with a conviction that what was being done was not likely to produce a class of students with a qualification superior to that of a compounder or dresser. Therefore, Sir, while we all recognise the keen enthusiasm of the gentleman who is in charge, he has got to do a great deal before his ambitions can be fully realised. The actual figures of Rs. 9,000 recurring and Rs. 9,000 non-recurring which we are asked to give are equally rather unintelligible; from the available statements of the expenses of the institution it appears that their monthly expenses are Rs. 450, and a recurring grant of Rs. 9,000 would therefore practically finance the whole institution, which certainly in a matter of this kind would be unusual, while we are not told to what the non-recurring grant is to be devoted or to what extent it is to be supplemented from other sources. Both on general and particular grounds, therefore, I regret that I cannot recommend the acceptance of this resolution, but the report to which I have referred was received while the Budget was under preparation and I have not had time to consider it fully, much less to put it up to my Hon'ble Colleagues. I hope to be able to have an opportunity of personally visiting the school myself, and I shall certainly be glad to do so, but in order to avoid a false impression, I should add that I doubt whether the results are likely to be such as the authorities of the school desire.

So much, Sir, for the resolution itself. I would now refer to the source from which it is suggested that the expenditure should be found, especially since, when the Hon'ble Mover was speaking, I said that it was not our intention to appoint a member of the Indian Civil Service to the post of Collector of Income Tax, Calcutta. I now find that our own papers have misled the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. Mr. Donald has just drawn my attention to the schedule annexed to the Revised Financial Statement where our office, on its own motion, has noted that we meant to appoint a member of the Indian Civil Service to that post. The office was entirely misled; there is no proposal of this kind. I do not regard a member of the Indian Civil Service as suitable for that post and have no intention of recommending such a selection. I apologise to the Hon'ble Member for having led him astray. Our Budget is prepared amid great pressure of work, and our office has made a mistake."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the resolution moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. It is admitted on all hands that the institution is not in a proper financial condition. It is the only institution of its kind, and it has not met with that encouragement which it deserves. Of course it cannot get any support from the other branches of the profession generally speaking. But if the Government comes to its help and lends it some sort of financial support, I am sure that it will develop into a very useful institution. In reading the observations of some of the most distinguished members of our community, I find that Sir Ashutosh Mukherjee says: 'A study of the indigenous system of medicine which has successfully maintained its ground against formidable rivals, will convince any impartial critic that its basis was scientific and not empirical; we cannot consequently afford to ignore a system which embodies the results of the observation and experience of the acutest intellects of India for ages. The right course to follow is, not to treat it as a dead system incapable of further development, but to foster its growth as a progressive science.' I understand that this institution also teaches surgery and materia medica. I also understand, in fact I have seen, that it has an outdoor dispensary attached to it and there are also arrangements for hospital treatment. My Lord, the resolution asks for a certain sum of money which is not much, but, whatever it may be even a small help from the Government will be very useful. The money will be well spent, and I can assure Your Excellency that this act of generosity on the part of the Government will be very much appreciated by the Indian community. I yet hope that the Government will find the money asked for to foster the growth of this institution."

Resolutions.Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

"I should like to say first a few words about the financial state of the institution. We are told that the monthly expense comes up to Rs. 450. That is so. But that does not include the pay of the professors who are attached to the institution. They are all honorary professors and they are serving without any remuneration, but they will have to be paid afterwards, and if their pay is taken into consideration it will come up to six or seven thousand rupees. The institution moreover is located in a very ordinary house and it will be necessary to have a good house for it in a better locality. All this will require money and if the managers of this institution get some help from Government, they can have the institution removed to a better house, and they will be able to employ qualified doctors to teach anatomy, physiology, botany, etc. I think there are at present two professors who teach physical science and botany. One of them, I know, was the Principal of the Doulatpore Academy and he was for some time a Professor in the Ripon College, and there is also a Professor of one of the Indian Colleges who teaches botany. They will all have to be paid if proper work is to be expected from them. It is for this reason that I ask Government to make a grant of Rs. 750 a month to this institution. Of course the managers of this institution have provided it with some of the necessities, but if they get some more money from Government they will be able to place this institution in a much better footing. That is the reason why I am asking Your Excellency's Government to make a provision of Rs. 9,000 in aid of this institution. The object of the institution is to train kavirajes and make them efficient by giving them a scientific training. The modern allopathic system is borrowing largely from the Ayurvedic system of medicine, and if Your Excellency's Government patronizes this institution, it will be patronizing a very useful institution and also a very useful system of medical science. With reference to the difference of opinion that there is already between the two systems of allopathy and kaviraji—Surgeon-General Edwards remarked that that was also the case in England between the two different schools of medicine and surgery. He remarked in the visitors' book :

'There are, I understand, two schools of Ayurvedic medicine. The strictly orthodox one will have nothing to do with Western teaching and Western drugs, and train their students to treat patients without any preliminary education in anatomy, physiology, chemistry and bacteriology, such as is given in Western schools.

This is much what was the state of affairs in England many years ago. In those days a pupil was apprenticed and learned diagnosis and treatment by watching his master, and by rule of thumb without understanding the why and wherefore.'

The intention of the managers is to teach the Ayurvedic system of medicine based on Western lines. The students will first be taught anatomy and physiology and then they will be taught materia medica and therapeutics. My Lord, I do not know what the opinion of the present Surgeon-General is, but here is an opinion of a distinguished member of the Indian Medical Service commanding a very extensive practice in Calcutta. This is what Colonel Brown says about the institution :

Resolution.Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

'I was greatly interested in all I saw, there being indications on all sides of a serious and earnest endeavour to impart to the students the principles both of Ayurvedic and Western medicine. This I consider a step in the right direction; for, though many speak slightly of the empirical nature of the former, there is not the least doubt that we have much to learn from it. There are a great many indigenous drugs which are of extreme utility, but are little known to the students of Western medicine, as they are not taught in the various medical schools; these are being largely employed here, and among the many interesting and useful collections I saw, was one of growing plants, most of which were familiar to me as useful medicinally, and each one was labelled with the vernacular as well as the botanical name.

The anatomical room was well supplied with models and drawings, the materia medica room with a large and very varied collection of drugs, organic and inorganic, and there was also a fair collection of surgical instruments.

The staff is excellently strong, and as all the members are imbued with a love of their work and a strong determination to overcome all obstacles, the success of the institution is assured.

I am in absolute sympathy with this College, for it meets a distinct want. The materia medica of the drugs indigenous to Bengal has been surprisingly neglected of late, though workers in the past, the last of whom was Dymock, of revered memory, did a great deal in that direction.

The modern Kaviraj, with his wealth of empirical knowledge, improved by being taught anatomy and physiology, medicine and surgery, will be amply equipped to practise the science and art of the profession; and I wish the infant institution every success, while heartily congratulating Kaviraj Jaminibhushan and his keen and intelligent associates on the success they have already attained.'

From all this Your Lordship will see that this institution has been appreciated by men like Surgeon-General Edwards and Col. Brown and also by a host of other medical men whose names I need not mention here. In these circumstances I hope Your Excellency's Government will make some contribution to this very useful institution."

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLV.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following Resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 5,000 be set apart as a contribution towards the Building Fund of the Mahakali Pathsala, Calcutta; and
- (b) the said sum be taken out of the grant of Rs. 23,29,000 set apart as "Grants-in-aid" under "22—Education."

He said:—

"My Lord, the resolution I beg to move has a special interest for us, Hindus of the Province. The Mahakali Pathsala is the only institution of the kind. Its utility cannot be gainsaid and has been admitted by those who have taken care to study the system followed in it. We want a special system of education suited to the requirements for our girls whose destiny is the home and not the market place to compete with men in professions and trades.

My Lord, I was exceedingly delighted to go through Your Excellency's valuable address delivered at the last University Convocation, specially the portion to our students of philosophy encouraging them to study Hindu philosophy, logic, etc.

Resolution.Mr. Wordsworth; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

Successive Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal, the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and other Judges of the High Court, Calcutta, H. E. Lady Curzon, Lady Fraser, H. E. Countess of Minto, the Maharaja Bahadur of Darbhanga and the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan, etc., etc., all presided at the distribution of prizes to the girls of the Mahakali Pathshala and they were all pleased with the institution.

I am glad to learn that provision has been made in the Budget for Rs. 75,000 by Your Excellency's Council, in connection with the improvements of buildings of the Vidyamoyee Girls' School, Mymensingh. I propose that a modest sum of Rs. 5,000 be given out of the 'Grants-in-aid' of Rs. 23,29,000 to the Mahakali Pathshala (Calcutta) for girls only towards its building fund, for which a sum of Rs. 10,000 has already been collected from the patrons and other well-wishers of this institution, including the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan.

* My Lord, with these remarks, I beg to move the resolution and I hope and trust that it will be accepted by your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, with a slight variation of figure this resolution is a repetition of what was moved last year, and on behalf of the Government, I can reply only with a repetition of what the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell then stated. This school is well-acquainted with the ordinary channel through which Government assistance can be obtained. I find that in 1916 an application was made for Government assistance. This application was not accepted, because the condition of the school was found to be below that standard of efficiency which would justify the use of Government funds. Subsequently, a resolution was moved in Council last year, and the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell then assured the Hon'ble Mover that if any special appeal were made to him as Director of Public Instruction, it would receive his sympathetic consideration. The case rests there. The school authorities have not responded to this assurance. They have not approached the educational authorities, or in any way invited their assistance, and I would ask the Hon'ble Member, with all the discretion and courtesy at my command, to reflect on the position in which the Director of Public Instruction would be placed if, before the spending year commenced, he had his discretion fettered by a promise or commitment entered into on behalf of a school of which he knows nothing except that about 18 months ago it was found unfit for the receipt of Government assistance. I would suggest to the Hon'ble Mover that it is undesirable, when ordinary channels exist through which such matters can be dealt with, that recourse should be had to extraordinary channels. I think he may confidently leave the matter to the educational authorities who will be prepared to consider on its merits any application which may be made by the school authorities. If the Hon'ble Member fears that the special associations connected with the school—associations which we all respect and many revere—will stand in the way of consideration, I can assure him that he is under a misapprehension. The Director of Public Instruction is prepared to use, in the case of such schools as these, the discretion which the rules permit him to use, and I can assure the Hon'ble Mover that any application made on behalf of this school will be considered purely from the point of view of its educational efficiency."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I desire to associate myself with my Hon'ble friend Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur in asking for Government help in connection with this institution. But at the same time, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworths I do not think that we need press this resolution at present. I happen to know what my countrymen think of this institution. It is an institution conducted on orthodox lines. For years past this question has been coming before the Council, but without any success. A feeling existed that this institution was looked upon unsympathetically by the educational authorities, but after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth I hope that when a proper representation is made to the Government the claims of this institution will not be overlooked, and a suitable grant will be made which will foster female education on strictly orthodox lines. I am sure that any assistance given to this institution will be highly appreciated by members of our community and by our ladies too. And on their behalf I appeal to Your Excellency's Government to lend a helping hand to this institution."

Resolution.Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, under the circumstances in which I am placed I have no other alternative than to withdraw the resolution. I am glad that the Director of Public Instruction is willing to consider the claim of this institution if a proper representation is made to him. All that I can say is that this is a very useful institution conducted on orthodox lines. With these words I beg to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLVI.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sufficient sum be set apart for the excavation and sanitary improvement of the Saraswati river in the district of Hooghly ; and
- (b) such additional expenditure be met from reduction under the head "Anti-malarial works."

He said :—

"My Lord, the Saraswati branches out from the Hooghly at Tribeni, a few miles above Hooghly town, and enters the Howrah district near Baluhati as a small stream. It then meanders on to the south and flows past Domjur and Andul rejoining the Hooghly just above Sankrail. Its high banks and the remains of large boats occasionally dug out from its bed, show that once it must have been a broader and deeper stream. Below Tribeni the river Saraswati is only 10 or 12 feet wide and a foot deep in the hot weather, but in the rains its width increases to a quarter of a mile and its depth to about 10 feet. It was a dead river represented merely by a chain of pools, but water was let into it in connection with the Eden Canal Scheme by a cut from the Kana Nadi near Gopalnagore. Though much silted up, its banks are 10 to 15 feet high and are still densely populated, where there are several large villages, viz., British Chandernagore, Bara (west of Serampore town), Baksa, Janai, Chanditala and Kalipore in Hooghly district.

My Lord, the river Saraswati should be excavated and cleared of rank vegetation by the Public Works Department, as soon as possible. This is absolutely necessary.

With these words I commend the resolution for the acceptance by the Council.'

Resolution.Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

" My lord, it is somewhat with a shock of surprise, and painful surprise, that I see that the Hon'ble Mover proposes to reduce the grant under the head of anti-malarial works when we know that the works provided under that head consist of schemes which it is proposed to undertake in the campaign against malaria which, as Your Excellency has recently explained, it is desired to initiate.

The proposal is that a sufficient sum be set apart for the excavation and sanitary improvement of the Saraswati in the Howrah district. I may point out that Government have already provided in the budget for work connected with the Saraswati in the district of Hooghly. Now the reason why Government has provided a lakh of rupees for the lower Saraswati and nothing for the upper Saraswati is that a scheme has already been prepared for the former, which is intended to solve a definite and troublesome problem of drainage, whereas there is no scheme ready for the Hooghly portion of the river. The object of the scheme is to provide for the drainage of an area of 52 square miles, including the Janai basin and a portion of the Rajapur swamps which suffer from inadequate drainage. It is desired to utilise the Saraswati for the purpose of drainage; but to enable this to be done, the channel must first be improved, for, in its present silted up condition, it cannot carry any great volume of water. It is hoped to increase by excavation its discharging capacity; and the scheme is to a large extent an experiment in scouring. The total cost of the scheme is Rs. 1,43,000, which Government proposes to give itself. One lakh only is provided this year, and the remainder will have to be provided later. I mention this, as it is a scheme which the people of the district might perhaps have taken up under the Sanitary Drainage Act; but Government has come forward of its own motion and agreed to bear the cost. This is not all. This is only the first part of the scheme. If it is successful, it is proposed to sluice the Saraswati at its mouth at a cost of over another lakh.

It may be asked why should not Government at the same time take up a similar scheme for the upper Saraswati in the district of Hooghly. This, however, is a very different problem. The Saraswati has long been a dead river. This is not a recent development; even in the time of Rennell's survey, nearly 140 years ago, it had dwindled down to a small stream and except for a few miles was unnavigable after the rains. The question of its improvement involves the conversion of a dead into a living river. It will be little use to excavate it unless it can receive a supply of water from above. The difficulty here is that it has not got a good supply of water at its head. Government are advised that this river depends for its supply on the Damodar; and the volume of water in the Damodar is so small in the hot weather that there is little prospect of any reaching the Saraswati. Unless, therefore, the supply at its head is increased, I doubt whether, even if the bed of the Saraswati is excavated, there will be any real improvement. The problem which our engineers have to solve is how to make a plentiful supply of water available for the Saraswati, as well as other rivers of the Hooghly district which are dependent on the Damodar. And this depends on the elaboration of the Damodar canal project. Till this project materialises, I am afraid that no assurance can be given that it will be possible to improve the Saraswati in the way the Hon'ble Mover desires. In any case, even if money was provided in the budget next year it could not be immediately disbursed. That being so, I am afraid that I cannot recommend the resolution to the Council, specially as it involves diversion of money from useful anti-malarial works, with which it is hoped to make a start, and which cannot be delayed without postponing or curtailing the anti-malarial campaign which Government desire to institute."

Resolution.

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; Mr. Cowley ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

" My Lord, in view of the explanation which has been given to me by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley as regards the practicability of the scheme, I do not think that I shall be justified in pressing this resolution. I ask Your Lordship's permission to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn. •

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLVII.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) provisions be made for dredging the Bhagirathi near the town of Nabadwip in the district of Nadia ; and
- (b) that expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 15,000 provided under head "Irrigation—Minor Works and Navigation" for dredging the Bhagirathi entrance.

He said :—

" My Lord, I understand that if I substitute the words 'at the entrance from the Ganges' for the words 'near the town of Nabadwip in the district of Nadia,' my resolution will be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. COWLEY said :—

" My Lord, I am prepared, on behalf of Government, to assure the Hon'ble Mover that the provision for dredging the Bhagirathi river at the entrance from the Ganges will be utilised to the best advantage for providing an increased flow of water in the river and that its dredging shall not necessarily be carried out at the entrance, but wherever experts may advise as likely to give the best results."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

" My Lord, I accept the Hon'ble Member's assurance and beg to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLVIII.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) a sum of Rs. 1,00,000 be provided for additional hostel accommodation in the Rajshahi College ; and
- (b) this sum be met by postponing some item under head "45—Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department."

Resolution.Mr. O'Malley.

He said :—

“ My Lord, in this resolution I have asked for the provision of a lakh in the Budget for additional hostel accommodation in the Rajshahi College. A scheme for a Hindu hostel for accommodating 250 students at a cost of Rs. 1,95,000 was sanctioned in 1915, and this administrative sanction was communicated by the Director of Public Instruction to the College authorities, but no progress has been made up to this time for this much needed improvement of the College. I heard in reply to the demand of several other building grants that no provision could be made for want of necessary information on those questions, but here is a case in which all the necessary informations are before Government upon which administrative sanction was accorded; but it is very strange that nothing could be done during these three years. Last year also I moved for a similar grant, and though money could be provided for the several building accommodations in Calcutta, nothing could be spared for this mofussil college. Out of a provision of 98 lakhs for education this year over 15 lakhs cannot be spent, and we are not aware of any special reason why this should be so. There is no explanation even why we are not in a position to spend fully the sum received from the Imperial Government. The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth was speaking of the high prices of materials for building, but in this case a lakh can very well be spent for the manufacture of bricks and collection of some of the other materials easily available. If start had been given earlier the whole thing could have been completed without much pressure upon the Provincial revenue. I may be permitted to refer to a very curious incident in this connection. The Raja Bahadur of Dighapatiya and his second brother offered a sum of Rs. 30,000 for the construction of a Hindu hostel for the Rajshahi College to be named after their late lamented illustrious father Raja Pramatha Nath Ray Bahadur, and a sum of Rs. 13,000, I believe, was actually made over to the Principal through the Rajshahi Association. The offer, however, could not be accepted and the money was returned with a suggestion that it could be paid to the Government as contribution. The suggestion could not be accepted by the Raja Bahadur, as a separate building had to be named as stated above. So another offer was made for the construction of another two-storied building for class accommodation which was also urgently required. The building would cost about Rs. 60,000, and the offer was for the construction of the building under private management under the supervision and guidance of the Public Works Department. There was a proposal, however, of opening B.L. and M.A. classes in some of the subjects for the development of the College. The Governing Body accepted the offer and urged Government to sanction it. Pending the decision of Government as regards that proposal the building work could have been undertaken and finished by this time. But it did not meet with the approval of the Government. This is the official way of sympathising with the popular demand. Those who come to Calcutta are in a position to meet the expenses and suitable hired houses are also available here. But mufassil colleges concern the poorer sections. There is need for hostel accommodation, both for Hindus and Mussalmans in Rajshahi, and I, therefore, ask for a lakh as the first instalment without any restriction. The work may be taken up and finished in two or three years. I hope there is a strong case in favour of my resolution and Government will see their way to accept it.”

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

“ My Lord, I fully appreciate the desire of the Hon'ble Mover to see more hostels built for the Rajshahi College. I myself was the President of the Governing Body of the Rajshahi College, and I may say that this is a project in which I myself am interested and have long wished to see materialize. I recognise, however, that its time has not come yet and that we must wait ; and I can only hope that the Hon'ble Mover may be led to the same conclusion. I do not propose, my lord, to follow the Hon'ble Member into the question of starting M. A. classes, as that is an entirely different matter. The Hon'ble Member has mentioned the munificent offer of Raja Pramada Nath Roy of Digapatia and his brothers, but the idea of Government was that their money could not be utilized for those classes as it was intended for another purpose.

As long ago as September 1915, administrative sanction was given to the construction of a Hindu hostel for 250 boys at a cost of nearly two lakhs (excluding the cost of the land). Land was acquired, but it was not possible to allot the funds required for the building owing to the embargo on non-recurring expenditure from imperial non-recurring grants. Detailed estimates were not prepared; and like so many other laudable objects this scheme has since had to give way to the financial stress caused by the war.

The Hon'ble Member has mentioned the case of hostels in Calcutta and has argued why should not Government develop its own College when it has given large sums for the construction of undergraduate hostel in Calcutta. The scheme of Calcutta hostels has, however, been financed from a special grant of 10 lakhs given by the Government of India, which has been supplemented by a grant made by the Bengal Government. I think it requires no argument of mine to prove the fact, which must be familiar to the Members of Council, that the problem of students' accommodation in Calcutta, with an influx of many thousand students every year, who have to live in a crowded city, is far more acute than in a country town like Rampore Boalia.

Another reason for not proceeding with the scheme was the report of the Presidency College Enquiry Committee, which questioned the policy of large hostels. This has forced the Education Department to reconsider pending schemes for large hostels, and the prevailing opinion among Principals of Government Colleges favours hostels of not more than 50 residents. This view, if accepted, will mean the reconsideration of the Rajshahi scheme among others. It is a question of general importance, affecting other colleges besides Rajshahi, on which the Director of Public Instruction has recently addressed Government.

There are also proposals for a Muhammadan hostel which are only in a preliminary stage. Quite recently, the Director of Public Instruction called on the Principal to submit plans and estimates for the construction of a hostel for 50 boarders to cost about Rs. 50,000.

Detailed estimates are ready for neither scheme. The question of large, as compared with small, hostels has to be settled. Consequently even if money were made available, we are not in a position to use it immediately. It would be scarcely possible, therefore, to accept the proposal that the sum of one lakh should be met from the head of 'Civil Works' in charge of the Public Works Department. This would involve the postponement of one or more now major works, which the Finance Committee considered to have a prior claim on the amount available, in favour of a scheme which is not yet mature. I can only assure the Hon'ble Member that Government will take up the hostel scheme as soon as it can. It is merely postponed and not abandoned."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, I do not want to press for the immediate acceptance of this resolution. I am very glad that the question is still under the consideration of Government.

Resolution.Khan Sahib Aman Ali.

My object is that the claims of mufassal students, especially those of the poorer class who cannot afford to come and reside in Calcutta for their education, may not be overlooked by Government. The case for establishing hostels for Calcutta students may be delayed for a year or two without much harm, and I submit that the claims of mufassal students should be given preference. As the matter is under the consideration of Government, and as something is going to be done, I need not press for the immediate acceptance of my resolution.

As regards the Raja of Dighapatiya's offer, I think the second offer ought to have been accepted, because the second offer was a higher one. It was also for the benefit of the College and in the interest of the students. However, it is for the Government to consider the matter. My object was to bring to the notice of the Government the necessity for additional hostel accommodation in the Rajshahi College."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. XLIX.

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made in the Budget for excavation of Chaktai khal at Chittagong at a cost of Rs. 10,000 ; and
- (b) that the said sum be taken out of Rs. 75,000 provided for the Howrah Police Hospital.

He said :—

" My Lord, when Your Excellency granted your first auspicious visit to Chittagong, the People's Association, the Islam Association, the Trades Association and the Municipal Board composed of Europeans, Eurasians, Hindus and Mussalmans, represented to Your Excellency the necessity of the re-excavation of the Chaktai khal which passes by the outskirts of the town in the east. The khal passes by the eastern side of the town and all the outlets or drains that drain the town fall into this khal. The khal being silted up, the drainage of the town has become very inefficient and the sanitation of the town has suffered a great deal.

Malaria and other epidemics now and then make appearance. The people from different parts of the district bring goods to sell in the town. The silting up of the khal has caused much inconvenience to these merchants, as they cannot enter the khal and unload their goods at the business centres, namely Buxi Hat. Your Excellency has perhaps personally seen the present state of the khal when Your Excellency was on the spot. On account of the silting up of the khal, the people of the town and its surrounding places suffer from malaria and the business of the whole district suffers. It is, therefore, the residents of different denominations had approached Your Excellency. The Municipality of Chittagong is very poor. Its area is only 4 square miles. A greater part of it is full of jungles, having no habitation.

Resolution.

Mr. Beatson Bell; Khan Sahib Aman Ali.

The maximum rate of house-tax is levied there, still its income is hardly equal to the maintenance of its roads and other necessities. It cannot take up a scheme for drainage without the help of Government?

My Lord, Your Excellency's Government is anxious for the sanitation of the Province, as has been manifested in several speeches delivered in different centres, and the silting of the khal has impeded the progress of trade and given way to the spread of malaria. My Lord, it will not be out of place to point out here that the Chittagong Division has got nothing in the budget for its sanitation, education and irrigation. My humble request on that ground also, I trust, will meet with Your Excellency's Government's approval. The head from which I have said the amount is available will in no way suffer if the amount I have asked for is allotted. Because such a big sum as Rs. 75,000 will not be spent in one year on that head. If Your Excellency's Government consider that the sum cannot be spared from that head, it can be taken from the head 'Miscellaneous.' I have nothing to say here. Your Excellency was on the spot. The excavation of the khal is an urgent matter. The people of Your Excellency's Government being far away from Your Excellency's capital are crying for help for the safety of their life and trade. It will be all fair if Your Excellency grants a listening ear to their need. With these words, my Lord, I move my resolution."

The Hon'ble MR. BEATSON BELL said :—

"My Lord, all our expert advisors have assured us that the deterioration which has temporarily taken place in this khal has had no appreciable effect on the sanitation of the town and its suburbs. We are, however, advised—and it is patent to every one who, like Your Excellency, has inspected the spot—that the deterioration in the khal has caused considerable inconvenience to the merchants who carry on their business in the Buxi Hat. The deterioration of the khal is mainly due to two circumstances : first, to the formation of a char in the main stream of the Karnafuli ; and, secondly, to the action of the merchants themselves, in allowing logs, rafts and other obstructions to remain in the khal. As regards the char, the Port Commissioners are considering this problem along with general problem of the Karnafuli river. Certain training works are proposed, and it is hoped that sooner or later the char will disappear. This is a very large and very difficult question ; but in the meantime, as a small measure, we are prepared to consider the khal by itself. While we are satisfied that the sanitary aspect of the question is negligible, we admit that the merchants are suffering a good deal of inconvenience. But the merchants are, after all, a comparatively small body, and it would be hardly fair to ask general tax-payers to pay money for their benefit. As I have already shown, the merchants are themselves greatly responsible for the bad state of the khal. We have decided to adopt a small measure of local self-government ; in other words, it is our intention to notify the portion of the khal from the Buxi Hat down to the main river as a 'navigable channel' under the Canals Act, and to authorise a representative body of the merchants concerned to take their own steps, in consultation with an expert 'supervisor,' to keep the khal clear from obstruction and to improve it at their own cost in such a way as they think best. I hope the Hon'ble Khan Sahib will see that this proposal is a practical proposal ; and I would ask him to give it a fair trial, and not to press his motion."

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI said :—

"My Lord, the Municipal address was presented to Your Excellency through the Civil Surgeon who is also an ex-officio member of that body. He is of opinion that the sanitation of the town is a great deal affected by

"this khal. All that I ask for is the sympathy of Your Excellency's Government towards a far away and distant place as Chittagong. With these remarks, I ask Your Lordship's permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The Council was then adjourned to 11 A.M., on Thursday, the 28th March, 1918, at Government House, Calcutta.

*Questions and Answers.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. I.*STARRED QUESTION. •

By the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY :—

(a) In view of the reply given to starred question No. 14 asked at the meeting of the Council of the 19th February last, will the Government be pleased to state on what expert advice they decided on the necessity of creating a new building for the Bengal Secretariat Press? The Bengal Secretariat Press.

(b) If no expert advice was taken, besides the advice of the Superintendent, will the Government be pleased to state why no such advice was taken?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the report of the Press Committee has now been received, and, if so, when it was received?

(d) If the report has been received, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

“(a) A committee which was appointed in 1909 to consider generally the question of the existing arrangements for the printing of Government work in Bengal expressed the opinion that the Secretariat Press should be removed from Writers' Buildings. Financial conditions rendered it impossible then to give immediate effect to the recommendation, and later when proposals regarding suitable sites were being discussed the question was affected by the departure of the Government of India from Calcutta to Delhi. It was hoped then to secure one of the buildings evacuated by the Government of India, but this has not been found possible.

(b) The question does not arise.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government are not prepared to lay the report on the table.”

*2.

With reference to the answer given to starred question No. 17 at the meeting of the Council on the 19th February, 1918— Inspection of the Bengal Secretariat Press by the Controller of Printing.

(i) will the Government be pleased to state how many times the Controller of Printing has inspected the Bengal Secretariat Press during the past five years?

(ii) did the Controller pass, in his advisory capacity, all the indents for machinery, both printing and type-casting, hitherto made by the Superintendent?

(iii) will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the opinion of the Controller as to whether, and, if so, to what extent the introduction of (1) printing and (2) type-casting machines has resulted in combining efficiency with economy?

(iv) is the Controller of opinion that work in the Press has increased, requiring more machinery and larger accommodation?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

“(i) The Controller has inspected the Press in all its departments twice during the past five years. On other occasions he visited certain branches in connection with special questions.

(ii) No, not in all cases.

Questions and Answers.

(iii) The Controller has expressed his inability to answer this question, since although printing machines result in both economy and efficiency in several classes of work, and type-casting machines are necessary for the manufacture of type, a very detailed scrutiny of the work performed by the machines over a prolonged period would be necessary to determine the extent of the gain in efficiency and economy.

(iv) The Controller is of opinion that larger and more suitable accommodation is required for the Press. No proposals for additional machinery have been submitted, and the Controller's opinion has not therefore been obtained."

After serving in the army throughout the South African war he was in charge of his regimental Press in India for four years."

By the Hon'ble MR. ALTAF ALI :—

V.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is in contemplation to extend the privilege of appearing at the final licentiate examination of the State Medical Faculty till November, 1918, to the passed students of all medical schools in Bengal, including those who could not appear at the examination held in November, 1916?

VII.

Election system in District Boards.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is in contemplation to introduce the system of election of members of District Boards by Local Boards or village unions in District Boards which do not yet enjoy the privilege?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

" Union committees have no power under the Bengal Local Self-Government Act to elect members of District Boards. The Village Self-Government Bill, which it is hoped to introduce on the 4th April, 1918, provides for the election of members of circle boards by village committees and for the election of members of District Boards by the circle boards.

In districts where there are no Local Boards all the members of the District Boards must, under the Local Self-Government Act, be appointed by Government. Consequently all the members of the Districts Boards of Bogra, Malda and Chittagong are so appointed, in the two districts named first because there are no subdivisions, and hence no Local Boards, and in the district last named because there are no Local Boards, though there are subdivisions.

In order to introduce the elective system in the district of Chittagong, Local Boards would have first to be created; and it is not proposed to do this, both because the tenure of office of the members of the District Board extends to December, 1920, and it is not practicable to alter its constitution till their term of office expires, and also because it appears undesirable to create new Local Boards which may shortly be replaced by circle boards."

By the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI :—

VIII.

Hostel

students.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing what hostel arrangements there are in secondary schools and colleges under Government control for students of the Namasudra caste?

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) Reports were obtained from the Civil Surgeons concerned.

(b) No. Enquiry has been made and it has been ascertained that 53 cases were diagnosed as cases of kala-azar at the Golaknath dispensary from the 1st January, to the 31st July, 1917. 			Rs.

 - (i) the date of employment,
 - (ii) the initial pay, and
 - (iii) the amount of increase of pay granted at different times with dates thereof?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

"The Port Commissioners prepare, and in meeting sanction, a schedule of the staff employed under them. A copy of this sanctioned schedule is forwarded by them to Government along with their Budget Estimates of Income and Expenditure. This schedule, as last submitted by the Commissioners, has been placed in the library. It shows the number, the designation, and the salary of the several appointments in the different offices of the Commissioners. The schedule does not show which posts are held by the Indian employés and which posts by the European employés and this information is not in the possession of Government. Questions and Answers.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all material papers and correspondence or extracts therefrom relating to the arrangement with the Imperial Government under which an assignment has to be made annually to the Imperial Government from the excise-revenue under the new scheme of taxation?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

“ The following extract explains the arrangement :—

Extract paragraph 59 of the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement for India, 1916-17.

59. Lastly, I may explain that under the terms of the existing financial settlements with the provinces, income-tax is a divided head, and the additional revenue accruing from our proposals will thus be shared between Imperial and Provincial. But as this additional taxation is imposed solely for Imperial purposes, the amount which technically accrues to the provinces will be set off by a counter-adjustment from Provincial to Imperial under the head ‘Transfers between Imperial and Provincial Revenues.’ The same procedure was followed in 1910 in respect of the additional taxation then imposed under ‘Stamps’ and ‘Excise.’ A like adjustment will also be made on this occasion in respect of that portion of the additional duty on locally produced beer and ‘foreign spirit’ which will be credited to Provincial revenues under the terms of the settlements.”

(a) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing—

- (i) the total number of administrative and clerical appointments, respectively, under the Calcutta Port Trust; and
- (ii) the different scales of salary prevailing in each of these two branches, together with the total number of officers on each such scale, and their nationality?

(b) Is it a fact that Indians are not admitted to any administrative appointments under the Calcutta Port Trust?

(c) What are the minimum qualifications necessary for admission to the administrative appointments of the different kinds under the Calcutta Port Trust?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

“(a) A schedule of Establishment employed under the Port Commissioners, Calcutta, is placed in the library. It shows the number of administrative and clerical appointments, and the different scales of salary in each of these two branches. The nationality of the officers and servants of the Port Commissioners holding respectively the administrative and clerical appointments, is not shown in that schedule. The Hon'ble Member is also referred to the answer given in to-day's Council to unstarred question [No. XIII] by the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri.

(b) and (c) Administrative appointments the monthly salary of which is below Rs. 1,000 are not subject to the sanction of Government, and consequently Government have no information regarding them. In the case of posts of Rs. 1,000 per mensem and upwards, and in the case of a few posts like that of Secretary, and Chief or Deputy Chief Engineer, etc., there is no bar against the appointment thereto of suitable Indians.

The minimum qualifications necessary for admission to the several administrative appointments under the Port Commissioners, have not been laid down by Government.”

 (c) Is it a fact that Mr. E. H. Corbett was officiating as Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Intelligence Branch, at the time when the said order was passed?
 (d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether, beyond an expression of disapprobation, any punishment has been meted out to those officers who were responsible for the arrest and detention of the Sindhubalas?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a) The order was passed on the authority of the Deputy Inspector-General, Intelligence Branch.

(b) The Deputy Inspector-General is in charge of the work of the Intelligence Branch, and generally all orders issuing from that Branch are issued on his authority.

(c) Mr. E. H. Corbett was temporary Deputy Inspector-General, Intelligence Branch, at the time.

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. F. C. Daly, C.I.E., whom Mr. E. H. Corbett has succeeded, has taken two years' retiring furlough and that the post of the Inspector-General of Police is likely to fall vacant?

(e) Is it a fact that some officers senior to Mr. Corbett are still acting as Superintendents of Police?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

"(a) He has been appointed to officiate in the post during the absence of Mr. Daly, on leave, or until further orders.

(b) No. Since the post of Deputy Inspector-General (Crime) was created in 1906, three police officers have held the post of Inspector-General. Only one of these had previously served as Deputy Inspector-General (Crime).

(c) Both Deputy Inspectors-General draw their grade pay as such, and as a matter of fact, in the particular case of Mr. Corbett, the exchange is disadvantageous to him as regards pay till such time as he is confirmed as a Deputy Inspector-General. The Deputy Inspector-General (Crime) draws a house allowance of Rs. 250 a month. The Deputy Inspector-General, Intelligence Branch, draws a motor-car allowance of Rs. 150 a month, and is entitled to house allowance under the Calcutta house allowance rules.

(d) Mr. Daly has taken two years' leave, but it is not known whether he proposes to retire at the end of it. The post of Inspector-General of Police will, in the ordinary course, fall vacant in October 1919 when Mr. Plowden will attain the age of 55.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 2 and 3.*THE SERAMPORE COLLEGE BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Serampore College Bill, 1918, and moved that the said Report be taken into consideration.

He said :—

“My Lord, on the occasion when I introduced this Bill, I placed before the Council quite fully the object and scope of the Bill, and I do not think it necessary, therefore, to say anything more at this stage. I may only mention that no alteration whatsoever was made in the Select Committee, except a merely verbal one, by which the words ‘Calcutta University’ were altered to ‘University of Calcutta’.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Serampore College Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha ; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble ^{SIR S. P. SINHA}, also moved that the clauses of the said Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved that in lines 7 and 8 of clause 13 the following be omitted, namely :—

"the Government as defined in section 2(b) of the Indian Universities Act, 1904, in relation to."

He said :—

"My Lord, the preamble of the Bill in question clearly indicates that the constitution of the Serampore College be so amended as to authorise the Council of the said College to discharge the functions of the University, that is to say, that "a Faculty and Senate be constituted for the said College and that suitable standards be imposed in regard to any secular degrees that may hereafter be conferred by the said Council.

"Clause 13 of the Bill authorises the Council "to grant degrees in any branch or branches of knowledge and science other than theology" if certain conditions are fulfilled, i.e., if the Government as defined in section 2(b) of the Indian Universities Act of 1904 are satisfied that those requirements have been complied with. There is no Act of the Supreme Legislative Council as suggested in the Bill making it obligatory on the Governor-General in Council to make enquiries as to the adequacy :—

- (1) of the establishment and equipment of the College,
- (2) of the academic standard to be maintained, and
- (3) of the financial provision made therefor.

"So that, in my view the Governor-General in Council, i.e., the Executive Government is not legally bound to act according to the recommendation of the Bengal Legislative Council. Legal obligation must be imposed by legal authorities. In my humble opinion the legislation of the kind contemplated in the Bill ought to be passed by the Imperial Legislative Council. Referring to the Indian Universities Act of 1904, 'the Government' means in relation to the University of Calcutta the Governor-General in Council and the sections by which the said Government are required to exercise their authority are sections 21(5), and 24(5). The latter section authorises the Government to sanction the regulations which are framed by the Senate under the Act. There is no section which authorises the Government directly to make an enquiry for their satisfaction as to the adequacy of the requirements laid down in the latter part of clause 13 of the Bill. On the other hand in section 21 of the Act we find that the University has authority at the first instance to enquire about these matters before any College is affiliated to it. This procedure is to be found in the Indian Universities Act of 1904 and has reference to the affiliation of a College to the University. So with regard to disaffiliation of the College—section 24(5). The duties of Government are thus defined in the Universities Act, that is at the time of affiliation of a College to the University. If, therefore, a reference to the expression of Government be made in the Bill, the duties imposed by the Act cannot be lost sight of. I am, therefore, doubtful whether the authority given by the local Legislative Council can legally compel the Government or the Governor-General of India in Council to carry out the injunction laid down in clause 13 of the Bill. The Bill says "it shall satisfy the Government as defined in section 2, clause (b), of the Indian Universities Act". We must understand the meaning of the word as understood and explained in the Act itself.

"If my views are controlled by the those of the Council, may I not ask the Hon'ble Members to consider, whether a University sitting in Calcutta can successfully enquire as to the details laid down in clause 13 of the Bill and satisfy itself as to these details. The Governor-General in Council sits at Delhi or Simla. Serampore is 12 miles from Calcutta. If the Bengal Legislative Council has authority to direct the Governor-General to be satisfied as to the details stated in the clause, will it not be more convenient to the Calcutta University. The two Universities can act harmoniously as to the academic mode of the spread of education in Bengal.

The Hon'ble DR. HOWELLS, said :—

"My Lord, I have nothing to complain of so far as the general spirit of the amendment is concerned and in the way in which it was proposed. But it seems to me that on one or two grounds it is quite inadmissible. I do not want to follow or attempt to follow the legal intricacies referred to by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandre Mitra Bahadur—I am not in any way competent to do so but the matter has been very carefully considered by the highest legal authorities and I am content to leave it at that. But on more general grounds I should like to ask whether there is any demand whatever from the University of Calcutta in connection with, and in the direction of, what my Hon'ble friend proposes. The Calcutta University has had every opportunity to consider this question and after careful deliberation in the first place by the faculty of law and then by a full Senate the matter was decided and the Calcutta University felt that it would be unnecessary and unfair to interfere in any way with the progress of the Bill through the Council. The Vice-Chancellor is not here to-day otherwise he would support me in that statement. I am not aware that the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur has any right here to represent the Calcutta University or anything that the Calcutta University stands for. I think the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur has some regard for the principle of representative Government and for the principle that Government should be in the interest of those that are governed. But he is introducing a somewhat dangerous principle, I think, by attempting to force on the Calcutta University something that it has no desire to get. So far as the issue of the matter is concerned, on its merits, it seems to me, it is absolutely essential in matters of educational administration, even in reference to Universities, that the supreme power should rest with the Government and while there should be a very considerable measure of independence to the University yet there should always come a time, there should always be a possibility of a time, when it is the right of the Government to intervene and set things straight. There is a power, even in educational matters when the broad interests of the country are concerned, higher than the Calcutta University and it is recognised in all University administrations in other countries—the Government steps in, for instance, and appoints a commission thereby manifesting its supremacy. It would be a dangerous thing, for instance, even in England in matters bearing on the extension of the University education, if the University of Oxford had been granted such a power in England as my Hon'ble friend proposes to give to the University of Calcutta in Bengal. I am afraid, looking on facts from a historical point of view, that if matters had been left entirely in the hands of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, there would not be an additional University in England at the present time. They would not have been the best judges when other persons and other interests were concerned. It would be a dangerous policy, I take it, to make the Calcutta University the arbiter of University education and University extension throughout Bengal. Calcutta is already overburdened and it is well known that there is very considerable discussion as to the desirability of extending University education by the foundation of Universities in other centres. But if the Hon'ble Rai Mohendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur's idea is maintained and the policy he stands for carried it would really make the Calcutta University the supreme judge and arbiter in all matters of this kind. From the point of view of an educationist it seems to me that it would be an unwise and dangerous policy. We must recognise in these matters the supremacy of the Government and it seems uncertain at any rate whether the University of Calcutta, even assuming that these powers might be given or that it might be desirable to give them, is really qualified to judge in these matters. At present the Calcutta University is itself being judged, a commission is sitting in regard to the University and all that it stands for and to come in at this time and say that the Calcutta University must decide matters of this kind will be putting into the hands of that body a power which it will not be qualified properly to administer. On these grounds it seems to me that the amendment proposed should be opposed."

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA, said :—

"My Lord, I fear that I did not succeed in removing the misconception which seemed to prevail amongst some Hon'ble Members of this Council, when the Bill was introduced. I stated then that at the present moment, the Serampore College has the right to confer not only theological degrees, but degrees in Arts and Sciences as well. Supposing this Bill is dropped to-day, they can, if they chose, manufacture as many B.-A's., and M.-A's., etc., as they like; there is nothing to prevent them. But the primary object of this Bill is to enable the College authorities to utilise the powers given to them under the Charter to confer theological degrees on students of all Christian churches and not merely of the particular denomination to which the College authorities belong, and this object was considered likely to be furthered if the denominational basis on which the College rests was modified by the creation of an enlarged Council and of a Senate, consisting of members belonging to the different Christian churches. That is the primary object of the Bill, namely, to enlarge the basis of the theological faculty which will confer the theological degrees, and that does not touch the existing powers to confer degrees in Arts and Sciences. There are no restrictions now existing on their powers, to confer such degrees; but the Bill took the opportunity of imposing certain restrictions on these powers, namely, that as regards these other degrees, the Serampore College should not be able to confer them unless the Government was satisfied that in the matter of establishment, equipment and academic standard to be maintained and finance, adequate provision was made. The College authorities have accepted that restriction, viz., that they should not confer these other degrees without satisfying the Government in these particulars. Now, what my Hon'ble friend, Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur proposes to do is to enact that the restrictions which they have agreed to accept, should be altered, and a restriction should be imposed upon them, which they have not agreed to, viz., that they should satisfy not the Government, but the University of Calcutta. Is that a reasonable proposal, viz., to impose upon them a restriction which does not exist and which they are not bound to accept, instead of the restriction which they have willingly accepted, viz., control by the Government? I venture to think that the Council will agree with me that it is not. But, further than that and without going into the questions which have been raised by the Hon'ble Dr. Howells, the Council will remember this that in all these matters, establishment and equipment of a college, academic standard to be maintained and the financial provision made for the College, the Calcutta University has not the power to order affiliation or disaffiliation so far its own colleges are concerned. The Calcutta University cannot affiliate or disaffiliate any college in Bengal, except under the control of the Government of India. Now, if that is so, and if in these matters the Calcutta University itself is subject to the control of the Government of India, is it reasonable, I ask again, that the Calcutta University should be made the controlling authority over a sister and a possibly rival University? Further, the difficulties which the Hon'ble Mover of this amendment has pointed out about the Government of India controlling, from a distance, the Serampore College are not likely to exist for very much longer. It is an open secret that it is intended to substitute as the controlling authority of the University of Calcutta the Government of Bengal. Therefore, there would not be any difficulty whatsoever in the Government of Bengal, satisfying itself as regards these particulars, if and when, any question arises as to the capacity of the Serampore College to confer such degrees. It is a contingency which, so far as I can judge, is not likely to arise for a long time to come, and I, therefore, suggest that the Council should not accept the proposed amendment".

"My Lord, in answer to the questions which have been raised by the Hon'ble Dr. Howells, I beg to submit to your Lordship that I am myself a lover of representative Government. But, when I put the matter before the Government, I put it on the ground that the two Universities might work together, i.e., in co-operation. I thought also that as the Calcutta University was quite close by, it would be in a position to examine the details required in clause 13 of the Bill. I have raised it also as a legal question, as the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha, who is an eminent lawyer, will be in a position to throw light on it. I thought over the matter and considered it that I should put it before the Council so that the Council might be in a position to understand the difficulties which I pointed out.

"The Hon'ble Member in charge has stated to the Council that the suggestion made by me is not a reasonable one. I consider that it is a reasonable suggestion, because it will appear from the legal aspect of the question that when a reference is made to the Governor-General in Council or rather the Executive Government, they are under no legal obligation to do what is required under the provisions of clause 13. There is no Act of the Supreme Government to compel an Executive Government to do what is required in clause 13. The clause seems to be a request that something should be done but that has no legal force. That is the reason why I have submitted the matter to this Council. The Hon'ble Dr. Howells says that it will be introducing a dangerous principle I say that it will not certainly do so. I depend as I have said, upon the co-operation of the two Universities.

"I am glad also that the Hon'ble Member in charge considers that there are difficulties but he thinks that these difficulties might be obviated soon under certain circumstances. I have nothing further to say on this point, but I submit that on the principle of convenience, it will be far better if the Calcutta University examines these questions—questions of details. If the two Universities are to be considered as rival Universities, still I do not think that co-operation with each other will introduce a dangerous principle in the management of the Serampore College. The Council of the Serampore College sits in London and the management of the College is left in the hands of the managing Committee. The Council in London is not in a position to have a direct control over the managing Committee at Serampore. These, my Lord, are the difficulties which I have submitted to the Council. I do not think that even if the two Universities are considered rivals, co-operation will be of no use. In this view of the matter, I have submitted this amendment for the consideration of the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The following motion being consequential was not moved :—

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR to move that the words "University of Calcutta" be substituted for the word "Government" in line 1 in the proviso to clause 13.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved that the following further proviso be added to clause 13, namely :—

"Provided also that the titles and marks of honour in respect of the degrees intended to be granted by the Council shall be different from those conferred by the University of Calcutta or any other Indian University."

He said :—

"My Lord, in moving this amendment my object is that when there are two universities, the degrees and marks of honour ought to be different, and so without any speech I submit that this proposal of mine should be accepted.

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member is probably aware himself of the difficulty of suggesting other titles and degrees in making his amendment. Are they to be called α β γ—or something else? In all Universities, they are called Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science or Master of Arts or Master of Science. I do not think that the Hon'ble Member is seriously suggesting that the titles to be conferred by the Serampore University should be other than these. Of course, to avoid any confusion, we have now B.A. of the Calcutta University or B. A. of the Bombay University and so on; and the same distinction will remain with regard to the Serampore College University. When there is anybody getting a degree from the Serampore College, he will be called B.A. of the Serampore College University; that is the distinction. It can hardly be suggested that we should have to invent a name different from that which prevails in any other University in the world."

The Hon'ble DR. HOWELLS said :—

"My Lord, I beg to oppose the amendment on the ground that it is a direct violation of the rights we possess under our Royal Charter and in accordance with the treaty with the King of Denmark. The sixth statute reads as follow :—

'The first Council and their successors for ever' being authorized by the Charter 'to confer such degrees of rank and honour as shall encourage learning' in the same manner as other Colleges and Universities, they shall from time to time confer degrees in such branches of knowledge and science as may be studied there, in the same manner as the Universities in Denmark, Germany and Great Britain. In doing this the Master and

Council shall ad libitum call in the aid of any or all the Professors of Serampore College. All such degrees shall be perfectly free of expense to the person on whom they may be conferred, whether he be in India, Europe or America.

Clearly if we are forbidden to confer such degrees as are now granted by the University of Calcutta or other Universities in the world, then this statute has absolutely no meaning. I, therefore, feel that it is a violation of the rights we definitely possess and rights which the Government are resolved to respect. The carrying out of this amendment would result in taking away such powers as we possess from us without our consent; and I may say on behalf of the College that we could never agree to the carrying through of such a resolution or any modification of the Charter and statutes in the way proposed. The Bill carried through in such a form would be to us worse than useless, and we should certainly as a college appeal against it for its reversal."

"My Lord, the proposal which I have submitted is not against the terms of the Charter. On the other hand, I find by a reference to clause 13 of the Bill that the Council of the Serampore College will be in a position to grant such degrees as they think fit and proper with this restriction that the grant of the degree to the students must be confined to those who study in the Serampore College and also that certain requirements be fulfilled before the degrees are granted. So I do not see how my proposal is in conflict with the terms of the Charter. Then, again, whenever a University is constituted, it is in a position to confer degrees. With Your Excellency's permission I may be allowed to read section 16 of the Indian Universities Act of 1904 and there I find the following words :—'The Senate may institute and confer such degrees and grant such diplomas, licenses, titles and marks of honour in respect of degrees and examinations as may be prescribed by regulation.' When the Serampore University will be constituted, I am entitled to submit to the Council, that by law it may be enacted that the degrees which they may grant should be different from the degrees which are granted by the Calcutta or other Indian Universities. That is not inconsistent with the terms of the Charter and not inconsistent with the provisions of the law which are to be found in the Indian Universities Act of 1904. So when we are going to have a law as to the constitution of the University and also as to the powers given to the University for granting degrees, is it quite unreasonable on my part to press upon the attention of the Council that the degrees should be different and that the marks of honour should be different from those which are granted by the Indian Universities? No doubt it has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Member in charge that the same degrees may be conferred by different Universities. Quite so. But still my contention is that there should be different degrees for different Universities. We have got different gowns, different marks of honour to indicate different Universities."

The motion was then put and lost.

*Bengal Budget for 1918-19.Sir Henry Wheeler.c Resolutions.c Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.*BENGAL BUDGET FOR 1918-19.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER presented the Budget of the Government of Bengal for 1918-19.

He said :—

"Sir, a memorandum drawing attention to various points connected with the Budget is already in the hands of the Hon'ble Members, and I trust that the notes therein are sufficiently clear in themselves.

"It will be remembered that among the resolutions moved at the previous meeting of the Council with reference to the Revised Financial Statement, two were carried. The first recommended a larger provision for the greater stimulation of work under the Co-operative Credit Department. I think the actual additional amount proposed to be allotted for that purpose was Rs. 50,000. Subsequently, we consulted the Revenue Department as to the amount which they thought they could usefully spend during the year in the direction of giving effect to the wishes of Council, and they told us that Rs. 12,000 was the amount which could thus be disbursed; provision has been made accordingly in the Budget for that amount.

"The next resolution had reference to a hostel for railway students at Kanchrapara. That question is not in itself sufficiently advanced for us to have made a Budget provision for it. There are outstanding points, both in regard to the scheme and the incidence of the cost, which will now be worked out. Should it be decided to take action on the lines of the wishes of the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mukherji, the cost will be debited to the ordinary Civil Works allotment of the Public Works Department, and therefore no special provision on that account need be made.

"These, Sir, are the two main points of fresh interest disclosed by the Budget as now presented.

"I would draw the attention of the Hon'ble Members to the last paragraph of the memorandum, and ask them to be so good as to extend to us their usual courtesy in giving preliminary intimation of any points of detail which they desire to raise during the debate on the 4th April, in order that information regarding them may be collected."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the Rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to provide facilities, under proper safeguards, to those détenus who may desire to appear at the next University Examinations.

* The Budget is not included in these proceedings.

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

He said :—

“My Lord, before I speak on this resolution, I think, I should explain why I am late, so far as this year is concerned, in bringing this matter before the Council—as the Intermediate Arts and the Intermediate Science examinations for this year are over and the Matriculation commences on the 2nd April next. I expected that the cases of the unfortunate boys, arrested and detained either under Bengal Regulation III of 1818 or under the Defence of India Act, 1915, who were preparing for the University examinations, would be taken into consideration and facilities under proper safeguard would be afforded them for appearing at the University examinations. But when I came to learn that no such arrangement was in the contemplation of the authorities, I submitted my resolution on the 20th February last, as far as I remember, with a request that I might be allowed to move it at the meeting of the Council held on the 5th March last as an urgent measure. Unfortunately, no earlier opportunity could be granted to me. However, I raise the question now with a hope that such concession may be granted to, and suitable arrangements made for, those who are still desirous of continuing their studies and appearing at the University examinations.

It is really a grievance, my Lord, that the boys, sometimes the only hopes of their aged parents or guardians and some of them only in their teens, should be snatched away by the rough hand of the police and kept in secluded cells, or when outside the jail, often in places infected with malaria and abounding in serpents—left to the care more of nature than of man—under the constant watch of those whose very sight is irritating to them as belonging to that same class of persons who are responsible for bringing them to this their sad plight. But I shall not deal with that aspect of the question as it is not within the scope of my present resolution. Worthier hands have already handled it in and out of the Council Chambers. Nor shall I deal to-day with any other subsidiary questions such as maintenance allowance, family allowance, health of détenus, places of domicile and so forth though there is much to complain of even in these. I take this opportunity, however, to congratulate the Government with a sense of relief and a feeling of gratitude on the rules, recently framed and published, for those who are detained within the jails. These rules will be greatly appreciated by the sufferers, and I hope similar rules and necessary arrangements will be made, without delay, also for those who are interned outside the jail under Government supervision and control.

If I have understood the Defence of India Act rightly, it provides only for a temporary detention. The persons arrested under its provisions are not convicts in any sense of the word though we sometimes hear that they are treated worse than the worst criminals. It is admitted that the materials available against them are not sufficient for a regular prosecution, and therefore we may take it that they may be guilty or may not be guilty of the offences with which they are charged. So, in the absence of a conviction in an open trial by Courts of Justice, when the period of detention will be over, these détenus will surely not be branded as convicts for the rest of their lives but they will be entitled to the full participation of all the rights and privileges equally with other citizens. Is it reasonable, then, my Lord, that on mere suspicion their future prospects should be marred and they should be deprived of a chance of making themselves useful to society and to their families? I, therefore, suggest that the education of these unfortunate boys should not be interfered with, and every facility ought to be granted to them for continuing their studies even during the period of their detention, of course so far as circumstances permit. I might be permitted to refer in this connection to a very recent case at Rajshahi. A boy who was appearing at the I.A. examination this year was arrested during the course of the examination. He was not allowed to finish his examination: he had appeared only two days when he was arrested. Was an immediate arrest so very urgently necessary and unavoidable? Was the boy really so very dangerous—like a plague or inundation—that he must be removed without a moment's delay lest he might contaminate the whole atmosphere with his foul breath? Were the Government in immediate danger of being overthrown by that boy so that they could not allow him a respite of even three or four days just to finish his examination upon which his whole future life so immensely depended? And even if his arrest was so very urgent why were not arrangements made for his examination at any place under proper safeguard? What wonder that people will take the Defence of India Act to be an Act of Oppression. We are sometimes accused of embarrassing the Government by repeated Questions and Resolutions on the working of the Defence of India Act! But I can assure Your Excellency that that is not so. Indeed, with very great pain we have to refer to these incidents with a hope that Government might clear up their position and rectify the errors, if any, of their subordinates—and has it not been proved by facts that there are errors! The case cited by me above is not a solitary instance. There have been many such cases. Only the other day another candidate for the I.A. examination was arrested at Rajshahi and after enquiry he was let off just on the eve of the examination after a confinement of little over a week. Did not this boy suffer immeasurably owing to this interruption of studies? I do not know if he has been able to appear at all at the examination. At least there must have been a serious obstruction to the continuity of study, not to speak of the shock he received. Everybody knows how valuable every minute of the days just preceding the examination is to an intending candidate. We, my Lord, understand it. But those with whom this task of arrests under the Defence of India Act is entrusted seem not to understand—they are callous enough. Supposing the boy who has been arrested during the course of the examination is set free after the usual enquiry, who, my Lord, will be responsible for this loss of one year, at the least, the boy has been compelled to suffer?

"Here, my Lord, I may be permitted to observe that I do not understand why arrests are made before the enquiry. What is the enquiry that is made after the arrest?"

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, I rise to a point of order. The question whether arrests are made before enquiry or afterwards has nothing to do with the Hon'ble Member's resolution."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Member must confine himself to arguments which bear upon the actual terms of his resolution. I have allowed him a considerable latitude; but if he adduces arguments which have no actual bearing on the resolution, I must ask him to omit them."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI continuing said :—

"My Lord, we shall perhaps be told that there are reasons for this unusual procedure which we cannot know as they are State Secret. But I think some explanation ought to be forthcoming."

"There are several other anomalies in the operation of the Defence of India Act which we do not understand. In passing, I may be permitted to refer to one of these, e.g., the question of allowance to detenus outside the jail."

Resolutions.President; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Member should resume his seat when I rise to speak. I fail to see what bearing this argument on the subject of allowances to détenus has on the resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI continuing said :—

"Very well, my Lord, as I was saying, the Defence of India Act is a war measure and this somewhat ordinary application of Bengal Regulation III of 1818—which is also an extraordinary measure—is also made for the purposes of the war—we are told—both intended for vesting the executive with some extraordinary powers to be used only under extraordinary circumstances—viz., the power of periodical suspension, of the Habeas Corpus, of the natural civil rights of man as man—therefore of incarceration of men without trial—the application of both of these is a purely executive measure where courts of law cannot reach. But both are intended only for keeping those persons, whom the executive think to be dangerous, aloof, for the time being, from their usual surroundings. And, to my mind, the executive must stop there—I mean only to the extent of keeping such persons aloof—and should not proceed any further. It necessarily follows that these persons cannot be accorded the same treatment as is meted out to the convicts, and as far as possible they must be kept in the same state of life as they used to live. It also follows, as I have pointed out before, that they will again enjoy the same rights and privileges as they used to enjoy before their internment, after the period of detention is over—for they are not convicts. From this does it not follow that only such restrictions are to be placed upon such persons as are absolutely indispensable, that is to say, they should also be allowed to continue their usual vocations in life. Here, my Lord, the case of student détenus can be distinguished from other cases for even during their detention they can be allowed to continue their studies without any possible harm to the Government. Of course, they may not have the advantages of collegiate education, but they can pursue their studies at their places of internment. And is it not also practicable to allow them to appear at the college and University examinations? They can very well be examined at their places of internment or at any other place under proper safeguards. I do not really see, my Lord, the least possibility of harm to the Government in taking this course. On the other hand, if these boys are not allowed to go on with their studies—what is the result? The result is that when these persons are set free again they have to begin their life anew and perhaps they are then too old to begin their studies afresh. And though the Act does not intend to brand them as convicts, the operation of the Act in this country and more especially the methods of that hallowed infallible department known in this unfortunate country as the C. I. D., do as a matter of fact brand them as the worst set of confirmed criminals—for ever pursued by the Criminal Investigation Department wherever they go, resulting in this that these unfortunate persons are more miserable than ever, getting no employment, having no community because scaring away everybody—in short they are ruined persons—and what is the next thing they are likely to do? Either they must commit suicide, as some recent cases have shewn, or they will have to resort to unlawful acts for their bread and for the sake of some employment whatsoever. And who, my Lord, is responsible for this sad result? There is perhaps no escape from the unhappy conclusion that it is the Criminal Investigation Department or the operation of the Defence of India Act. Was this result intended by the Legislature? At least I do not think so. Is this also the way, my Lord, how the very serious problems of unemployment and discontent in this country are being solved?

With these words I commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council."

Resolutions.Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, the object of this resolution is a very simple one—that steps may be taken to provide facilities under proper safeguard to those détenus who may desire to appear at the next University examinations. If they are not allowed to appear at the next University examination the result will be that their future prospects will be marred. So that such facilities should be offered to them for appearing at the ensuing examinations. But if they are not allowed to do so, it will be found that their future prospects are all gone. In that view of the matter I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, I propose to confine myself to the subject of the resolution and not to stray beyond it into the contentious and perennial topic of the general merits or demerits of the police."

"The resolution has reference to the appearance of boys who are dealt with under the Defence of India Act at their examinations, and the subject is one regarding which the facts ought to be known to the Hon'ble Members of this Council as they were given in answer to a question on the 3rd July last. It was then stated :—

'In a few cases permission has been given to détenus to leave a domicile for the purpose of attending an examination, but it has been made perfectly clear to them and their relatives that permission to appear at the examination rests ultimately in the discretion of the Educational authorities. Where permission has been refused, it was for the general reason that in the circumstances of the individual case it did not seem suitable that the privilege should be allowed.'

"That has been and is the position of Government in this matter ; but it was found that in the past misunderstanding arose owing to the fact that orders had been issued saying that Government had no objection to such and such a boy appearing at his examination. Now, to appear at an examination under the regulations of the University, a candidate is required to have a certificate, firstly that he has attended a certain number of lectures, and secondly that the Principal of the institution in which he has been studying knows nothing against his moral character. It was assumed and argued in some quarters that these orders of Government meant that it was the intention and wish of Government that these conditions should be waived in the favour of the particular candidate. Obviously, this was an entirely erroneous impression. All that was meant was that, assuming that a boy was given permission by the University authorities to appear at an examination, Government might, if the case was a suitable one, suspend the disabilities that were imposed on him under the Defence of India Act, and thus enable him to go to the place of examination without committing a breach of the rules."

"The matter was argued in the Calcutta University last year in the case of a particular boy who was a détenu and who had been attending the Dacca College. The Principal of that college had refused to sign the certificate that he knew nothing against the moral character of the candidate. The question was raised in the Syndicate of waiving the regulations in favour of the boy, stress being laid on the argument, to which I have referred, that Government had said that they had no objection. The recommendation of the Syndicate was submitted to the Senate and was argued on two occasions. I have been unable to obtain a copy of the detailed discussion, which, I understand, has not yet been printed, though six or seven months have since elapsed ; but I am told by those who were present that there was a considerable difference of opinion in the Senate, and eventually the resolution to the effect that the regulations be rescinded in this instance was withdrawn. That, Sir, is the position. A boy, quite apart from any action of Government, has to obtain a certificate of attendance at lectures and another as to his moral character; the fact that he has been interned will be an obstacle to both. Our position is as explained in the answer to a question which I have already quoted, namely, that if the Educational authorities allow a boy to appear at his examination, assuming that he is able to get these certificates, Government will then consider whether, looking to the circumstances of the case and the reasons for which he was interned, it is practicable to allow him to attend at the place of examination. That will be judged on the merits of the case. Permission may be granted or refused; it will altogether depend on what the facts of the case are. That being so, I am unable to accept the resolution which asks us to provide facilities regarding which, as I have explained, the initial difficulty is that of satisfying the requirements of the University, while even if that was met, there would still remain the consideration of the merits of each individual case."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, although I have not been able to follow the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri who moved this resolution, I think it my duty, on reading the resolution on the agenda paper, to say a few words in support of it. I do not think, my Lord, that there is a single member of the Council who does not realize that we are passing through critical and anxious times, and that the Government have got the right in these extraordinary times to adopt extraordinary measures for the sake of public peace and tranquillity. The Defence of India Act from that point of view is certainly an extraordinary measure which the Government have adopted, and the only difference in the points of view of the people and the Government lies in the fact that in some cases at least the Act has been unnecessarily and harshly imposed. One of the general complaints which I have heard is that some of the détenus are not given permission, not to speak of facilities, for appearing at various examinations. From all that I could understand from the speech of Sir Henry Wheeler I find that in some cases Government did give permission to certain détenus and if they could not appear at the examination it was due to causes over which Government had no control. I take it, therefore, that the principle recommended in the resolution is acceptable to Government and in this view of the matter I would respectfully urge upon your Excellency's Government to consider if the matter could not be discussed with the University authorities and the resolution accepted in the form in which it has been moved in this Council. We all know that the Defence of India Act is only a preventive measure and that it has only been enacted for the preservation of public safety and tranquillity; and if my view is correct then it is only natural that we should expect that the Act should not be set in motion so as to cause more hardship than can possibly be avoided. We all know, and experience has taught us, that suspected guilty persons when they find their future almost blasted stray further and further from the path of virtue and ultimately become hardened criminals. Therefore, I submit that in the interests of society some of these détenus ought to be granted every facility for appearing at the examinations, so that after their release they may follow a useful career in life. With these words I commend this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri. And in doing so, I assure your Excellency that I would confine myself to the terms of the resolution and the reply given by Sir Henry Wheeler. My Lord, it is unnecessary for me to impress upon your Excellency's Government that this subject has been a subject of much excitement and agitation in our community. My Lord, I am not entering upon the question of internment at all. On this subject there is of course difference of opinion. All that we are at present concerned with is to impress upon the Government the necessity of so dealing with the détenus who had been carrying on their studies in schools and colleges before their detention, that after their release they may not turn into hardened criminals and do mischief not only to society but to the Government as well. My Lord, it is admitted that these arrests are made on suspicion. I do not wish to enter into the question whether arrests on suspicion are justified or not. This is not the time nor the place. But after all when these youngmen are arrested on suspicion the Government should be benevolent enough to see that they are fairly and generously treated—although they are kept under restriction. Those of them who were students should be allowed to continue their studies under proper safeguards and to appear at the examinations if they desire to do so. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has stated that permission has been given in certain cases, and every individual case was considered where permission was not given. My Lord, we submit that whatever the circumstances of individual cases may be—they are known to the Government alone—it would be doing no harm either to the Government or to society if these boys are allowed to appear at examinations. It is stated that there are difficulties so far as the University is concerned. I am sure, my Lord, if the Government is inclined to grant them facilities some arrangements can be made with the University authorities to allow these boys to appear at the examinations or to continue their studies even in the places of their confinement. If this is done the interest of society will be safeguarded and they will be brought up as loyal and law-abiding citizens because education will improve their mind and character. And this arrangement can be made under proper safeguards. It seems that in many cases of detention, education is abruptly brought to an end, and the boys are turned into a band of discontented youths. But if this suggestion is followed, it will allay much discontent; otherwise, when the détenus come out, they will come out in a state of mind which I regret to think will not be quite compatible with the character of good citizens. Some generosity ought to be shown to these boys, and this little act of generosity will be very much appreciated by the parents and relatives of the détenus, and I hope something may be done in this direction. I yet hope, my Lord, that public opinion will act upon the mind of the Government. I am not yet without hope. In this Council Chamber I had the honour of moving for an advisory board of non-official visitors for the détenus and it was opposed by Sir Henry Wheeler, but in the cool heights of Simla the suggestion which I made before this Council seems to have found favour. I yet hope that without in anyway interfering with the policy of the Government, without in anyway fettering the hands of the Government, something may be done for the education of these boys. I hope Sir Henry Wheeler will kindly consider it in his calmer moments outside the Council Chamber."

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, after what has been said by my friends, the Hon'ble Maulvi Faz-ul-Huq and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, I think it is not necessary for me to add anything more to what I have already said in my previous speech. I appeal to your Excellency that something may be done for those boys, and I hope that the Council will accept my proposal by granting the necessary facilities."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council the issue of an order prohibiting the accommodation in solitary or separate cells of any political prisoner arrested or imprisoned under the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, or Bengal Regulation III of 1818.

He said :—

"The views of the Indian public on the question of solitary confinement of political prisoners in cells have been brought to the notice of the Government on numerous occasions in this Council in the shape of interpellations. I do not propose, therefore, to make a lengthy speech on this occasion. I shall only state my objections ad seriatim. I protest against confinement in solitary cells because it is illegal. I protest against solitary confinement because according to medical opinion it is injurious to health, inducing mental break-down. I protest against it because we learn from Major Arthur George Frederick Griffiths, His Majesty's Inspector of Prisons, that some advanced thinkers have denounced the institution of separate cells as the greatest crime of the present age. I protest against it because the history of solitary confinement in Bengal for the last three or four years has established beyond doubt that the inevitable effect of such confinement in most cases is not only mental break-down, but also insanity in some cases. I protest against it because cloistered seclusion is an artificial condition quite at variance with human instincts and habits. I protest against it because Bengal Regulation III of 1818 lays down that due attention should be paid to the health of every state prisoner confined under that Regulation. I protest against it because apart from the express provision of the Regulation, the principle cannot be disputed that every political prisoner is the ward of the State, and the State is bound in law and honour to take proper care of his health. I protest against it because in spite of our repeated requests the Government have not yet told us why and under what law political prisoners are confined in solitary cells. Some time ago I asked for information why Jyotish Chandra Ghose was confined in a solitary cell. This question was a part of a larger question consisting of several clauses. All the other parts were answered, but no information was vouchsafed on this point. The question was simply passed over without giving any answer or reason. I seriously complain against this sort of procedure. My question was admitted by Your Excellency and I had a right to get an answer. But I thought the omission might not after all be intentional, and might possibly be due to an oversight on the part of the Secretary. The withholding of the information confirmed the suspicion of the public that the solitary confinement of Jyotish was absolutely indefensible. But I was still anxious that the Government should not be condemned unheard. With that object in view I repeated my question in a subsequent meeting, thus giving the Government an opportunity to explain their position and take the public into their confidence. But, my Lord, on this occasion the question itself was disallowed. I appeal to Your Excellency to consider whether this procedure is calculated to allay the discontent which nobody can deny exists in the public mind. My Lord, the public are thus quite in the dark as to the grounds and circumstances under which political prisoners are confined in solitary cells. I maintain the public have a right to know why such an extreme measure should be adopted by the Government with respect to political prisoners who after all are not ordinary criminals.

My Lord, I insist on justice and fair treatment for these people."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, the resolution before the Council has reference to men falling under three categories : those who are detained under Regulation III of 1818, those who are arrested, and those who are imprisoned under the provisions of the Defence of India Act. In so far as the resolution touches upon men detained under Regulation III, these men are dealt with under the instruction and authority of the Government of India, who sign the warrants for their detention, and to that extent the question is somewhat outside the purview of the Council. But, in so far as it has been raised, and certain arguments have been used which have also a bearing on men to whom the provisions of the Defence of India Act have been applied, and in so far as complaints of the Government now adduced have been pertinent and relevant, we are glad enough to explain the facts in order to remove the suspicion and allay the suspicions which seem to weigh upon the minds of some of the Members."

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

"In the first place, I may so far lighten the discussion by stating that persons who are convicted of any offences under the Defence of India rules are treated like ordinary convicts. That, therefore, merely leaves those who are dealt with under Regulation III of 1818, and those who are under detention under the Defence of India Act pending enquiry.

"The use of the word 'cells' has been taken advantage of to conjure up pictures which are not consistent with the actual facts. From the criticisms occasionally made it might be inferred that the cell in an Indian prison is some evil dungeon into which people are thrown, to be cast aside, forgotten by man and cut off from all communication with the outer world. The cell in an Indian jail is not, however, of that character; as doubtless those who are visitors of jails have seen, cells are separate compartments, usually in a row, either facing a common yard or, in some cases, separate yards in the form of small enclosures attached to them. The reasons why men dealt with under Regulation III are placed in cells are mainly three: In the first place if they are not placed in these cells, they would be grouped with ordinary convicts, and against that course there would certainly be complaints, and reasonably so. Secondly, by placing these men in cells, it is possible to afford them more favourable personal treatment in certain respects than would otherwise be the case. I will explain later how in certain matters these men are given special treatment. Thirdly, in the interests of jail discipline, it is impossible to allow these men unrestricted association among themselves. Many of them are dangerous characters; if they are allowed unrestricted association there is every reason for believing that they will conspire against the discipline of the jail and get into communication with the outer world. We have had examples to that effect in the past. I need merely remind the Council of the earlier days of the seditious movement when, by reason of a certain amount of laxity in supervision, revolvers were smuggled into a jail and a gross murder was committed. Hon'ble Members have also probably seen what recently happened at the Hazaribagh Jail, where prisoners connected with the seditious movement overpowered their warders and escaped in considerable number. It is essential, therefore, that we should have regard to the maintenance of jail discipline by exercising such precautions as we may consider necessary.

"I will now deal with the allegation that these men are held in solitary confinement—a statement which is often made; I assert that it is not true, and my answer to the Hon'ble Member's long category of protests is that these men are not treated in solitary confinement. Solitary confinement is a definite and defined thing, and I may explain to the Council what it means under our rules. There are three categories of confinement which are popularly called solitary confinement, namely, solitary confinement proper, cellular confinement, and separate confinement. These are defined as follows in our Jail Code:—

'Solitary confinement' is confinement in a cell, with or without labour, so as to entirely seclude the prisoner both from the sight of, and communication with, other prisoners.

'Cellular confinement' is confinement in a cell, with or without labour, so as to entirely seclude the prisoners from communication with, but not from sight of, other prisoners.

'Separate confinement' is confinement in a cell, with or without labour, so as to seclude the prisoner whilst in his cell from communication with, but not from sight of, other prisoners.

"That, Sir, is the description of solitary confinement as known to the Jail Code, and I presume it is not to be inferred that we have applied to these men a form of torture which is unknown to the Code.

Resolutions.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

"The treatment meted out to these men is as the poles apart from these classes of confinement to which I have just referred, and I will indicate some of the leading points in the rules, which have the approval of the Government of India, regarding the treatment of these men. In the first place, the rules provide, among other things, for special furniture to be placed in the cells, including lanterns, beds, mosquito curtains and mats. These men are allowed to wear their own clothes, and friends may send them extra clothing and bedding. If they themselves are unable to supply sufficient clothing and bedding, the deficiency is made good by Government. They receive at the jail expense the food to which they are accustomed in their own station of life; the bhadralok class receive the same quality of rice as is used in the jail hospital. At the discretion of the Superintendent and under the usual restrictions as to examination, friends may send in extra provisions, and, if desired, a reasonable supply of cigarettes and tobacco is provided. They are allowed interviews with their relatives and friends, a special day being set apart for that purpose, and they are allowed to write one or two letters every week. They are not allowed to read newspapers, but recently (they have always been supplied with news of the war) we have allowed them to see the Illustrated Edition of "The Times of India." They are allowed books, both vernacular and English, from the jail library and outside. Special grants have been made to jail libraries in order that books may be provided, and when a desire is indicated to read any special book the Superintendent tries to get it. It is laid down in the rules that, so far as practicable, facilities may be given to obtain any books which they desire. So much as regards their life in the cells, and we now come to the more particular point of the alleged solitary nature of the confinement. Our present rules lay down that all political prisoners shall take exercise outside their cells for a period of at least one hour each morning and evening and during this time they may associate, under supervision, with one another. Apart from this daily exercise, and subject to the ordinary jail routine, they are also allowed to associate together outside their cells except for the period during which they are locked up for their midday sleep. If they wish it, they are allowed to have a course of physical drill, and they are permitted and encouraged to practise carpentry and any other useful work which enables them better to pass their time, while books of instruction, tools and materials, such as wood, etc., are provided for the purpose. I may mention that when I visited the Dacca Jail I came across a person there of an artistic temperament who was busy painting.

"These are the rules which govern the treatment of these men, and I maintain that in no sense can that treatment be described as solitary confinement, but apart from the rules, I may also refer Hon'ble Members to an account which we have had both from the Superintendents of the Presidency and Alipore Jails as to what was actually done with reference to these men, even prior to the most recent amendments which have still further relaxations. It is a living record of what they did, and I will touch upon it briefly. Soon after daylight, about at 5-30 they were unlocked and allowed to exercise separately; after that they had their chota hazri at 7-30 A.M., and then they were allowed to associate with one another, the worst class being placed under some degree of supervision and limited to half an hour, but the rest not; during this period they were allowed to play cards, badminton or take any other reasonable forms of exercise. After this period of association the worst class were allowed to exercise separately and sit outside their cells. They then had their breakfast. I have here details of the food that is given; they are allowed the privilege of cigarettes, fruits and other sweetmeats. At midday they retire to their cells, but in the afternoon, at 4-30, they were let out of their cells again and allowed similar association, after which they had their dinner and were finally locked up for the night.

Resolutions.

Rai Debendra Chandra Ghosh Bahadur ; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; The President.

The books of the Presidency Jail library number 482 volumes. Friends may send practically anything, such as clothing, biscuits, fruits, etc., subject to the Superintendent's approval. The special furniture provided for them includes mosquito curtains, table, chair and writing facilities. The account of the Alipore Jail is on similar lines and scarcely needs recapitulation.

"Sir, so long as it is necessary to deal with these men under Regulation III of 1818 and to place them in our jails, we cannot place them otherwise than in these cells, but to characterise that treatment as solitary confinement is, I submit, an absolute misrepresentation of the facts."

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDRA CHANDRA GHOSH BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, after hearing Sir Henry Wheeler, I do not wish to say anything on this resolution".

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR, said :—

"My Lord, I wish to speak on this subject as public mind is agitating over this matter as we read in the papers. Some time ago I put a question in this Council as to the necessity of appointing a visiting committee to examine the condition of the détenus. I was told in answer that under the orders of the Government of India the District Magistrate visits these persons. I had an idea in my mind that non-official gentlemen should be allowed to go to the cells or places where the détenus are confined. Now if this procedure were allowed there would have been less agitation. The people are of opinion that the health of these persons has been injured. It is a question of fact—some people say "no", some people say "yes". But the whole question may be decided if non-official gentlemen are allowed to examine political prisoners and then they will be in a position to understand whether the rumour that is spreading throughout the country is correct or not. In this view of the matter I beg to support the resolution".

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"After the statement of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, with reference to this resolution, I do not think I would be justified in speaking on it but at the same time I crave Your Excellency's permission to say a few words with reference to another matter altogether. My Lord, to-day is the last day that the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell sits on this Council—".

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Order, order. I think I had better explain here that the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem expressed to me a desire to give him an opportunity of saying a few words with regard to the departure of the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell to another province. I pointed out to the Hon'ble Member that without suspending the rules it would be difficult for me to do so and he suggested that he might be able to say a word or two in this connection upon one of the resolutions to be debated. I indicated or intended to indicate to him that I would not listen too strictly to what he said, but here he declares his intention of making a speech on an entirely different subject. I am afraid I cannot stretch the rule sufficiently wide for that. I supposed the Hon'ble Member in the course of his speech would say that he was quite sure that Government always did their best to treat the détenus well and that with Mr. Beatson Bell as a Member of that Government there could indeed be no doubt of it, or something of that kind. But as it is I am afraid I cannot stretch the rule so wide as the Hon'ble Member requires"

Resolutions.Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

" My Lord, I am not speaking of Mr. Beatson Bell whom we ought to bid a respectful farewell as we are now living in solitary cells, but we may have occasion to do so after this item is finished. I have listened with great interest to the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. Whenever a lucid and clear explanation is given which satisfies the most inquisitive amongst us we are the first to come forward and thank the Government or the Member of the Government who gives us an opportunity of doing so. I thank Sir Henry Wheeler for the very lucid and interesting statement that he has made and the information he has given.

My Lord, he has quoted some of the jail rules and I am sure that when he himself visited some of the jails he found that these rules were being observed, but, my Lord, there is a widely different public feeling outside the Members of your Government and amongst the non-official visitors of the jails. When some of these visitors (I have been honoured with an appointment) expressed their desire to look into the condition of some of these political prisoners under the Defence of India Act they were told that it was not their function to do so and they are simply to look into the condition of the ordinary criminals. They had naturally to turn their steps in another direction. My Lord, I accept unhesitatingly the information given by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, but as the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur has said it would be much more gratifying to our community and to the people concerned if the non-official visitors were allowed the same opportunity of judging the condition of these prisoners and of seeing how they are treated there.

I think, my Lord, in this respect some orders may be issued to the jail authorities. I have seen some cells in the jails provided with tolerably good furniture where, as far as I could see, Anglo-Indian and Chinese prisoners, were placed, but I have not seen the cells where political prisoners or prisoners under the Defence of India Act are placed and therefore cannot say anything about them. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has visited some of these cells and we must accept his statement. I hope that some steps may be taken to give a larger opportunity to my countrymen to see the condition of these prisoners in jail."

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA said :—

" My Lord, I have learnt with great pleasure that rules on the subject by themselves are nothing but desirable, but at the same time allow me kindly to say this, that if I have been able to follow the reply of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler I do not think he has said anything with respect to that portion of my speech in which I said that as a matter of fact solitary confinement of the political prisoners have led in many cases to mental break-down and in some cases to actual insanity. I may take it that is a suggestion which it was not intended to be rebutted. If that is so, the rules, however good in themselves, can serve no useful purpose whatsoever. It is not the first time that I have made the allegation in this Council : the allegation has been made, if I remember aright, for more than a year in the press and if in spite of that representation and if in spite of the allegation that I made in my initial speech there is nothing to be said on behalf of Government, my submission is that the rules, however good they may be, cannot bring salvation. I am inclined to place very much value upon the excellence of the rules only if it is a fact that my complaint is based upon a mere misrepresentation and there is no such thing as solitary confinement in solitary cells of political prisoners. If that is so and if that is true then, my Lord, my submission is that I do not see why there should be any objection on the part of Government in accepting at all events that portion of my resolution which runs like this: "This Council recommends to the Governor in Council to issue an order prohibiting accommodation in solitary cells." I am deleting only these two expressions "solitary cells." Then so far as my resolution relates to solitary cells that may be accepted by the Government rejecting that portion which refers to "separate cells." If this is accepted by Government I am quite prepared to withdraw my resolution with respect to separate cells."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, I did not follow clearly part of the Hon'ble Member's remarks, but he seemed to contend that the statements, which he claims to have repeatedly made in this Council, that the mental condition of these men has been affected by the solitary nature of their confinement, have not been challenged and that he may therefore take it that these statements are correct and un rebutted; I can only point out that I have been endeavouring, for the last ten minutes or so, to explain that these men are not subjected to solitary confinement at all, and that whatever unfortunate results to their health may have happened, they cannot be attributed to that cause.

"As regards the suggested amendment of this resolution, I object, and I object on principle. A resolution is debated as it is framed, and to amend it after discussion is merely calculated to lead to misunderstanding as to what was, or was not, the attitude of Government. I have already stated that so long as these men are in our jails, they must be put in cells and that cannot be avoided; I am not prepared to accept any modification of the resolution which might afterwards be construed as an assurance that these men would not be placed in cells. Our contention is that they are not placed in solitary confinement in the ordinary acceptance of the term."

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Medical Board be appointed consisting of officials and non-officials—

- (a) to examine Babu Jyotish Chandra Ghosh who is now under detention under Bengal Regulation III of 1818 in the Berham-pore Lunatic Asylum;
- (b) to ascertain whether he is insane;
- (c) if he is found to be insane, to investigate into the causes of his insanity;
- (d) to submit a report about the present condition of his health; and
- (e) if necessary, to consider what steps should be taken for his treatment.

He said :—

"My Lord, there has been considerable discussion about this matter in the press which for the sake of argument, let me say, may be based upon absolute misrepresentation. But at the same time I do submit that in view of the persistent and prolonged character of that misrepresentation it is desirable in the interest of the Government, that it should be removed and that very useful purpose will be served by the Board which I have recommended in this resolution. The appointment of that Board will not do any injury to anybody. Their report may be bad or indifferent. And even if it is a bad report it will not bind the Government in any way. The personnel of the Board will be in the hands of the Government. But if a Committee is appointed it will show that Government is willing to conciliate public opinion so far as this particular matter is concerned. Therefore I hope Your Excellency's Government will see their way to accept this resolution.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, in so far as this particular individual is being dealt with under Regulation III of 1818, the remarks which I made in connection with the previous resolution as regards the proper place for its discussion, are applicable, but for somewhat similar reasons, and especially having regard to the publicity which has been given to this case and the criticisms which have been made about it, we are glad to have this opportunity to explain here what the facts are.

"The first point, which I would like to make clear, is that, although this man is actually at this moment detained under Regulation III of 1818, it is merely on account of his health that he has not been placed on his trial for serious and grave offences. His prosecution for the grave offence of waging war against the British Crown and certain other cognate sections had been actually sanctioned in May last. The court which would have tried him had been constituted, and he would have been put on his trial had it not been for the fact that a mental breakdown supervened and he was certified by our medical officers as unfit to stand his trial. I think that this fact is little known to the outside world, when we are accused of having kept this man in jail without bringing any charges against him; the facts are that he is in a position more akin to that of an under-trial prisoner.

"The general tenor of the statements and criticisms which have been made about this case—I am not particularly referring to what has been said in this Council, but to what we frequently read in the newspapers—is that it is owing mainly to the harsh and brutal treatment to which this man has been subjected that his mind is giving way, and that Government have dealt with his case callously and brutally. I hope to be able to show that this is not true.

"Ever since the mental condition of this man gave cause for anxiety, it has been carefully examined both by this Local Government and the Government of India, and I have here a bulky file of reports which have been submitted to the Government of India on this case. His mental state first gave cause for anxiety while he was in the Rajshahi Jail, and another prisoner was told off to keep him company. Early in April, Major Peebles, who is our recognised expert on mental diseases, was specially sent from the Berhampur Lunatic Asylum to examine the case. Orders were similarly issued by the Government of India at that time that the man should be given any amenities which could be safely allowed and which were likely to conduce to the restoration of his health. On the 6th March, at a time when he was merely suffering from melancholia and hallucination, the District Magistrate of Rajshahi definitely reported that he had no complaint to make about his treatment. That was when he was in the Rajshahi Jail. Subsequent to the visit of Major Peebles, he was transferred to the Berhampur Jail in order that Major Peebles might exercise constant supervision over him. That was in the beginning of May, and there again another prisoner was told off to keep him company. In June, we sent Col. Deare, who is one of the leading physicians of Calcutta, specially to see this man in consultation with Major Peebles. In August, after this man had been seen several times by Lieutenant-Colonel Buchanan, who although visiting the jail in his capacity as

Inspector General of Prisons, is, as we all know, a medical man, he was transferred to the Berhampur Lunatic Asylum, on Lieutenant-Colonel Buchanan's advice that he would be better treated in the asylum than was possible in the jail. Subsequent to that, Major Peebles was transferred to the Lunatic Asylum at Ranchi and Major Moses came to Berhampur. Early this year we again sent up Captain Hume, attached to the Presidency General Hospital, to examine the case in consultation with Major Moses. Therefore, ever since February last, we have had constant and repeated examinations of this man by the best medical opinion available, and Government have kept in a constant touch with the various stages through which his case has passed. However, we have done more than this. Some time before we had notice of this resolution we decided to address the mother of the man to the effect that if it would tend to satisfy her apprehensions to call in a non-official medical man of her own choice, we would give him all facilities. She has since nominated Dr. Mrigendra Lal Mitra of this city and we have addressed him asking whether he is willing to go. If he is willing to do so, we shall constitute another Board probably consisting of him, Major Peebles, Captain Hume and Major Moses who is in charge of the case. We shall therefore again receive their opinion, and on its receipt we shall give it our full and careful attention in consultation with the Government of India. As has been previously stated in this Council, the substance of the reports that have been received at one time or another is to the effect that, whatever may be the case now, there are reasons for believing that this man began probably by malingering and feigning insanity ; but it was pointed out even at that time that it was possible that he would induce a state of real insanity. Whether this has occurred or not, it is now for the Medical Board to say, but it is a question whether a state of melancholic stupor may not now have intervened. However, we shall have this further Board and we shall see what their opinion is.

"These, Sir, are the facts. If it is understood that what is being done covers what is intended by the resolution, I have no objection to allow the resolution to go as accepted, since it merely suggests steps which have been already taken."

THE HON'BLE RAI DEBENDRA CHANDRA GHOSH BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I do not wish to weary the Council by saying anything further. I am gratified to hear that Government is prepared, as I gather, to accept the resolution."

THE HON'BLE BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA said :—

"My Lord, as far as I have been able to follow the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, he practically accepts my recommendations. In view of this decision I have only to express my gratefulness to him and I have nothing more to add."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

The Council was then adjourned to 11 A.M., on Thursday, the 4th April, 1918, at Government House, Calcutta.

Questions and Answers.

(b) Is it a fact that the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Southern District, Calcutta, hears the reports of all police cases in his report room at Fenwick Bazar to which the public are admitted?

(c) Is it a fact that the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Northern District, Calcutta, hears the reports of all police cases in his report room at Jorabagan to which the public are not admitted? If so, why?

(d) Is it a fact that the pleaders appearing for parties are sometimes admitted and sometimes not admitted into the report room of the Deputy Commissioner, Northern District?

(e) Is it also a fact that the pleaders and other people are not provided with seats either inside or outside of the Deputy Commissioner's report room at Jorabagan, and that they have to wait for hours in crowded corridors before they can gain admission to the report room?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"The public and pleaders appearing for the parties are ordinarily admitted while reports are being heard, but the hearing of reports is not a judicial proceeding, and the public and members of the legal profession have no claim to admittance as of right. This practice was followed when reports were heard by the Commissioner personally, and is continued now that they are heard by the Deputy Commissioners. There is no difference between the practice in the Northern and Southern Districts, but in the Northern District, the report room is so small that only a limited number of the public can be admitted at one time. Seats are provided in the report room, and the Bar Library and Counsels' waiting-room is only five yards away."

The case of Raj
Lakhi Dasi.

(a) Is it a fact that Mr. D. S. Maclure, Deputy Commissioner of Police, Northern Districts, Calcutta, ordered the detention of a girl named Raj Lakhi Dasi in the "Refuge" in Bow Bazar Street, Calcutta, in November last?

(b) If so, under what provision of law was she ordered to be so detained?

(c) Is it a fact that a Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta has legal authority to order the detention of any person in a "Refuge"? If so, what is that authority?

(d) Is it a fact that the girl Raj Lakhi was not charged with any offence before she was ordered to be detained in the "Refuge"?

(e) Is it a fact that a Deputy Commissioner of Police can only order the detention of offenders with a view to their being brought before a Presidency Magistrate?

(f) Are the Government considering the desirability of having the girl immediately released from detention?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"The facts of the case are as follows :—

The girl Raj Lakhi Dasi, who is about 13 years of age, was kept as a prostitute in a common brothel by a woman who claimed to be her mother. The girl states that she ran away from the brothel on account of the woman's ill-treatment and fell into the hands of certain Jews from whom she was rescued by the police. As the girl expressed her unwillingness to return to her alleged mother, the Deputy Commissioner arranged for her to be received at the "Refuge" in Bow Bazar. The woman thereupon filed a complaint under sections 341 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code and under section 13 C (c) of the Calcutta Police Act against the Deputy Commissioner and the Superintendent of the "Refuge." The Second Presidency Magistrate caused the girl to be produced before him; and then dismissed the complaint under section 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. An application was filed in the High Court for the revision of the Magistrate's order, but the High Court refused the application. In these circumstances, Government do not propose to interfere in the matter."

(a) Is it a fact that certain Departments of the Bengal Secretariat remained open on the 11th March, 1918, Sivaratri day, an important Hindu festival? Holidays in the Bengal Secretariat.

(b) Is it a fact that Sivaratri day is considered a local holiday?

(c) Are the Government aware that representations were made by the Hindu assistants to observe the day, but to no effect, and that even a half-holiday was not given to them?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state which Departments were kept open on that day?

(e) Are the Government aware that the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell from his seat in Council declared on the 4th September, 1916, that such holidays can be given to clerks on religious grounds?

(f) Are the Government considering the desirability of making an inquiry as to why this principle was not adhered to in these particular cases?

(g) Is it also a fact that Hindu holidays are not always given to Hindu assistants? If so, are the Government considering the desirability of issuing instructions for the closer observance of these days in future?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

" (a) Yes.

(b) It is a local holiday in most districts of the province.

(c) In certain Departments no representation was made. In others a request was submitted for a half-holiday, as in previous years, and it was granted in all cases, except in the Legislative Department, where there was a heavy rush of work for the Legislative Council.

(d) All Departments except the Public Works Department.

(e) and (f) The Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell, in his remarks on the 4th September, 1916, referred only to holidays announced by Local Governments and not to local holidays. Local holidays are not announced by the Local Government and are given at the discretion of local officers. Clerks in the Secretariat are allowed a full, or half, holiday on the occasion of the Sivaratri day, subject to the exigencies of urgent work, and this principle was followed this year.

(g) Hindu assistants are permitted to avail themselves of Hindu holidays in exceptional cases when there is urgent work to be done. It is suggested that weight should be given to the latter consideration."

By the Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM :—

I.

Conduct of a head-constable of police at Bakarganj.

(a) Are the Government aware that the head-constable of thana Muladi in the district of Bakarganj recently removed a notice in Bengali inviting subscriptions for the help and support of the Muhammadan internees and their families, which was posted on a board, and hung up at a hât in village Gachina?

(b) Is it a fact that the said head-constable told the people that the movement was anti-Government?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) From enquiries which have been made, it appears that the head-constable, who had been deputed to Kalika hât on the 7th February to keep order and to prevent hât-looting, found a man carrying a notice-board and beating a drum to attract the attention of the public. On the notice-board were notices in Bengali and Persian inviting subscriptions to be used to obtain the release of certain Muhammadan détenus. The man who was carrying the notice said that he was unaware of its contents and that he had been ordered by his master to display it in the hât. In view of recent disturbances at hâts, the head-constable thought it undesirable that any such demonstration should take place. He accordingly took away the notice-board and directed the man not to beat the drum.

(a) Are the Government aware that the inhabitants of Kabarikola, and nearly 20 adjacent villages under the police-station Dulai, in the district of Pabna, have, for many years, been in the grip of malaria and cholera due to the stoppage of drainage of a number of big bhils, which together form a vast sheet of water extending over 2,000 bighas of land in the said locality?

(b) Is it a fact that in November, 1898, the people of the aforesaid locality submitted a petition to the then Collector of Pabna stating their grievances and praying for the construction of a khal for the purpose of draining off the excess water of the bhils into the Atrai?

(d) Is it a fact that since then no further action has been taken in the matter, although later Collectors of Pabna admitted the urgent necessity thereof, and supported the scheme of the construction of a khal to drain off the excess water of the aforesaid bhils?

"(a) Government have no information.

(b) It appears from inquiries made from the Collector that a petition on the subject was submitted to his predecessor in office in 1898.

"(c) The District Board records show that a sum of Rs. 75 was deposited by the petitioners for preparing a plan and estimate for the scheme. A preliminary survey appears to have been made under the supervision of the District Engineer, but the plan and estimate then prepared cannot be traced.

(d) No further action was taken until the submission of a petition on the subject on the 15th January, 1918, which is now under inquiry. There is nothing in the records of the Pabna Collectorate to show that successive Collectors of Pabna held the opinion attributed to them."

*The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.*THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA moved for leave to introduce a Bill to extend Village Self-Government in Bengal.

He said :—

"The introduction of the Bill I now lay before this Council marks a most important advance in local self-government in this Presidency.

To some of us, whose minds are engrossed with speculations on self-government in a wider sphere, this event may seem of small significance, but for my part, I am convinced that this attempt to make the villager a vital link in our system of Government is an experiment of supreme importance and fraught with the promise of most beneficial and far-reaching results.

It is because of this belief that I desire, before discussing the provisions of the Village Self-Government Bill, to sketch briefly the genesis and development of its underlying principles, to touch on the evils it is designed to cure, and to suggest the promise of progress, which it bears within it.

Many competent observers have deplored the ever-increasing gap which separates the Government of Bengal from the village population, forming some 90 per cent. of the people over which it rules, and few will differ from the dictum of Sir George Campbell that "the task of really governing India down to the villages and the people is too great for the British Government."

The stir of ideas in England in the Seventies which led to an elaborate overhauling of the system and machinery of local government did not pass unnoticed in India, and it was not strange that Sir George Campbell's penetrating judgment led him to regard the resuscitation of local authorities or institutions as the only feasible means for making good those gaps and defects in the administration, which were so patent to his fresh and vigorous mind.

The ancient institution of village watchmen had fallen greatly into decadence and the new system of village police, which the Chankidari Act of 1870 had introduced, had not yet proved itself. The Lieutenant-Governor had again been "repeatedly struck by the great want of drinking water in many Bengal villages and by the efforts of the people to obtain it and by their not unfrequently expressed readiness to contribute to its cost."

It was in 1870 also that the English legislature recognized the obligation on the State to provide elementary education and Sir George Campbell was of opinion that "many villages might be willing to co-operate with Government to re-establish that ancient indigenous institution of Hindu villages, the guru or village schoolmaster." The necessity of taking measures for the better sanitation of villages was also recognized by him.

With the more advanced system of local self-government in towns, which already existed in 1870 and which Sir George Campbell desired to elaborate and extend, it is unnecessary for me to deal; we are now concerned with a measure designed, as I have already stated, to bring the villager into the system of Government. I need hardly point out that the division of the labour of administration between the State and local authorities is not a clean-cut or uniform division; it varies in important matters in different countries. But the history of communal institutions in India very clearly points to two spheres of activity, in which the use of local authorities seems essential to efficiency and progress—I refer to the village watch and ward and to the exercise of municipal functions in rural areas.

The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha.

I will deal first with the village watch and ward, and I trust that I shall succeed in commending to your approval the changes contemplated by this Bill. The maintenance of the ancient village watch rarely ceased during the last century to be an object of solicitude to the Government of Bengal.

Lord Hastings in 1815 described it as "the foundation of all possible police in this country." Sir Thomas Munro in 1824 protested strongly against its absorption into the regular police system, and the Police Commission of 1902-03 declared that it was necessary to Government, and also necessary from the point of view of the people. The Village Chaukidari Act (VI of 1870) re-affirmed the principle which previous Acts had embodied. What I may term the "municipalisation" of the village police, i.e., its recognition as a village institution, supported by and responsible to the village community.

The "Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Chaukidari Act" declares that "the provisions of the Bill, while maintaining the responsibility of all landlords to report crime, are based upon principles which have been recognised as applicable to these Provinces: first, that it is just and expedient that the people at large should pay for their own protection; and, secondly, that it is the duty and policy of the Government to leave as much as possible of the business of the country to be done by the people themselves."

The panchayet were empowered to fix the number and the wages of the watchmen, they assessed and collected the necessary funds, and they had power to appoint and dismiss watchmen. The Act did not prove a success; the villagers were reluctant to serve on the panchayet and their assessments were often inequitable. How far the unpopularity of a panchayeti work was due to the growing interference of the police and how far such interference was necessary in the interests of efficiency, we need not consider, but Act I (B.C.) of 1886 tended to discountenance the village municipal system, while Act I (B.C.) of 1892 transferred to the Magistrate the power of fixing the number and salary of the chaukidars and what was more important the power of appointing, dismissing and punishing them.

"The municipal theory, however," in the words of the District Administration Committee's report, "although for the most part ignored, has never been abandoned," and the President system introduced in 1905 "was designed with the object of freeing the panchayets from police influence and of emphasising the essential character of the chaukidar as a village servant, while leaving him subject to the control of the Magistrate and the police in regard to his police duties."

Some officers have since advocated the complete departmentalization of the chaukidar, with the corollary that he should be paid from provincial revenues and the proceeds of the present chaukidari tax diverted to purely village purposes.

This proposal, however attractive, is not financially possible, and the evolution of the village watch in other provinces, where the communal principle has real vitality, suggests that it is still possible and advantageous to retain in Bengal a close association and inter-dependence between the village community and the village watch.

The salient feature of the present Bill is the combination or amalgamation of the panchayet and the Union Committee. If we succeed in breathing life into the village communal authority, we may confidently anticipate that the intimate local knowledge which this authority will possess will render the rural police a more efficient power for the detection and prevention of crime than is at present the case.

The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha.

I come now to the exercise of municipal functions in rural areas. I confess I feel a sense of disappointment with the exiguous results in rural sanitation which the last 50 years has produced in Bengal. There has been no want of anxious thought and earnest endeavour on the part of Government; the problem has been clearly visualized for many years, its paramount importance freely acknowledged and remedies suggested and carefully discussed. Money or rather the want of it has been the great stumbling block.

As Sir George Campbell pointed out in 1871, there was some inequality in the provincial assignments made under Lord Mayo's scheme of financial decentralization. But apart from that there were already at that time, in every other province, large revenues raised for local purposes; heavy cesses in addition to the land revenue being levied on the land for local roads, local police and popular education.

In Bengal, the funds raised locally for roads and bridges were confined to the receipts from tolls on roads, ferries and canals. Local funds have since grown—the District Board revenues and the income of municipalities—but the improvement of rural areas is still blocked by a want of funds. In strong contrast is the system in Madras, where in 1913-14, 393 Union Panchayets spent nearly 9½ lakhs of rupees, of which only Rs. 64,000 came in grants from the District and Taluk Boards. Over 7½ lakhs was raised by the house-tax; and over Rs. 6 lakhs were expended on conservancy, street lighting and sanitary measures.

Now we have nothing like that in Bengal; thus in 1912-13, 61 Union Committees were able to raise only about Rs. 3,600 by local taxation. Nevertheless, there is proof of the growing sense of the Union Committees' power for good in the fact that in 1916-17, 67 Committees raised Rs. 39,801 by local taxation.

The financial problem has always in Bengal barred the path to progress; but if Bengal is to become "civilized" in the modern sense, if the ordinary amenities of life are to be available to all—I will go further, if the evils which menace health and life itself are to be overcome—we must by some means or other surmount the financial difficulties, which have always hemmed us in. On the need of rural sanitation I need say little. The Imperial Gazetteer of India (Volume IV. page 468) does not exaggerate when it describes the general sanitary condition of Indian villages in the following words:—

"The village house is still often ill-ventilated and over-populated; the village site dirty, crowded with cattle, choked with rank vegetation, and poisoned by stagnant pools; and the village tanks polluted and used indiscriminately for bathing, cooking and drinking."

We have our Sanitary Commissioner, whose post was created with the best intentions and high hopes in 1864, but unless we can give him an agency to carry out reforms, his expert advice must lose half its value. Government may frame model rules of village hygiene, but in the absence of machinery,—a large executive agency—they remain a dead letter. This problem can only be attacked, if we organize the people, and they can only be organized for public work by the will and with the sympathetic encouragement of Government.

As Mr. Carstairs, who took great interest in local self-government, said some years ago (and his dictum is perhaps still true), "Without the people the Government can do nothing; without the Government the people will do nothing." No one will contend that Government can administer the innumerable villages of Bengal in all the details of their internal economy except with the help of the people themselves, and those who are conversant with the history of Union Committees in the last 10 years will agree with the District Administration Committee that for several years to come the success of representative village institutions must depend in some measure on the sympathetic guidance they receive from Government officers.

I have indicated two directions in which the co-operation of the village community is required for the amelioration of the conditions under which it lives. But there is yet a third branch of administration, in which we believe that the rural population can, with advantage to itself and to Government, participate more actively in the management of its own affairs.

I refer to the administration of justice. I realise that it is this portion of the Bill which lends itself most readily to criticism, and I look forward eagerly to helpful constructive criticism enabling us to simplify the procedure and popularise the administration of justice in rural areas.

At this stage I shall content myself with a few general observations indicating the motives which have influenced Government in its decision to revive the old village Courts.

The Council is aware that the Decentralization Commission recommended that panchayets should be given civil and criminal jurisdiction in petty cases arising within the village; the Indian Police Commission of 1902-03 had made a similar suggestion in respect of petty criminal cases; and village Courts created by the legislature have for many years been in active operation in other provinces. Now we are well aware that the present system of justice is not an ideal one from the point of view of the villager. In his petty civil disputes, the proceedings are usually costly, slow and harassing. In criminal cases, the tribunals are often too remote, remands are frequent and the production of witnesses a costly and troublesome business. But the Decentralization Commission did not intend that the village Courts should merely afford relief to the regular tribunals or give petty litigants the opportunity of settling their disputes by a simple and inexpensive procedure near their homes; the main purpose of these Courts is in the words of the District Administration Committee to be "educative to develop the sense of communal responsibility within the Union, and to teach the people to manage the affairs of their own villages. At the same time it was hoped that the creation of these village Courts would enhance the influence of the panchayets and strengthen and encourage them in the performance of their other duties, thus gradually paving the way to the exercise by them of higher powers."

And here let me state more generally that, in the experiment which I am describing to you to-day, Government is influenced by two main motives, of which one derives from self-interest, while the other may be termed altruistic.

As I have already suggested, the administration of Bengal, so to speak down to the ground, is too great a task for any centralized Government, and the co-operation of the people is essential for advance.

But if I were not convinced that there was another mainspring to this legislation, I should feel at any rate less pleasure and confidence in introducing the Bill than is now the case.

What we hope is that this experiment will give free play to a new motive power in Bengal—the interest and influence of the rural population in, and on, the management of their own affairs. If we can evoke that interest and engage that influence in the system of Government, I believe we may tap enormous reserves of energy, common-sense and natural shrewdness, and lay well and truly a foundation on which the superstructure of the future may securely rest.

The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha.

But I have dealt at sufficient length with the underlying principles of the Bill and before turning to its provisions, I wish briefly to sketch the history of Union Committees in this Presidency since 1885.

It is an open secret that the Local Self-Government Act of 1885 as first drafted, in accordance with Lord Ripon's memorable resolution of 1882, contemplated the creation of a net-work of Union Committees throughout Bengal as the basis of local self-government. They were to be the successors of the old simple type of petty municipality, known as Municipal Unions of which there were 54 in Bengal, when this type of local authority was abolished by the Bengal Municipal Act of 1884. By way of anticipation, Mr. Westmacott was placed in 1883 on special duty to prepare the way for the introduction of the new law, and he actually formed 180 unions in 7 subdivisions of the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions and in the subdivision of Munshiganj in Dacca.

Local Boards ordinarily conterminous with the subdivision were to control the Union Committees, which were to be elected by the villagers themselves, and to be entrusted with the management of primary schools and pounds within the Union and of its roads, water-supply and village conservancy.

Above the Local Boards, with general powers of control but not of administration, was to be the Central Board—a paid body sitting in Calcutta somewhat resembling the Local Government Board in England.

In this scheme, there was no place for the District Board. But the Bill as finally framed entirely transformed this scheme of local self-government.

The District Board replaced the Central Board, but became the real unit of administration instead of a Committee of Control; the Local Board became the mere dependant of the District Board, subsisting by its charity, while the Union Committees—in the words of the District Administration Committee—became “merely optical appendages of the superior bodies.”

In fact local self-government was begun at the top instead of from the bottom.

As we all know the District Boards became fairly efficient bodies, but the Local Boards starved and suffered from anæmia and Union Committees were still-born. In 1904, there were 58 such Committees, disposing of Rs. 18,000; they had raised only Rs. 339 by local contributions since the date of their creation.

Act V of 1908 made some important amendments in the Local Self-Government Act of 1885; but little use was made of these enlarged powers.

In the last few years an effort has been made to vitalize these bodies, with, I am glad to say, some considerable success.

In 1916-17 there were 156 Union Committees, which last year spent Rs. 1½ lakhs, including about Rs. ½ lakh raised by local taxation. At the end of 1917 there were 198 Unions. There are exceptions, but on the whole these Committees are showing that practical good sense and closeness to the life of the people, which gave the ancient village communal institutions their vital force and their authority.

In connection with the recent advance made by Union Committees, I may refer to the fact that much useful spade-work has been done in preparing the way for their fusion with chaukidari panchayats.

• The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.

Sir S. P. Sinha.

New Union Committees have been given a jurisdiction co-extensive with that of chaukidari unions, and so far as practicable, the personnel of the chaukidari panchayet and the Union Committee has been made identical. There is no reason to anticipate any friction or difficulty in developing the existing Union Committees into the Village Committees to be constituted under the Bill.

• The object of the Bill is to build up a system of self-government from the bottom by the creation of village authorities, vested with the powers and duties necessary for the management of communal village affairs and entrusted with powers of self-taxation necessary for the purpose.

The new Village Committee, as the village authority will be called, will be constituted on an election basis, not less than two-thirds of the members being elected. It will elect its own Chairman, will exercise a general control over the dafadars and chaukidars of the village, and will be vested with power to provide for village sanitation, conservancy and drainage, to deal with the erection of buildings, water-supply, village roads and bridges and to manage primary schools and dispensaries. It is also proposed to give power to Government to confer jurisdiction in petty civil and criminal matters on all or any members of the Village Committee, the tribunals which it may constitute for the trial of criminal cases being designated Village Benches and those constituted for the trial of civil suits Village Courts. The Committee will be grouped in Circles under Circle Boards. The chief work of the Circle Board will be to superintend the working of the Village Committees in the Circle and, subject to the direction of the District Board, to distribute any general grants made to them by that body. It may further, at the request of the District Board, supervise the management of any institution and the execution of any work or the performance of any duty entrusted by the District Board to any Village Committee within its circle. On the constitution of Village Committee and Circle Boards in any district the existing chaukidari panchayets, Union Committees and Local Boards established under the Bengal Chaukidari and Local Self-Government Acts will be abolished.

I may state that it is intended that the new system should be introduced gradually in districts where the Circle System has been introduced and Circle Officers are available to assist the Village Committees. The number of Circle Officers is at present limited, but, as I recently informed the Council, it is hoped to increase it very largely, so that we may have Circle Officers in every district. The Committees will, as proposed by the District Administration Committees, be grouped in Circles under Circle Boards, on which they will be represented. The chief work of the Circle Boards will consist in supervising their operations and co-ordinating their plans, and in seeing that different Village Committees have fair treatment in the distribution of grants given by the District Board to a Circle. The Circle Boards will form an important electoral agency for the District Boards, and the basis of the elective system will be broadened, as the Local Board constituted for each subdivision will be replaced by a number of Circle Boards constituted for different parts of the subdivision.

It is, I think, unnecessary for me to refer in much detail to the clauses of the Bill which are clearly summarised in the statement placed in the hands of Hon'ble Members.

I may refer first to the definition of "village," which will actually be a group of villages, united under one jurisdiction and coinciding with the chaukidari union. Not less than two-thirds of the 6 to 9 members, of which the Village Committee will consist, is to be elected, subject to the District Magistrate's approval. The municipal powers of the Committee will correspond generally with those already vested in Union Committees, but are somewhat wider in their scope.

The Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918.Sir S. P. Sinha.

In reproducing the relevant sections of the Cha~~uk~~kidari Act, the opportunity has been taken to eliminate some unpopular provisions, in particular the personal responsibility of the members of the panchayat for the salary of the chaukidars.

In addition to grants made by the District Boards, the Committee will administer the village rate reserved for the execution of works and the compulsory chaukidari tax, of which a portion can be devoted to the pay and equipment of the dafadars and chaukidars and to the salary of a Secretary and also to the execution of works of public utility.

The Committee will fix its assessment according to circumstances and property, but subject to revision by the District Magistrate.

The provisions regulating the exercise of judicial powers by the Committee will be permissive and the ordinary courts will have concurrent jurisdiction.

It will be possible to constitute individual members as a village tribunal for the trial either of petty civil or of petty criminal cases or both, or if experience shows that the whole Village Committee may safely be entrusted with such powers, they may all serve on the tribunal.

In the case of civil jurisdiction, moreover, it is proposed that the Local Government should have power to confer judicial powers by instalments, so that the Village Courts may begin by trying the simplest kinds of suits, their jurisdiction being extended according to the measure of success obtained. As recommended by the Decentralization Commission, the procedure will be simple; parties will generally appear in person, legal practitioners being debarred from appearing for clients; appeals will not be allowed, but in the case of criminal trials the Subdivisional Magistrate or the District Magistrate, where there is no Subdivisional Magistrate, and in the case of civil suits the District Judge may order a retrial if there is a serious failure of justice.

The primary function of the Circle Board will be to superintend the work of the Village Committees and subject to the direction of the District Board to distribute any general grants made by that body. It is important to remember that it will be a supervising and in no sense an executive agency, like the present Local Boards. The Circle Board will consist of 15 members, of whom 10 are to be elected and five appointed by the Commissioner and a Chairman will be elected by the members from among their number.

The Bill gives the Divisional Commissioner specific powers of control over the Circle Boards and the District Magistrate will occupy a similar position as regards the Village Committees.

These officers may, e.g. provide for the performance of duties in which the local bodies may make default, and may supersede them in case of incompetency or wilful neglect. They may also suspend the execution of orders and resolutions, and the District Magistrate may in cases of emergency provide for the execution of works required for the public service or safety.

The Bill will now be published and circulated for criticism. I have already said that Government welcomes constructive criticism. Let there be no suspicion that there is in any quarter any desire to thwart the beneficent intentions of Government to foster and develop local self-government. Both efficiency and economy demand that the municipal functions of Government should be performed by the people themselves and that this is the only means of making the people self-reliant, public spirited and imbued with the highest sense of civic responsibility. I have the fullest confidence in the capacity of the Indian peasant. In the words of Sir H. Risley, the Indian peasant is no fool. He has his limitation like his class all over the world, but within the range of his knowledge and within the compass of his own village he is just as shrewd a person as one could wish to meet. Comparing him with the English rustic of the countries, he was much inclined to think that the Indian was the sharper of the two.

The want of funds, hitherto such a formidable obstacle in the way of rural progress, has to a great extent been mitigated by the surrender of the Public Works Cess to the District Boards. The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Ray considers these 29 lakhs sufficient for water-supply, village sanitation and for the purpose of combating malaria. In any case, the people are increasingly willing to tax themselves, if they know how the money is spent.

The future is full of hope and promise, but if local self-government is to be a success, it will only be by the consistent co-operation of the Government and the people. Let us determine that it shall be a success, and I am sure it will be so.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.DISCUSSION OF THE BUDGET OF THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL FOR 1918-19.

The Hon'ble NAWAB BAHADUR OF MURSHIDABAD said:—

"MY LORD, I shall content myself with a brief review of the present Budget, which affords neither provocation nor excuse for lengthy observations. In fact, I would be right in anticipating that the Finance Member will be the recipient of a chorus of congratulations for the manner in which he has husbanded the resources during a period of extreme difficulty.

"So far as the Province is concerned, the Finance Member has been loyally anxious to obey the mandate of the Government of India to keep the provincial expenditure within the limits of the income of the year, and that policy has been so sedulously pursued by him that the results even in times of peace would be regarded as remarkably satisfactory.

"In nearly every case, the conditions reveal a state of prosperity and advancement that are extremely encouraging for the future. The receipts have exceeded our expectations. The revenue has shown considerable expansion, particularly under Excise and Income-tax, which together account for a decent increase of 25 lakhs and 50 thousands. So large an excess may, of course, mean an under-estimate of the revenue of the last year's Budget, but there is every apology for conservative anticipations at a time like this. The framing of the estimate under the head of Income-tax receipts, which show unusual increase owing mainly to the unprecedented prosperity in the jute-trade, is very difficult, we are told, in view of the varied effects of war on trade.

"There has been also a notable increase under 'Forests,' 'Courts of Law,' 'Jails' and 'Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments.' The last two heads have been swelled by larger supplies to the Military and other departments. The stamp revenue, on the other hand, shows a decrease of about 11 lakhs. I doubt very much whether this fall in 'Stamps' can mean any improvement in the litigious propensity of the public. On the expenditure side there is a saving of over 25 lakhs and a-half chiefly under 'Police' and 'Education.' The net result of these changes is that the closing balance of the current year is estimated to be better by 61 lakhs and 94 thousands.

"This is very good in all conscience, but I cannot help remarking that though the declining figures for 'Excise' last year seemed to have all the appearance of the first step towards reform, the ground then gained appears to have been since lost. The opinion is again forming that the measure has not been productive of the advantage expected to be derived from it. Whether the increase under this head is or is not open to the objection of insufficiently discouraging immoderate use of spirituous liquors and drugs, it can hardly be seriously argued that the present system is fostering a habit of temperance among the people.

"There is a temporary reduction in the Police expenditure, but the police will continue to be a heavy burden where the population expect to be protected and cannot stir a finger to help themselves. It is time that Government should provide a means with which the people may be in a position to guard themselves in case of emergency.

"The savings under 'Education' and 'Sanitation' really mean losses if we understand the consequences rightly.

"The income for the year 1918-19 is estimated on the assumption that no great increase in the receipts can be expected over that of the current year. It is anticipated that there will be a recovery under 'Stamps.' To the expenditure side, on the other hand, the most outstanding feature of the Budget presented in the Council is the provision that has been made for carrying on war against malaria and other preventible diseases. This provision, we note with satisfaction, is only the initiation of a larger campaign against that fell disease in rural areas. By a wise, thoughtful and ingenious distribution of funds, Your Excellency has given to the country an earnest of a much-looked for improvement in the public health of this Province. When we bear in mind that the toll of victims exacted by malaria in Bengal comes up to nearly 400,000 every year, it is no figure of speech but simple truth to say that no language can adequately describe the actual state of sanitation in rural tracts. It is groundlessly alleged that Government are not alive to the situation, but the state of the finances prevented anything being done. We have it from Government that no longer is it possible to restrict expenditure on sanitary works within the narrow limits of recent budgets. It is indeed a happy augury for the future when we observe that none is more sensible than Your Excellency of the paramount necessity of freeing Bengal of that terrible scourge. Local administrations must now work out their own salvation in the matter of sanitary progress. It is very much to be regretted that the improvement of the Bhagirathi river finds no place in the estimate. I have endeavoured on several occasions to bring this subject prominently to the notice of Government. As a way of communication the Bhagirathi may well be left out of consideration in view of the development of railway lines on both of its banks. But for the supply of potable water and the question of health of the large population of all the riparian villages from its entrance to Nadia, the urgency of its improvement cannot be over-estimated. No private efforts can meet with any measure of success in this direction, and it is expected that Government will take up the subject with as little delay as possible.

"The amount provided for the dismemberment of the Midnapore district is by no means a negligible one—an expenditure permitted by the Government of India on the express understanding that a beginning be made. There are in the scheme special reasons of public advantage that need not be impracticable for its costliness. The public, on the other hand, desire no sort of new experiment at these difficult times or until the conclusion of the war, now being waged, all local questions should be held in abeyance. It is not a clumsy attempt on the part of the public to prolong the discussion, but an honest belief that there is no urgency whatever for the work to be proceeded with in view of the present financial stringency. I do not, however, wish to minimise the advantages or the prospects of that project.

"The personal and family allowances to the détenus are absorbing not an insignificant portion of public revenue. It is undeniable that the murmurs about the internment method and the treatment towards the détenus are beginning to make themselves heard very loudly. I, however, assert my cheerful belief that the attitude of the Government of India as expressed in reply to the resolution recently moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee in the Imperial Council will have a sobering effect on the public mind.

"The normal balance of trade has been upset by the new conditions created by the war. The trade is not able to absorb the raiyats' crops, which has been peculiarly embarrassing to the export business of the country.

"Under the stress of war conditions new industries are springing up and old industries are showing themselves capable of hitherto unsuspected powers of production. It is only right that advantage should be taken of the period as far as possible to develop the position of industrial importance to which this Province is destined to rise. But with all our major programme of education and sanitation cut down to a third of its proper dimension and with an enforced neglect of the industrial and agricultural needs of the country, we are resolved to readily part with such a large amount as our contribution to the successful prosecution of the war permits."

The Hon'ble RAJA HRISHIKESH LAHA said :—

"YOUR EXCELLENCY,

The Budget for 1918-19, though it still bears the impress of the war, presents some agreeable features which clearly prove that the Government has at last made up its mind to grapple with the anti-malarial problem in right earnest. We hope the surveys of Harihar, Balli Bil, Bhairab, etc., for which small sums have been allotted, will be taken in hand at once, and that the Jamuna and the Arul Bil schemes will make considerable progress during the course of the year. It is also gratifying to observe that an additional sum of Rs. 22,89,600 has been granted for the anti-malarial scheme in connection with the flooding of the Banka Valley, as it has caused immense havoc in the district of Burdwan. According to Dr. Bentley, flooding has a beneficial influence on malaria-stricken tracts, but care should no doubt be taken that the natural drainage channels are improved a great deal to prevent the stagnation of water. It is also noticeable that Rs. 25,000 has been provided for observations to be made regarding the possible deterioration of the Mathabhangra and Bhagirathi rivers.

"As I had anticipated last year, the receipts under the heading of sale of general stamps had fallen off, and I do not believe there will be a strong recovery, when conditions are not very different, in the current year also. We, however, hope for the best and trust the estimated amount may be realised.

"It is satisfactory that the augmentation grant to District Boards has been raised from Rs. 4,30,000 allotted last year to Rs. 7,87,334 for the present year. This desirable increase will certainly stimulate the District Boards to greater exertion and there can be no doubt that steps will be taken to supply good drinking water in places where none is now available. In some places tanks have been repaired or excavated, but a great deal more remains to be done and the problem of maintaining a pure water-supply has not as yet been successfully tackled.

" Education has not been neglected as the grants-in-aid have been raised from 20 lakhs in 1917-18 to Rs. 23,29,000 in 1918-19, while a further provision of Rs. 5,50,000 has been made for the development of primary education. I am not sure whether it would be possible to make primary education at once compulsory, but I would suggest that before compulsion is resorted to in rural areas, the Local Boards and the Deputy Inspectors of Schools may be directed to establish new schools where there is a demand for them, and as the people of many villages are now eager to give their boys some sort of training of the right sort, there will be no difficulty in the establishment of such schools with the support of the people. Coercion has its disadvantage in that the majority of the cultivators will try to evade compulsory education under the exemption which permits the boys to help their parents and guardians in carrying on their hereditary arts and occupations. This, I trust, will engage the attention of Government. Moreover, schools cannot be established in any great number without the co-operation of teachers, which is greatly wanted ; and I hope Government will remove this want by holding out better prospects to the teachers.

" After a long waiting we are at last to have a Director of Industry, but his attention will, I believe, be mainly confined to the existing industries, as the floatation of new companies for industrial purposes has been prohibited by the Government of India. Indigenous Joint Stock Companies are still in their infancy in Bengal, and it will require all the tact and judgment of the Director to prove that it will be as easy to make money by investing in industrial enterprises as by investing in zemindaries or in money-lending transactions. He will now have to direct his attention to cottage industries and introduce co-operative methods for supply, distribution and sale or the advances of scientific tools and implements of production on a hire-purchase system as is being done in some European countries. There is a further provision of Rs. 1,50,000 for the development of industries. Is it meant that indigenous industries are to be encouraged by grants, subsidies and advances, as many are now in a declining state for want of funds and encouragement. The Director will have to do much up-hill work in order to make his department successful.

" I may also point out that there has been an allotment of Rs. 29,000 to Commercial Schools. Although this sum is not large enough, it may well be utilised for grants to non-official commercial institutions that are now developing in this city, as for example, the Polytechnic Institute recently started by Captain Petavel under the auspices of the Maharaja of Kasimbazar, which is doing useful work in this direction.

" Under the heading of Agriculture, we find that ' a provision of one lakh for the widespread distribution of improved varieties of paddy and jute-seed ' has been made. If this is widely made known to the cultivators in every part of the Province, I have no doubt it will be largely availed of by them, and if the peasants in the fields find that the improved varieties of seeds are yielding a more abundant crop, there will spring up a strong demand which the department will find it very difficult to meet. The seventeen field demonstrators that are to be newly appointed would help a great deal in making demonstration work successful. They must bring home to the cultivators the advantages that may be derived by improved varieties of seeds, scientific manures and improved methods of cultivation. While on this subject, it may not be out of place to suggest that the two new Deputy Collectors to be appointed under the Registrar of Co-operative Societies be directed to turn their attention principally to the establishment of primary Agricultural Societies, of which only 1,547 exist in Bengal (vide the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in Bengal, page 16). The cultivators will then learn and appreciate the value of thrift and will gradually be weaned from their extravagant habits.

"Large sums will no doubt be spent on anti-malarial measures or sanitary improvement, but this is mostly confined to the Burdwan district. It would have been more in consonance with the insistent demands of many other districts if a larger provision than five lakhs had been made under this head. It could have been easily done by reducing a little the free balance of Rs. 81,09,000 which has been set apart for future years over and above the closing balance of Rs. 3,37,32,000 which cannot be touched under the orders of the Government of India. I only hope that for improving the sanitary condition of other districts which has for some years been such an imperative necessity, the free balance will be utilised for the purpose as far as possible.

"I should observe that only Rs. 20,000 has been allotted for the Munsifs' Courts and residences. The sum is very insignificant in consideration of the difficulties which the Munsifs feel, especially with regard to housing in the mufassal. They are a lot of hardworking officers, and for want of suitable residences, they are often obliged to live in houses which are damp and unhealthy; and these houses are often built with mud and bamboo splittings and quite unsuitable for human habitation. I think some means would be found to increase this amount with a view to supply to these indefatigable officers of Government the elemental comfort of a decent house accommodation, and I think the increased amount may be provided from the free balance which the Government have got in hand."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"MY LORD—We find the following in paragraph 4 of the Amended Draft Financial Statement for the year 1918-19 :—

"The orders of the Government of India for the preparation of the Budget directed that, as in the previous two years, the provincial expenditure should be limited to the income of the year, but it was found impossible, after providing for the urgent essential requirements of the administration, to meet any expenditure on urgent public works without drawing on the balances, and the Government of India were requested and have agreed to allow us to draw on our balance to the extent of Rs. 40,20,000.

"The total income for the year is estimated at Rs. 6,90,84,000 and the expenditure at Rs. 7,31,04,000. And this deficit is to be met by drawing upon the balances to the extent of 40 lakhs of rupees.

"I need hardly say that it would not have been necessary to draw upon our balances to the extent of nearly 30 lakhs of rupees out of this 40 lakhs if the amount necessary for the partition of the districts of Mymensingh and Midnapore or the amount of extra and additional increased expenditure under the head of the 'Police,' were not included in the items of expenditure. I have every reason to believe that the income would have been adequate to meet the expenditure.

"It appears from the Budget estimates of 1918-19 that out of a closing balance of Rs. 3,39,32,000, Rs. 2,56,23,000 are earmarked for special purposes, viz., Education, Sanitation, etc., leaving free a balance of Rs. 83,09,000, which could be spent in future years. It is necessary that this free balance should be always as large as possible, so that we may be prepared for such contingencies as famine and other unforeseen contingencies.

Discussion of the Budget.Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

"It is a matter of great satisfaction that there will be an additional recurring expenditure of Rs. 45,900 under the heading 'Medical' on such items as diet allowance of both the Medical College Hospital patients and of Campbell Hospital and mufassal hospital patients, etc. It is also a matter of congratulation that provision has been made and there is actually a scheme for the admission of more students in the Campbell Medical Schools both in Calcutta and at Dacca, and also such a large amount as Rs. 1,62,000 has been included in the Budget to meet the costs of buildings of the Belgatchia Institution.

"For the last two years very little has been done to carry out some of the necessary sanitary projects. The Budget Estimate of Rs. 8½ lakhs for works of sanitary improvement, though not adequate to meet the costs of the projects which have been recommended by the Sanitary Board and which have received the administrative approval of Government, will be welcome as sufficient to meet the costs of some of the urgent and pressing sanitary improvements, such as supply of filtered water to some of the municipal towns. I am glad to see that the town of Krishnagar is at last going to have a supply of filtered water, and that there is a provision of one lakh of rupees in the Budget on that head.

"Your Lordship has inaugurated a new era in tackling the question of malaria in rural areas. For the last few years we have brought up before your Lordship's Government the question of opening out the silted up rivers in order to drive out malaria from places which were once healthy and wealthy but which have now literally become depopulated on account of the malarial scourge. Speaking of malaria your Lordship was pleased to observe at the conference held in this Council Chamber on the 29th January last—'The particular disease with which I propose to concern myself to-day is malaria. It is the only disease that I desire you to help me to fight; but it is, perhaps, the most widespread and the most virulent of all the diseases which afflict the people of Bengal.' We, therefore, welcome this provision which, to quote the words of Sir S. P. Sinha, represents the beginning of a new campaign which Government are anxious to initiate on a large scale against malaria in rural areas. With reference to at least one of the schemes, I mean the Mani Khati scheme, I take a personal interest because I first brought the question forward before the District Board of the 24-Parganas and I spoke to Mr. Adams-Williams about it more than a year ago. With reference to the other schemes I know the places very well and I can very well anticipate the great benefit which the people of the district of the 24-Parganas, Nadia and Jessore will derive when the Jamuna and the Arul Bhil schemes are carried out.

"The Government have already solved the problem of the supply of drinking water, and of sanitation in the rural areas by making over the public works cess to the District Boards. If the amount of the public works cess be properly utilised by the District Boards, supplemented by contribution from Government, I think there will not be any difficulty in placing these important matters on a firm basis.

"We are grateful to the Government of India for making a recurring grant of 5½ lakhs of rupees for primary education. Though this amount will not be enough to carry out a scheme of primary education throughout the country, yet we need hardly say it will go to some extent to carry out a project in which the people of this country are vitally interested.

"There is one point in connection with the expenditure on education which we are sorry to notice. It appears from the Budget estimates that the sanctioned estimate on education for the year 1917-18 was Rs. 98,13,000, whereas the revised estimate was only Rs. 81,14,000. We are told that this decrease in expenditure of Rs. 16,99,000 was due to savings in the imperial grants and in the grant for Calcutta hostels. We are sorry to see that of all items of expenditure there should be savings on this item of expenditure in which, I need hardly say, the people are so much interested. We hope and trust that due care will be taken to properly utilise the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 97,51,000 this year.

"I moved a resolution on the Financial Statement the other day in this Council to delete certain items of expenditure from the Budget which related to the police. There has been unfortunately some misapprehension on the part of some of the members of this Council as well as on the part of the press that I wanted to curtail the expenditure on this head. What I moved for and what I still ask the Government to reconsider is not to incur additional increased expenditure on the police. For the last few years the expenditure on this head have increased by leaps and bounds, i.e., the expenditure has increased from Rs. 83,99,859 in 1912-13 to Rs. 1,37,85,000 in 1918-19, i.e., there has been an increase of about 54 lakhs in six or seven years. That the police have done good work nobody denies.

"About two years ago there were a number of dacoities and murders in and near Calcutta. The people were in constant dread and they did not know who amongst them would be the next victim. The timely action taken by the Government restored order, and life and property became safe. We all know that this was due to the prompt action on the part of the police. The police were strengthened, and for the last two years, at least for the last 12 months, there has not been any fresh outbreak of lawlessness. If the strength of the police as it stood in the beginning of 1917-18 was sufficient to put down lawlessness and detect crimes, we cannot understand the necessity for the additional increased expenditure to the extent of nearly 15 or 16 lakhs of rupees on this head in the Budget for 1918-19, some recurring and some non-recurring, when normal state of things have been restored. Then we find that the sanctioned estimate for 1917-18 was Rs. 1,34,38,000, whereas in the revised estimate we find Rs. 1,22,84,000, i.e., there was a saving of Rs. 11,44,000, i.e., the present normal state of things was brought about with an expenditure of Rs. 1,22,84,000. Why then spend Rs. 1,37,85,000, i.e., incur an additional increased expenditure of about 15 lakhs of rupees. If it is necessary to give increment to some of the police staff why not wait till the return of normal times.

"We find that some of the items are put down as—

- (i) Additional temporary force for Intelligence Branch Rs. 1,04,308.
- (ii) Increase of temporary force for District Intelligence Staff Rs. 2,13,446.
- (iii) Temporary Establishment for Motor Vehicles, Arms Act and Passport and Press Departments of the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta. Rs. 16,164.
- (iv) Temporary Boat Establishment Rs. 5,193.

"These have been put down now as temporary arrangements, but I think there will be permanent recurring charge of nearly Rs. 3,39,111 per annum besides other recurring charges. If this increased expenditure has at all to be incurred we should like to have an assurance from Government that these items of expenditure will not be made permanent.

"There is one subject upon which I should like to say a few words. It is about the Sibpur Engineering College. It is a matter of great satisfaction to learn that the college in all probability will not be removed from its present site. I understand, however, that on account of want of accommodation in the college large number of students cannot get admission there. Probably the matter has not been formally brought to the notice of Government by the Principal of the College. If, however, it be a fact that larger accommodation is necessary I hope and trust Government will provide the same without delay."

Discussion of the Budget.

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I beg to congratulate the Government on the aggregate increase of revenue and feel disappointed that it has not been applied to schemes of social reform or the development of any beneficial service. I am aware that the satisfactory revenue position is due largely to favourable agricultural conditions and the unusually large profits earned by jute companies and miscellaneous mills in 1916-17. I wish it had been found possible to devote the major portion of the money thus received to purposes of lasting benefit to the people. Sanitation, Education and Industrial Improvements are subjects on which we feel keenly.

"The sanitary condition of Bengal is nothing, if not deplorable. Only the other day Your Excellency referred to the baneful influence of malaria and said : 'Every year there occur in Bengal from 350,000 to 400,000 deaths from this cause alone. But a mere enumeration of the deaths gives but a faint idea of the ravages of the disease. It is probable that at least a hundred attacks of malaria occur for every death and it is estimated that this disease alone is responsible for 20,000,000 days of sickness in the Presidency every year.' Though fever is the great killer of Bengal we have also to consider the prevalence of cholera in rural areas. It is idle to deny that both malaria and cholera are preventible diseases and it only requires the adoption of necessary measures to uproot these evils which are responsible for many disagreeables in a great part of Bengal. The sanitary condition of Bengal cries aloud for the adoption of a vigorous policy involving the expenditure of large sums which must be found.

"In the matter of education also the sum allotted is inadequate. I will first of all speak a few words on primary education. It is now considered to be the duty of every civilised Government to provide free primary education for the people. And it is deeply to be regretted that in this matter even some of the important Native States have adopted a policy which we in Bengal demand in vain. In Bengal, in 1916-17, the number of primary schools for boys was 31,617 with 11,468 pupils. The expenditure on them was Rs. 37,40,699, of which Rs. 17,95,596 was from fees ; so the Local Government and the Local Bodies between them paid only Rs. 19,45,103 or a little over Rs. 5 per school per month. This is wholly inadequate to attract really competent men to the profession. I understand in the Imperial Legislative Council the Hon'ble Sir Sankar Nair has submitted a statement showing improvement in this matter. But I regret I have not been able to get a copy of that statement. The Government of India have, I am glad, made a special recurring grant of £200,000 for the development of primary education and the Hon'ble the Finance Member has made a conditional promise to allot a further sum for that purpose. But the Government of Bengal has not proved as liberal as the Government of India. I deplore the attitude taken up by the Government of Bengal towards an important institution like the Mahakali Pathshala. Its usefulness cannot be gainsaid ; and a non-recurring grant would have saved it from that financial embarrassment on which it is now likely to suffer shipwreck. In 1916-17 while 44.56 per cent. of the male population of school age were at school, the percentage of females was only 8.58. The disparity is depressing ; and an earnest effort should be made to remove it. Hence institutions which are instrumental in spreading female education deserve special attention. And I once more hope the Government will find it possible to help the Mahakali Pathshala.

"Bengal cries aloud for industries other than the universal, but insecure industry of agriculture. We had prosperous industries. And some of them are still capable of revival. Bernier in his account of travels in the Mogul Empire during the latter part of the seventeenth century wrote ; 'Bengal abounds in sugar with which it supplies the kingdoms of Golconda and the

Discussion of the Budget.Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur; Mr. Altaf Ali.

Karnatic, where very little is grown, Arabia and Mesopotamia through the towns of Moka and Basra and even Persia by way of Bender-Abbase'. That industry is now in a moribund condition. When the war broke out we hoped that the opportunity for its revival had come. In reply to a question in the Imperial Legislative Council the other day a statement showing the estimated outturn of date sugar in Bengal was submitted :—

Year.		Tons.	Year		Tons.
1913-14	...	97,300	1915-16	...	99,200
1914-15	...	96,500	1916-17	...	101,100

The increase is microscopic.

"In reply to a question asked by my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri, the Government admitted that suitable brine for the manufacture of salt had been found in the Chittagong side of the Bay of Bengal. In view of the recent disturbances due to the abnormal rise in the price of salt would it not be proper for the Government to help the establishment of the salt industry in Bengal?

"Materials for the manufacture of pulp for papers are not wanting in Bengal. These should be utilised. And in the matter of establishing new industries Government help is indispensable.

"I hope the Government will see its way to give an impetus to the desire on the part of the people to take to industrial pursuits. It has often been said that the rich in Bengal are content to grow richer as they sleep and their placid slumber is seldom disturbed by disquieting dreams of the responsibilities of wealth. But that charge can no longer be levelled against them. They are realising the responsibilities of wealth, and capital is coming out of the safe shelter of the iron box. But without Government help nascent industries cannot prosper so as to withstand the competition of foreign industries.

"The expenditure on police is extravagant. We all feel the necessity of improving the police of the province. But more expenditure of huge sums cannot improve the morale of a service. The subject has been so often and so fully discussed on various occasions that I refrain from discussing it any further.

"There is only one other point on which I wish to speak to-day. The partitioning of the districts of Midnapore and Mymensingh in the teeth of public opposition where cases have not been made out for such redistributions cannot be supported. Such partitioning involves huge expenditure and in some cases their utility is questionable. We are all along looking forward to the grant of responsible Government. In introducing the Financial Statement for 1918-19 in the Imperial Legislative Council, Sir William Meyer said: 'We have under consideration, * * * in connection with the scheme of constitutional reforms, a material advance in the direction of separating Imperial and Provincial finance'. That indicates that the reforms will soon be introduced. And I earnestly hope that all schemes of redistribution of territories should be kept in abeyance till responsible Government with independent resources consider such schemes on their merits."

The Hon'ble Mr. ALTAF ALI said :—

"My Lord, it is my pleasant privilege to congratulate Your Excellency's Government on the general financial position of the Presidency. In the words of the Hon'ble Mr. Donald, 'our receipts have exceeded our expectations,' and this is no small thing at a time when money is so scarce as the inevitable result of the European war. While I say this, I cannot help observing that 10 lakhs of this increased income have been derived from Excise. I am sorry to say that this fact discloses a lamentable state of things. This increased sum of 10 lakhs, if it points to anything, points to a corresponding increase in the drink habit of the people. My Lord, I can conceive of no evil more revolting than the habitual drinking of spirituous liquor. It is inconceivable how people, who have not the wherewithal to feed and clothe themselves, can afford to consume such a large quantity of licit country spirits. My Lord, it behoves every well-wisher of the country to try his best to put a stop to this growing evil and thereby improve the moral condition of the people. Certainly it is not too much for me to hope that Your Excellency's Government will not be unmindful of their responsibility in this direction and would pass such orders as may be deemed necessary to prevent the grant of increased number of licenses to stockists of foreign liquor and to manufacturers of country spirits. It is stated in the Revised Estimate that income tax has contributed fifteen-and-a-half lakhs to the aggregate increase of revenue amounting to Rs. 53,33,000 and this is due to the unusually large profits earned by jute companies and miscellaneous mills in 1916-17. Nobody should object to the increase of income tax as it bespeaks financial prosperity of the people and affects only the well-to-do classes. More than 18 lakhs of the increased revenue came from the sale of quinine to the Military and other Departments. The Law courts contributed Rs. 2,25,000 chiefly from fines in Magisterial Courts. I am glad to find that there is a considerable falling off under 'Stamps,' which means that the people were less litigious during the year under review.

Discussion of the Budget.Mr. Altaf Ali.

"On the expenditure side I find that there are savings mainly under the heads of Police and Education. It is, indeed, satisfactory that police expenditure was reduced, but I cannot view with satisfaction the decrease of expenditure under the heads of Education and Sanitation amounting to Rs. 17,87,000. Everybody knows and admits that these two are by far the most important matters calculated to promote the welfare of the people. The most potent scourge of life in Bengal is its appallingly bad sanitation. As a matter of fact, there is practically no district in Bengal which can boast of being free from the ravages of malaria, cholera and other malignant diseases.

"My Lord, while Your Excellency's Government have not done justice to the Departments of Sanitation and Education, they have found means in this critical time to provide for such measures of dubious utility as (1) the construction of steam launches for the River Police in Eastern Bengal, (2) the re-organisation of the Eastern Bengal Police, (3) the construction of launches for river patrol arrangements for Calcutta Port Police, (4) the increase of a temporary force for District Intelligence Staff, (5) the raising of the proportion of the ordinary reserve of head-constables and constables, and (6) the proposal for raising the pay of head-constables. Although I mention only six items of objectionable expenditure, I am able to extend my catalogue to thrice as many. My Lord, although from the list of items I have criticised just now, it may appear that I have attacked only one Department of Government, namely, the Police, I wish to make myself clear that I am not one of those who in season and out of season cry down the Police. I only meant to point out that the measures are not so urgent in their nature as not to be deferred till next year to make room for measures of such public utility and urgency as supply of drinking water, schemes for the check of epidemic diseases and spread of education amongst the masses. My Lord, these are the real requirements of the public at large. Not to speak of rural areas, in which people practically drink mud at this time of the year in order to quench their thirst, there are several municipal towns in which pure drinking water is a luxury to all intents and purposes. I am

For instance, of the existence of a large number of filthy tanks within the municipal area of the Tangail subdivision. As there are very few wells in the locality, people have no other alternative than to drink the foul water which these tanks contain with dire consequences. While I am glad to find that sums of Rs. 38,600 and Rs. 10,000 have been made for the water-works at Tangail and Rajbari, respectively, I cannot but make an appeal for a system of water-works to be installed at each municipal town as early as possible. This, indeed, would give real relief to thousands of people throughout Bengal.

My Lord, as a representative of the District Boards, I am grateful to Government for practically accepting my resolution on the subject of appointing non-official Chairmen at the last Dacca session of the Council. While I applied for the appointment of non-officials as Chairmen, Government have very kindly conferred upon five Boards the franchise of electing their own Chairmen. In fact, Government gave more than what I wanted. I might take this opportunity of reminding Government that my own Division, namely, Rajshahi, has been left in the lurch—perhaps forgotten. Emboldened by the success of my resolution above referred to, I take this opportunity of requesting Government to introduce the elective system into the constitution of our District Boards. I shall come up with a resolution at the next session; but I trust Government will take this as a timely hint and forestall my resolution by granting the concession before we meet again in Council.

In conclusion I would like, my Lord, to make an appeal to Your Excellency on behalf of and in the interest of the poor agriculturists who have been hard hit by the effects of the war. These mute millions who toil in the open fields year in and year out, and produce our foodstuffs by the sweat of their brow, care little for politics and much less for those higher avocations of life in which the upper classes are engaged. All that they want are two square meals a day and a few yards of rag to clothe themselves with. Hence this has well nigh been denied to them. Rice and jute markets having gone down and the price of salt and cloth—two indispensable necessities of life—having been abnormally high, they are now practically involved in a hopeless struggle for existence. It is difficult for them to keep their body and soul together any longer. To make matters worse, a sort of panic is prevailing amongst them by reason of the recent looting of hats in several parts of the Presidency. My Lord, I pray, with all the emphasis that I can command, for Your Excellency's personal intervention in the matters above referred to, with a view to stop this sad state of things as far as circumstances permit.

THE HON. MR. KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARWAR RAY said :—

My Lord, last year, on this occasion, I drew the attention of Your Excellency's Government to the huge sum of Rs. 21,00,000 sanctioned for settlement operations. I further pointed out that it was a kind of expenditure which was neither immediately productive nor of such an urgent and necessary character that it could not be put off for some time. These operations not only cost the Government an outlay of such a big sum but the sum probably had to be spent by the landlords and tenants in settling their operations so far as they affected their rights. I pointed out that at least these operations ought to be put off till the end of the year. I was, however, ignored in vain. I had to wait for some time but the Government did not seem to be moved. I am, therefore, very sorry to find that it is now the Government's intention to spend this huge sum of Rs. 21,00,000 in the next year. I am, therefore, very sorry to find that it is now the Government's intention to spend this huge sum of Rs. 21,00,000 in the next year. I am, therefore, very sorry to find that it is now the Government's intention to spend this huge sum of Rs. 21,00,000 in the next year.

Discussion of the Budget.

Kumar Shib Shekhawar Ray.

this is the chief reason why the Government are not inclined to put a stop to this unnecessary extravagance even at a critical period like this. But the terrible strain that it means to the financial resources of the districts affected can be better imagined than described. The situation may be briefly summarised as follows :—

- (1) The Government intend to spend a sum of Rs. 22,00,000 on district settlement operations which are entirely unproductive and unnecessary and not at all of an imperative character.
- (2) The landlords and tenants shall have to spend a sum of about Rs. 22,00,000 for supervision and superintendence of these operations.
- (3) The Government have decided to recover this year Rs. 18,00,000 from the landlords and tenants as cost of past settlement operations.

"In other words it means that at a terribly hard time as the present, the Government and the people have been called upon to spend a sum of Rs. 62,00,000 on a work of more or less doubtful utility and I beg to submit that had the advisers to the Government been prudent enough in the past and stopped the settlement operations immediately on the outbreak of the war, this vast sum would have been to-day, at the disposal of the Government for helping the cause of the war; but all this advantage is now lost. But yet much could be done by the Government if they stop the work wherever possible, even now. If it be possible to postpone operations involving an outlay of say ten lacs, it would also mean a saving of ten lacs to the people immediately and a further sum of Rs. 7½ lacs in the immediate future. My Lord, Government have not imposed any fresh taxation and have even restrained the flotation of new companies solely with a view that the new War Loan and War Charities might not suffer but these settlement costs are surely a kind of burdensome tax, and cannot but seriously affect the subscription to the War Loan in the districts concerned. I therefore appeal to the Government that as far as possible settlement operations might be put off during the continuation of the War and I hope that a serious attention would yet be given to this subject both by the Imperial and Local Governments. It has been urged by some that if the settlement operations are stopped, an efficient and experienced staff consisting of kanungos and amins would have to be disbanded and consequently trained men would not be available when the work would be resumed with the return of normal times. But I do not think that there is much force in this argument. These kanungos and amins cannot vanish away from the face of the earth and would surely be available to the Government in any number, whenever necessary.

"My Lord, owing to war conditions there is no market for jute and the price of food-grains is also very low and consequently our collections have considerably fallen off. In fact it has become an acute question with many of us as to how to make the two ends meet. The Government could considerably help us to tide over the difficulty if they realised this year 50 per cent. less of what has been budgetted for recovery as being our share of settlement costs. The balance might be realised next year or year after. These costs in many estates far exceed their revenue and consequently great difficulties are being experienced by the zamindars in paying this extra tax at an extremely difficult period of financial depression like the present. I hope this fact too would engage the sympathetic attention of Your Excellency's Government in adjusting the revised Budget. As I have pointed out before, if the Government postpone some of the settlement operations, they might easily help us without in any way disturbing their financial position.

"My Lord, now I turn to the police expenditure. The colossal amount budgetted for expenditure on the police has been very much engaging the attention of the public and I am afraid my constituency would not be satisfied if I do not say a few words on this subject. It is by far the most expensive department of the Government. Even at a time when every endeavour is being made to curtail expenses in other departments, the police expenditure is really on the increase. As a zamindar I can easily realise the position of the Government in this matter. The stability and reputation of the Government depend on the amount of safety that they afford to the people under their charge and so any department which helps to secure this state of affairs would undoubtedly receive the best attention. In our zamindaries, too, my Lord, the department of law receives our best attention. So long as this department is well organised and we are in a position to take prompt and adequate legal measures against our offending neighbours and tenants, we are respected as strong and efficient zamindars and left undisturbed and so even in worst years we hardly curtail our expenses here. The expenses we hasten to curtail are those which affect the most inarticulate subjects, as for instance the Deva-seva. Similarly the Government have proceeded to curtail those expenses which affect the most inarticulate section of the public, as for instance the expenses on rural sanitation and agriculture. My Lord, as a zamindar I really do not murmur at the attitude taken by the Government towards the police department in preference to others. But, my Lord, I beg to submit that in our zamindaries it sometimes happens that too much attention to the department of law brings about the ruin of the zamindari itself. To avoid this catastrophe, good managers periodically revise the law budget and effect a good deal of economy by having recourse more to sweet reconciliation and compromise than to legal frightfulness. I therefore venture to suggest that the Government might make a thorough examination of the police expenditure and see if any reduction is possible by adopting some other methods in regard to the police.

"My Lord, speaking of the police, I find that an important item on account of village police involving receipts and expenditure, each well over half a crore of rupees, has no place in our Budget. From my personal knowledge I might say that the administration of Village Police Funds is far from satisfactory. In my humble opinion the income and the expenditure on this head might be provincialised and shown in the Budget, and the Government should also devote more attention to the efficient administration of this department. Sir Satyendra Sinha introduced this morning the Village Self-Government Bill, and I find that the Village Police Funds are to be properly supervised by the villagers themselves. In that case I think my request comes too late. But I make the suggestion for what it is worth. In this connection, my Lord, it strikes me as an anomaly that while we, the people in the mufassal, pay a police tax of over half a crore of rupees, those in urban areas do not pay anything towards the maintenance of police forces in those areas, and I take this opportunity to suggest that the Government might take steps to rectify this anomalous distinction between the rural and urban population."

The Hon'ble MR. MACKENZIE said :—

"My Lord, the rules which govern the general discussion of the Budget in Council provide that the discussion shall be limited to those branches of revenue and expenditure which are under the financial control of the Local Government, and the Secretary to the Council in the Circular which he addresses to non-official members in anticipation of the discussion is careful to warn members that observations and suggestions which are not distinctly related to the Budget statement may be held to be out of order. I trust I will not be held by Your Excellency to be out of order if I refer to an item of expenditure which, although not, strictly speaking, coming within the category referred to, is nevertheless an item of expenditure which might be curtailed with advantage to all concerned. I refer to the expenditure of time in the discussion of resolutions on the financial statement.

If I am permitted to refer to this matter I hope I shall be acquitted by my colleagues on the Council of any desire to read the Council a lecture as it were. Even were I qualified, which I am painfully aware I am not, that is the last thing I should desire to do, and I hope therefore no offence will be taken where none is intended. I merely wish to say how it strikes the average business man and I am sure my friends on the other side of the house representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce will bear out what I say. The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja of Burdwan referred to the matter at the discussion which took place a year ago almost to a day. Referring to certain resolutions on police expenditure, he said that after the declaration by the Government that the money budgetted under that head could not be diverted any business man would have said that many of the resolutions that followed ought to have been dropped. The same thing cannot have failed to strike any impartial observer in connection with the discussions which took place on the Revised Financial Statement which occupied the time of the Council for three whole days. I take it we are all here to see in what way we can best advance the interests of this great Presidency, and I cannot help feeling that this cannot best be done by the policy which there seems a tendency in some directions to adopt of 'flogging a dead horse'. Such a policy, in my opinion, can only tend to alienate sympathy from even a good cause. Time is money and it is just as essential therefore that the expenditure under this head as under any other head should be kept as low as possible. This is necessary in the interests of the Members of this Council as a whole and particularly in the interests of the Members in charge of the different portfolios and the hard-worked Secretaries of the various departments on whom special war measures, added to the already onerous task of administering a large province like this, have placed a special strain which it is our duty to lighten as far as lies in our power. I feel confident that only by working together in this way and by avoiding the policy of 'pin prick' we shall best advance the interest we all have at heart.

In this connection a suggestion has been made by another non-official member of the Council that the proceedings might be materially curtailed, if in dealing with resolutions the Government member followed the mover in the debate.

After hearing what the Government member had to say it would not infrequently be unnecessary for others to prolong the discussion. I do not know if it is possible or if possible, in all cases advisable, to adopt this procedure, but I have noticed it is sometimes followed with satisfactory results.

Another suggestion which has been made is that the practice of requiring that the names of those who wish to speak should be handed to Your Excellency beforehand might be discontinued, and that it should be sufficient for anyone wishing to speak to catch Your Excellency's eye.

I must confess I put forward this suggestion with a certain amount of trepidation as I fear, if adopted, it might have the effect of prolonging rather than shortening the discussions, but it would at all events give an opportunity of speaking to those who might not at the start of a debate wish to take part but who might find reason at a later stage for wishing to interpose.

And Your Excellency could always conveniently turn a blind eye when, in Your Excellency's opinion, the discussion had proceeded far enough.

Discussion of the Budget.Mr. Mackenzie.

I have to offer Government my congratulations on the successful resistance offered to the numerous attacks on the schemes for the partitions of Midnapore and Myfionsingh. We find in business that when a thing gets too big for efficient control by an existing organization we have either to increase our establishment or be prepared to lose money. It is hardly necessary to say which alternative we adopt. I have no doubt the same thing applies in the management of a province or a division, and I have equally no doubt in my own mind that the partition of these heavy districts will prove to be a productive work of the first magnitude not by any means the smallest portion of the benefit going to those whom, as I gather, the partition was primarily designed to benefit, namely, the people of the district themselves. I hope that the opposition to these schemes has now been finally laid to rest, and that before long in pursuance of the policy of partitioning the large districts with a view to the more efficient administration of the Province we shall shortly have another new headquarters division at Asansol. I understand that a memorial has already been presented to Your Excellency in this connection by those interested, and I hope it will receive early and favourable consideration.

Referring to expenditure on the Police which has formed the subject of much adverse comment, I may say that I am not one of those who hold the view that all is well with that particular force. That they have done excellent work in many directions no one will deny, but there must be some grounds for the very general feeling of distrust in regard to them which is evidenced by the non-official Indian Members of this Council. I would strongly urge upon Government, therefore, that they should endeavour to unearth the causes which lie at the root of this distrust with a view to their elimination. I do not blame the superior officers of the force although recent unfortunate events, to which it is perhaps unnecessary to refer again, have shown that like other people they are liable to make mistakes. I believe, however, they are doing their best in the face of much opposition with very indifferent material, and I can only hope that time will show that the apprehensions of our non-official Indian friends that the continuous and ever increasing expenditure on Police reform is out of all proportion to the results achieved are not well founded. I note that a considerable portion of the expenditure to which exception has been taken is in connection with the River Police in Eastern Bengal, and while no one will deny that the efficient policing of the great rivers of the Province is a matter of urgent reform, it is of equal importance that the rivers themselves should receive more systematic attention than they do at present at the hands of Government. And that brings me to a suggestion I have to make, which might be taken into consideration before another year, and that is the formation of a Waterways Trust somewhat on the lines of the Calcutta Port Trust, which will charge itself with the improvement, regulation and conservancy of existing waterways and will suggest such schemes as may be considered advisable for the development of river-borne traffic. The question of water carriage has received a great deal of attention during recent years on the continent of Europe, the United States and last of all in the United Kingdom.

I might at this point appropriately quote the recent views of two eminent British Engineers on this question. The quotations are from the Minutes of Proceedings of the Institution of Civil Engineers issued in October last which have just come into my hands.

Speaking in a discussion on the Keadby Bridge on the Great Central Railway, Sir John F. Griffith said inter alia :—

'One of the lessons of the war has been the importance of inland navigation; it is to be hoped that the country will profit by that lesson, and will, at an early date, take advantage of its natural waterways and improve both them and the canals, to suit them to modern requirements and form a useful supplement to the road and Railway system.'

Discussion of the Budget.Mr. Mackenzie.

Mr. J. A. Saner, who followed Sir John Griffith in the discussion, concluded his remarks as follows :—

'I desire to emphasise the remarks made by Sir John Griffith as to the great importance in all cases where navigation or canals are crossed by Railway or road bridges, of preserving the waterways as fully as possible for the use of the traffic. Everyone now realises that had the proposals of the Royal Commission on Canals and Inland Waterways been carried into effect, there would have been much less congestion on the Railways at the present time, and that a large portion of the cost of the reconstruction and alteration of the waterways would have been actually saved and refunded during the past two years.

If these views emphasise one thing more than another it is that we should avoid the mistake that was made in the United Kingdom of throttling the waterways. I do not think there is any danger of our doing so; at the same time the onus of upholding the rights of a free waterway should not devolve on private carriers, but should be on a suitably constituted Trust including representatives of the carriers.

The value of water transport has long been recognized in France, Germany and Belgium as being of enormous importance, and huge sums have been spent in perfecting communications between the various large centres. Water transport has its place as a department in the State economy of each of these countries and various schemes for developing the resources of the nation are subjected to the closest scrutiny of experts on waterways or water transport.

From the number of questions put in this Council regarding the improvement of rivers and khas I am glad to think that opinion in this country is awakening to the importance of the problem of improving waterways not only from the point of view of transport, but also from the important point of view of sanitation. If attention to waterways is found necessary in the interests of the State when dealing with the limited resources of the United Kingdom how much more would it appear desirable to place the magnificent waterways of India under an Executive which should have their protection and development as an exclusive trust. There is at present in existence a Standing Waterways Committee, but it lacks one important factor, authority. It can advise, suggest, object or criticise, but it cannot act, and is thus incapable of vigorously addressing itself to the many important questions which arise from time to time in connection with waterways and water-borne traffic. In making the suggestion for a Waterways Trust I wish it to be clearly understood that I am not for a moment suggesting that the Government of Bengal are not fully alive to the importance of this subject. The Local Government through their Public Works Department have done much towards improvement of waterways and have initiated valuable schemes, and I would like to take this opportunity of bearing testimony to the ready sympathy which any project that has been put forward has always received at the hands not only of the Member in charge but at the hands of men like my hon'ble friend Mr. Cowley and Mr. Addams-Williams. I consider, however, that a Waterways Trust is none the less necessary for the reasons I have given and in this view I believe I am strongly supported by such important bodies as the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta. It is not perhaps too much to hope therefore that a Trust such as I have indicated will before long find a place in the State economy of this country. I do not think the formation of such a Trust would involve any great expenditure at the outset, and once it were got into proper working order it would, I feel quite sure, be self-supporting, while the benefits to the country at large would be enormous. I feel sure, my Lord, that if more had been known in Delhi and Simla regarding the waterways of these parts, the types of vessels plying on them and the way in which the business is conducted, many of the muddles that were made in the early days of the campaign in Mesopotamia in connection with the inland water transport would have been obviated.

In this connection I should like—if I am in order in so doing—to refer to the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell in replying to a resolution moved by an Hon'ble Member from Chittagong regarding the improvement of the Chaktai khal at the meeting before last. The proceedings of the meeting have not yet been published, but I think, if my recollection serves me rightly, the Hon'ble Member in charge said that in this case the Government proposed to try a small experiment in local self-government and by way of so doing proposed to notify the khal under the Canals Act and give the merchants who used it permission to improve it themselves. I think he also said that Government would not be justified in spending the rate-payers' money for the benefit of the few merchants who used the khal. Knowing Mr. Beatson Bell's keen sympathy with waterway projects, I was rather surprised at the time that he should have taken such a narrow view of Government's obligations in a matter of this kind, but I was unable to say anything at the time as I believe I had not the right to speak. I would like to put on record however that I do not agree that the benefit in such cases accrues only to those who make use of a waterway.

Rivers and khals are as much highways as roads or any other means of communication—in fact are the natural highways of the Province—and it is as much the duty of Government to conserve and improve them for the benefit of the community at large as it is their duty to maintain roads.

I am aware that the Inland Steamer Companies have accepted a similar measure of self-government at Serajganj, but they have done so not because they think it right but because, for the time being, they are unable to do better.

At the discussion of the Budget last year the Hon'ble Mr. Eden made reference to the Grand Trunk Canal Project, and expressed the hope that nothing would be allowed to interfere with its consideration and early adoption.

Mr. Eden referred to the great benefits that would accrue to practically all sections of the community from the construction of the Grand Trunk Canal, so that it is not necessary for me to do so again.

Replying to Mr. Eden the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell gave the assurance that Government had not the least intention of pigeonholing the project, but proposed, as soon as normal conditions were resumed, to take it up and push it through. There, so far as I am aware, the matter rests, and I take it that considerations of Imperial finance still prevent anything being done. While realizing that these considerations are paramount I cannot help regretting that it seems impossible to make a move of any kind. We shall welcome a beginning however small. I do not think the menace of the rapid deterioration of the present steamer route via the Sunderbans, as pointed out by Mr. Addams-Williams, is sufficiently realized. The whole of the river-borne traffic of Eastern Bengal and Assam is dependent for its exit from and entrance to the Hooghly on one river, the Dooagra, which, in the opinion of Mr. Addams-Williams, must inevitably be closed entirely before many years. If this closure takes place before the alternative route is available, is it realized what a calamity it would involve to the trade of this and neighbouring Provinces? It would be bad enough at any time, but, at the present time, with Railways unable to cope with the traffic offering and the trade of these Provinces dependent in a greater measure than usual on river transport for an outlet, it would be nothing short of a disaster. I think the mercantile community of Calcutta are fully alive to the menace I have referred to, and would strongly support me in urging that a beginning should be made as an earnest of the Government intentions that the scheme will be pushed through. I quite realize the difficulty about funds, but would it not be possible to make a start by utilizing the large number of Turkish prisoners for which I understand the Government of India are anxious to find employment. The Government of India have been pressing these prisoners on the attention of Calcutta for some time, and experiments are now being made with a view to their employment in collieries. But after all coal cutting is a business that requires a certain amount of skill, and it is by no means certain, either that the experiment will be a success or that the collieries will be able to absorb all the men available.

It seems to me that more congenial employment might be found for them in connection with this Canal project while Government would be getting some return for the large sums they are spending on their keep. I have not consulted any body about this suggestion, and merely make it for what it is worth in my anxiety to see a start made.

My Lord, I am sorry to have taken up so much of the time of this Council and I am afraid, after what I said in the early part of my speech, I may be accused of inconsistency or worse. My Lord, I plead the rules. I would have been very glad to have had my speech taken as read, but the rules specifically provide that no speech will be taken as read, thereby placing a premium on the waste of time of which I complain."

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB MAULVI AMAN ALI said :--

" My Lord, Your Excellency's Government have again assembled amidst the sufferings and trials of this world-war to discuss the Budget. The Finance Member essaying the difficult task of limiting the Budget expenditure within the resources of the provincial revenue deserves the support of all in his arduous task. This year the task proved almost impossible, and the Government of India allowed the Local Government to estimate for a deficit of Rs. 40,20,000. The very necessity of being compelled to frame a deficit Budget shows paucity of funds and the amount of anxious care, bestowed on the Budget, by the Member in charge. But I regret to be unable to congratulate the Hon'ble Member on the appropriations of revenue to the different requirements of the Presidency. While framing the Budget the Finance Member evidently forgot the Chittagong Division. This oversight will leave the needs of this district unattended to during the next 12 months. If in future years the non-official members are permitted to offer suggestions as to particular needs of their districts to the Member in charge of the Budget beforehand, a repetition of the oversight may be avoided.

The Budget teems with large provisions for the Police. Notwithstanding retrenchment in all directions, the provision for the district police has been increased by nearly Rs. 40,00,000 during the last six years. Similar liberal treatment has been extended to other police forces. In the expenditure under Public Works Department large sums are provided for the police both urban and mufassal. Unfortunately the morale of the force, so magnificently treated, has not improved. Notwithstanding their motor cars, motor launches, palatial barracks and stately offices, the Sub-Inspector and his constables are as diligent in hunting for lucre as in the days of the John Company. The remedy seems to me to appoint educated influential people as panchayats and associate them with the police in all important cases of police investigation. Another remedy lies in enlisting educated men of birth to the police service and to hold out to them good prospects. I may state that the police has dealings with the real people, and a European high police officer, however well intentioned, often finds it well nigh impossible to unravel the toils of his unscrupulous underlings. Induce Indians of the right type to join the police force, my Lord, and in a decade the service will undergo magical transformation.

My Lord, I am glad that the provision for the sanitary improvement of the Presidency has been fixed at Rs. 11,71,000 against Rs. 5,98,000 of the previous year. But even here the case of my neglected town has entirely been overlooked. Chittagong is a growing port town. The Government of Lord Carmichael, rightly recognizing pure drinking water as the first step towards sanitary improvement of a town, granted the magnificent donation of 2 lakhs with a loan of an additional lakh and-a-half for water-works. Thus my native city embarked on its career of new usefulness equipped with the most interesting water-works of India. It may be added that our type is being copied at Puri and in the Punjab. But unfortunately the war intervened and the machinery, oil and coal quadrupled in price. To meet the emergency the Commissioners increased taxes, reduced pressure at the mains and tried various other means. To add to their difficulty the law courts declared that the meters should be provided at the cost of the Municipality. This has threatened the Municipality with financial ruin. I, therefore, take this opportunity of appealing earnestly to Your Lordship for a small grant in aid to the Chittagong Municipality. The sum may be obtained from Rs. 1,52,000 provided as 'special grant at the disposal of the Divisional Commissioners.'

The medical provision has practically remained stationary, i.e., Rs. 26,86,000 against Rs. 27,75,000 of the previous revised Budget. Under this head large sums have been provided for urban medical institutions. No special grant has been received by the Chittagong district.

Provision under this head is Rs. 1,03,01,000 against Rs. 98,13,000 of the previous year. In education, as in sanitation, the bulk of the money has been given away to institutions in or near Calcutta, leaving a small balance to be doled out to different districts. When distributing this dole the Chittagong district has, as usual, been entirely ignored. I may add that the needs of our local college and attached Muhammadan hostel are really great, as is acknowledged by the Government, in the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's reply to my questions on the 22nd January, 1918.

My Lord, I beg to appeal to Your Lordship for a small grant to improve the Chaktai Khal of Chittagong from provision under 'Irrigation—Minor Works and Navigation.' Chaktai is the centre of commercial activity of the town, and its improvement is bound to accelerate the growth of Chittagong as a commercial city.

My Lord, the war with its attendant inevitable evils has brought one message of hope to us. I mean that it has offered an opportunity to the Indians to develop their industrial resources. Chittagong is very happily situated so far as industrial activity is concerned. In days of yore the Chittagong sailors sailed in their home-made boats to Burma and other ports of India. The old industry is not yet dead and numerous boats are locally built even in these days. State patronage and encouragement may be extended to this and other indigenous industries. If the Government desires that Indian produce and Indian minerals should not be exploited by foreigners at the expense of the children of the soil, no better opportunity offers than the present to support infant enterprises and create new ones."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL, BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I could not catch every word of what the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie said, but I have had an opportunity since of glancing through his written speech. And I want to say a few words about it. The Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie has referred to the expenditure of time for moving resolutions in this Council. I certainly think that there is a considerable expenditure in that direction. May I ask is there not talk in the greatest legislative assembly of the world—the Parliament and how long and protracted—are the debates! It would be a sad day for India, if we turned mute and our feelings, wishes and aspirations are choked up. But, my Lord, I think it is necessary to state on behalf of the non-official members who moved resolutions—I myself did not move any resolution at least this session—that there is a great deal of difference in this respect between the European and Indian non-official members. My non-official European friend may know a great deal—which we cannot know—and also gets what he wants without moving any resolutions from his jatbhais who are members of a bureaucracy whom he meets at dinners and other social functions. There is natural sympathy and community of feelings between the two sections of the European community. A very distinguished member of the Government of India, afterwards a member of the Cabinet for some time, once told one of my ancestors that the fate of India is decided at the dinner table. Matters are more satisfactorily settled at dinner table between the official and the non-official Europeans. But we Indians have no opportunity of settling things in this way, and, my Lord, although we sometimes take up the time of the Council we cannot help doing so, because we must have some opportunity of expressing our views in this Council and pressing them upon government.

My Lord, for years past I have been urging upon the necessity of the appointment of a standing finance committee to consider all financial questions, examine the departmental budgets, recurring and non-recurring expenditures, appropriations and transfers, and to find out ways and means for new and pressing schemes, whether suggested from official or non-official quarters, by a close and intimate acquaintance with the details of administration—a knowledge which under the present system the non-official members are precluded from acquiring. I again respectfully ask Your Excellency to yield to our request otherwise the budget discussion becomes academic, uninformed, unprofitable and stale, and leads to a waste of time and energy. In the standing finance committee any non-official member of Your Excellency's Council will have the privilege to submit any scheme for consideration, and if it is approved by Government or the Legislative Council the question of funds may be investigated in the finance committee. The committee shall be presided over by the Vice-President of the Council or the Financial Member, and its proceedings shall be subject to the approval of the Legislative Council. I have outlined a scheme. It is doubtless capable of improvement. Whatever the scheme may be, we want a standing finance committee—a closer association with the details of the administration instead of infructuous debates and ornamental shows. Last year the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell said, in reply to me, that the proposal was not in accordance with the constitution. My Lord, the time has changed, the constitution must be changed along with it. The 'old antediluvian' system as Mr. Montagu has said must give place to a more popular and up-to-date one, otherwise misunderstanding and dissatisfaction will continue to exist. On the other hand, if the non-official members are taken into confidence they will understand the difficulties of administration and become a powerful ally of Government.

I regret to see that no progress has yet been made with the scheme for improvement of primary education in Calcutta. Truly the wheel of the Government's coach moves very slowly. Some three or four years ago a special officer was appointed to report on the condition of primary education in Calcutta. He submitted his report which disclosed a deplorable state of affairs which ought not to be tolerated for a day. Surely, it is high time that something should be done to establish primary education on a satisfactory footing. The Corporation of Calcutta has offered to co-operate, but the Government are not yet ready with the scheme. Not only in Calcutta, but throughout the province the present state of primary education is, in the words of Mr. Hornell, 'profoundly' unsatisfactory. He assured the Council that practical proposals would be put forward, but we have not yet seen any indication of them. But I am glad that a grant of 5½ lakhs has been made which, I hope, will be spent in removing partially the cause of the reproach. There is a great want of good schools for secondary education in Calcutta. The leading collegiate schools are all overcrowded and a number of private secondary schools have come into existence which, however inefficiently, are meeting the public wants to a certain extent. But they are all struggling with their slender means. Their want is chiefly good accommodation and the Director of Public Instruction would do a great public service if he would provide them with funds for suitable school buildings. Of the many regrettable things in the control and conduct of the secondary education, the most glaring is that, while the Imperial grant of lakhs was not made timely and proper use of by the Directorate, fresh cause of suffering, discontent and smarting has been given by the speedy issue and hasty use of a reactionary circular notorious as 'the Turner Circular'. The Hastings House school is a useful institution in its way, but the charges are so high that they preclude men of moderate means from taking advantage of superior education and training in this institution. The Director of Public Instruction said the school is not merely intended for the wealthy, but is established to meet the needs of those who want for their boys a training which the ordinary high school does not provide. But can this laudable object be gained by the imposition of a fee of Rs. 100 for boarders and Rs. 25 for day-scholars. The charges are prohibitive and quite beyond the means of the people, except the wealthy. Surely, the Government have not established this institution at the cost of the public exchequer for the few most wealthy members of our community.

May I inquire what steps are being taken to foster technical education in this Presidency? There is comparatively too much of University education and too little of technical education. To begin with, cannot provision be made for the introduction of manual training in Government schools such as drawing, carpentry, smithy and leather work, etc.?

A very useful grant was generously made to Mr. H. K. Banerjee for training in a railway workshop. Cannot an annual sum be budgetted for the training of young Indians in technical branches of Government and railway service and new avenues of employment opened to them? The tax-payers' money cannot be better spent than in this direction.

Although the expenditure under the head of the police is increasing beyond all limit, still I am sorry to say that the subordinate rank of police officers, who are all Indians, have not met with the attention they deserved. They are a body of faithful, loyal and hard-working servants, but they bemoan their lot that they are not so kindly looked after by the Government. For instance, the pay of head-constables and writer-constables in the Calcutta police are fixed at Rs. 18 rising to Rs. 26. They belong to the bhadra-log class and are generally men of education similar to the clerks in Government and mercantile offices. Why should they receive such a miserable pay? I submit that their pay should not be less than Rs. 30 and the more meritorious amongst them should be promoted to the rank of Sub-Inspector, so that they may gradually rise up to the higher grade of the service. I cannot conclude my remarks with regard to the police without thanking the Government most heartily for having promoted a deserving and highly meritorious Indian officer, Rai P. C. Lahiri Bahadur, to the post of Deputy Commissioner of Calcutta police. I hope the appointment will be made permanent, and that similar encouragement will be given to other Indian officers of the police service. While congratulating the Commissioner of Police, Mr. Clarke, on the increase of his salary, I feel I must acquaint Your Excellency of the apathy of the police in regulating the traffic in the northern part of the town, especially in the crowded Indian mercantile quarters, where the police is supremely apathetic, and the obstruction is so great that one can hardly move from one end of a street to the other in less than an hour. The carters obstruct the streets and the footpaths without the slightest compunction and become insolent when asked to move, and the disconcerted traveller wonders whether Mr. Clarke has ceded this part of the British territory to the bail-gariwallas.

The Union Committees now being established in some parts of Bengal, and which will multiply in number, should be provided with larger funds. The recommendations of the Decentralization Committee on the subject should be given effect to. A part of the cesses levied within the area of each union should be given to it to carry out sanitary improvements within the area. The question of water-supply in rural areas has been to the fore for several years past. The re-excavation and provision of reserved tanks for drinking purposes are the crying necessities of the country. A systematic programme should be prepared for the purpose of supplying pure drinking water in rural areas. Coming nearer home may I inquire what is the fate of the scheme for water-supply of riparian municipalities near Calcutta about which we heard much some years ago? A number of Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors have been appointed under the new Act in some of the municipalities. In my opinion it is a move in the right direction. There should be a sanitary service and Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors should be attached to all populous Municipalities in Bengal, and the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal should give them proper guidance to improve the sanitation of the areas entrusted to their charge. It would be interesting to know the effect on the general health of the municipalities where these Health Officers have been working. I do not know whether Health Officers have been appointed in the outlying municipalities near Calcutta. It is important that the sanitation of these municipalities should be well looked after, for the outbreak of an epidemic in these areas would not only work local havoc, but affect the health of Calcutta. With the progress of the operation of the Calcutta Improvement Trust people would be moving outside the city. The suburban municipalities should be rendered healthy and attractive to them. Considerable structural improvements as well as improvements in drainage and water-supply and communications must be made to make the suburbs suitable for residential purposes. The Government should make separate grants for the purpose, as these municipalities are too poor to contribute like Calcutta to the improvement of their areas. It is proposed to take up the improvement of Howrah; I have no objection to it. It ought to be improved. There should be a separate Trust with a separate engineering staff and with local members to form a Board, and a separate fund should be assigned to them instead of over-burdening the Calcutta Trust and draining its resources, which are intended solely for the improvement of Calcutta. This is the deliberate opinion of the Indian members of the Trust. However anxious our able Chairman,

Discussion of the Budget.Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

Mr. Bompas, may be to extend his raj separation of the local Trust will work more expeditiously and satisfactorily than the over-burdened and over-worked Calcutta Trust. May I inquire in this connection what is the fate of a permanent Howrah bridge? A sum of fifteen thousand and seven hundred rupees have been budgetted for payment to the expert, Mr. Basil Mott. May I inquire what is his advice, and whether the permanent bridge will be a reality within a measurable distance of time? Speaking on sanitation in Calcutta I desire to draw Your Excellency's attention to the abominable condition of the canal on the Eastern boundary of Calcutta. The canal is in a most filthy condition and the water is no better than poisonous sewage. The Corporation have spent several lakhs in the improvement of the fringe area. It is now an excellent area with new broad roads and well-sanitised houses. But the canal is a perpetual menace to the health of the locality. Is there no one responsible for it?

I find that the pay and allowances of the Collector of Income-tax and also of the Collector of Calcutta is to be raised. It is to be regretted that while the emoluments of the Collector of Income-tax are increased the other officers under him upon whom devolve the stupendous work of assessment and the additional work in consequence of the changes in the Income-tax Law have been passed over. Their responsibilities are great and they certainly deserve well of Government, and I hope they will be granted a proportionate increase to their pay and allowances.

In this connection, I would draw attention to the present block in promotion in the Executive branch of the Provincial Civil Service. The block seems to be the result of the action of Government in adding considerably to the number of posts in the lower grade of the service, leaving the higher grades just as they were. Promotions to the higher grades become in consequence much rarer than they were before, and the block has not only continued for years, but it seems it is growing more acute every year. Naturally there is disappointment and discontent in the service.

I understand that the lowest pay of the ministerial establishment in East Bengal is Rs. 30 which was fixed by the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam, while the lowest pay in West Bengal is Rs. 25. This disparity has created great discontent and Rs. 25 is not a living wage to an honest family man. May I appeal to Government to equalize the pay by raising the lowest pay from Rs. 25 to Rs. 30 in re-united Bengal? My Lord, we are passing through a period of exceptional hardship and strain. We are all hard hit by the war, and none more so than the poorer bhadralok class and the bulk of your ministerial officers come from this community. Living has become exceptionally dear. Every commodity has gone up in price and the wearing apparel, especially the cloth, has gone up in price beyond the avarice of the keenest speculator. There is much distress in the country. I appeal to Government to consider whether a war allowance cannot be granted, say, at the rate of 10 per cent. to all Government servants drawing salaries below Rs. 100.

In the Post and Telegraph Departments under the Government of India, as well as in most Railways, ministerial officers have been granted a temporary increase on their pay on account of high prices. The Bombay Government is also considering the desirability of granting such allowances. I submit, therefore, my suggestion for a war allowance to the underpaid officers under Your Excellency's Government is worthy of consideration.

In this connection I would draw the attention of Government to the fact that peons and orderlies in Calcutta and mufassal offices under the Government of Bengal are paid a monthly salary of Rs. 8 and Rs. 6, respectively. It is well known that the pay of domestic servants in Calcutta has gone up to Rs. 10 and Rs. 12 and in the mufassal to Rs. 8 and Rs. 10. It is hardly possible in these hard times for these poor people to subsist on Rs. 6 or Rs. 8, the present low salary, not to speak of maintaining their family. A small increase to their salary will be an act of bare justice. It would also go to some extent to check corruption, which inevitably follows in the wake of low pay and want of means.

Before I leave this subject, I desire to draw Your Excellency's attention to the case of the reporters of this Council. For the Bengal Legislative Council with 53 members, there are only three reporters on Rs. 200 rising to Rs. 300, whereas for the Imperial Legislative Council with 64 members, there are six reporters on Rs. 400 to Rs. 600. The work of this Council is not less onerous and heavy, and I hope that the Hon'ble the Vice-President will take this into his kind consideration.

Speaking on the subject of high prices it is satisfactory to note that the Government have begun to tackle the price of salt. Much more serious is the price of cloth, and the people have been very much affected by the extraordinary rise. The Government cannot increase the supply, but it can and ought to put a stop to all profiteering speculation. We do not know the amount of stock in cloth. We are prepared to bear hardships incidental to the devastating war, but the Government should see that this troublous time is not seized upon by manufacturers and middlemen for making extraordinary profit to the misery of the people."

The Hon'ble DR. DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

It is a matter of satisfaction that the privilege of making general observations in connection with the Budget still continues, though the privilege of moving separate resolutions in this connection previous to the debate, as well as of moving resolutions connected with questions of importance from time to time still continues. Some are inclined to look upon this as a remnant of pre-historic times when the Budget debate was the only occasion open to Members to refer to questions of public interest unconnected with the various Bills brought before the Council from time to time by the Government. From this point of view some are inclined to curtail this privilege, others are in favour of doing away with it altogether. It strikes me that the time-limit of 15 minutes is as much of a curtailment as might be reasonably insisted on and that no further curtailment ought to be thought of, at least at the present stage.

The various resolutions moved in connection with the Budget touch different questions or different aspects of the same question, and a general debate like this assists in comprehensive survey of the whole situation. It is a matter of gratification that sanitation and education—two outstanding questions of public importance and interest—have engaged most of the attention of the Council. There has been some slight non-official success at the Council debate in connection with these resolutions, which shows that when Members are able to bring forward practical suggestions upon which agreement among non-official Members is possible, it is possible to carry a resolution even without a division as was notably illustrated in connection with the important resolution of Sir Rajendra Nath Mukherji.

It is a matter of great concern to us that the original educational figures were reduced in the revised statement. No reason for this was put forward except war conditions. War conditions prevailed even when the original statement was prepared and a more generous educational budget was made. But, as during the war, at the last moment the Government have gone on the plea that the educational budget can be put off until after the war, they have reduced the educational budget under the category of not very clear, and I claim that readiness for post-war reforms will largely depend upon how we shape our education to-day. There is room for expenditure for the whole of the amount originally provided and much more. Here at all events there can be no question of absence of definite schemes, for schemes we have in abundance which can be fully matured within a short time and some are quite mature. We want money for bettering our State and State-aided schools and colleges, we want money for bettering our unaided schools and colleges, we want money for strengthening University education and for nursing industrial education, we want money for placing female education on more assured basis, all of which would absorb more than the amount of reduction. We realize that owing to war conditions this is only a temporary set-back, and sincerely hope that as soon as the times improve the amounts held back will be forthcoming for the various ear-marked purposes. But even during the war and really for the purposes of the war, industrial education has to be fostered more than ever. And movements like those terminating in the Bengali Regiment, the Bengal Light Horse, and the Calcutta University Corps might well be financed to a certain extent from the provincial point of view though they have a distinctly Imperial point of view also. The good name of Bengal as a military recruiting ground can be revived at a comparatively small cost, and one notices with disappointment that no provision towards this end finds place in the Budget.

It is noticeable that under education there was a decrease of Rs. 5,30,000 last year, which is said to be due to savings under grants-in-aid and Imperial grants. This is a saving of a very questionable nature with so many urgent schemes waiting for support. Such a saving has been attempted this year also, for at page 5 of the Amended Draft Financial Statement we are told the decrease of Rs. 16,99,000 is due to savings in the Imperial grants and in the grant for the Calcutta hostels. As a matter of fact the whole of this is not savings strictly speaking, but is either ear-marked and is awaiting expenditure or has been held up.

The reference to the grant for Calcutta hostels is in regard, I suppose, to the sum of Rs. 3,35,000, which the Government of Bengal have long been under obligation to pay to the University towards its new hostel schemes. It may be in the recollection of some Members that on a previous occasion the Government of India had made a grant of Rs. 10,00,000 for Calcutta hostels which was not, therefore, applied for the purpose of these hostels but was diverted to various purposes, into the details of which it is unnecessary now to go. There was a subsequent grant of Rs. 10,00,000 by the Government of India to the University direct for the erection of the long-deferred hostels. It was thereupon arranged as a result of a conference that the balance in the hands of the Government of Bengal out of the previous grant amounting to Rs. 3,39,000 should be paid towards the University hostels and a scheme was accordingly prepared. In the preparation of this scheme, a somewhat liberal estimate was framed, according to the standard of the Public Works Department, and it was expected that the whole of the Rs. 13,39,000. Rigid economy and close personal supervision, however, enabled the University during the last four years to construct these hostels at a lower expenditure, in spite of the rise in prices due to the war. The work was tested at every step by the Public Works Department, and has been passed as satisfactory. In regard to the preparation of the scheme and supervision we had considerable assistance from Your Excellency's Public Works Department and from the Government Architect, which obligation I take this opportunity of acknowledging. It shows how good work can be secured cheap if the requisite goodwill prevails among those concerned, and though I am unable to state yet what the actual savings will be, I have reasons to believe that the savings will not be inconsiderable. I claim again, as I have often claimed already, that these savings ought to be devoted to the construction of hostels for students who are not ordinarily admitted to the general hostels owing to caste reasons. The authorities are naturally anxious that effective steps should be taken to reconcile all points of view, and that the strength of the hostel scheme, as a whole, should not be neutralized by reason of this weakness. The Director of Public Instruction has been good enough to inform me that he will be prepared to finance temporary hostels for Namasudras, Jogis and Sahas, and that is an acceptable relief so far. But the whole thing will have to be placed on a permanent basis, and it can only be done by constructing permanent hostels for these classes, as well as for our Buddhist students. The savings that we have been able to effect, and other sums, will be necessary, and I hope they will be forthcoming. It is, therefore, with some surprise that I read at page 4 of the Amended Draft Financial Statement some words which used not to figure at this place formerly. I suggest that the Rs. 3,39,000 which is shown as 'saving' is intended for the purposes that I indicate and not for a hostel for the Bethune College as the words I complain of, would indicate. As a member of the Governing Body of the Bethune College, and as one devoted to the cause of female education, no one is more keenly interested in a hostel for the Bethune College than I am. As an occasional Inspector of the College I have often pressed this on the authorities, but on no account could we consent to the diversion of any portion of this Rs. 3,35,000 for the Bethune College; that has to be constructed out of other funds of the Government and not out of the funds which have all along been intended as we understood for building hostels for private colleges.

I would once again very strongly appeal for the restoration of the grant to private colleges which, though nominally provided in the Budget for the last three years, has not been paid except in small dribblets for special purposes. When the University Regulations were framed it was fully recognized that the colleges out of their own resources could not possibly effect the improvement insisted upon by the University, and in full view of this, the special grant to private colleges was provided, as well as the grant for the University mess scheme, for enhancing which I unsuccessfully appealed to the Council. Though my resolution for the larger mess grant failed, I trust some further relief will be given towards the scheme out of the private college grant, as has recently been done for special purposes like furnishing the new hostels. I would assure the Council once again that the University mess scheme cannot be properly run with the limited grant now given. In this connection I desire to acknowledge the efforts of the Government for placing the messing scheme of medical students on a better footing. The medical students had so long escaped the requirements of the residence law and it was only last year that by constant pressure the matter was taken up. We have difficulties in the case of law students also, but these we are trying to overcome because the generosity of the Government to the Law College still continues. It is distinctly reassuring to have a large grant for aiding primary education, and, if a proper scheme be prepared and the public be taken into the confidence of the Government, a good scheme with great results may be achieved during the next few months. It is unfortunate, however, that the scheme for bettering the status of the professors and teachers as a whole, sympathetically referred to by His Excellency the Viceroy, is practically in abeyance, and till this scheme matures neither primary education nor secondary education will be on a sound basis.

We are gratified to be reassured in connection with the Budget resolution and in other connections that the questions of bettering the prospects of the members of the Subordinate Judicial Service and of the Subordinate Provincial Educational Service are engaging the attention of Government. We trust tangible results will soon be forthcoming. The recommendations of the Public Services Commission in connection with the educational service have been exhaustively considered by a special committee, which Your

Discussion of the Budget.Dr. Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

Excellency recently appointed, and the recommendations of that committee also are before Government. There can, therefore, be no reason for delaying the schemes for bettering the prospects of members of the Educational Service in the different branches. With regard to the Judicial Service it is needless to say anything further after what has been said here on behalf of the Government and we can only hope for the best.

The reassurance about the schemes for allaying the effects of Damodar Floods is also welcome. It is doubly welcome to be reassured that a sum of Rs. 20,000 is expected to achieve very large results. We trust this is not too optimistic a view. In the meantime the minor works provided in the Budget in connection with the scheme will bring some relief. I was concerned to hear from the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley in connection with some resolution before this Council that even this minor scheme might be delayed. I sincerely trust that this will not be delayed, and we hope that before long the people, though accustomed to long suffering, will have to stand no further trials. The village that honoured itself by being the birth-place of Raja Rammohan Ray is about to be honoured by having a suitable memorial of the great Raja raised after many years. This is making Radhanagar a centre of attention not only in many parts of this country, but of the wider world where the Raja's labours are known and appreciated. Now, more than ever, is the time for protecting the village and its neighbourhood from devastation of flood.

There is an acceptable increase of revenue, amounting to over Rs. 52,00,000, which has probably assisted in easing the situation to a certain extent. Rupees 9,00,000 of this sum, however, comes from Excise. The increase was originally estimated at Rs. 10,00,000, but according to the Revised Financial Statement it is Rs. 9,00,000. We do not know the basis either of the one or the other estimate, and are told that the increase which is chiefly in Calcutta, is due to the prevention of dilution and the fixation of maximum prices. This is said to have contributed to a larger increase in the consumption of licit country spirits.

If the suggestion is that there is a certain number of ill-conditioned people, who would prefer diluted and cheap liquor, and who ordinarily indulge in liquor of illicit manufacture, they have probably been given the chance of improving their taste by dilution being stopped and by prices being raised. It has been a complaint on the part of Temperance workers that too high license fees, while to a certain extent discounting the inordinate increase of shops, has the corresponding evil effect of compelling shop-keepers to force and canvass for better sale, so that they may not be put to loss or what they consider as loss. We have had a recent illustration of how these high license fees must recoil on the situation. There was, within what is now going to be the 'dry educational area', a shop in Maniktala Street—a comparatively obscure locality—and as soon as this shop was dislodged, owing to the requirements of the dry area, it was shifted to a very prominent and attractive position in a public thoroughfare, declared as such by the municipality, viz., Beadon Street. There has been strong public protest against this location. Residents of the locality and Christian ministers of the Church, educationists, professional men and the general public have strongly protested against this site, and have pointed out less objectionable sites down some lane; but the site selected by the department will flourish, though within close proximity of bazars, educational institutions, theatres and places of public worship. The increased license fees paid monthly by the vendor will have to be made good and the thoroughfare from which other public pests had been removed is to have a grog-shop planted on it because the other side of the road happens to be the legal boundary of the dry area. It stands to reason that the dry area can be only nominally so with so much wet in its immediate neighbourhood, and it would hardly be a matter of surprise if the increase of Rs. 9,00,000 which we are having to-day may be more during the next year. It would be no answer to say that the increase is on country liquor and the shop in question has probably no license for sale of country liquor. Public protests like this have gone in vain before. My Muhammadan colleagues will remember how fruitless have their and our exertions been to remove the grog-shop in Wellington Street opposite the Muhammadan hostel in Bowbazar. We are very thankful for the experimental dry area scheme and I trust such scheme will be given a real chance. They may well be extended in Calcutta and the Mufasssal. In speaking of the efforts of the Temperance workers last year, the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell with his usual candour said that they need not lay to their heart the flattering unction that the decrease in excise revenue last year was due to their efforts or to the appreciation of their efforts. He practically said that the defect would correct itself at the earliest possible opportunity and we see that that opportunity has not been long in coming. While we recognize that the Government policy in the matter of excise has been steadily progressing for the better of late, there are unpleasant features which make one anxious and some of the matters that I have just referred to are but a portion of those unpleasant features. We must not forget what is being done in England and America towards excise reform in the larger interest of humanity, and Government here must make up its mind to do without excise revenue in time. And in the meantime they have to put down such revenues as much as possible, consistently of course with the need also of putting down licit manufacture and traffic. The All-India Temperance Conference during the last cold weather emphasized the need of reform in important directions to which I would earnestly draw the attention of this Council. All friends of the country and of the Temperance cause must insist that excise revenues should not be lightly allowed to increase and that all possible steps should be taken to control the evil. We do not say that the Government deliberately takes steps to force larger sales. At the same time, we cannot shut our eyes to obvious results which makes one uneasy and anxious. Our insistent appeal must be for reduction of consumption all round. One obvious suggestion that ought to be acceptable to the department would be reduction of the time during which hostels and restaurants are kept open. 9-30 p.m. is an hour suggested by Temperance Workers as has been done in Great Britain and as the hour bell reminding me that my time is up has just been rung I close my remarks with the suggestion for time-limit. Let us have this, at least as a war economy."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, though I am one of the sinners in the direction complained of by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie, I do not wish to take Your Excellency's time by adding anything to what has already been said by my friend the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. The only explanation is that I do not know in what other way we may make known the grievances of our constituents to the authorities other than by a discussion in this Council. I now proceed to make some observations on the Budget.

The year 1917-18 has been estimated to end with the largest closing balance shown since the year 1912-13. This result, however, is not due to the rise of ordinary revenue but to a pretty large sale of quinine and other materials for war, and to a large saving in expenditure, mainly account for the gain over the estimated closing balance of Rs. 3,15,58,000. The net gain Rs. 61,94,000 consists of—

			Rs.
(i)	rise in opening balance	...	12,85,000
(ii)	net increase in revenue	...	21,53,000
(iii)	net decrease in expenditure	...	27,56,000

Discussion of the Budget.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The explanation given in regard to the Revised Budget is quite insufficient for thoroughly realizing the nature of the changes. I wish a separate explanatory sheet giving the details and the reasons for the alterations were attached to the Financial Statement. I hope this will be done in the future. I may be permitted here to explain the reasons of my complaint. There was a provision of Rs. 98,13,000 for educational expenditure in the Budget for 1917-18. In explaining the Revised Estimate it is stated that under head 'Education' the original Budget was reduced by Rs. 16,99,000 due to saving in the Imperial grant and the grant for Calcutta hostels (page 3). At page 22, however, in showing how the Imperial grants of Rs. 30,15,000 are likely to be expended in 1917-18, it is shown that the probable expenditure in 1917-18 would amount to Rs. 20,81,000 under 'Education' and a sum of Rs. 1,15,000 under 'Public Works Department' and that the saving in the Imperial grants would amount to Rs. 8,19,000. It is also explained at page 21 that the decrease of Rs. 16,99,000 is due to the fact that the Imperial grants, especially the grant of 9 lakhs, for improving the pay and training of teachers, and the grant of Rs. 3,39,000 for Calcutta hostels were not fully utilized and to the transfer of certain grants. Excluding the Imperial grant of Rs. 30,15,000 the original Budget provision for Education under several sub-heads amounted to Rs. 67,98,000 and the revised provision under these heads amounted to Rs. 81,14,000. So there was an excess expenditure of Rs. 13,16,000 only. How these Rs. 20,81,000 of the Imperial grants could be spent is not at all clear. Whatever expenditure out of the Educational grant is incurred under the Public Works Department either by transfer, or as original provision, ought to be clearly shown or noticed in connection with the Educational grant. In the absence of these informations it is very difficult for us to get an insight into the Budget and our criticism must necessarily be prefatory and it may not be to the point.

The question naturally arises why of all other subjects Education should suffer so heavy a loss or, in other words, why it should thus be neglected. Out of a grant of Rs. 98,13,000 allotted to Education, Rs. 16,99,000 or Rs. 15,84,000, after deducting Rs. 1,15,000 provided under Public Works Department, could not be spent within the year. To my mind it is a public grievance and the public has a right to demand a satisfactory explanation as to where the difficulty arises in spending the sum allotted and with whom the responsibility lies for its non-fulfilment. We, the non-official members are the people's representatives, and have been crying hoarse in this Council for a larger grant and for greater facilities for Education which is at its lowest ebb in this country. The illiteracy of the masses is rather appalling as compared with the progress of Education in other civilized countries. For want of funds no educational arrangements have yet been made to make the best use of the vast resources of the country and its dying industries, and yet the Education Department, so well organized and well qualified, is unable to spend the sanctioned sum of Rs. 98,13,000. If, however, for some reason or other the whole allotment could not be spent within the year, the unspent balance ought to have been re-allotted for the very use for which it was originally intended. We are told at page 4 that it has been impossible to provide for the re-grant of unspent balances of Imperial grants for Education and some other heads, as under the orders of the Government of India, the provincial balances are not available for expenditure without special sanction. Sanction, however, was sought for and granted for utilizing Rs. 40,20,000 of this unspent balance and a list is appended to show how this sum is proposed to be spent. Three Educational grants are mentioned in the list but it appears that they are met from the ordinary allotment of the year. My complaint is that the whole unspent balance of the Educational grants ought to have been given for the expenditure which could not be undertaken or finished within the year 1917-18. We are grateful to the Government of India for the lump provision of 5½ lakhs for the development of Primary Education. The sum, however, is very inadequate but I hope the best possible use of this grant will be made as early as possible and the much-needed arrangement for Compulsory Primary Education, at least in selected areas, may be given a start.

I moved a resolution unsuccessfully on the Budget this year for reducing the rates of the fees to those previously obtaining in the Government colleges. I hope Government will reconsider this matter as I have every apprehension that this increment is very likely to affect the spread of high education which is so much needed in this country.

The question of the annual exodus to Darjeeling was discussed at length last year during the Budget debate by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. A resolution for curtailing the exodus expenses was unsuccessfully moved at the Dacca meeting of this Council in August last. The question, however, is well worthy of serious consideration of Government. Is it really beneficial to the work of Government and does it tend to increase their efficiency, as the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon put it in the last Budget debate? If necessary at all, why not restrict it to one summer trip only? The Autumn trip at least can safely be curtailed. A stay of over three months at Darjeeling during the summer ought to be considered sufficient to renovate the energies of the Secretariat staff. The Puja vacation may be utilized by those who have a special fascination for the bracing hill climate of September or October. Public revenue should not suffer for that. Circumstances, my Lord, demand the strictest economy on all possible sides.

The most noticeable feature in the Budget is that the police expenditure is gradually expanding. The ever-growing police expenditure is not only a menace but a positive obstacle to the development of other branches of the administration. It is really scandalous that Government should turn a deaf ear to the popular clamour against it. Police and police buildings have swallowed up 24 per cent. of the entire revenue for the year. With due deference to the Government view and the opinion of some of the non-official members on the subject, I am bound to say that this heavy expenditure at the present moment has no justification. It is high time, my Lord, that a special committee of this Council, both official and non-official, should enquire and consider how to check this growing demand of the Police Department. As I have shown above, a large saving under Education has been encroached upon by the police in the new Budget.

I am glad to notice that agriculture and sanitation have received more attention this year. The Calcutta University also has recognized the importance of agricultural education and has created a Faculty for Agriculture along with one for Commerce. I hope greater attention would be paid and Agricultural Demonstration Farms would be widely started and the result of these farms would also be widely circulated in vernacular and field demonstrators in agriculture would render all possible help to the agriculturists.

North Bengal is specially infected with malaria and the death-rate from fever there is abnormally high in comparison with Calcutta. Pure drinking water and proper drainage are absolutely necessary for an effective check upon the ravages of malaria. The river Atrai and the Chalan Bihl in the Rajshahi district should be thoroughly investigated. I am glad Government also feel the need for the same. The water-works for the Natore Municipality have been provided this year and the town is sure to be benefited by the project, but side by side proper drainage of the town should also be taken up.

It is a matter of regret my Lord, that India with its vast resources should be dependent upon foreign countries for its ordinary necessities of life. A very vast area is under cotton cultivation in India, but we are to depend upon foreign countries for even the clothes of ordinary use. Enormous quantities of jute grow in the country, but the jute-growers are in extreme poverty for the want of a market on account of shipping difficulties. With full development of industry, commerce and agriculture and educational facilities, India is sure to be self-contained and altogether independent of foreign help. That surely is the paramount aim of Government and that is the aspiration of every Indian patriot."

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHANDRA MITTER said :—

"My Lord, I should like to offer a few preliminary remarks about the position of the general revenues of the province. If we turn to the first page of the Civil Budget Estimate, which was circulated, we find that the total revenue of the whole province comes to Rs. 2,363 lakhs and odd and out of that the appropriation of the Imperial Government amounts to Rs. 1,666 lakhs and odd and that of the Provincial Government is only Rs. 696 lakhs and odd. If we turn to the account for 1916-17 we find that the total revenue was Rs. 2,074 lakhs and the appropriation of the Imperial Government was Rs. 1,412 lakhs and odd, whereas the appropriation of our Government was Rs. 662 lakhs and odd. Now, my Lord, in drawing attention to this my only object is to have an investigation for the future as to how our contributions compare with those of the other provinces. I am fully aware that Imperial expenditure on heads like Army and Navy, General Administration and other necessities of Imperial concern must have precedence, but the point for consideration is whether the different provinces bear their share properly and legitimately. Now, my Lord, looking at the total figures of 1915-16 of the Imperial Government I find that out of a total revenue of 85 million pounds the Provincial revenue is 30 million pounds and the Imperial revenue 55 millions. If we work out on this basis we find that our province is contributing about a crore of rupees more than other provinces. I may be mistaken in my figures, but I would respectfully ask the Government and my colleagues to investigate the point further as a question of future importance, and the question may be one of very great importance in view of the coming reforms with regard to the future settlement or surrender or contribution of revenue after those reforms. My Lord, the Imperial Government gets a net revenue of 15 crores and odd after meeting an expenditure of 1 crore and odd out of a gross income of 16 crores and odd, whereas Your Excellency's Government gets only 6 crores and odd. With these preliminary remarks about the situation of the general revenue of the province I desire to pass on to some of the important items of our Budget, and before proceeding with my criticisms and suggestions I should like very shortly to indicate some of the heads on which I beg to offer my respectful congratulations to the Government.

The most notable of these heads are certain items provided for education, for sanitation, for agriculture and for certain items of miscellaneous and scientific departments. My Lord, these are expenditure which go towards the development of the people and they are of great importance in nation-building in the true sense of the word.

As regards the contribution on the head of Education, I desire to point out that the provision of Rs. 27,67,000 in the place of the actuals of 1916-17—Rs. 20,62,000 with regard to the expenditure for Government schools is a very commendable increase. Then, my Lord, there is the grant of Rs. 5,50,000 on primary education to which some of my Hon'ble friends have drawn the attention of this Council.

Then about sanitation some of the notable items are set out at page 24, sub-paragraphs 4 and 5. One about Rs. 2,25,000 for the Government contribution regarding the Arnil Bhil in Jessore and the other of Rs. 1,50,000 for the Jabuna in the 24-Parganas are items which I believe will prove very beneficial to the people. I happen to know, My Lord, some part of the country and I venture to assert with confidence that if the scheme can be properly taken up and worked by the District Board it will alleviate the preventable misery to a great extent and the people will be greatly benefited by the latter contribution.

The next item on which I venture to felicitate the Government is for the provision of Rs. 1 lakh for the distribution of Kakai-Bombai jute and Indrasal paddy as also an increased staff in the Agricultural and Co-operative Departments which were all set out in the Budget. These again, are expenditures which will help in the development of the resources of the country, from which the raiyats will derive great benefit and from which all sections of the community will ultimately be greatly benefited.

Lastly, there is a small item of Rs. 20,000 for the extension of Cinchona cultivation which I venture to think will lead to very good results, but I have certain suggestions and criticisms to offer with regard to this point and I will deal with it later.

My Lord, I have one more important item, namely, the provision of full augmentation grants to District Boards. I believe that the District Boards will take full advantage of this further sum placed at their disposal and I only hope that the regrettable experience of 1913 to 1916 will not be repeated again. When, my Lord, the large sum of Rs. 29 lakhs was set free in favour of the District Boards for rural sanitary improvements, the improvement of water-supply, etc., the general public expected, and I venture to think they had every right to expect, that the District Boards would take advantage of the sum which was placed at their disposal, but unfortunately past history shows that they had not their schemes ready and that instead of spending this sum of money for the sanitary improvement of the locality within their jurisdiction they increased their closing balance. In one year the closing balance amounted to Rs. 51 lakhs out of a total income of Rs. 107 lakhs and next year to Rs. 13 lakhs out of Rs. 1 crore. The public complained through their representatives in the Council Chamber. I ought to point out, however, after the issue of certain Government circulars matters have improved. I should like at this stage to express the hope and to warn that the District Boards (at any rate those which have non-official Chairmen) should take full advantage of the augmentation grant.

My Lord, these are the points on which I have ventured to congratulate the Government. Now I proceed to make certain suggestions and criticisms with regard to the Forest revenue and the administration of the Forest Department. Certain figures are helpful. I find, my Lord, in the Moral and Material Progress of India the total forest area is 10,612 square miles, out of that 4,871 is reserved, 1,711 is protected and 4,030 is enclosed forest. The estimated gross revenue is only Rs. 16 lakhs and odd and the estimated gross expenditure is Rs. 7,56,000. My Lord, a simple calculation will show that the gross revenue yields about one pice to the acre. I am not an expert, but is there good reason why the yield is so small, as it is a matter of common knowledge that the price of fuel, wood, timber and other necessities of life have gone up considerably. I venture to think that there is something wrong somewhere. There is some want of organization, there is some want of touch between the consumers and the Department and my only object in drawing attention of Your Excellency's Government to this point is, that I hope that the matter will be investigated and that a large area of 10,612 square miles in a populated province like that of ours with its splendid water-ways and with its splendid railways should be properly developed and our forest revenue increased.

Discussion of the Budget.Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy.

Then there is the item of chincona cultivation which I referred to before. The reports of your Lordship's Government show that there are two plantations and that the total area of these two plantations is 2,300 acres. Both these plantations are in the district of Darjeeling; under favourable conditions, due to military requirements, they yielded last year about Rs. 8 lakhs, but the average income was Rs. 5 to Rs. 5½ lakhs. For half square mile (half square mile really means only 400 square yards or thereabouts) if an income of Rs. 5 to Rs. 8 lakhs could be derived, there must be other localities in that district near about these plantations with similar conditions, where by the extension of the chincona cultivation, under the experts' advice, something like 8 or 10 square miles, a total income of about half a crore could be secured. Here again, I speak with a good deal of diffidence because it is a matter pre-eminently for experts, but at the same time, knowing the climatic conditions of the district as I do, I believe that similar localities can perhaps be found and my only object in drawing the attention of the Government to this matter is that there may be further investigations about it. It is hardly necessary for me to dilate on the great importance of the extension of the chincona cultivation in a malarious-stricken province like Bengal apart from its financial importance.

With regard to the Budget for Education, I venture to think it is somewhat regrettable that the Rs. 9 lakhs which are allotted for the improvement of the training and pay of teachers were not fully utilized last year. Under the heading of total probable expenditure in 1917-18 only Rs. 2,14,000 was spent. I realize that on the first year of the working of the grant there might have been difficulties, but I do hope that in the current year the full amount will be utilized.

The Hon'ble DR. ABDULLA-AL-MAMUN SUHRAWARDY said :—

"My Lord, the general features of the Budget have already been discussed by other Hon'ble members and they do not call for any further comments from me. But there are a few topics of special interest to me and my community which justify my making a few observations. Last year I dwelt at some length on the importance of Technical and Commercial education to Muslims. Since then the matter has assumed increasing importance. The University of Calcutta has realized the urgent need of opening new lines of study and new careers for the young men of Bengal, and has just submitted its recommendation to His Excellency the Chancellor to provide for the Bachelor's Degree Examinations in Agriculture, Technology and Commerce. There are departments of Government, like the Department of Agriculture, which require in candidates for employment, special qualifications in some of the subjects indicated above. Consequently, Muslim candidates, lacking the necessary technical knowledge, are debarred from obtaining appointments in these departments, despite Government circulars for the increasing employment of Muslims in every branch of the administration. The paucity of Muslim students in Government professional colleges is obvious from the statement laid on the table in answer to a question put by me at the Council meeting of the 4th September last. It appears from the statement that in the Calcutta Medical College, for instance, out of 1,040 students there are only 45 Muslims. Strenuous and earnest efforts, my Lord, should, undoubtedly be made in the first instance, by prominent Muslims to bring the Muhammadan students into line with the students of other advancing communities which have early read the signs of the times. Otherwise they will find themselves once more hopelessly beaten in the battle of life and wake up too late in the day to find positions of power and influence already occupied by others. At the same time nothing substantial is likely to be achieved without Government support and encouragement. The crime of the Muslims, my Lord, is their poverty. Without a liberal award of Government stipends and scholarships it would be difficult to induce an increasing number of Muslim students to undergo the long, arduous and expensive course of study required in professional schools and colleges. I earnestly trust that Your Excellency's Government will reserve special scholarships for Muslim students in the professional schools and colleges, and afford them facilities for admission by reserving for them a number of vacancies in these institutions. Whilst on the subject of education, my Lord, I may be permitted to invite Your Excellency's attention to a just grievance of Muslim students studying in the I. A. and B.A. classes in such Calcutta colleges as do not provide for the teaching of Arabic and Persian. In order to satisfy the University authorities, these students have to attend a course of lectures in Arabic and Persian at the University. Apart from the inconvenience of attending lectures experienced by students of colleges at a distance from the Senate House all of them have to pay an extra monthly fee to the University in addition to the fee they have to pay to their respective colleges. The result is, that in some cases, poor Muslim students have to give up Arabic and Persian and study Sanskrit and Pali instead. I hope the University authorities will see their way to reduce or remit the extra fee which they realize from these Muslim students.

Discussion of the Budget.Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy.

My Lord, there is another matter connected with the University which is of the utmost importance to students of History. The foundation of a Chair of Oriental History and Culture is one of the foremost needs of the premier University in the East. The Carmichael Professorship of Ancient Indian History and Culture has partially supplied the need. I hope before long Government will be in a position to make a substantial grant to the University for the creation of the Ronaldshay Professorship of Islamic History and Culture.

My Lord, the extension of hostel accommodation for Muslim is also a matter to which I invite the attention of the authorities. The building in Mirzapore Street in which Muslim law students are miserably housed offers a striking contrast to the grand structure close by with electric installation and other conveniences for Hindu law students. I trust the university will adequately recognize the claims of Muhammadan students and provide better hostel accommodation for them.

Last year, my Lord, I invited the attention of Government to the sovereign importance of the encouragement of female education amongst Muslims. I fail to discover in the Budget estimate any special provision for its promotion and encouragement. As the Secretary of the Suhrawardy Muslim Girls' School I have to experience the usual difficulties which beset the path of workers in the cause of female education, and I assure Your Excellency that without generous assistance from Government all private efforts in the direction of education of Muslim girls are doomed to failure. One of the chief obstacles in the way of progress is the difficulty of getting trained teachers. There is a Training School in Calcutta for Hindu female teachers, and it is high time for Government to establish a similar school for Muslims. The intellectual regeneration of Muslims, I repeat, can never be achieved unless we lift up the veil of ignorance which separates the Zenana from the world of light.

My Lord, as the Philological Secretary of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, I welcome the allowance to it of Rs. 9,600 for standard and useful works and I avail myself of the present opportunity of expressing my grateful thanks to Government for sanctioning the renewal to the Society of a grant of Rs. 3,000 for a further period of five years for the publication of Arabic and Persian works of historical interest.

Discussion of the Budget.Maulvi Abul Kasem.

"My Lord, from the answer to a question put by me it appears that on the 1st June 1917 the number of prisoners in the jails of this Presidency was 14,309. Of these 8,660 were Muhammadans, 5,422 were Hindus and Sikhs and only 79 were Christians. In the jails, the Muslims have the unenviable distinction of occupying a position of bad eminence. I need hardly say that some efforts should be made to improve this state of affairs. Two Chaplains are attached to the Alipore Central Jail for the benefit of the very few Christian prisoners there and a sum of Rs. 1,200 is set apart in the Budget estimate as the allowance of the Roman Catholic Chaplain attached to the Central Jail. I find no such provision for any Hindu Priest or Muslim Maulvi attached to any jail in Bengal. I invite the attention of Government to this anomaly and wonder why in this case the first should be last and the last first.

• My Lord, I now pass on to a subject which has engaged the earnest attention of Your Excellency. In your address to the District Boards on the 29th January last Your Excellency has described in eloquent terms the grim tragedy disclosed by your enquiries into the nature of malaria. An unhappy victim to the fell disease, I add my testimony based on personal experience in support of its description as 'the most virulent of all diseases which afflict the people of Bengal.' A cold shiver passes through me at its very mention, and the gaunt spectre of death flits before my eyes. In the words of Your Excellency 'it gnaws steadily and relentlessly into the vitality of the people.' It cuts off many a valuable life, blasts many a bright career, prevents many a man from fulfilling the promise of his early years. To combat such a disease is one of the ambitions of Your Excellency and I have no doubt that Your Excellency's name will go down to posterity and be cherished and remembered with gratitude as that of one of the great benefactors of humanity. Like Your Excellency, I am impatient of delay at the slow progress made in the fight against the ravages of Malaria. Not to speak of rural areas the disease is rampant in its most malignant form in places so near Calcutta as Tollygunge and Garden Reach. I hope and pray that with the termination of the world-wide war which is devastating Europe and Asia, it would be possible for Government to devote an adequate sum of money for the speedy extirpation of this scourge in Bengal.

In conclusion, I invite the attention of Government to a matter already mentioned by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, viz., the desirability of improving the pay and prospects of the silent victims of our eloquence—the Reporters of the Council who take down our speeches, audible and inaudible, under crying conditions."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, we have arrived at the last stage of the Budget, and according to the practice of this Council, we are permitted to express our opinions on general questions of the administration. Representing, as I do, my constituency in the Burdwan division, I feel it my duty to express the heartfelt thanks of myself and countrymen to Your Excellency's Government for the provision made in the Budget for protective measures for the mitigation of the effects of the floods of the Damodar and the Ajai. We all owe Your Excellency a deep debt of gratitude for the personal interest Your Excellency has taken in the matter and the sympathy Your Excellency has shown to the afflicted people. I hope and trust that the measures which will be adopted by the Department of Public Works will give relief to the suffering cultivators and save their crops and their villages from devastation and ruin. In this connection, my Lord, I have to make an appeal to Your Excellency's Government and that is—in 1916 there was a terrible flood on the banks of the Ajai as well as of the Damodar and Government granted gratuitous relief as well as some agricultural loans to the suffering people of these parts of the district. The agreement was that the money was to be repaid after a year and as misfortune would have it, there was a flood again in 1916; the poor raiyats have had as yet no crops to reap since 1916 and they are now in a position worse than that they were in the days when gratuitous relief and agricultural loans were granted to them. They have approached Your Excellency's Government with petitions praying for a suspension of the realisation of these loans and the matter is now under enquiry. I hope and trust, my Lord, that the question will receive favourable consideration at the hands of Your Excellency's Government. I regret, however, to inform the Government and this Council that while these petitions are pending enquiry some zealous subordinate officials in the district are realising, by all means they can, from the suffering tenants the dues and some of these poor tenants had to sell their homestead land to pay off this money.

My Lord, much has been said already about the educational wants of this Province and for a larger grant on education. I think I express the feelings of many people interested in education when I say that a proportionately larger amount of money is spent by the Department of Education on inspection rather than on instruction, and it has been said that there are more grains in the stables than there are horses to feed.

The want of industrial schools has also been felt. We want more money for education and sanitation. That commercial institutions are wanted or that industrial education should be given an impetus will be a cry in the wilderness. Your Excellency, in closing the Budget last year, expressed a desire that some means would be found for raising the money for meeting these requirements. I am afraid that the financial stress through which we are passing at the present moment will unfortunately continue for some years to come and it will not be possible for Government to meet the increasing demands of education and sanitation and I venture to suggest that Government may find some means for raising the money by taxation even to supply the funds for education and sanitation. Certainly, direct taxation is not very welcome to the people, but the needs of sanitation and education are so great that I think our people will readily submit to it so far as the Mahommedans are concerned. There has been a complaint from all sides that we want more money for Mahommedan education and certainly we do, but, my Lord, we stand in this happy position that we try to get this money by taxing ourselves. My friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq, submitted a Bill, by which we wanted to tax the Mahommedan communities to provide funds for Mahommedan education. Unfortunately for us the Government of India have thought fit not to allow its introduction. They are under the impression that no community should be taxed simply because it professes a particular faith. Whatever may be our opinion with regard to this, I hope Your Excellency's Government will introduce some form of new taxation or allow some non-official members to do it, because I personally think that the needs of sanitation and education are so pressing that we cannot wait any further and money must be found for them whether we pay it by direct taxation or get it from the Government revenue.

My Lord, more than two years back I moved a resolution in this Council for the establishment of a Government college in my native town Burdwan which is the only district where there is no model school started and maintained by Government. The then Director of Public Instruction, Mr. Hornell, very gracefully accepted the resolution on behalf of Government and expressed an opinion that a school was very badly needed for Burdwan. Since then, a site has been selected, but I regret to find that although we are spending large sums of money on different school buildings and school houses, still there is absolutely no provision made for this much-needed institution at Burdwan.

Discussion of the Budget.Maulvi Abul Kasem.

I have to repeat another complaint with reference to the Education Department and it is that the number of text books and the variety of subjects taught in the lower classes of our secondary schools and in the primary schools unnecessarily tax the memory and the brain of our young lads.

"My Lord, much has been said about the abnormally larger expenditure on the police, and I also feel it my duty to join the general chorus of complaint. We think that the police expenditure is disproportionate to its efficiency. A complaint has been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie that we have spent a good deal of time or wasted a good deal in discussing the Budget and in trying to decrease the police expenditure. My Lord, we, the non-official Indian members of this Council, occupy a very enviable position—rightly or wrongly our constituents believe that we can do them a good deal of good which we unfortunately cannot. They expect too much of us and we feel that we would be shirking our duty and would be called upon to explain our conduct if we do not, in this Council, ventilate the grievances of our countrymen and our constituents and place them for the consideration of Government and the Council. When we do so, we are supposed to be hostile critics of Government and following the pin-prick policy which we certainly do not. From our place in this Council we try to place the opinions which are held and formed by our people and we do it with a sincere desire that the matter may receive due consideration. My friend to my right (the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali) has said that if you introduce the proper sort of men to the police service, all the evils of the department will disappear. Unfortunately, I disagree with him on this point. However much we may raise the pay of the police officers we cannot change the morale of the service or improve its efficiency unless and until we find that the people are taken into confidence and their opinion is respected in the matter of the conduct and procedure adopted by the police. It is not reasonable, my Lord, to suppose that we, the Indian members are hostile to the police, that we do not want that law, order and peace should be preserved in the country, but I think we are more interested in the preservation of peace, order and law than the administration itself. The administration wants the police to be efficient for the sake of the inhabitants and nothing else, and if the people are always looked upon with some amount of distrust when they criticise the conduct of the police officers, I am sure the police cannot be reformed or improved. It has been our unfortunate experience to observe that whenever a complaint has been made by the public or a section of the public against the police or individual officers of the police, the superior officers of the police have always felt it necessary to support their subordinates and try to defend them or to explain away their conduct. That is the grievance which our countrymen feel on this point.

My Lord, a reference has been made to the administration charges on account of the partition of the districts of Mymensingh and Midnapore. The Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie says that when a district has become too large for administrative purposes it is necessary that it should be partitioned. Certainly, with regard to that point what myself and other Hon'ble Members in this Council on this side mean is that this partition could have waited a year or two more as they have gone on so long. Well, speaking of Midnapore the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie stated that at an early date a district would be formed with headquarters at Asansol. My Lord, as I belong to the district of Burdwan, I feel it my duty to protest against any proposal for partitioning Burdwan. Unfortunately, Burdwan is a large district like Midnapore or Mymensingh. What the people of Asansol really want is a Subordinate Judge's court and not an independent district altogether. Asansol has got a member of the Indian Civil Service as its Subdivisional Officer and it will not certainly improve its position simply if it gets a Civilian of standing of two or more years to rule over it. I hope and trust that for the convenience of the princes of the mining industry and for the general public as well, efforts will be made to have a court-house there and locate a Subordinate Judge as it will facilitate civil business and relieve their needs.

My Lord, of late there has been a tendency on the part of administration to build residential quarters for high officials of Government. I think that is a move in the right direction, but I regret to find that the offices of Rural Sub-Registrars are now located sometimes in rented houses and sometimes in thatched houses of all sorts and it is not infrequent that theft of documents and papers occur from these offices. I think that the building of offices for Sub-Registrars where they can keep valuable documents should have a priority over the building of residential quarters for officers of Government. I hope and trust, my Lord, that this matter will receive the attention of Government.

With reference to the Department of Registration I observed sometime ago that a hope was held out to the ministerial staff of the Registration Department that their pay and prospects would be considered, but that hope has not been fulfilled. They are as much hard-worked as other ministerial officers in Government offices, and I see no reason why they should be ill-paid as they are at present.

My Lord, sometime ago one of my predecessors in Council referred to the accommodation for the District Judge's office in Burdwan. Since the floods in 1913, the record-rooms and the District Judge's offices are in a miserable condition. Papers are kept in dark holes and the time has surely arrived when a suitable building should be constructed for the location of the office of the District Judge of Burdwan."

[At this stage the Hon'ble Member had to conclude his remarks, he having reached the time-limit.]

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA said :—

" My Lord, there are some points in the Budget on which the Hon'ble the Finance Member may well be congratulated. But those who spoke before me had already dealt with those points. I do not propose, therefore, to take up Your Excellency's time by going over the same grounds again.

My Lord, last year I submitted and insisted that the Budget should be based on the feelings and wishes of the people, and that it should reflect the popular wants. But this counsel of perfection was not acceptable to those whose proud privilege it was to frame the Budget of this great province.

But robust optimism must be the guiding principle in politics and in spite of the rebuff we received last year, we ventured to place the wishes of the people this year again for acceptance by the Government. We again pleaded for arresting the onward march of the steadily increasing police expenditure, we again insisted upon the suspension of the cost of partition of districts, we again pleaded for increasing grant in education, sanitation and other matters affecting the well-being of the people. On this occasion also our protests have shared almost the same fate. The persistent and insistent appeal of the people conveyed in the numerous resolutions, moved at an earlier stage of the debate, to make slight alterations in the Financial Statement, has been dismissed. I know that the Government in this country is not a responsible government—I know that the Government is not bound to consult the wishes of the people—the Government, I know, can ride roughshod over their feelings, if only they choose to do so.

But, my Lord, we are on the eve of a great change—great changes are coming, and great changes are bound to come. We are sure that the hope encouraged and built upon a Parliamentary declaration, will not be allowed, and cannot be allowed to remain unredeemed. The whole country is awaiting with palpitating heart the scheme of Mr. Montagu which he is now elaborating in collaboration with the Viceroy. But, is there any reason, my Lord, why, pending the introduction of the reforms, the voice of the people should be ignored? Responsible government has been declared to be the goal of British rule in India. Quite apart from the question of the whole hog we can legitimately hope that there should be a beginning made and the people's voice should be respected, at least in matters of small details. It is neither wise nor graceful that while the British Parliament and the Secretary of State for India are seriously discussing responsible government for India, the popular representatives should be looked upon as the fifth wheel to the coach in the matter of the Budget.

My Lord, my complaint is that the Budget under discussion is no improvement upon its predecessors in the matter of recognition of the force of public opinion. I am not insensible, my Lord, to the fact that the resolution of my Hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter, has been given effect to. Small as the concession is, I am profoundly thankful to Your Excellency's Government for this. But, I for one entertained the hope that after the solemn declaration of the 20th August, the Government would turn over a new leaf, that they would bow down to the policy enunciated therein, and that the Budget under discussion would be remarkable improvement upon the Budget of the last year, and that greater respect would be shown to the popular demand as formulated in the resolutions moved on the 14th March and the two succeeding days. But, my Lord, allow me to observe that it has a disappointment to me to find that the official benches have not budget from their usual attitude. It is a matter of profound regret to the people that the declaration of the new policy have failed to make any impression upon the Budget. My Lord, as an elected representative of the people in the Council, it is my imperative duty to convey popular feelings to Your Excellency.

Apart from the declaration of the new policy, I am anxious, my Lord, to submit another aspect of the matter for Your Excellency's consideration. It must be accepted as a fundamental principle of all civilised Governments that the money disposed of by the Budget belong in the last resort to the people, and the Government is a trustee of that money. The control of the Government over the money should not be more than that of a trustee, and should be governed by all the recognised canons of trust and guardianship. The Government has no doubt the legal right to dispose of the money in any way they like, the control of the Government is no doubt absolute. But the people feel that their interest should, after all, be the supreme consideration in the disposal of the money. Whenever the Budget goes against their interest—at all events whenever the people feel that it is going against their interest—they raise their protest in the Council through their representatives, and I respectfully but emphatically submit that their feelings and wishes are entitled to the greatest consideration.

There is another feature of to-day's Budget debate to which I feel bound to invite Your Excellency's attention. It must have occurred to Your Excellency that to-day's discussion is purely of an academical character. The Budget is already final. No discussion, however wise and informed, no criticism, however sound and sensible, will lead to any changes in the Budget. We are not permitted to move any resolution in regard to any complaint we may have to make at this stage. We, of course, have not the right to vote on the Budget. A friend of mine was telling me the other day that the final Budget debate is a splendid example of "Nishkam Dharma" inculcated in the Bhagavat Gita. But I should not be misunderstood—I have no complaint—I cannot have any complaint, against Your Excellency, because that is the regulation now in force. But at the same time I feel compelled to appeal to Your Excellency with all the earnestness that I can command to consider whether we have not the cart placed before the horse. I appeal to Your

Discussion of the Budget.Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

Excellency to consider whether this is a profitable employment of time to have any discussion on the Budget after it has made final. Why should valuable public time be wasted for nothing? The debate sometimes becomes acrimonious, and leads only to bitterness of feeling without any countervailing advantage. My Lord, can it be denied that such a procedure is calculated inevitably to lead to discontent of a serious character? It is high time, my Lord, that the rules on the subject should be amended, in the interest both of the Government and the people.

I should like on the present occasion to content myself with these general observations. As regards increase in police expenditure and other matters against which I wanted to raise my voice of protest I find that the Hon'ble Members who preceded me have all forestalled me. I feel I cannot profitably take up the time of the Council by a discussion of those matters.

The Hon'ble MAULVI FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

“ My Lord, to-day is the 4th of April, and I feel tempted to wish that we had begun the proceedings just three days earlier, so that these final discussions on the Budget might have taken place on the 1st of April. This would have been quite in keeping with the comic absurdity of discussing a Budget already in operation, and would also have conveyed both to members of Council and the outside public some idea of the real nature of the proceedings in which we are engaged to-day. The non-official members would then have realised that in spending their eloquence on such items of expenditure as Police allotments (Heaven save the mark !), they are only taking part in one of these pleasant ceremonies which custom and tradition render appropriate for the celebration of that particular day in the year. Moreover, things would then have been seen in their true perspective, and while non-official members would hardly have been tempted to take the situation quite seriously, heads of departments would also have easily realised that our eloquence can no more control the Government in its career of even reckless expenditure than the Ociterlony monument in the Calcutta mailan can control the traffic in Chowringhee. Further, instead of leaving bitter memories behind, these Budget discussions would have been looked upon by all concerned as a pleasant and innocent function well-fitted to mark the close of the labours of all the members of the Council before the Government took their annual flight to the hills.

My Lord, years ago when I was a boy at school, I first learnt the meaning of the English phrase ‘putting the cart before the horse.’ Little did I know that at some period of my life I would be destined to take some part in proceedings which seems to be based on an attempt to translate the idea conveyed by the phrase into actual reality. Frankly speaking, I cannot conceive of a more glaring instance of the policy of ‘putting the cart before the horse’ than is afforded by these annual budget discussions in Council. This is so obvious and so well known to every member of this Council, that I do not wish to take up Your Excellency's time by labouring this point, but nevertheless I will briefly set forth the rules for our Budget discussions, so that the public at large may be able to realise our position as it really is. The Provincial expenditure annually amounts to nearly 7 crores of rupees, and it is obvious that a much larger sum would be required to meet the legitimate demands of the Provincial Administration if all possible schemes of public utility and benefit were taken up in the interests of good and efficient administration. Naturally, therefore, the Government have to consider the relative importance of all projects brought forward by the various heads of departments, and then decide upon abandoning some altogether and taking up others, or taking them up on a reduced scale, the reduction again being effected on a consideration of relative importance and urgency. In arriving at these decisions, Government might act on their own unaided judgment, or might propose to consult non-official opinion. Government have wisely selected the latter course, but, unfortunately, the consideration takes place not before but after the Government have finally made up their mind and arrived at a practical unalterable decision. A glance at the rules relating to the Budget discussions will make this clear. The annual Budget is prepared in the form of what is technically called 'The Draft Financial Statement', which is presented to the Council some time towards the end of February, although we are privileged to make our first acquaintance with the document a couple of days previous to its first introduction in Council. The Draft Financial Statement is then provisionally revised by the local Government in the light of instructions received from the Government of India, and the revised figures are presented to the Council under the name of 'The Amended Draft Financial Statement.' Further alterations may be made by Government, and the revised financial statement is then presented to the Council, embodying the proposals of the Government regarding contemplated expenditure. It is important to realise that the figures in the revised financial statement are practically unalterable, and represent the final decisions of the Government on the various items of expenditure. It is at this stage, when the Budget has assumed an almost immutable shape, that we are asked to make our suggestions by moving resolutions in Council. And herein lies the true humour of the situation. Resolution after resolution is brought forward by non-official members embodying their suggestions, but it is a matter of common knowledge that Government try to meet almost every suggestion with an uncompromising negative. And the reason is obvious. If we suggest that money should be spent on a particular item of expenditure not provided for in the Budget, we have to indicate the source from which the requisite money can be drawn. In other words, we have to suggest that the expenditure or some of the allotments might be reduced or stopped, but all such suggestions are generally met by Government with the reply that the allotment in question relates to some work of absolute urgency, which may have been already begun or is otherwise indispensable. It is true that we have the power of dividing the House on any question raised by our resolutions, but it is well known that, owing to reasons which need not be discussed here, the non-official members can seldom carry the House against the wishes of Government. Although, therefore, Government consult public opinion, they do so at a stage when consultation is meaningless or unnecessary. It would be obviously more consonant with common sense if the consultation took place before matters were finally decided, rather than after the decisions had been arrived at. Under present conditions non-official members may take it as an insult to be invited to discuss a Budget already accepted, or to offer suggestions at a stage when suggestions are utterly meaningless. If, however, no such insult is meant, the whole procedure is a glaring and practical illustration of the policy of 'putting the cart before the horse.'

My Lord, one necessary result of this policy of 'putting the cart before the horse' has been the utter futility of the efforts of non-official members in putting a brake on an item of expenditure which is condemned by all shades of public opinion in this country. I mean the allotments under the head of the Police Department. Let us consider for a moment the following figures :—

Year.	Total Provincial expenditure.		Police expenditure.
	Rs.		Rs.
1912-13	...	5,69,48,131	...	83,99,859
1913-14	...	6,16,60,630	...	94,71,081
1914-15	...	6,67,60,684	...	1,03,72,545
1915-16	...	6,28,01,186	...	1,09,03,783
1916-17	...	6,01,87,132	...	1,16,57,283
1917-18	...	6,49,64,000	...	1,22,84,000
1918-19	...	7,36,54,000	...	1,37,85,000

Discussion of the Budget.Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

Making every allowance for the importance of the department, it can hardly be regarded as a matter of surprise that the public at large look upon this expenditure as extravagant. We all agree that a large expenditure is necessary to raise the pay of the rank and file in the department in order to open up a career which would attract a much better class of men than are now disposed to join the force. But we do not admit that the abuses prevalent in the department would be removed by spending lakhs of rupees in providing costly buildings for the men and officers of the department. Crores have been spent since the Indian Police Commission submitted its proposals for police reform, but the major portion of this money has been taken up in building costly houses for the residence of constables and head-constables, or erecting police-station buildings at enormous costs, creating highly paid posts for European officers in the higher ranks of the police, purchasing steam-launches and other miscellaneous items, which have no more to do with the reform of abuses than the Howrah Bridge has with the sale of opium or ganja in the country. The Indian Police Commission summed up the situation in the following weighty words :—

‘Everywhere the demand of enlightened opinion is for the reform of the station house officer. He must be more intelligent, more respectable, better trained and better supervised. This is the most urgent need of the police One cause of the unsatisfactory work of the police is the inadequate supervision exercised over them.’

With these observations every sensible man must be in perfect agreement, and if the huge expenditure on the department had been meant to carry out those objects, mainly if not solely, there could have been no reasonable cause for any comment or complaint. An efficient and well-organised police is as much a blessing as a corrupt and inefficient police is a curse. But one looks in vain through the Budget allotments, bristling with profuse expenditure on almost every conceivable item of comfort and luxury, for adequate provision for a scheme of well-ordered supervision of the work of investigating officers. It is well known that the Commission recommended the creation of the class of officers known as Deputy Superintendents, as well to impart a healthier tone to the Indian element in the service as to secure a close supervision of the work of investigating officers, by the members of a provincial service, whose superior status would be a sufficient guarantee of their honesty, probity and freedom from corruption. There can be no doubt that if these Deputy Superintendents had been utilized for the purpose of the supervision of the work of their subordinates, corrupt practices amongst investigating officers would have gradually diminished, even if they did not actually disappear. But it is well known that the number of Deputy Superintendents is not large enough to supply the requisite proportion of officers for carrying on the work of supervision, and even amongst those that exist, very few are employed on work which ought to have been made the principal part of their duty. It is notorious that Deputy Superintendents at the headquarters of districts are generally employed on office work, and are no better than glorified clerks or office superintendents. The supervision of the work of investigating officers is, therefore, as unsatisfactory as ever. The European Assistant Superintendents are practically useless for purposes of supervision, in consequence of their ignorance of the vernacular of the country, and the absence of a free and unrestricted social intercourse between them and the general public. The Superintendents and Additional Superintendents have their steam-launches and motor cars at the expense of the public money, but their supervision is also no better than those of other European officers. While those conditions exist, Government seek to reform the police and remove abuses by building palaces to be used as station-houses, and gorgeous residential quarters for the rank and file of the police force. Public money could hardly have been more wasted and more ill-spent, and it is against this policy of pampering the members of a force, already spoilt by undue indulgence, that the public have hitherto been raising a persistent though ineffectual protest.

My Lord, the friends of the Police are apt to maintain that the moral tone of the service has now been considerably raised and matters are gradually improving so as to render abuses less frequent than before. It is true that there has been a slight improvement as compared with the state of things before the Commission, but the improvement is mainly due to the spread of education amongst the masses, which has taught people the inestimable lessons of manliness and self-reliance, and rendering them better able to resist oppressions than before. The abuses that still exist are appalling enough, and are still a discredit to the Government, and involve great injury to the people of the country. If these abuses are to be removed, the root causes for such abuses must not be allowed to exist, and remedies are to be applied which are appropriate to the disease. It is no use building houses, or providing policemen with a splendid uniform, while the investigating officers continue to be recruited from a class who do not hesitate to enter service in the expectation of making substantial additions to their salary by preying upon the general public. It is no use dividing the province into police ranges and creating numerous Deputy Inspectors-General, while the work of supervision of investigating officers remains as unsatisfactory as ever. The Superintendents of Police must learn the language of the country and try to exercise a closer control over the work of actual investigations than they do at present. 'The ignorance of the vernacular,' said the Commission, 'and want of touch with the people generally are the most serious defect amongst Superintendents. These officers are also too often inclined to support their subordinates in an unreasonable manner and to receive complaints or strictures on police work in a hostile spirit.' This criticism holds good to-day as it did in the days of the Commission. The same remarks apply in a greater degree to the Assistant Superintendents and the European Additional Superintendents of Police. Steps should be taken to remedy these defects, not by building palatial houses or purchasing steam-launches, but by insisting on Police Superintendents taking a livelier interest in their work than they do at the present day. The Deputy Superintendents of Police should be utilised in closely supervising the work of their subordinates on the spot, and not by being made to lighten the routine work of the Superintendents of Police by signing papers of the Police office. Above all, suggestions and criticisms should be welcomed and duly considered, instead of being resented at or received in a hostile spirit. The oppressions committed by the Police during the investigations of what are known as the hat-looting cases are perhaps unparalleled in the history of abuses in any civilized country. The matter turned to be a public scandal, and it was the duty of Government to have at once started thorough and searching enquiries into the allegations, and taken such steps as would have been justified by the results of inquiries. This was not done, and when I moved a resolution in Council praying for such enquiries, the suggestion was not accepted by Government. And when, later on, I complained that my resolution had been unjustly negatived, Sir Henry Wheeler rose to say that Government had made enquiries through District Magistrates. The attitude of Government towards my resolution and the remark of Sir Henry Wheeler gave the public an incorrect idea as to facts. It is not true that Government even moved their little finger to save people from oppressions or bring their oppressors to justice. The only place where the District Magistrate made any enquiries was at Noakhali, and this was done, not under orders of Government, but because my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and myself went over to Noakhali and insisted on these enquiries being made. It is noteworthy that even at Noakhali the Magistrate at first refused to believe in the complaints made against the Police, and only yielded because we would take no denial.

The result of the Noakhali enquiries has shewn that the complaints were well-founded. If proper enquiries had been made elsewhere, these pests of Government (who are no better pests to the public) would have been shewn in their true colours elsewhere also. Government should have been ashamed of having backed up the disreputable members of a force already proved to be dishonest and corrupt. Instead of that, they try to vindicate their position by taking credit for a course of conduct which at first they refused to adopt and which was practically thrust upon them by my friend Mr. Abul Kasem and myself. This is hardly the way to reform the Police, and hardly the way to win popular sympathy.

My Lord, I am sorry that the time at my disposal has almost come to an end, but I cannot resume my seat without referring to the reprehensible neglect with which the claims of Muhammadan education have been treated in the framing of the Budget. The proposal for the establishment of a Muhammadan Arts College appears to be practically shelved, and there is hardly any provision for building hostels for Muhammadan students either in Calcutta or in the mufassal. Only the other day the Director of Public Instruction remarked that the needs of the community in the matter of hostels for Muhammadan students in Calcutta do not exist, and he ventured to state in a spirit of pride and self-satisfaction that the Government can claim to have done their duties towards Muhammadan students in this matter. I reserve for a future occasion what I have got to say in reply to the claim thus put forward on behalf of Government, and I content myself at the present moment by saying that I challenge the accuracy of the statement of my friend the Director of Public Instruction, when he says that the Muhammadan students in Calcutta have been duly provided with accommodations in recognised messes and hostels. I would only point out to him the accommodation which exist for Muhammadan law students in Calcutta. Most of them at present live at No. 2, Mirzapur Street, and I wonder if the Director of Public Instruction has ever visited this building and seen for himself how the law students pass their days there. He could not then have failed to notice, casting his eyes on the other side of the tank at the Hardinge Hostel, how the munificence of a Hindu nobleman has been liberally supplemented by generous contributions from University Funds and Provincial Revenues for the benefit of Hindu students; while, right on the other side of the tank, the disgraceful pigeon-holes of No. 2, Mirzapur Street (where Mussulman graduates congregate for shelter during their law studies in this city) bear eloquent testimony to the poverty of the community and the neglect with which the authorities treat the interests of Muhammadan students in Calcutta."

The Hon'ble DR. NILRATAN SARKAR said:—

"My Lord, the total sum provided for the engineering education of all grades is Rs. 3,24,000, and the total amount provided for vocational education of different sorts, such as agriculture, commerce, technology, etc., is Rs. 1,04,500. So, altogether, there is a total of Rs. 4,28,500 provided for engineering and industrial education—a sum about 4 per cent. of the total expenditure on education. We are passing through critical times in regard to industry. We cannot afford to wait in a state of unpreparedness at the present moment when great changes are taking place in the world, not only in the political sphere but also in the sphere of industries. It is time that we should mend matters. We are in a helpless state of unpreparedness, and our helplessness merges into a state of utter despair when we find that Government offers us help only to this extent; that is, by spending a sum of Rs. 4,28,500 on engineering and industrial educational development in

Discussion of the Budget.Mr. Cumming.

Bengal. I know an additional sum of Rs. 1,50,000 has been provided for some item in this Budget ; but a much larger sum is needed for industrial education. In the near future we must try to divert the channel of education from the ordinary routes of law and literature to the channels of technical and industrial education like agriculture, technology and commerce, so that our young men may assert themselves in life as the competition of other people in the world. One by one all our markets are being occupied by foreigners. It is time that we should try to develop our own resources. Bengal has got an unlimited supply of raw materials. There is also capital in the land and intellect too. I believe, under proper guidance and proper instruction, Bengalis will be able to hold their own against any other people in the field of industries. The first steps towards such an end would be to organise engineering education and the vocational education in different branches in all standards.

My Lord, I deeply appreciate the increase of grant to medical schools on account of the increase of students from Rs. 1,30,000 to Rs. 1,48,000. Having regard to the condition of Bengal this extension of medical education is one of the most important questions. The urgency of this question increases every day. I hope Government will try to solve this difficult question either by starting additional medical schools or by subsidising privately-started medical schools. But whatever may be the method, the question cannot be put off for a much longer time.

In this connection, I may draw the attention of the Government to the question of medical education of female students. The class for female students was started in 1884, but recently, after 30 years of its existence, it has been practically closed. New admissions have been refused on one ground or another. Whatever may be the reason of closing the class, adequate provision should be made for medical education of women in Bengal. The question has been raised that the students who applied for admission did not possess the requisite qualifications. No wonder, when Government spends only Rs. 51,000 on collegiate education of women and when only Rs. 3,30,000 or about one-thirtieth of the sum spent on education is budgetted for female education. What is wanted is more money, more attention, and, if I may be permitted to observe, more sympathy. There is no reason why female candidates in Calcutta should be refused admission into the Calcutta Medical College and advised to go to Delhi. Delhi may have one or more medical colleges for women but the needs of Calcutta are quite different. There is no reason why our daughters and sisters should be compelled to reside in Delhi for five years in order to have a medical education when there are at least two Government medical Institutions in Calcutta. What I would urge is this : that provision should be made for the education of female medical students in Calcutta either in the Medical College or in any other institution. As regards Delhi the matter should be left to their choice.

I am deeply grateful for the increased sanitary grant from about four lakhs of rupees to eleven and-a-half lakhs of rupees. I am also grateful for the recent measures that have been adopted in connection with the sanitary improvement of certain parts of Bengal. We hope that, with the help of our energetic Sanitary Commissioner, we shall be able to make steady improvement in sanitation."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"My Lord, it now devolves upon me to offer to the Council some remarks on the subjects which, for administrative purposes, are placed under the Departments of Revenue and Public Works ; and in doing so, I shall endeavour to make such remarks as short as possible, notwithstanding the temptation to follow some members who strayed beyond the limits of the present Budget.

Discussion of the Budget.Mr. Cumming.

Under the head of Revenue, I propose to deal with the subjects of Settlement Operations, Agriculture and Forests. The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Roy has repeated the arguments which he previously made against the continuance during war time of settlement operations. As the expenditure is wholly Imperial, it is doubtful whether the Hon'ble Member is strictly in order in discussing the subject in a debate on provincial expenditure. However, the matter has been discussed before; in 1915 the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell gave a convincing reply to similar arguments, and on the present occasion I have really nothing more to add beyond saying that it is hardly correct to argue that no modifications have been made during war time. On the contrary, the normal programme for four survey and four settlement parties has been reduced to a programme sufficient for three survey and three settlement parties. Then, again, the estimate of Rs. 22 lakhs, to which the Hon'ble Member takes exception, has been cut down from the original estimate of Rs. 29 lakhs; and the proposed recoveries of Rs. 18 lakhs have been cut down from an earlier estimate of no less than 26 lakhs. It is rather late in the day to discuss whether district settlement operations are useless or unnecessary, as he urges. The battle on this question was fought out no less than a quarter of a century ago. Moreover, the payments made towards settlement costs are for value received in the shape of the copies of the records and of the maps which are furnished to the parties concerned.

Under the head of Agriculture, I have pleasure in thanking the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha and the Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter for their appreciation of the progress made in the distribution of paddy seed and jute seed, and also in connection with the extension of cinchona cultivation. The Hon'ble Mr. Mitter made a request that a further enquiry in connection with such extension should be made. I am happy to inform him that at the present moment there is a very competent officer on special duty for this very object.

Then, under the head of Forests, the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter made another suggestion that with proper organisation the forest revenues ought to be considerably increased. This opens up a very wide subject of discussion as to the development of our commercial properties, with which it is not possible to deal adequately on the present occasion. It is true, however, that Forests form one of the few really satisfactory among the naturally expanding sources of revenue in this province. In this connection I should like to mention that the late Revenue Member of the Government of India, Sir Robert Carlyle, publicly stated in London about a year ago that there was practically no limit to the development of this source of revenue, namely, Forests; but, he said, forests required a bold outlay of expenditure, not only expenditure on personnel, but also capital expenditure on mechanical agencies, on communications in the opening out of roads, and in the distribution of the produce.

I now turn to the other main head of Public Works, under which I propose to deal with the subject of Irrigation. In connection with this subject, I desire to thank the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie and the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kaseem for their appreciation of the work of certain officers of the Public Works Department. The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali and the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie allude, in particular, to the Chaktai khal in Chittagong. With Mr. Mackenzie's views, if they refer to the main arteries of communication, Government are, of course, in full accord; but I do not think that this particular khal, for the improvement of which a request has been made, is one which can strictly be called a navigable channel in the ordinary sense.

The Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie has suggested the formation of a Waterways Trust somewhat on the lines of the Calcutta Port Trust: the formation of such a special Waterways Department or Trust to deal with waterways has not been overlooked by Government, but in the opinion of many qualified to judge, its materialisation is associated with the completion of the Grand Trunk Canal project. I find, moreover, in the literature on the subject a considerable amount of vagueness as to the precise lines on which such a Trust is to be formed in Bengal; as to how it is to be financed; and as to how it is to be administered. I would welcome any definite constructive suggestions on these points.

As regards the Grand Trunk Canal project, I can say, on behalf of Government, that it is not the intention of Government to pigeonhole it. The consideration of its numerous problems has continued to occupy the attention of responsible officers during the past year. The opinions of public bodies concerned have been obtained and are being considered in detail.

The Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie has also drawn attention to a certain channel on the outer boat route through the Sunderbans, namely, the Doagra channel, regarding which it is urged that its deterioration is probable, if not certain. I am able to inform the Council that in the present year a sum of half a lakh of rupees has been set aside to make a new cut in that vicinity, by which it may not be necessary for steamers to use this channel at all in the near future.

Under the head of Irrigation the Hon'ble Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad has stated that the improvement of the Bhagirathi finds no place in the estimates. I am sure the Council realise that the flow of the Bhagirathi through the Murshidabad district must depend entirely on the position of the main stream of the Ganges; and if the Ganges refuses to come down the Bhagirathi, it is humanly impossible to force it to do so. All that human agency can effect in this matter is to render conditions in the Bhagirathi suitable for inducing a flow from the Ganges down its bed, when the main channel of the big river has reverted to its most southernly position. At the present moment, I am sorry to say, the Ganges main stream has cut off the head of the Nadia rivers.

These, Sir, are all the remarks I desire to make on the several points that have been raised in the course of the debate to-day; but there are some other points to which the attention of Government has been drawn by Hon'ble Members. These have been noted, and Hon'ble Members may rest assured that their consideration will not be overlooked."

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA said:—

"My Lord, it devolves upon me to deal with such criticisms as have fallen from Hon'ble Members with regard to the Departments of Education and Sanitation which are in my charge and I think the surest way in which I can deal with them is to take first the general criticism with regard to education and sanitation; then deal with such specific matters to which attention has been drawn by individual Members, and, thirdly, to deal with some matters which, though not referred to specifically, are referred to more or less in general terms, and I am classifying the subjects under these three heads.

My Lord, two charges that have been repeated by several Members with regard to education and sanitation are that in the Revised Estimates we have shown savings which actually mean loss; that is to say, the monies allotted, which ought to have been spent, have not been spent with regard to such important matters as education and sanitation. But I think I shall be able to satisfy the Council without much trouble that it proceeds from a misconception. If Hon'ble Members will turn to page 21, dealing with the charges under the head of Education, there are two matters which I think will be clear to them: firstly, that education, so far from being neglected, has been receiving increasing attention of Government. We have there the actuals of 5 years, 1912-13 to 1916-17, and then we have the Budgets for 1917-18 and 1918-19. The expenditure in 1912-13 was 73 lakhs and odd; next year it was 81 lakhs that is nearly 8 lakhs increase. Next year, that is the year before the war, it was 92 lakhs or an increase of 11 lakhs; then by reason of the war there was a drop in 1915-16, and we came down to 84 lakhs or very nearly 85 lakhs, that is, 7 lakhs less than the previous year; then there was a further drop in 1916-17 to 76 lakhs for the same reason, namely, that we are not allowed to spend except for urgent and productive purposes; but it will be noticed that in 1917-18, it went up to 98 lakhs, exceeding the educational grant for any previous year. The Budget for 1918-19 is 103 lakhs. Therefore, it will be seen that, so far from education not being given its proper share of the public revenues, the money allotted to education has been increased by—I won't say leaps and bounds, but very substantial amounts during all this time and notwithstanding the war; I think that is a point which is clear from this statement.

There is another general complaint about the allotments not having been spent, and that arises with regard to the year 1917-18. Although for that year, the original figures were 98,13,000, in the Revised Budget estimates they were reduced to 81,14,000 from which Members conclude that 17 lakhs, which were at our disposal and which ought to have been spent, had not been spent. I say that is due to a misconception; first of all, it is not correct to say that the 17 lakhs have not been spent. The figures represent the actuals for the first 9 or 10 months of the year and the estimates for the remaining two or three months. These estimates are based on the expenditure of the previous 9 or 10 months and do not take into account the fact that the expenditure during the last two or three months, so far as the average is concerned, is very much larger than during the previous 8 or 9 months. Therefore, it is not correct to assume that 17 lakhs remain unspent; actually, a great deal of that has been spent. But it is correct that some portion has not been spent and for the following reasons. This sum of 98 lakhs includes the 9 lakhs grant from the Imperial Government. We sent up a scheme to the Government of India for the expenditure of this 9 lakhs and the items are as follows. (Council will pardon my going into these details at a little length because a greater part of the charges is levelled against us with regard to this unspent balance or savings therefrom). Now those 9 lakhs consisted of 11 items:—

	Rs.
(1) Cost of improving Government high schools ...	3,00,000
(2) Cost of improving Government middle English schools ...	6,120
(3) Aid for Municipal high schools ...	12,072
(4) Grants for aided and unaided high and middle English schools.	1,19,382
(5) Grant of local allowance to Assistant Headmaster of 5 vernacular training schools.	1,200
(6) Honoraria of the teaching staff of three high schools for work in connection with the Dacca Training College.	1,350
(7) Enhancement of pay of teachers of primary schools ...	1,94,000
(8) Enhancement of the pay of teachers in girls' primary schools.	35,560
(9) Grant to the Midnapur District Board for an increase of the allowance of teachers of primary schools.	15,000
(10) Inauguration of the scheme for the training of teachers in boys' primary schools.	1,55,440
(11) Construction of buildings for training schools for primary teachers.	50,000

All these items make up 9 lakhs of rupees. It was not until October 1917 that the Government of India sanctioned our spending about 2½ lakhs only out of these 9 lakhs, and with regard to the rest they told us that those items formed part of larger schemes which required the sanction of the Secretary of State and we were not, therefore, allowed to spend them. So, it is not correct to say that having the money at our disposal we have kept it in our cash box and not spent it for the purpose of education. We have got a promise of 9 lakhs, and we are allowed to spend $2\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs; with regard to the remainder, we are told that we must wait for the sanction of the Secretary of State for larger schemes. That disposes of the $6\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs, out of the 17 lakhs which was supposed not to have been spent.

Discussion of the Budget.

Sir S. P. Sinha.

Then there is another sum of Rs. 3,35,000, which also appears, as the Hon'ble Dr. Sarbadhikari has pointed out, as unspent out of the balance for hostels, etc. A good deal of it has been spent and all the bills have not come in yet, and until they come in we cannot say how much has been spent out of it; probably, 2 lakhs will go from that. There will remain $2\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs and that is due to the fact that the scheme which was expected to cost $13\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs will cost about 12 or $12\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs. Similarly, there are monies which appear in our Budget as savings not because we have not spent them but because they have been spent through the Public Works Department, so that the whole of this 17 lakhs which we are charged with not spending though at our disposal are not spent either because we are not allowed to spend them or because they were spent through the Public Works Department, or because the bills for the actual expenditure have not yet come in, though they will come in later. Therefore, the Council should be disabused, of any impression they might be under that the money at the disposal of or in the coffers of Government and available for the purpose of education were not spent for that purpose.

I think the same can be said with regard to the supposed saving of $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs in the matter of sanitation; that is not a saving at all, because although it does not appear in our account, it appears in the account of the Public Works Department, as having been made over to the Public Works Department for the construction of sanitary works. Therefore, both with regard to education and sanitation, the Government have been spending more and more; and some Hon'ble Members have, I am glad to say, congratulated the Government on the increased expenditure on sanitation which has risen from less than 4 lakhs to $11\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs in the present Budget.

These, I think, are the general complaints which were made with regard to matters of education and sanitation, and I now propose to deal with the specific complaints or recommendations which have been made by individual members in the matter of education.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur charges us with not having come to the rescue or succour of the Mahakali Pathshala in Calcutta, which he says, is likely to be financially ruined for want of such help. I think the charge is unfounded. Mr. Hornell, on the last occasion, promised that, if the Mahakali Pathshala authorities would apply to the Government for such help as they wanted in the matter of their building fund or anything else, that would receive the consideration of Government; and Council knows that that meant that the Mahakali Pathshala would have to satisfy the Education Department that they had complied with the rules which were made by that Department for the purpose of making grants-in-aid to schools. They would have to show certain amount of efficiency; and they would have to satisfy the Education Department in every way as to the necessity for the money. They never applied, presumably, because they did not expect to be able to satisfy the authorities as regards either the efficiency or the necessity. I venture to think that on these facts the Council will see that the Government have not unduly withheld help from a deserving institution for female education.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha has recommended for assistance the Polytechnic Institution, over which Captain Petavel presides and which is assisted by the Hon'ble Maharaja of Cossimbazar. With regard to that also, I may say that the matter is under consideration of the Director of Public Instruction; and provided he is satisfied as to the necessity and the efficiency of the school, I have no doubt that the aid will be forthcoming.

Discussion of the Budget.Sir S. P. Sinha.

The Chittagong College and Hostel have been mentioned by the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali. As regards that, I may state that, so far as the college authorities are concerned, there has not been, to my knowledge any application for any increased grants; but the Director of Public Instruction hopes personally to visit the Chittagong College and to find out what is necessary. And the Hon'ble Member may be sure that if it is found necessary to increase the college or hostel accommodation, steps will be taken to supply the want.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has mentioned that with regard to the Sibpur College there is a want of accommodation which prevents students applying for admission from getting admittance. Well as regards that, I have made enquiries, since: by his courtesy, I got a copy of his speech, from the Principal; and I find that though there have been more applicants than admissions, there has been no rejection so far on the ground of want of accommodation, and it is only on the ground of fitness that students have been rejected. I can assure the Hon'ble Member, however, that if, in fact, there is such a demand for engineering education and the accommodation in the Sibpur College is not sufficient to take in all these students, steps will be taken as early as possible to remedy such defect.

With regard to the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem's request for the proposed Burdwan School, I am sorry he did not send in any information to me with regard to this matter, or I should have made enquiries. Neither Mr. Wordsworth, the Director of Public Instruction, nor I have been able to find out anything about the proposed school, but I shall certainly look into this and see if anything can be done in the matter.

Now I come to the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal's criticisms with regard to various matters. Taking the Hastings House School, I may tell the Hon'ble Member that the whole question of the organisation of the Hastings House School is under consideration. The object never was, so far as that school was concerned, that it should be merely a school for the sons of wealthy citizens. No doubt, the fees are high, but if you want a particular kind of education and a particular kind of accommodation, you have got to pay for them. That, again, is a matter which has to be considered with reference to the necessity of the people and how far they are able to pay for it. I personally think that the fee has been fixed probably a little too high and that if the school is to be made much more available for the general community, the fee will have to be reduced. But, as I have said, the whole matter is under consideration, and I trust that a scheme will be evolved which will make the school very much more useful. I may tell the Hon'ble Member that, so far from its being the intention that the poor should pay for the rich, the promoters of that school proposed that they should guarantee the expenses of the school—the whole of it if necessary—provided the control of the school was made over to them, but the Government did not agree to such a proposal. There is not likely to be any such loss, as my friend probably apprehends, because the number of students at Hastings House School now is certainly not much less than the school can accommodate; there is only accommodation for 40 boys and there is about that number in the school.

There are two other matters which the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur mentions: firstly, the question of primary schools in Calcutta; and secondly, perhaps it is not germane to this particular point,—the question of the inclusion of Howrah in the operations of the Improvement Trust.

As regards the question of primary education in Calcutta, I think the Hon'ble Member probably forgot for the moment as to how the matter stands. The Calcutta Corporation, when asked as to what they were prepared to do to promote the educational organisation of Calcutta, said that they could not take the responsibility for the provision and maintenance of schools ; but they would consider the possibility of undertaking a larger expenditure than they now incurred if there was a proper scheme made out for Calcutta schools. For that purpose, Mr. De first, afterwards Mr. Roy and lastly Mr. Dunn were put on deputation and it is only two days ago that Mr. Dunn's final report reached the hands of the Director of Public Instruction suggesting what the educational needs of the different parts of Calcutta are and how they can be met. Now, it is from the nature of things impossible that Government can deal with that report or have any communication with the Corporation of Calcutta within the short time that has elapsed since the report has been in our hands—it was not possible to do anything within these two days. But, as soon as possible, that report will be dealt with and the matter will be discussed with the Corporation of Calcutta ; and I trust that before long we shall be able to give effect, at any rate, to some portions of this report which certainly discloses a very undesirable state of things in Calcutta.

Taking the other criticism about the Calcutta Improvement Trust taking up Howrah, here again probably the Hon'ble Member is not aware of all that has passed between the Government on the one hand and the Municipality of Howrah and the Improvement Trust on the other. The Hon'ble Member suggests that the Improvement Trust should not take in hand the improvement of Howrah. The Howrah Municipality, on the other hand suggests that the Calcutta Improvement Trust should do so. In considering this matter the Government was advised that as the law stood the Calcutta Improvement Trust could not take up the matter in hand without an amendment of the law ; and before undertaking any legislation for that purpose the Government asked not very long ago the Improvement Trust to inform them as to whether they would be prepared to take up the work of improvement in Howrah if the law was amended and as to what provision, financial or otherwise, should be made for that purpose. All these are matters which have been actively engaging the attention of Government and are at the present moment the subject matter of correspondence between them and the Improvement Trust. Therefore, there is no reason to think that we have not been vigilant in this matter. The Hon'ble Member asked for some other information and he seems to be under the impression that though we have promised to take action in this matter nothing has been done, namely, with regard to the appointment of health officers and sanitary officers in municipalities in and around Calcutta and elsewhere. I think if the Hon'ble Member will look at the notification of the 14th February 1916, he will find that in exercise of the powers conferred under section 349(d) of the Bengal Municipal Act the Governor in Council has fixed the class and number of the sanitary officers to be appointed for each of the principal municipalities mentioned in the notification which includes Maniktala, Bhatpara, Cossipore-Chitpur, South Suburban, Baranagore and so on, in and around Calcutta. So action has been taken and health officers have been appointed by these municipalities in these places. If they have not appointed them, the fault certainly does not lie with Government. I would like to draw the attention of the Council to the report of the Municipal Department for 1915-16, paragraph 28, where it is pointed out :—

There are signs of a tendency to avoid appointing the staff pending the receipt of grants-in-aid from Government. Municipalities must recognise that they are now under a legal obligation to appoint these officers irrespective of the receipt of assistance from Government and that this constitutes a necessary charge on municipal finances. Assistance from Government towards the pay of sanitary inspectors can only be expected when a municipality has shown both its readiness to make the appointment and its inability to meet the charge notwithstanding a reasonable incidence of taxation without prejudice to the efficiency of other departments of the municipal administration.

The question of technical education is also raised by the Hon'ble Member. I would remind him of the debate in Council the other day on a resolution that was moved by the Hon'ble Sir Rajendra Mukerji where a scheme for the education of mechanical engineers was dealt with. There is only a portion of a very much larger scheme, and that as well as other schemes for the purpose of advancing technical education in Bengal, are now under consideration. Naturally we have got to wait for any new schemes for the reports both of the University Commission and the Industrial Commission that are now in progress. Hon'ble Members will also remember with reference to the remark of the Hon'ble Dr. Nilratan Sircar that though the allotment for vocational education is comparatively small—a little over 4 lakhs, having regard to the fact that before we can have vocational education, we must have either primary or secondary education, or probably both, and it is only a limited sum that we have at our disposal we are unable to spend more than we do, but the amount is increasing, and I hope that when we have got proper schemes, money will be found for advancing such schemes as will be feasible.

There is one other matter that I may refer to in this connection, and that is Dr. Subrawardy's complaint that there is no provision for teaching Arabic and Persian for the Intermediate and Bachelor of Arts Examinations in Government colleges. No doubt, that is correct to a certain extent, but our experience with regard to that is somewhat unhappy. Under pressure from the Muhammadan community, classes for teaching those languages were opened at the Krishnagar College and affiliation was obtained from the University for that college. The result has been somewhat disappointing, because there has been one student so far and the cost per month for that one student is Rs. 125 a month; so that it does not appear that there is any very great demand that has got to be met, and my friend's apprehension that students have to take up Pali and Sanskrit because of the want of provision for Arabic and Persian teaching seems somewhat contrary to facts. The Hon'ble Dr. Sarbadhikari reminds me that the University has classes for Intermediate and Bachelor of Arts Persian but I think the Hon'ble Dr. Subrawardy mentioned that point and what he said was that the students could not afford to meet the additional fees. Anyhow, I hope and trust that so long as provision cannot be made in Government colleges, provision at any rate might be made for giving facilities to Muhammadan students in joining these classes at the University and I have no doubt that if representations are made to my friend the Director of Public Instruction for that purpose and if on enquiry he is satisfied that there is a genuine need, he will do all he can towards satisfying the community in that matter.

My Lord, I think I have met the specific requests or recommendations, as best as I could. If I have omitted any points I can assure Hon'ble Members that they shall be noted and kept in view and that when the occasion arises during the next year we shall endeavour to give effect to such of them as can possibly be given effect to.

There is one other remark which I should like to make though it really comes under Sir Henry Wheeler's portfolio, and that is that several members have said that the debate to-day is more or less a farce. But if that is so, and I dare say it may be and I won't contradict them, then is it not the best way for the Hon'ble Members in order to get rid of any such complaint to abstain from taking part in this debate. Surely it is in the hands of Hon'ble Members themselves to prevent this absurdity."

The Hon'ble Sir HENRY WHEELER said:—

Sir, as the Department, of which I have the honour to be in charge, is more especially concerned with the general financial interests of the province, I am permitted to prefix my remarks with some comments on a few of the more important points of the Budget, as different from the ordinary departmental points of view, which I will deal with later. As to the points which I do not propose to include an answer to the mournful diatribes of some of the later speakers among the non-official Members, who, regardless of the changes that have been made in recent years, regardless of the opportunities which have been thereby given to them to influence the policy of Government, and regardless of the fact, which can be demonstrated, that these debates and the speeches of non-official Members of this Council do influence the policy of Government, persist in regarding all those opportunities of co-operating in this Council with the Bengal Government as a meaningless delusion and a sham. I do not admit the accuracy of the picture that on the one side we have the non-official Members laboriously toiling and trying to bring forward proposals all calculated to accelerate the advent of the millennium, only on the other, to see them turned down without rhyme or reason by a callous and contemptuous Government. But, apart from the correctness or otherwise of that picture, the essence of these comments is really to be found in the desire that the position of this Council vis-a-vis the administration should be different from that which it is, particularly in financial matters, under the existing Parliamentary statutes and the rules and regulations made thereunder. Such arguments fall within the field of discussion of larger constitutional issues which are occupying attention elsewhere, and which are more properly discussed on other occasions than in connection with the provincial Budget, and I therefore propose to confine myself to our budget as it is and its consideration under our procedure as it is.

The first point to which I would draw attention, is the practical use of the present debate. That is a matter about which there are two permissible points of view. On the one hand, that it is a useful continuance of an old tradition, and on the other, that, under the modern conditions of resolutions, questions and the like, subjects which have been debated to-day could all have been brought forward, and have in many cases been brought forward, previously with the result that this debate is largely an echo of old discussions, while bringing up again a multitude of subjects which can only now be dealt with cursorily and in the briefest outline. These two views are quite arguable though personally I am inclined to the one which would see the debate done away with, but that is merely my personal view. The Council may have observed that the Government of India have recently made a difference in their procedure in this respect, altering the date of the general discussion so that it should precede, and not come after, the detailed resolutions on the Revised Financial Statement. I propose to ascertain what precise changes have been made in the rules of the Imperial Council, and I think it may possibly be of interest in the light of these changes, to ascertain the views of Hon'ble Members as to whether we too might not advantageously modify our procedure, although there is no desire to make any alterations which may not commend themselves to the majority.

But as a substitute for the debate we have, it is true, the solution put forward by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, that we should appoint a Standing Finance Committee, which will peacefully and amicably discuss the allocation of funds throughout the year, thus rendering all subsequent discussions in this Council unnecessary. I fear his ideal is utopian, and I cannot conceive of any committee which is likely to be able to distribute our resources in a way that will commend itself to all Hon'ble Members. But, apart from that, the suggestion, which is advanced in the guise of a minor modification in existing procedure, is really a proposal for a large constitutional change in the position of the Council towards the financial expenditure of Government. That being so, it falls rather within the larger field of discussion to which I have already alluded.

As another general point, we have the criticism of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri that the Budget notes are not so clear as might be desired. That is an old complaint, and it has been the constant policy of the Finance Department to give more and more information in connection with the Budget. I think Hon'ble Members who have had long experience of this Council will recognize that the information now given is much fuller than what it was in earlier years. If I remember rightly, we now give references to statistics of more former years, while we give detailed schedules of new schemes, and this year have also placed in the hands of Members the Civil Budget Estimates. The memorandum which accompanies the Budget is nothing but a brief note, and it does not purport to be anything else, while it is supplemented by the speeches which are made by different official Members. But I am quite willing to agree that the form of the memorandum might be improved. The point attracted my attention during the course of the preparation of the present Budget. The notes have become somewhat stereotyped, and can possibly be improved upon, and I hope to take the matter up during the current year.

Lastly, as a general question, I would refer briefly to a very interesting point which has been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, namely, the distribution of the provincial revenue as between the Imperial Government and the province itself. That is a point of great theoretical and practical importance, and in the light of the remarks of the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer which have been quoted by an Hon'ble Member to-day, it will obviously very shortly come into considerable prominence. I cannot enter into it at length now, but I must point out that the figures given by the Hon'ble Member are calculated to convey a somewhat false impression. I gather from the general outlines of his argument, which he has evidently taken from the third page of the Civil Estimates, that whereas the Imperial Government takes something like Rs. 16 crores out of a total revenue of Rs. 23 crores, the provincial Government gets only Rs. 6½ crores approximately. That is not, I think, quite accurate. If the Hon'ble Member will look at the figures again he will see that under Imperial we find such large heads as Opium, 4½ crores, Salt, 1 crore 31 lakhs, Customs, nearly 6 crores, Interest, 11½ lakhs, and Receipts in aid of Superannuation, approximately 1½ lakhs; these items cannot fairly be classed as solely provincial revenue. Opium is obviously not so; much of the salt that comes through the port of Calcutta goes to Bihar and Orissa and Assam, and obviously many articles on which customs duties are paid are intended for places throughout Northern India. I would like to feel that the contention was correct, as it would give us a chance of asking for more in any fresh financial settlement, but I am afraid it is not so. I feel bound to warn the Council that it is not probable that in any differentiation between Imperial and Provincial finance we shall be able to lay hands upon some cache of revenue which so far the Government of India have been improperly enjoying, whereas it should have been retained by the province. Neither is it likely to be the case that we shall find that, in comparison with other provinces in the matter of contributions to the Government of India, Bengal has been unfairly treated. I think it is more likely to be found that other provinces attack us as coming under the most favoured provincial clause.

So much for general points, and coming to departmental details I would touch first on that department which among my own particular "white man's burden," is most exposed to attack, I refer to the police. We have heard again to-day in familiar accents of the colossal and extravagant heights to which expenditure on the police is mounting with leaps and bounds, and the inference is left to be drawn that we are wantonly squandering upon an effete department vast sums of money apparently with no better object than the trembling of the people. Some Hon'ble Members have grown almost lyrical about the magnificent treatment which is accorded to the police in the matter of motor launches, motor cars, palatial buildings and what not; but I would point out that motor launches are merely a reasonable incident attaching to the geographical circumstances of the province, the use of which really means a saving of officers' time and allows of stricter supervision than in older days when officers toured in green boats, slowly fighting against the tide. Motor cars are ordinary facilities, particularly in large cities, adding to the efficiency of administration. While as for the palatial buildings of which a picture has been drawn, I am afraid it would scarcely be admitted by those who have a wider experience of the uncomfortable hovels in which so many of our police are housed.

As regards particular items which have been attacked in the Police Budget, I have given answers in detail on a previous occasion, and I do not propose to supplement those remarks. On the general question I will again say that it turns on two main considerations. In the first place, we are making up in the matter of police much leeway. Secondly, in connection with a large labour force, which practically the police is, the modern increase in the cost of living, which entails the giving of higher wages, is bound to entail a heavy outlay. Where so many men are employed as is the case in the police, any small addition—even the addition of a single rupee to constables' pay—involves a very large total, and it is largely to this fact that the increase in the Police Budget is due. I have previously endeavoured to point out that the Budgets of other departments exhibit the same feature of rising expenditure, and it is inconsistent constantly to attack the Police Department for misdemeanors and simultaneously to criticise the expenditure by which it is sought to effect improvements in the force. I should say that three main things are especially necessary in the police. We require to attract a better type of men, and that is dependent on the offer of better prospects and the according of better treatment in the matter of housing and the incidents of living. Secondly, better supervision is needed, and this is closely connected with the provision of motor cars and motor launches which has been alluded to as a defect, while thirdly the police should be given a fair chance, and I am sceptical whether in the atmosphere of attack and, frequently, calumny in which the police live, move and have their being, they are having that fair chance upon which the getting of good work out of any human being so largely depends.

A few incidental points have been raised on the kindred subject of chaukidars, and the suggestion has been made that the chaukidari collections should be included in our provincial Budget. I did not understand the Hon'ble Member to press the point, and obviously it will not tend to increase the efficiency towards which he is aiming; nor is there any better reason for putting chaukidari collections in our Budget than, say, for including the receipts from municipal taxation.

As regards the alleged anomaly that the rural population pay for the chaukidars employed by them, while the urban population is exempt from all contribution towards the police employed within their boundaries, I am afraid the Hon'ble Member who raised this point has resuscitated rather ancient history. The old municipal police charges in this province were done away with in 1882, with the sole exception of those levied in Howrah and certain minor contributions, and even these disappeared in 1898 by common agreement that the arrangement was in every way inefficient and unsatisfactory.

Turning to another sphere, we have had some interesting remarks on the matter of industrial development, and the hope has been expressed that progress in this direction might now be more rapid; that is a hope which we all share, and we are only awaiting the report of the Industrial Commission in order to make a start. Some Hon'ble Members have asked us the meaning of the provision for Rs. 1½ lakhs in the Budget for industrial development. This is a lump provision, made in anticipation of the development of schemes, in which we are getting much help from the new Director of Industries, Mr. Peterson, while the war is giving a great stimulus to the encouragement of new industries. Probably the greater part of that sum will be spent on an experimental research tannery, for which, I understand, a scheme is practically ready.

The next large subject with which I am concerned is Excise, and although I am afraid I cannot possibly deal with it fully, yet recognising the strong feeling which is entertained in many quarters, and quite rightly too, on the subject of temperance, I would like to make one or two comments. I take the item of country spirit to which, particularly, temperance reformers pay attention. In the first place it is not correct that the consumption of country-spirit during 1917-18 was markedly greater than that of the years preceding; in fact it was less. What really happened was that after years of fairly high consumption, e.g., 1913-14, which showed a total of 823,063 gallons we had a sudden drop in the three succeeding years, running down to 626,454 gallons in 1916-17. Last year the figures took an upward turn, but they are still below those of 1914-15, and very much below the level of the two years preceding that. The increase has been most marked in Calcutta, though there again the figure for 1917-18 is practically only equal to that of 1915-16, and appreciably less than that of the three earlier years; and in Calcutta the Commissioner of Excise attributes the increase, partly to the high price of imported liquor, which may have led some consumers to take to country-spirit, and partly to the prohibition of dilution. The matter of dilution is technical, and I gather that the Hon'ble Dr. Sarbadhikari rather doubts whether it can affect the question. But the stopping of dilution does increase consumption for the simple reason that it prevents the shopkeeper from cheating the customers, in so far as he cannot palm off a weaker spirit as strong spirit. The prevention of dilution has been recognised by various authorities as a reasonable and desirable incident in Excise administration, and it is only part of the efforts that have been made in Calcutta in recent years, for instance, by separating the vend of country-spirit and foreign liquor, to tighten up the Excise administration and to render it more efficient. It was recognised that the prohibition of dilution would increase consumption, but it is justified both in fairness to the consumer and by the desirability of our having an exact knowledge of the circumstances of the liquor trade so that we can properly adjust taxation. But in anticipation of this increased consumption we have taken two distinct steps to check it. In the first place in all previous years license-fees were fixed for the year; in 1917-18 they were varied month by month, so that if consumption in a shop increased we could put up the license-fees and thereby introduce a deterrent; secondly, we have not only fixed higher prices originally, but on two occasions have raised the selling price and the duty, the net result being that a gallon 25° U. P. is costing now 14 annas more than it did on the 1st April 1917. These are all very definite steps designed to deter an undue increase in the consumption of liquor, and in fact it can be shown that the incidence of taxation per proof gallon has gone up considerably from Rs. 8.1 in 1912-13, to Rs. 11.5 in 1917-18. I think this result is one which commends itself to all temperance reformers. Again it is contrary to fact that the proportion of revenue derived from license fees in Calcutta is increasing, thereby exposing us to the criticism that we are practically encouraging sales. In 1915-16, 36.9 of the revenue from country spirit was realized in the form of license fees; in 1916-17 the proportion rose to 40 per cent., but in 1917-18 it had fallen to 16 per cent. I can give the Hon'ble Dr. Sarbadhikari some figures regarding the shop at Maniktala Street to which he has alluded, from which he will see that the license fee was Rs. 2,025 a month in 1915-16, whereas the average monthly license fee fell to Rs. 697 in 1917-18.

The Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali seems to be equally under a misapprehension that we are increasing the number of licenses. Excluding wholesale licenses and licenses for hotels, restaurants, bars, railway refreshment rooms, steamers etc., but including all those in which foreign liquor can be sold retail for consumption off the premises, in 1914-15 there were 97 shops in which foreign liquor could be consumed on the premises, and 192 places at which it could be purchased for consumption off the premises. In 1916-17 these figures fell to 13 and 176. If we take retail shops for the sale of country liquor we find that they were reduced from 1,292 in 1912-13 to 1,158 in 1916-17; while in the latter year the average area per shop was 64 square miles and the average population served by that shop 39,124. In the light of these statistics, I think, it can fairly be urged that we are not studding the country with grog-shops to the detriment of the people.

There remain, Sir, sundry miscellaneous items on which I can only touch very briefly. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has referred to the inadequacy of the pay of ministerial officers, and although we have not been able to do anything special as yet for them, it may interest the Council to know that we have submitted a proposal to the Government of India which is designed to give relief to subordinate servants on Rs. 12 and under.

As regards the matter of female medical education raised by the Hon'ble Dr. Nilratan Sircar, I can give him the satisfactory information that the order debarring the admittance of female students to the Medical College has been rescinded. The reason for its having been passed was that the accommodation available was severely strained, even in taking in a proportion of the male students desiring to be instructed there, while the accommodation could have been materially improved if the Sarnamayee Hostel could have been vacated. The position was explained in detail in answer to a recent question in which it was stated that the opinions of the outside public were invited; practically no such opinions were sent in, but after discussion with the new Surgeon-General, we have decided to modify the order without waiting further.

I have notes of other points of detail raised in the course of this debate, but I am afraid that time is too short to permit of my elaborating them.

To revert to the general financial position I fully admit that it is somewhat tantalising. We have large balances and we have many useful purposes to which we would like to devote our money, but we are not allowed to touch the balances. I am afraid that in connection with provincial finance I may be regarded as somewhat of a Jonah. When I was Financial Secretary in 1909-12 we had no money; now we have money but we cannot spend it. I hope, however, that on that account the Council will not throw me overboard, because it is well-known that the position is due to circumstances over which we have no control. It is due, of course, to the war, and in so far as by economising we can help the resources of India as a whole, the resulting inconvenience and disabilities will no doubt be borne with the same cheerfulness and fortitude as far greater hardships and far greater disabilities are being borne by men in all parts of the Empire at the present time."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government Order No. 21 T.—Education, dated Darjeeling, the 23rd April, 1917, defining the limit of promotion of officers in the Subordinate Educational Service, be cancelled.

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

He said :—

“My Lord, the principles laid down by the Government in Resolution No. 1281, dated the 30th March, 1897, as regards promotion, are :—

- (1) The factors determining promotion are (a) efficiency ; (b) nature of work, (c) capacity for higher responsibility and (d) seniority.
- (2) Holding of a higher post does not imply promotion but only indicates fitness.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hornell, Director of Public Instruction, thought, however, that the holder of a higher post may or may not get promotion but as holding of a lower post indicates unfitness, so until a post indicating fitness be held there will be no prospect of promotion after a certain limit. The difficulties of the Director of Public Instruction in promoting officers are, according to him :—

- (1) The Subordinate Educational Service, as constituted at present, consists of heterogeneous elements possessing different qualifications and doing different works.
- (2) It is difficult to balance the claims of different officers at the time of promotion.
- (3) Unless the terms are defined everyone considers that he has a grievance when he is superseded.

Need for a definite pronouncement about promotions is, therefore, keenly felt by the Director who, he holds, is competent to deal with individual cases but cannot alter the terms of service without the sanction of the Government. The Director, therefore, suggested remedies which have been accepted and embodied in the Government Circular and which define the prospects of promotions of the various classes of officers in the Subordinate Educational Service in the following way :—

Officers eligible for promotion up to Classes I and II.

Lecturers (including Lecturers of the Oriental Department of the Sanskrit College).

Demonstrators.

Headmasters and Headmistresses of Government High Schools.

District Deputy Inspectors of Schools (including the Deputy Inspectors of Schools, Calcutta).

Superintendents of Technical Schools and the Assistant Head Master of the Dacca School of Engineering.

Foremen Instructors who are ordinarily appointed to Class II.

Two senior teachers of each of the European Schools who can be temporarily entrusted with the duties of the Headmaster and Headmistress.

The Librarian, Presidency College.

Deputy Keeper, Art Section of the Indian Museum.

Head clerks of important subordinate offices such as the offices of all Inspectors of Schools (including the Inspector of European Schools) and of the Principals of the Presidency, Dacca and Civil Engineering Colleges.

Officers eligible for promotion up to Class III.

Assistant Headmasters and Assistant Headmistresses of high schools.

Deputy Inspectors of Schools other than District Deputy Inspectors of Schools.

Resolutions.Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

Head clerks of the offices of all Principals of Colleges (other than those mentioned under Classes I and II above) and of the Principal, Calcutta Madrasa.

All Assistant Teachers of European Schools other than those mentioned under Classes I and II above.

Senior English Teachers of reformed Madrasahs.

Assistant Maulvis (Arabic teachers) of Madrasahs.

Assistant Masters of the Dacca School of Engineering.

Laboratory Assistants.

Teachers of the Government School of Art.

Officers eligible for promotion up to Class I.

Assistant Masters of High Schools.

Headmasters of Middle English Schools and Assistant Masters of Technical Schools.

Drawing Masters (other than those employed in the School of Art).

Sub-Inspectors of Schools.

Drill Masters.

Pandits (teachers of Sanskrit).

Maulvis (teachers of Arabic and Persian).

Clerks, other than those mentioned under Classes I, II and III

Cashiers.

Draftsmen.

Librarians of Colleges other than the Presidency and Dacca Colleges.

The remedies, my Lord, do not make any consideration whatsoever of the qualifications, for, among Assistant Masters, there are M. A.'s, M. Sc.'s, B. A.'s and B. Sc.'s sometimes with B. T. or L. T. as additional qualifications. The remedies brand the teachers of High Schools as a class doing less important work and consequently they must not rise above Rs. 100.

Then, again, there is another Circular of the Director of Public Instruction No. 188, dated 9th November, 1916, laying down that graduates must begin on Rs. 35 and M. A.'s and M. Sc.'s on Rs. 50. Thus the teacher of a secondary school must fare between the minimum of 35 and maximum of 100, for all assistant masters—no matter whether they are graduates or Masters in Arts or Science—will never get the chance of becoming Assistant Headmasters or Headmasters.

The number of posts in the first three classes being much less than the number of officers eligible for promotion (under the new circular), by the time when those of the inferior branch will become eligible by virtue of their appointment to superior posts of greater responsibility, there will not only be no room for them in the higher grades, but they will never have any chance as they will evidently have to retire earlier than those who are younger in age. An examination of the list of officers in the Subordinate Educational Service corrected up to 1st October, 1917, will show that the number of officers eligible for promotion up to Classes I to III is 251, while in Classes I, II and III there are available only 107 posts. Not less than 163 are recruited directly in classes varying from V to II. The time taken by an Assistant Master to rise up to Class V, in favourable circumstances, is seldom less than 16 years. Now when a very fortunate Assistant Master finds himself eligible for a higher post he understands perforce, to his great dismay, that his eligibility is after all a dead-sea-apple, for the fortunate juniors have not only monopolised all the higher grades but for want of breathing space threaten to knock him down from still lower than his own even Class V. The terms of service were determined by the Government of India and the Government of India, and require, it seems, that no alteration.

Resolutions.Sir S. P. Sinha.

As head of the Education Department it ill-becomes a Director of Public Instruction to say that the teachers of High Schools as a class are doing less important work than others included in the heterogeneous staff.

I think, my Lord, it is deplorable on the part of the Director and cruel and insulting to the teachers that in the face of a consensus of opinion and a definite pronouncement by the Imperial and Provincial Governments, that the teachers of secondary schools are an underpaid and overworked sulky lot—that there should be a circular limiting the promotion of some of them simply because by accident, and not by agreement, these persons are now holding less important posts. It is glaring unkindness and flagrant injustice to give a fresh cause of irritation and disappointment to school masters who are already in the worst condition—social, economic or otherwise—at a time when the Government themselves recognize the desirability of enhancing the grants on Education to bring immediate relief to this suffering class of public servants. A Director of Public Instruction ought to know that the best way, perhaps, of improving the efficiency of the workers in a particularly important sphere is not to brand them as inferior or unimportant and to discourage them by limiting their already too meagre prospects and by damaging criticisms. Surely, my Lord, this sort of treatment does not secure devotion to work in the already too-tightly bound subordinate members of the service.

I would like to give here a few hard cases :—

(1) Babu Tariniprasad Mukherjee (Class II of the Subordinate Educational Service, Assistant Head Master, Hindu School, has been superseded by Mrs. P. Chakrabarti and P. Brahmachari, who are junior to him by two years and four years, respectively. Immediately before or since the circular came into effect he was not offered any Head Mastership. Now, after 33 years of faithful service he has been kindly informed that a brand-new experimental circular has debarred him from promotion.

(2) Babu Kalidas Banerjee, Assistant Master, Sanskrit Collegiate School, after 21 years of good service has been superseded by—

- (i) Mr. S. Bhattacharjya, junior to him by three years.
- (ii) Mr. K. N. Bhattacharjya, junior by 16 years.
- (iii) Mr. Dundakar, junior by six years.
- (iv) Babu Debendralal Datta, junior by eight years.

(3) Mr. Abdul Halim, Sub-Inspector of Schools, officiating Deputy Inspector of Schools, and Babu Girija Kanta Bagchi, officiating Assistant Head-master, Barrackpur High School, have also been superseded.

Before long there will be a regular crop of similar cases, and the Director of Public Instruction will have the serene satisfaction of seeing his department detested by all self-respecting and worthy men.

Under these circumstances, my Lord, I think the circular complained of should be cancelled.

With these observations I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council. I may be permitted to add that if the Government be pleased to accept my proposition, the cases of the officers already superseded under the circular may be kindly considered."

The Hon'ble SIR S. P. SINHA said :—

" My Lord, as the Government have decided to accept this resolution and cancel the circular of which the Hon'ble Member complains, it would perhaps have been sufficient if I merely stated that and nothing else. As it might raise false hopes and give grounds for misconception, I think it necessary to put before the Council the reasons why this circular is going to be withdrawn. The fact is that the nature of the circular is altogether misunderstood, but whether that is right or whether that is wrong, the fact remains that the circular has caused^c and continues to cause a great deal of discontent in the Subordinate Educational Service as they consider that it puts a definite block in the way of promotion and makes their position worse than it was. The officers of this Service unfortunately are already labouring under a sense of grievance because of the very small pay and the poor prospects therein. Ever since I joined this Government it has been a matter of serious and anxious consideration to me as to whether the circular should continue or not, and^e before we received the notice of this resolution we had decided that the circular should be withdrawn because of the misapprehension which exists with regard to it and the discontent which it fosters. But I may explain that the circular does not do the injustice that the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution considers it does. It is designed to give effect to two fundamental principles :—first that promotion from one class to another will not and cannot be determined by seniority alone ; and secondly, that though the promotion of an officer to a post of greater responsibility will not necessarily imply promotion to a higher class on higher pay, increase of responsibility will have due weight in the determination of promotions.

"So far as the circular is based on these two principles, I may say at once that there is no intention whatsoever to depart from the principles embodied therein. They would be still applied in considering the question of promotion, and I do not propose to fetter the discretion of the Director of Public Instruction in any way whatsoever in the matter of promotion, after the circular is withdrawn, any more than it was before it was withdrawn. I also wish to mention that the Hon'ble Member should not be under any misapprehension as to this, as he has stated that the circular has caused hardship in several cases. I think he is entirely mistaken. If a man is superseded—to use his own language—it is not necessarily because of this circular ; there may be other reasons and in the cases to which he referred there are other reasons which led to the supersession such as it is ; and the withdrawal of the circular will not therefore give rise to any claim on the part of any officer to have that question re-opened and re-considered. While withdrawing the circular for the reasons which I have already mentioned, I cannot promise that there will be any departure whatsoever from the two essential and fundamental principles governing promotion, viz., that seniority alone shall not give any claim for promotion and that higher responsibility, though it does not necessarily mean higher pay, shall receive due consideration as a factor in determining promotion."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL Bahadur said :—

"I desire to associate myself with the observations that has fallen from my Hon'ble friend, Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, and I wish to thank the Hon'ble Member in charge for treating the resolution in a sympathetic spirit. I quite agree with the Hon'ble Member that seniority alone should not be the only test for promotion. He has laid down another principle that higher responsibility does not necessarily mean higher emoluments. I do not know whether that principle is accepted in all departments of Government and in all services, covenanted and uncovenanted. I for myself think that higher responsibility should carry some increase of salary. I think that is an accepted principle in Your Excellency's Government, and if that is so I do not see any reason why that should not also be accepted in the Education Department and I do not see why seniority should be the only test in that Department."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"I am grateful to Government for the kindness shown in respect of my resolution that the Circular should be withdrawn. I never meant that seniority alone should govern promotion. Other circumstances should also be considered. I fully appreciate that special consideration should be shown to those doing responsible work. If that circular be withdrawn of course the departmental heads will consider whether there should be any supersession. But on this I have no quarrel with the department. I am grateful to Government for the concession."

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq ; The President.

The resolution was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM NO. 5.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ was to have moved the following resolution :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee, consisting of officials and non-officials, be appointed to inquire into the cases of alleged oppression committed by the Midnapore Zamindari Company on cultivators in various parts of the Nadia district."

He said :—

"My Lord, since I gave notice of this resolution, I have been advised by several of my friends, whose opinions I greatly value, to ask Your Excellency's permission to withdraw this resolution. I acceded to their request, but in doing so I hope I shall not be misunderstood. I still adhere to my right to place before the Council whatever information I possess as regards the alleged cases of oppression committed by the Midnapore Zemindari Company on their tenants in Nadia district, and I certainly think that when I have placed these facts before Government no time will be lost to give these people redress and justice. I also think that although I had ample materials at my disposal to unfold before this Council a tale of untold misery and hardship, I will not do it in the face of the advice of my friends and I will not take up Your Excellency's time any longer over this resolution. Besides, Sir S. P. Sinha has told us that if we look upon these proceedings as absurdities, not to take part in them. To take part in absurdities is another absurdity. I accept his advice also and I think that the best way to avoid absurdity is not to take part in it. Therefore, my Lord, I ask permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The President's Speech.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Gentlemen, though I shall not be so inconsiderate as, at the end of a somewhat long and sultry day, to inflict a long speech upon a long-suffering and probably mutely-protesting Council, yet I think it is fitting that at the close of the session, the President should briefly review the work which has been achieved. I think we may look back upon the past session with a sense of tolerable satisfaction. We have placed upon the Statute Book certain Bills, which, if they are not of a sensational character, are at any rate measures of advantage to those in whose interest they have been conceived. Among them are the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act, and the Bengal Aliens Disqualification Act, while a fourth—the Serampore College Bill—has been passed by this Council and is now awaiting the sanction of the Viceroy. But in addition to these Bills, which have now become or are about to become Acts, we have started on their way other measures of a more ambitious character. We have given a send-off to two Bills which deal with the question of self-government in different spheres.

Resolutions.The President.

The Calcutta Municipal Bill is now awaiting the comments and criticisms of the Corporation and of other public bodies, and I can assure the Council that when the views of these different bodies have been submitted, they will receive from Government careful and earnest attention. The other Bill, to which I refer, is the Bill for placing on a broad basis the whole system of village self-government which was introduced in a speech of great lucidity by the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha at the commencement of our proceedings to-day. We shall now look forward with interest to the views which the public may hold with regard to that measure, and I confess that I shall follow its career myself with an interest and solicitude which, I think, I may describe as being almost of a paternal character. At any rate, if I cannot claim to be the actual father of the Bill, I think I may claim that since my arrival in Bengal, I have played towards it the part of a foster-father. I had hoped that this Bill would have been able to make its début amongst you long before now. So far as the Bengal Government are concerned, we had completed our work upon it within four months of the time when I first assumed office, and I have sat with folded arms consumed with such patience as I could summon, as I watched the passage of the eight months which, as events have shown, have been necessary for obtaining the sanction of the higher authorities to its introduction. But, at any rate, the Bill has at last made its appearance and it is our hope that it will receive from the public sympathetic and favourable consideration. Constitution-making is at the present moment a rather fashionable pastime, but it seems to me that some of the architects of new constitutions in their anxiety no doubt to build an attractive and ornamental top storey to their buildings have been a little prone to forget the necessity of laying a broad and firm foundation upon which to raise up their structure. The Village Self-Government Bill is the contribution of the Bengal Government to that most necessary part of the edifice. For my own part I am delighted to be able to say that from personal experience which, from time to time, during the past year I have had of the working of union committees, even under the existing law, defective though that law is, I look forward with hope and with confidence to seeing in this Presidency in the years that are to come, growing up a net-work of comparatively small self-governing units looking after their local needs, imposing the necessary taxation with the assent of the taxed, because the taxed themselves will see that the taxes which they pay are spent to their own interest and advantage.

"Now, those, as I have said, are the more ambitious measures which we have launched upon their way; but I must not omit to mention three other Bills with which the Council has also concerned itself. We have had introduced to our notice two Bills by private Members—the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill and the Bengal Primary Education Bill. What the views of the public may be with regard to those proposals, we do not yet know; but it is gratifying to find that private members of the Legislative Council are taking a keen interest in measures of social reform of this kind, and whatever may be the ultimate fate of these two particular measures, I hope that they will not be discouraged in their endeavours. The only other Bill which has been introduced during the present session is, I believe, an old and rather familiar friend, namely, the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Bill, which is still struggling to find its way on to the Statute Book. So far as the Government are concerned, in this case also we are still waiting for the opinions of the public upon our proposals. But our energies have not been occupied solely with legislative projects. During the course of the past session no less than 60 starred and 408 unstarred questions have been asked and answered. On the Financial Statement, the record number of 49 resolutions have been dealt with, and upon subjects of general public interest and importance, 46 resolutions have also been disposed of in the Council.

Resolutions.The President.

"May I just say one word with regard to the rules under which we work? We are a young body, we have no great volume of tradition behind us to look to for guidance. We are indeed engaged ourselves in making our own traditions and it behoves us, therefore, to walk warily and to guard against creating precedents which may prove a source of embarrassment to our successors in the future. Some Hon'ble Members sometimes make requests to me that I should stretch the rules under which we work in order to suit their convenience. On several occasions, for example, resolutions had been sent in too late for a mission and discussion at a meeting of the Council, and Hon'ble Members have written to say that they knew that they were sending them in a little too late; but would I make an exception in their case and allow them to be discussed at the coming meeting. If one makes an exception in one case, one must make exceptions in all cases, and if we have a rule at all, the rule must obviously be observed. Hon'ble Members will see for themselves that if we make an exception in the case of one Hon'ble Member, it will be unfair to the other Members of the Council. It may be, of course, that some event of great public interest and importance may arise unexpectedly and it is desirable that it should be discussed at the earliest possible opportunity in this Council. Under such circumstances I should consider it perfectly legitimate to make an exception to that particular rule. But the cases to which I have referred have never had behind them the support of reasons of that kind, and I have, generally speaking, found it necessary to refuse them.

"Then again I would give you one other example. Take the case of the rules with regard to questions. I think Hon'ble Members sometimes forget to read rule 5 which deals with the asking of questions; that particular rule says that a question should not be of undue length and secondly that it should not contain arguments or inferences. Well, I have sometimes found fault with questions on the ground that they violated that rule. I do not know whether it is due to their legal talent and ability that Hon'ble Members unconsciously drift into argument, or if so that we must attribute it to the fact that there are so many eminent members of the legal profession on the Council that this rule is not always adequately observed. But for the reason which I have already given, namely, that we are now really creating traditions which will be looked back to by our successors for guidance—for that reason we should be most careful in observing as strictly as possible the Rules of Business which are laid down. And where there may be no specific rules to guide us, it has been always my practice to follow, so far as possible, the procedure followed in the House of Commons. Hon'ble Members will no doubt agree that the procedure of the House of Commons is the best model which we can take on which to frame our own.

"Now, I have only a few words to say with regard to the subject matter of some of the resolutions. We have had resolutions moved on many matters of interest and importance, resolutions on questions of sanitation, questions of education, questions of administration generally, and I think we have had our fair share of resolutions on the administration of the Defence of India Act in particular. With regard to that measure, Government have been criticised both in this Council and outside it, and I can at least express my gratification that the criticism which has been directed against us within the walls of this Council has not shown that lack of restraint which I have sometimes noticed in the criticisms which are directed against us from less responsible quarters outside. Well, I would like to point out to Hon'ble Members that it is very easy for a man who bears no burden of responsibility to criticise those who do and after all it is upon the Government that the responsibility rests and in particular the responsibility for the prevention of crime. It is quite true no doubt that a moral responsibility rests upon all public men to do what they can to assist the Government in the prevention of crime; and I have not the slightest doubt that I can rely upon every Hon'ble Member of this Council to do what he can to bring home to the public at large that moral responsibility which rests upon them. But the actual and ultimate responsibility does and must rest upon the executive Government. So far as the Defence of India Act is concerned, we stand to-day where we have always stood. We exercise our powers under it with one object and one object only in view,—the object, that is to say, of preventing crimes. When I was addressing the Council at the opening meeting of this session, I travelled widely over the ground and I do not propose on this occasion to repeat my excursion, but there are two points to which I would briefly refer. We decided, as I told the Council on that occasion, that there were cases when in our judgment men who had been guilty of crime in a lesser degree only could be released from internment without further endangering the public peace, and I told the Council that it was the policy of Government, to quote my own words—'the policy of Government deliberately adopted with a full knowledge of all the facts to release such men as could in our judgment be set free without endangering the safety of society and the public peace.' And I explained that men who had been guilty only in a minor degree and for whose behaviour security could be obtained, would, under those circumstances, be set at liberty. We have not receded from that policy; we have continuously pursued it, and it may be of interest to the Hon'ble Members of this Council to know that up to the present time in pursuance of that policy, we have released in round numbers—I do not pledge myself to an absolute number because this process is a continuing process—since this Act came into force upwards of 225 men who have been interned under the provisions of the Defence of India Act or under the provisions of kindred measures. In addition to that, we have relaxed restrictions upon upwards of a hundred men who were interned away from their homes, and have allowed them what is known as 'home domicile', that is to say, we have allowed them to go back to their own homes subject to that small amount of surveillance which is necessary to see that they do not re-engage in their previous undesirable activities.

"Well, there is one other point in connection with our administration of this measure. It is a point to which I referred also in the speech which I made at the opening of Council at the beginning of the present session. I said that the Government was satisfied that such safeguards were provided as would reduce to a minimum the possibility of error in our administration of this Act. But I admitted that there might be some persons who do not possess the knowledge which Government possess and who might legitimately desire that there should be some additional safeguards over and above those which we had already provided, and I made that statement in these words:—

If, however, it is suggested that a small Judicial Committee would be regarded a more satisfactory form of safeguard against possible errors on our part, we shall be prepared in future, to submit our cases against all persons whom we proposed to place under restraint under the Defence of India Act, Ingress Ordinance, or Regulation III of 1818, to such a Body consisting of two Judges, for their opinion.

Well, I am bound to say that I was rather surprised and a little disappointed that my offer on that occasion met with such a cold welcome. I looked in vain among the speeches of public men on the platform and in the columns of the Press for any expression of opinion that this would be a satisfactory safeguard from the point of view of the public. I can assure Hon'ble Members that I found very little; on the other hand, I found a good deal of scorn and a good many remarks that a Committee of this sort would be worse than useless. That was not very encouraging. It is true that four months after I made the offer, an Hon'ble Member of the Imperial Legislative Resolutions.The President.Adjournment.

Council raised the question in that Body and elicited a similar offer to the one which I had made, or one which was somewhat similar, at any rate, from the Government of India. Then, I find to my astonishment that even this offer on the part of the Government of India has not met with any very cordial assent. It is true that in some quarters a mild expression of approval is to be found in the Press; on the other hand, in other quarters the proposal, if I may use a homely expression, has been damned with faint praise. What I want to submit to the Council is this: that these offers on the part of the Bengal Government and on the part of the Government of India were made under the belief that they would prove acceptable to public opinion. If we have been mistaken, if these offers are not acceptable to public opinion, if they are to be treated with scorn, if we are to be told that a Judicial Committee of this kind will be worse than useless—as we have been told on more occasions than one—then I say that the whole point of making these offers at once disappears. If the public do not wish these additional safeguards which have been proposed then upon the head of the public the responsibility must lie, if they do not receive them. It may be that public opinion has not had full time since the recent speech of the Home Member to express itself. But to be quite frank with the Hon'ble Members of this Council I must confess that a good deal of the opinion which has so far been expressed by public men on this offer, has not been of a character which leads me to suppose that, if the offer is put into force, it will prove acceptable to them. It remains for the public themselves to make it clear one way or the other whether they desire a machinery of this kind or whether they do not.

"I began my remarks by saying that I would not be so inconsiderate as to inflict upon the Council a long speech; but I am afraid that I have already rather transgressed the limits which I intended to impose upon myself. In bidding the Members of this Council an official farewell until our next meeting, I would once more congratulate them on the useful work which this Council has achieved during the past session. I would commend to their careful and sympathetic consideration those proposals which the Government of Bengal have now submitted to them; in the first place, in connection with the Calcutta Municipal Bill and, secondly, in connection with the Village Self-Government Bill. I hope it may be found possible without any undue delay—we have no desire whatsoever to curtail the time which may be thought necessary to give adequate consideration to these measures—for us to obtain the considered opinions of the Hon'ble Members of this Council and of the public generally upon our proposals.

"The Council now stands adjourned sine die."

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX B.

(Referred to in the answer to Question No. X.)

Nos. 1604—1612A., dated Calcutta, the 3rd March 1905.

From—R. W. CARLYLE, ESQ., C.I.E., Offg. Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

To—The Commissioner of

It appears to the Lieutenant-Governor, from the perusal of a large number of Confidential Reports, they are frequently useless, or at all events not nearly as useful as they might be, on account of the vague language in which they are couched.

2. There is not much harm in saying that an officer is "good," because it may be taken to mean that a reporting officer has really no criticism to offer, and that the officer reported on has given satisfaction. At the same time, if an officer has any particular good quality worth mentioning, it may be of great advantage that it should be specially mentioned in the report. For example, it may be useful to the Government to know that a man is "tactful," or "energetic" or "sound in judgment," when it is necessary to choose an officer possessing any of these qualifications for any special duty.

3. It is distinctly more objectionable to use a vague phrase like "bad" or "unsatisfactory" or "useless" in reporting unfavourably of an officer. It is essential to know, if possible, wherein the badness consists. The report should state whether the officer is "perverse," "untrustworthy," "perfunctory," "lazy," or whatever the particular unfavourable characteristic of his work may be; and in the case of a seriously bad report, it is a good thing, if possible, to illustrate very briefly the unfavourable trait.

4. The essential point to be kept in view in reporting on officers is that the report should be so full as clearly to show special merits or defects, so that those who have to peruse the reports may be able to form a correct and definite judgment as to how the services of the officers concerned may best be utilised.

5. It is right that an officer who is badly reported on should be informed of the fact. This is desirable, not so much to enable him to defend himself (and certainly not to enable him to enter into a controversial correspondence), but rather that he may be warned and have an opportunity of giving his attention to the curing of the defects which have been brought to notice. It is useless to send vague reports to an officer for his information, but when any particular defect is pointed out, he should be told that the defect has been brought to notice, and that he should set himself to cure it.

6. This does not apply to cases where the defect pointed out is one which cannot be cured by the officer concerned and where it could only give him pain if he were informed. It may, for instance, be desirable that Government should know that an officer is not very intelligent, but the officer concerned could not benefit by being told this. At the same time it may be necessary, in the interest of fairness of dealing, to communicate the report.

7. Wherever benefit may result from communicating an unfavourable report, or where fairness demands its communication, the officer reported on must be informed of the contents of the report; and the fact that he has been so informed must be noted for the information of Government. Where Government thinks that a report withheld should have been communicated, it will repair the omission.

APPENDIX C.

(Referred to in the answer to Question No. X.)

Nos. 5489-5504A., dated Darjeeling, the 26th June 1916.

From—THE HON'BLE MR. J. H. KERR, C.I.E., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

To—(1) All Commissioners of Divisions; (2) the Inspector-General of Police; (3) the Inspector-General of Prisons; (4) the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta; (5) the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta; (6) the Director of Land Records; (7) the Director of Surveys; (8) the Director of Agriculture; (9) the Registrar, Co-operative Societies; (10) the Inspector-General of Registration; (11) the Secretary, Board of Revenue; (12) the Commissioner of Excise and Salt.

I AM directed to forward, for your information and guidance, a copy of a Resolution by the Government of India, Home Department, Nos. 1568-95, dated the 14th September 1915, in which they lay down the principles which should be observed in communicating to subordinate officers in civil employ unfavourable remarks made by their superior officers.

2. The two main principles laid down by the Government of India are:—

- (1) that only those defects, which are remediable and concerning the existence of which no doubt can exist, should be pointed out to the officer at fault; and
- (2) that the manner and method of communication should be such as to secure the maximum benefit to the officer, having regard to his temperament.

3. With reference to the question of the authority by whom the unfavourable remarks should be communicated to the officers concerned, it is important to notice that the Government of India have directed that when a report is built up on the individual opinions of different departmental superiors in gradation, it is only the opinion as accepted by the highest authority which need be considered from the point of view of communication. In view of these orders, the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that an unfavourable report shall not be communicated to the officer concerned except by, or under the orders of, the authority which submits the report to Government or the Board of Revenue, namely, the Commissioner, the Head of the Department, or the District Judge, or, in the case of the Public Works Department, the Chief Engineer. His Excellency in Council leaves it to these high authorities, who have first-hand knowledge of the work of the officers reported on, to decide, with reference to the principles laid down by the Government of India, in which cases it is desirable to communicate unfavourable remarks to the officers concerned, and whether the communication should be verbal or written, and whether it should be made direct to the officer concerned or through an intermediate authority or through his immediate superior.

4. I am further to point out that the orders contained in paragraph 3 of the Resolution refer only to annual reports, and do not in any way affect the right and duty of an officer to admonish his subordinates with a view to the eradication of faults which come to his notice in the course of his ordinary work. When a defect has already been pointed out in this way, it may not be necessary, on the occasion of the submission of the annual report, to communicate further with an officer concerning his defects. Each authority should, therefore, in reporting the existence of remediable defects in an officer, note the action which has already been taken or which it is proposed to take to cure them, so as to enable superior authorities and Government to decide whether any further action is necessary in connection with the annual report.

5. The orders now issued supersede those contained in paragraphs 5, 6 and 7 of Government Circular Nos. 1604-12 A., dated the 3rd March 1905.

Are the Government considering the advisability of—

The Damodar floods

- (i) arranging for communicating flood-warnings to the affected area on the right side of the Damodar on receipt of telegrams by the Public Works Department officers from Raniganj;

- (iv) opening a temporary Public Works Department office at a centrally situated place in the spill area to examine the condition of the villagers, the action of the flood water and the obstruction of the drainage;
- (v) closing of the spill channels formed on either side of the Begua river, the existence of which causes immense trouble to the villagers; and
- (vi) providing reserved drinking water tanks in each village within the spill area, for want of which, and owing to pollution by flood water, cholera breaks out in the affected area?

(a) Is it a fact that on the 28th March last, Babu Chuni Lal Mukherji, Sadar Subdivisional Officer of Faridpur, ordered a constable to pull one Akhiladdi by the ear when the latter was giving evidence before him (the Subdivisional Officer) in the case of Joynalkhatum versus Maijuddi and that the constable actually pulled him by the ear in the witness box in open court?

Alleged disorderly act of a constable a witness.

(b) If so, what action have the Government taken or are they taking in the matter?

Questions and Answers

(c) Are the Government considering the advisability of directing the aforementioned Babu Chuni Lal Mukherji to make suitable reparation to the said witness Akhiladdi?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR DUVAL:—

(a) Yes. Akhiladdi was a witness in a murder case, in which it was believed that one of the principal accused was being kept in concealment by her husband and his friends, and all attempts to discover her had been unsuccessful. Akhiladdi doggedly refused to answer questions put to him in the witness box, and the Subdivisional Officer, in order to obtain a reply, directed the constable to pull his ear this the constable did.

(b) and (c) On the day after the incident the Subdivisional Officer went to see the District Magistrate and expressed regret for what he had done. His action was, of course, improper, and he has been informed of the view taken of it by Government. He seems, however, to have acted hastily in a sudden fit of annoyance, and in all the circumstances, Government do not propose to take further action in the matter."

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR:—

"(a) to (j) Arun Chandra Guha, a State prisoner, submitted a petition to Government in November, 1916, containing allegations of ill-treatment at the hands of the police. These allegations were inquired into by Government, and a report was submitted to the Government of India in February, 1917, that the charges were entirely false and without foundation, a finding with which the Government of India concurred. The allegations again formed part of the subject-matter of an inquiry recently held by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore and the Hon'ble Sir John H. Mitter, who declared the charges quite unfounded."

(c) Ratan Singh was reported to be showing signs of insanity in June, 1916; he was released from jail and sent to his home.

(d) One other State prisoner has been under observation.

Questions and Answers.Détenus—

- (a) Priya Sankar Sen was arrested on the 27th March, 1916. In April, before orders had been passed in his case, a report was received from the jail authorities that he showed signs of madness. Orders of internment were never, therefore, issued and he was released. Subsequently, under orders of the Additional District Magistrate, 24-Parganas, he was sent as a lunatic to the Berhampore Asylum.
- (b) Dasarathi Mukherji was interned in his own home in September, 1916; a year later a local practitioner, under whose treatment he was, submitted a certificate that he was suffering from neurasthenia caused in his opinion by worry and sexual excess, and this had affected his brain. His relatives declined to send him to a hospital, but he was released from domiciliary orders.
- (c) Nibaran Chandra Chakrabarti was interned in June, 1917. A month later it was reported that he had become insane after an attack of fever. He was domiciled with his relatives but at the end of August he was reported to have developed into a dangerous lunatic; the orders under the Defence of India Rules were cancelled, and he was dealt with by the District Magistrate under the Lunacy Act.
- (d) W. T. Floyd, who was interned at Kalimpong, was recently reported to have developed religious mania and was sent to an Asylum for treatment.
- (e) Khemendra Dastidar, who was interned in June, 1917, in the Rajshahi district, recently developed religious hallucinations; he was then domiciled under the care of his relatives.

(b) Have any inquiries been made into the truth or otherwise of these reports?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to publish the results of these inquiries?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

Appointments to the Provincial Executive Service from Hindus in the district of Noakhali.

(b) Are the Government also aware that there have been suitable and qualified Hindu candidates from Noakhali who could have been appointed to these posts?

Questions and Answers.

(c) Are the Government aware of a feeling of dissatisfaction amongst the Hindus of Noakhali on the ground that they have not hitherto received any share in appointments to the Provincial Executive Service?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of issuing orders that in future the claims of the Hindu community of Noakhali may be considered and that the rules prescribed by the Government for "securing a fair share of appointments to each important section of the community" may be given effect to?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) Yes.

(b) No Hindus belonging to the district of Noakhali have been nominated by the Commissioner for the Provincial Civil Service since 1905. Four candidates have been nominated for the Subordinate Civil Service, and three have been given appointments. The same minimum qualifications are prescribed for both services.

(c) Government have no information on the point, but no definite principle that appointments must be allotted in rotation by districts has ever been admitted.

(d) This question and answer will be communicated to the Commissioner, but the Hindu population of Noakhali cannot be regarded as a separate section of the community for the purposes of the rules which, subject to the due representation of various classes in the public service, contemplate the selection of the best candidates in the division, irrespective of the particular districts from which they come."

(b) Is it a fact that the inhabitants of those villages are all agriculturists and tenants of the Government khas mahal?

(c) Are the Government aware that from the 19th September, 1916, to the 29th May, 1918, 572 persons have been convicted in the Cox's Bazar subdivision for allowing their cattle to enter the reserved forests and for entering the forest for gathering fuel for domestic use, and that out of them 529 persons have been sentenced to an aggregate fine of Rs. 4,485-2 and 43 persons suffered rigorous imprisonment for different periods?

(d) Are the Government considering the advisability of setting apart a sufficient quantity of pasture land in every village in the Government khas mahal in Cox's Bazar subdivision, free of charge, for the grazing of cattle?

(e) Have the Government considered the advisability of removing the present boundary lines of the reserved forest towards the interior of the forests and of keeping a sufficiently large space of land for grazing purposes between the villages and the reserved forests?

(f) Are the Government considering the advisability of issuing passes for the grazing of cattle and for the gathering of fuel in favour of families instead of individuals?

(g) Are the Government also considering the advisability of issuing free passes for fuel for home consumption to such poor people as are unable to pay the prescribed rate?

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a) There are certain villages in the Cox's Bazar subdivision of the Chittagong district for which sufficient pasture ground is not available outside the reserved forest. In such cases the villagers are authorised to graze cattle in the forest on taking out the prescribed passes.

(b) The inhabitants of these villages are mostly agriculturists and tenants of the Government estate.

(c) Between the 19th September, 1916, and the 29th May, 1918, 88 persons were convicted of offences in connection with the pasturing of cattle or buffaloes in the forest reserve; 2 were imprisoned and 86 were fined Rs. 1,380; 91 persons were convicted for the illicit removal of firewood, of whom 3 were imprisoned and 88 were fined Rs. 529; 382 persons were convicted for illicit removal of bamboos and timber and for other breaches of forest regulations.

(d) to (g) The charges for grazing cattle and cutting firewood in the Chittagong reserved forests are already very low. An annual payment of 12 annas entitles a cultivator to graze 6 cattle in the forest and to take firewood for his domestic use. No further concessions appear to be called for in regard to the grazing of cattle and removal of firewood."

(d) Is it a fact that certain instructions, which the accused in what is known as the "Char Lawrence case" had written out for their Counsel, were intercepted by the police?

(e) What action, if any, have the Government taken in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a), (b) and (c) The détenus domiciled at Kutubdia have not submitted any representation to Government on the matters referred to. They have from time to time brought certain alleged grievances to the notice of the local officials, who have inquired into them. These grievances have been repeated in a recent trial and have been examined by the Tribunal, who have found that there is no real substance in them. If responsible and properly authenticated statements are furnished regarding the allegations contained in (b) and (c), doubtless a more specific reply can be given if need be, after inquiry into any such charges.

(d) and (e) It is understood that when the defence pleaders interviewed in jail the accused referred to and obtained their instructions for their defence, they requested the accused to send their written statements. These statements were sent by the assistant jailor with the escort in a cover addressed to the court sub-inspector for the Superintendent of Police, whose duty it is in the ordinary course to censor all letters written by the accused before despatch. The court sub-inspector received the cover, and after reading the assistant jailor's covering note, sent the papers to the Superintendent of Police for his orders. (a) Are the Government aware that in some mufassal districts modis and beparees (shop-keepers and traders) are charging one and two pice discount for taking one-rupee notes in exchange for merchandise?

(b) Are the Government also aware that in some cases they are refusing to sell merchandise in exchange for one-rupee notes?

Questions and Answers.

(c) Are the Government aware that this is causing great hardship to the poorer classes?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are considering the desirability of instructing District Officers to take such steps as may be deemed advisable to put a stop to the practice?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“(a) to (d) The custom of charging a small discount for changing either notes for larger amounts or silver rupees, unfortunately prevails in regard to notes generally, although doubtless in respect of notes of so small a denomination as one rupee it especially hits the poorer classes. There have also been reports as to the unpopularity of recent issues of small denominations, and possibly they are not yet circulating freely. It is hoped that matters may improve when the novelty of these issues wears off, and the practice of charging discount, which is much to be reprehended, will be discouraged as far as possible.”

(a) Are the Government aware that a large portion of last season's jute crop still remains in Northern Bengal owing to the scarcity of railway wagons caused by the transfer of Eastern Bengal Railway stock to other lines?

Transport of the jute crop of Northern Bengal.

(b) Are the Government aware that the available storing and assorting accommodation is almost wholly taken up at the present time by stocks of old jute awaiting transport?

(c) Are the Government aware that large quantities of jute still remain unsold in the hands of the cultivators who, having already missed their market owing to the absence of transport facilities, are still unable for the same reason to realize their holdings at even half the rates obtained in other parts of the province where transport difficulties have not been so pronounced?

(d) Are the Government aware that unless the bulk of these stocks is cleared before the end of next month accommodation will not be available for the harvesting and marketing of the new crop?

Questions and Answers.

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, they have taken or are taking to relieve the situation?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“(a) and (b). The facts are as stated.

(c) Government are aware that in Northern Bengal large quantities of last year's jute are still in the hands of cultivators or small traders, and that the price obtained for jute in Northern Bengal has generally been lower than that obtained in Eastern Bengal. The inferior price is due partly to the inferior quality of the jute and partly to difficulties of transport.

(d) Government are aware that if existing stocks are not removed during August and September, there will be difficulty in storing the new crop.

(e) Steps are being taken to relieve the situation by the following measures :—

(i) the provision of a larger number of broad gauge wagons on the Eastern Bengal Railway,

(ii) the provision of improved facilities for carrying jute by rail to Fulchari Ghat and thence by steamer to Calcutta.”

(b) Is it also a fact that Babu Jashodakumar Ghosh, B.L., Vakil of Noakhali, officiated in the above post during the absence on leave of the said Babu Bankim Chandra Bose and for some time even after his death, and that he was a candidate for appointment to the post?

(c) Is it also a fact that Babu Jashodakumar Ghosh officiated in the post on a previous occasion after the death of Khan Bahadur Buzlal Rahim, the then Government Pleader, until the appointment of Babu Bankim Chandra Bose to the same post?

(d) Is it also a fact that Babu Jashodakumar Ghosh acted as pleader on behalf of the Government on several other occasions in connection with important civil suits during the incumbency of the late Khan Bahadur?

(e) Is it also a fact that on the present occasion, although the District Magistrate recommended the confirmation of Babu Jashodakumar Ghosh in the post in which he was already officiating, one Babu Hitalal Guha, a Vakil of the Calcutta High Court of five years' standing, has been permanently appointed to the post?

(c) If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for the proposed abolition of the chauki in question?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DUVAL :—

" (a) One of the Munsifs' courts then sitting at Muradnagar was removed to Nabinagar in the year 1882, the grounds for the removal being congestion at Muradnagar and the desire of the people of Nabinagar to have a munsifi near at hand.

The second Munsif's court at Nabinagar, which was established later, was not transferred from Muradnagar.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the area under cotton cultivation in Bengal, its annual output and quality? Cotton cultivation in Bengal.

(b) Is there any truth in the statement that Dacca cotton was very abundant in the 18th century and was of a superior quality?

(c) Have the Government considered the question whether the cultivation of cotton will pay in this province and, if so, what steps are they taking for introducing cultivation in suitable areas?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“ (a) The estimated area under cotton in Bengal in the year 1917-18 was 71,230 acres,—nearly all in the hill areas of the Chittagong Hill Tracts and of Hill Tippera; a very small area being also sown in Bankura and Midnapore districts. The estimated outturn was 18,854 bales of 400 lbs. The cotton is of short staple, the climatic conditions being unfavourable to the production of cotton of first-rate quality.

(b) The cotton grown in the north of Dacca district in the 18th century is stated by Dr. Roxburgh in Flora Indica to have been more abundant and of better quality than the cotton which is grown now. Innumerable attempts have been made since the middle of the 19th century to grow long-stapled cotton in Bengal; but every attempt in the plains has so far been a failure.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether there are any restrictions on the admission of scholars of pure Indian descent to European schools?

Restrictions on the admission of scholars of pure Indian descent in European schools.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"The restrictions imposed on the admission of non-Europeans in European schools in terms of clauses (c) and (d) of Article 7 of the European School Code are applicable in the case of scholars of pure Indian descent."

Questions and Answers.

They are—

- (1) No grant is made on account of non-European scholars who have not adopted European habits of life.
- (2) No school is eligible for a grant under the European School Code in which the number of non-Europeans exceeds 15 per cent. of the total number of scholars or such smaller percentage as the local Government may, by special order, prescribe for any particular school or place."

Cases of kidnapping for immoral purposes.

Having regard to the increasing number of kidnapping cases for immoral purposes, what special steps are the Government taking to put down the evil?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"The matter is under the consideration of Government in connection with a report recently received from the Commissioner of Police.

The Hon'ble Member is doubtless aware that a Bill which was designed to confer a greater degree of protection to girls was introduced in the Imperial Council before the war and is still pending there."

Regulation of traffic in the northern part of the town.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Commissioner of Police has organised a traffic police to regulate the traffic in the northern part of the town, especially in the Barabazar, Jorabagan and Kumertolly sections?

(b) Are the Government aware that the obstruction of roads continues without any abatement, carters and others unnecessarily leaving their carts and goods for long periods on the streets and foot-paths without the slightest regard for the public convenience?

(c) Are the Government also aware that this is done in the presence of the beat constables, who complacently allow the obstruction to continue?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is not possible to employ mounted police or some superior staff of officers to see that the beat constables do their duty?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to the question which he put on this subject at the meeting of this Council held on the 13th December, 1915. Since then the Commissioner of Police has prepared a scheme for traffic police throughout the Calcutta Police District; but the scheme, which necessarily entails a large increase of force and considerable expenditure, is being withheld until financial conditions improve and until the Commissioner is able to recruit up to the strength already sanctioned.

(b) There is no doubt that considerable obstruction of roads takes place in the northern part of the town in spite of prosecutions. Without widening the roads and providing suitable cart spaces the portions of the town specially referred to will invariably be obstructed, no matter what steps the police take to regulate traffic.

(c) No. A large number of cases are sent up against persons responsible for causing obstruction: the majority of these are reported by the beat constables.

Questions and Answers.

(d) It is not possible to employ any extra staff for supervision owing to the financial stringency and the shortage of men, both Indian and European. The staff of patrol sergeants in this part of the town has, however, been kept at its full strength, somewhat to the detriment of work elsewhere."

(a) Is it a fact that the Inspectors of Police attached to the Shampukur, Jorabagan, Burtola, Barabazar, Jorasanko and Sukeas Street thanas in Calcutta are required to attend daily to hear the report of the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Northern section, at Jorabagan at 10 A.M. and that they have to wait there till about 3 P.M.?

Alleged waste of time by the Inspectors of certain thanas in attending to hear the report of the Deputy Commissioner.

(b) Is it a fact that a report of all cases is made once to the Assistant Commissioner, Northern Division (Town), between 10 A.M. and 12 noon and once again to the Deputy Commissioner, Northern Division, between 1 P.M. and 3 P.M.?

(c) Are the Government aware that a good deal of time is thus spent by a large number of police officers and that they find themselves considerably handicapped in their investigation work?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of modifying the present system of hearing reports?

(e) Are the Government aware that Sir Frederick Halliday, Messrs. Bignell, Showers, James, Barnard, Sir John Lambert and other Commissioners of Police, Calcutta, heard reports of all cases of all the thanas, in Calcutta and suburbs, in a room (with open doors) at Lal Bazar in which the public, the friends and relations of accused persons, as well as the lawyers, had always an access?

(f) Are the Government aware that the public and even the friends and relations of accused persons are not allowed an access to the report room of the Deputy Commissioner of Police at Jorabagan, where he hears reports of cases with closed doors?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons which have led to a departure from the old practice of hearing reports?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR:—

"(a) The officers in charge of the police sections named are required to attend at Jorabagan at 10 A.M. for reports on those days on which they have cases to put up. It is not a fact that they are detained till 3 P.M. daily.

(b) No. The Deputy Commissioner only hears those cases in which it is necessary for him to pass orders of remand or discharge. He does not hear those cases which are sent up at once to the Magistrate or comparatively unimportant cases which are under inquiry.

(c) and (d) Some time is spent by police officers at reports which might otherwise be spent in investigation, but orders have been issued by the Commissioner of Police that not more time than is absolutely necessary is to be spent at reports. The arrangements in force are designed to secure this object, and Government do not propose to fetter the discretion of the Commissioner of Police in the matter.

(e) It is not a fact that reports of all cases of all police sections of the town and suburbs were heard by the Commissioners named at Lal Bazar, but these officers heard reports of important cases at Lal Bazar under the conditions described.

(b) Has the petition been granted?

(c) If not, why not?

(d) Is it a fact that he was granted an allowance of Rs. 40 per month, and that subsequently the same was reduced to Rs. 30? If so, will the Government kindly state the reason?

(e) Is it a fact that the Civil Surgeon of Suri recommended that he might be sent to the Medical College at Calcutta for examination? If so, was it done? If not, will the Government kindly state why the Civil Surgeon's recommendation was not carried out?

(f) Is it a fact that the Civil Surgeon reported that the détenu was suffering from nervous debility and recommended that he should be sent to a healthier place and that in consequence he was removed from Birbhum to Char Lawrence?

(g) Is Char Lawrence a healthy place?

(h) Is there any truth in the statements that he made before the Special Tribunal that when he went to Char Lawrence on the 8th April, at about 2-30 P.M., he found the house had been converted into a privy; that he could not clear it out himself and so he could not live there; that he had nothing to eat on the day he arrived; that on the next day he took chira; that on the way from the shop he found Sarat Sen, Inspector, in a room surrounded by other détenus; that he peeped from outside and that as soon as Sarat saw him he asked him to come inside; that he told him that he had not taken rice on the 8th and also on the 9th; and that Sarat then asked him whether there were no other arrangements?

(i) Were these statements challenged in Court? If not, why not?

Questions and Answers.

(m) Is it a fact that Babu Upendra Lal Ray, from his place in the Special Tribunal, observed that he saw the papers had been kept for one hour at least and that the Court Inspector read them before offering to hand them over and that the Inspector was reading them in Court?

(n) If the answer to clause (m) be in the affirmative, will the Government kindly state—

(i) why,

(ii) under whose instructions, and

(iii) under what authority

(o) What steps are the Government taking to prevent the interception of instruction papers of détenus and other accused persons in future?

(p) Do the Government propose to send back Mohini to Char Lawrence after his term of imprisonment is over?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a), (b) and (c) The father of Mohini Samanta petitioned that his widowed sister might be allowed to live with his son and nurse him. The petition was refused because there was no necessity for nursing, and it was considered undesirable that his relatives should live with him.

(d) His allowance was reduced from Rs. 40 to Rs. 30 on his transfer to Birbhum, as the Magistrate reported that Rs. 40 was excessive having regard to the cost of living in that district.

 - (iii) settlement has been made with third parties upon refusal by the zamindars; and
 - (iv) the zamindars have succeeded in establishing their title, either wholly or partially, to the lands in dispute as belonging to their permanently-settled estates?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) Diara proceedings have been initiated in 386 mahals in Mymensingh district, and completed in 91 mahals.

It cannot be stated in how many mahals such proceedings are contemplated, because the number is not ascertained before proceedings are initiated.

The area of the lands likely to be assessed to revenue is 30 square miles, and the approximate area of the revenue survey mauzas in the district is 6,400 square miles.

(b) As a diara proceeding involves more than one mahal, and the zamindars of all mahals included in each proceeding do not take the same action, the information is given by mahals—

- (i) The zamindars have taken settlement without protest in 127 cases.
- (ii) The zamindars have taken settlement under protest in 76 cases.
- (iii) Settlement has not been made with third parties in any case, but 38 mahals have been kept under direct management owing to the recusancy of zamindars.
- (iv) The zamindars have established their title to the lands as belonging to their permanently-settled estates wholly in respect of 110 mahals and partially in respect of 85 mahals. Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the Joint Stock Companies that have been registered and the new industries that have been started since the war broke out, noting, in each instance, the amount of authorised capital and the nature of Government patronage, if any?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"A copy of statement No. II attached to the annual reports by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies for the years 1914-15 to 1917-18, is laid on the table¹. It is not easy to answer the second part of the question in the form put without detailed inquiries for which there is little time, but, speaking broadly, no new industries have actually been started since the outbreak of the war, though many existing industrial concerns have been largely developed and are possibly opening up new lines of business. In other words, one result of the war has been to force India to look to its internal resources and efforts for many things which prior to the war it imported from abroad. In this connection the Hon'ble Member is referred to the article on Industrial Development in Bengal in the Munitions Board Hand-book published in connection with the Bombay Exhibition.

As regards Government patronage it is understood that large orders have been placed with such concerns by the Indian Munitions Board."

scarcity and high price of cloth may be regarded as the predisposing cause of most of these offences, but many of them must be ascribed to local bad characters and professional thieves.

(c) Was any legal opinion obtained by Government before instituting the case? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table?

(d) Are there any provisions for exempting bona fide medicines from the purview of the Excise law? If so, have the Government taken any steps to make such exemptions?

(e) Is it a fact that the present Bengal Excise Act is based upon a Bill framed by the Indian Excise Committee of 1905? If so, will the Government be pleased to quote the particular provisions or recommendations made by the Committee in regard to bona fide medicines and the corresponding provisions of the present Bengal Excise Act, giving reasons for any difference between them in this particular?

(f) Are the Government aware that the Bombay Abkari Act V of 1878 contains specific provisions exempting drugs from the operation of Excise law?

(g) Are the Government considering the desirability of undertaking an amendment of the Bengal Excise Act with a view to bringing it into line with the provision made in section 62 of the Bombay Abkari Act in regard to medicines?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

(a) On the 25th March, 1918, Mr. M. R. Cox, Inspector of Excise and Salt, purchased a bottle of medicinal preparation known as 'Rahitakarishtha' from Kaviraj Satish Chandra Sarkar, and sent it to the Chemical Examiner for analysis. It proved to contain alcohol, derived from the fermentation of gur, equivalent to 17·6 per cent. proof spirit. On receipt of a report to this effect the Inspector, after obtaining a search warrant, searched the premises of the Kaviraj, where he found 100 bottles of similar preparations and two large fermenting vats for their manufactures. The Kaviraj was therefore prosecuted for the illicit manufacture and sale of an exciseable article under section 46 (a) of Bengal Act V of 1909, as amended by Bengal Act VII of 1914. Government are not prepared to lay the connected papers on the table.

(b) No.

(c) No special opinion was taken.

(d) Under section 90 of the Excise Act the Local Government is empowered to exempt any exciseable article from the provisions of the Act. Any article which duty has already been paid, have been thus exempted.

(e) It is a fact that in its main outlines the Bengal Excise Act was based upon the Bill framed by the Indian Excise Committee of 1905. The relevant clause in the Committee's Bill was as follows :—

'Nothing in the foregoing provisions of this Act applies to the import, manufacture, possession, sale or supply of any bona fide medicated articles for medicinal purposes by medical practitioners, chemists, or druggists, apothecaries or keepers of dispensaries; but the Local Government may by notification prohibit throughout the province or within any local area, the import, manufacture, possession, supply or sale of any such article except under such conditions as it may prescribe.'

There is no corresponding provision in the present Act. It was omitted at the suggestion of the Select Committee which considered the Bill, on the ground that it would open the way for the use of medicinal preparations for intoxicating purposes, and that the power given in section 90 of the present Act would be a sufficient safeguard against undue interference with articles of which the alcoholic strength is low.

Distribution of areas in the three districts of Mymensingh.

(a) With reference to the answer given to my unstarred question No. IX, of the 3rd April, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state what modifications, if any, have been effected in the scheme of distribution of areas as between the three districts of Mymensingh and their respective subdivisions?

(b) What are the reasons that led to such modifications? Were the public consulted in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a) Since April, 1917, no further modifications have been made in the areas and boundaries of the districts and subdivisions which it is proposed to form in connection with the scheme for the partition of the Mymensingh district. A statement giving particulars of the scheme as it now stands is laid on the table.

Questions and Answers.

(b) The modifications of the original scheme were made in consequence of criticisms and suggestions received from the public and the local officers after the publication of Government Resolution No. 6287 P., dated the 27th May, 1915, a copy of which was laid on the table in answer to the Hon'ble Member's former question. The changes were all designed to meet the public convenience. The transfer of the northern portion of Nalitabari to the western district was made because of representations received from the inhabitants of Sherpur and Nalitabari that the latter place is more accessible to Jamalpur than to Mymensingh, and this convenience will be still more marked when the railway line is constructed from Jamalpur to Nalitabari. The inclusion of a portion of the Madhupur jungle in the western district was made to suit the convenience of the principal zamindars of this area, whose main property is situated in the Tangail subdivision. The inclusion in the sadar subdivision of the eastern district of the western portion of the Badla police-station was made in view of representations received from the inhabitants of this area that it is much easier of access to Kishoreganj than to the headquarters of the south-eastern subdivision."

What practical steps have been taken in Bengal since the War Conferences at Delhi and at Calcutta in the matter of developing the resources of the country? Development of the resources of the country.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"As regards industrial development it is impossible to answer the question in a general form, the more so as the Delhi Conference and its provincial sequel are of comparatively recent date. All that can be said broadly is that the policy of developing the resources of the country is being steadily pursued as opportunity offers.

The development of the agricultural resources of Bengal has been receiving special attention since the outbreak of the war, as the results of the war have demonstrated the special necessity of such development. The steps enumerated below as having been taken since the war conferences are not therefore exclusively the results of those conferences.

(1) To meet the increased demand for quinine 700 acres have been taken up for cinchona cultivation in place of the normal area of 300 acres.

(2) With the object of providing for the supply in India of the tea chests required by the tea industry, Government have given facilities in the Buxa Forest Division which are contingent on the concessionaire carrying on the business of manufacturing tea chests or three-ply wood.

(3) With a view to ascertaining the trade requirements of forest products and the possibility of supplying them Government have arranged to depute Mr. H. S. Gibson, Deputy Conservator of Forests, who had made special inquiries in America under the auspices of Government, to the office of the Director of Industries, Bengal, for a period of two months with effect from the 16th July, 1918. It is intended that if the experience of two months shows that Mr. Gibson can be employed in that capacity with advantage he shall be appointed as Forest Utilization Officer.

(4) Arrangements have been made for the distribution of 8,000 maunds of superior rice seed and 1,000 maunds of superior jute seed.

(5) Five new posts of District Agricultural Officers have been created.

(6) Orders have been issued for encouraging the use of manures of proved suitability by the distribution of loans under the Agriculturists' Loans Act on the recommendation of officers of the Agricultural Department.

(7) Inquiries have been instituted throughout the Presidency and the results of those inquiries will be discussed at a meeting of the Provincial Agricultural Association to be held on the 4th July, regarding—

(a) the possibility of increasing the cultivation of rabi food crops in Bengal;

(b) improvement of the organization for the supply of manure, seed and implements;

(c) extension of cotton cultivation;

(d) extension of the supply of new varieties of sugarcane.

(8) For the extension of the co-operative movement and in particular of industrial societies 16 new posts of Inspectors of Co-operative Societies have been created.

Questions and Answers.

(9) The Co-operative Department has devoted special attention to co-operation among weavers and to improving the facilities for obtaining cotton yarn.

(10) The improvement of the facilities for the transport of perishable food products, such as fish and dairy produce, by railway and the provision of cold storage for the same have been receiving the attention of Government. A conference on the subject was held on the 2nd July."

These questions will be discussed at a meeting of the Provincial Agricultural Association to be held on the 4th July. Resolution referred to by the Hon'ble MR. KERR, in his answer to question No. LXXVIII (unstarred), asked by the HON'BLE BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY at the Council Meeting of the 3rd July, 1918.

The Governor in Council has decided to appoint a committee to advise him in respect of the cases of those persons now under restraint, or who, during the sittings of the committee, may be placed under restraint, either under the provisions of the Defence of India Act (Act IV of 1915) : the Ingress into India Ordinance (V of 1914) (to the extent that the persons so dealt with belong to the province of Bengal) ; or Regulation III of 1818, whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that they had acted, or were about to act in a manner prejudicial to the public safety or the Defence of British India.

The proceedings of the committee will be held in Camera and no Counsel will be permitted to appear. The papers of each case will be placed before the committee by an officer deputed by the local Government in the grouping essential to the proper understanding of them and in the manner best calculated to effect that end. Should the committee desire further information the request will be dealt with by the local Government to the best of their ability.

With the consent of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal, the services of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beachcroft have been lent as a member of the committee, which will also comprise Sir Narayan Ganesh Chandravarkar, who has kindly consented to serve.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the names of such visitors?

Appointment of non-official visitors for persons confined under Bengal Regulation III of 1818.

" The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to unstarred question XXXVIII.

By the Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY :—

LXXX.

(a) Are the Government aware that the supply of quinine in the post offices has run short in some parts of the province and that a good deal of inconvenience is being experienced by the people on this account?

(b) If so, what are the reasons for such shortage and what steps have been taken to prevent such shortages in future?

Alleged short supply of quinine in post offices.

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) and (b). In view of the profiteering in quinine that was going on, the Sanitary Commissioner sent orders in May to Civil Surgeons not to issue quinine treatments for sale pending further instructions. These orders, which were intended only to suspend temporarily the issue of stocks to post offices were misunderstood in some cases, and postmasters were directed to suspend sales to the public. Orders directing the resumption of the issue of supplies of treatments were given after about 10 days, but in the meantime there was a stoppage of sales in some places. Apart from these special circumstances, there is sometimes a shortage of quinine treatments at post offices owing to the postmasters not being able to obtain supplies from Civil Surgeons' offices in good time. Government are, therefore, considering the question of introducing a different system of distribution."

Abduction cases of girls.

LXXXI.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing—

- (i) the number of abduction cases in which girls have been subsequently rescued by the police in Calcutta and its neighbourhood since January, 1918, together with brief particulars about each case, the nationality, caste, age, civil condition and previous residence of each such girl; and the names, occupation and residence of the accused;
- (ii) the results of prosecutions started in such cases;
- (iii) the custody in which each such girl was kept during the legal proceedings and thereafter; and
- (iv) the number of any abduction cases of which information was received by the police but which have remained undetected during the last five years in each district?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

Have the Government any reason to suspect that there are any systematic organisations for carrying on traffic in girls in Calcutta or elsewhere in Bengal?

Traffic in girls in Calcutta.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR:—

"Reports have been received that such an organisation exists within the jurisdiction of Maheshtala police-station in the 24-Parganas district; but the evidence on the subject is not sufficient to justify the institution of legal proceedings. No report has been received regarding the existence of similar organisations in any other district."

(a) Is it a fact that the scale of pay of the clerks attached to the Executive Engineer's office under the South-Western Circle and Central Circle was raised and a circle cadre introduced in 1914, and that these clerks now start on a salary of Rs. 30 with prospects of rising up to Rs. 250 per month?

Salary of navigation clerks under the Executive Engineer, South-Western and Central Circles.

(b) Is it a fact that Government have not revised the scale of salary of the navigation clerks who work under the same Executive Engineer? If so, what are the reasons for such invidious treatment?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the maximum and minimum salary now drawn by the navigation clerks of the Circular and Eastern Canals Division, Cossye Division and Nadia Rivers Division?

(d) Is it a fact that a proposal for revision of the scale of salary of the navigation establishment generally has been lying with Government for consideration since the circle cadre was introduced for other clerks in 1914?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the above proposal will be sanctioned and what would be the additional monthly expenditure that it will entail if sanctioned?

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

“(a) Yes, except that the maximum is Rs. 240 and not Rs. 250.

(b) The Committee appointed in 1911 to consider the question of the pay, grading and method of work of the Public Works Department offices definitely excluded the question of the pay of the navigation staff from the scope of their inquiries and from their recommendations.

(c) The maximum salaries drawn are Rs. 35, Rs. 35 and Rs. 40 and the minimum salaries Rs. 20, Rs. 30 and Rs. 25 in the three divisions respectively.

(d) A proposal for the revision of pay of the whole of the navigation establishment of the Public Works Department in Bengal was considered by Government in 1916; but for financial reasons effect has not been given to that proposal.

(e) It is probable that the proposals of 1916 or some similar proposals will be re-examined at an early date. The additional monthly expenditure involved in the proposals of 1916 is about Rs. 700 per mensem but, owing to the increase of establishment with the increase in length of canals where tolls are enforced, the additional expenditure likely to be involved in subsequent proposals will be somewhat higher.”

(f) If the answer to clause (d) is in the affirmative, are the Government considering the desirability of refusing to sanction the proposal to acquire large tracts of land for the Carmichael College?

(b) There is a Government cattle farm at Rangpur. It is not conducted as a dairy farm except in a subsidiary degree, i.e., the milk is intended primarily for feeding the calves and only the surplus milk, if any, is sold.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President said :—

"Hon'ble Members will learn with regret, I am sure, of the recent death of Mr. F. G. Wigley, C.I.E., a gentleman who was long and intimately connected with the Bengal Legislative Council as its Secretary. During his long connection with this country he must have made many friends among Europeans and Indians alike. He accompanied Sir C. Ilbert to India during the Viceroyalty of Lord Ripon and did much useful work in the Legislative Department of the Government of India. At a later date he joined the Calcutta Bar and accepted office as Secretary to the Bengal Council in 1896. During his residence in this country and after his retirement from it he devoted much of his time and his abilities to the consolidation of the many Indian enactments and Parliamentary Statutes affecting this country. I feel sure that you will desire that this brief tribute to his work and this expression of sorrow at his death should find a place in the records of the Council with which he was so long and so closely connected.

* * * * *

For some months past vague rumours have from time to time reached my ears to the effect that persons restrained under Regulation III or under the Defence Act were ill-treated by the police. Some of these rumours were of a sinister character and accused the police of torturing those in their charge. But though some of the accusations contained in the rumours were definite enough—as I shall show by an example in a few moments—I found it extremely difficult to find any one who was willing or able to substantiate them. Those whom I asked told me that they had heard such and such a thing, or that such and such a story was common talk, but when I asked further who was responsible for the story, or what grounds there were for supposing it to be true, no one could tell me. Early in the present year, however, Mrs. Besant came forward with certain charge of torture which she submitted to the Government of India. She was not prepared to substantiate them and at first she even refused to give the names of those who were alleged to have been tortured. It was pointed out to her that if any sort of inquiry was to be made into the allegations which she brought, it was essential that the Government should be told firstly who were the persons alleged to have been ill-treated, and secondly, what was the precise nature of ill-treatment complained of. Mrs. Besant then, while still refusing to maintain the truth of the complaints or to give the name of her informant, whom she vaguely described as a gentleman whose name and address she possessed, put in writing certain specific charges. The disadvantages of having to deal with charges brought in this irresponsible manner must be obvious to everyone. Nevertheless, since this was the nearest approach to definiteness which the Government had been able to reach, it was decided to hold an investigation, and the task of holding the inquiry was undertaken by a high official having no connection of any kind with the police, namely, the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson Moore, and an Indian non-official gentleman eminently qualified for the task by character, by training and by professional ability, namely, Sir Benode Mitter. Perhaps I may be permitted to take this opportunity of publicly expressing to these two gentlemen the thanks of the Government for consenting to undertake this very disagreeable task.

Now I come to the charges themselves. Mrs. Besant first stated vaguely that upwards of 100 persons under restraint on the islands in the neighbourhood of Chittagong were ill-treated by the police. The only observation which I have to make with regard to that is that the total number of persons who from first to last have been under restraint on these islands is 77, and that besides being hopelessly vague, the charge is therefore based upon information which is hopelessly incorrect. When reduced to something more definite, this charge amounted to a complaint of ill-treatment made on behalf of eleven detenus. All these persons were examined by the investigating committee, and I cannot do better than quote the finding at which they have arrived:—

'Of these 11 persons two . . . have said before us that the complaints are false. One . . . makes minor complaints which are shown to be wholly unreliable, while four . . . have declined to make any charges of ill-treatment before us, and so far as we have been able to test the complaints which were communicated by Mrs. Besant, we have found that they failed to satisfy the test, and the failure was of a kind that justified us in believing them unworthy of credence. We are thus left with four persons only . . . who have made before us specific charges of ill-treatment and torture against the officers of the Intelligence Branch and the Special Branch. We have analysed these charges at some length with the result that we are satisfied that they are quite unfounded.'

I propose to publish both the charges brought by Mrs. Besant and the findings of the investigating committee and I do not intend, therefore, to trouble the Council with more than a simple example taken from the former. The charge I select as typical of all of them is that a certain person, Amrita Lal Sarkar by name, was brutally mutilated by the police. So much for the accusation. Now what are the facts? Amrita Lal Sarkar was arrested on September 27th, 1916. On arrest he was found to be suffering from a complaint the nature of which was explained to him by a surgeon of the Indian Medical Service. He was further advised by the surgeon that an operation was desirable; and with the patient's consent the operation was successfully performed. Those are the facts of the case which are vouched for by the surgeon himself whose certificate we possess. I have taken this particular charge as an example, because I have learned from different sources that this story has gained the widest currency. At the same time I cannot refrain from expressing my amazement that it should be thought possible that deeds rivalling the supreme efforts of the Spanish Inquisition could be perpetrated in the 20th century under British rule. If it be, indeed, a fact that stories of this kind are believed by people of ordinary intelligence, then I confess that credulity could go no further and I am driven to the conclusion that the psychology of a certain section of the people of this Presidency is such that they are prepared to accept as gospel truth the wildest rumours to which imagination is capable of giving birth.

Let me now sum up briefly the salient features of this unsavoury episode. Firstly, Mrs. Besant submits to the Government of India a communication in which it is stated that over a hundred detenus on the islands in the neighbourhood of Chittagong are being ill-treated and tortured. Secondly, on being pressed for something more definite she submits details of alleged ill-treatment not in over 100 cases, but in 11 cases only.

Thirdly, on examination it is found that far from these 11 cases referring to systematic ill-treatment as was suggested in Mrs. Besant's first communication, they referred to episodes which are alleged to have occurred nearly two years ago. Fourthly, Mrs. Besant herself states that there is a conspiracy among the detenus to break the internment rules and then, when sent to gaol, to hunger-strike, not, as is often alleged, as a protest against ill-treatment but as a protest against the failure of the Secretary of the State to grant a general amnesty in commemoration of his visit. I may add that this is the solitary statement made by Mrs. Besant which is supported by unimpeachable evidence in the shape of a cipher letter written by one detenu to another. Fifthly, such specific charges as were made have been found to be groundless after investigation by an independent committee. Sixthly, the method by which the charges were brought to the notice of Government was such that the committee were led to make the following observations:—

'In our opinion the method adopted for bringing them to the notice of Government, viz., by unauthenticated complaints was unsatisfactory, and calculated to hamper proper and complete investigation.'

The Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Bill, 1918.Mr. Cumming.

For myself I would add : let us have no more of these scurrilous accusations purveyed to Government through the agency of a middleman who refuse either to name the source whence they are derived or to accept responsibility for them. Let those who traduce English and Indian gentlemen serving in the police force take their courage in both hands and come into the open. Until they do so we are entitled to draw our own conclusions as to the cause of the excessive modesty which constrains such persons to hide themselves behind the cloak of anonymity. The Special Branch of the police are carrying on a task of great difficulty and, as recent events have shown, of great danger also.

It is deeply to be regretted—but Government have ample evidence that it is a fact—that the attitude of hostility towards the police on the one hand, and of scarcely veiled sympathy with the revolutionaries on the other, which has recently characterised a portion of the press and a certain section of the public, has enormously encouraged the party which looks to anarchy to achieve its ends. I am sorry to say that with some exceptions I have looked in vain for that outspoken condemnation which I should have expected to pour from Press and platform alike of the recent murder of three police officers and the attempted murder of several more. And when I observe the comparative indifference with which these foul deeds appear to be regarded, I find it difficult not to contrast with it the campaign of calumny and abuse against the police of which the matter that I have dealt with to-day is a fair example. It is gratifying to find that there are some organs of public opinion at least which have the courage and the honesty to face the facts of the situation and to give to the police the credit which is their due. Let me quote from the Dacca Herald of June 17th :—

'We doubt very much if in any other country there is a batch of officers with that sense of duty and devotion which a large number of our police officers have shown. No fate has seemed too dangerous to prevent any of these gallant men from taking the greatest possible risk. This is the case of the dead head-constable. Only on Friday Patiram Singh had been discharged from the hospital after recovery from the wound he received during the raid in Asak Jamadar's Lane the other day. This did not prevent him from venturing on Saturday which has cost him his life.'

Everyone who knows anything of this side of the work of the police will endorse every word of that. But the paper has also laid its finger upon one of the dangers of the present situation. After referring to the sympathy which is excited on behalf of the revolutionaries, the writer goes on to say :—

'This sympathy, it is said, discharges the functions of a bacillus, and unless it is entirely eradicated the germ of the revolution will remain.'

No truer word was ever written. It is a truth which I should like to see sent forth from every platform and proclaimed in every newspaper throughout the land. When that is done—when these misguided persons are made to realise that methods such as these are abhorrent to every right-thinking man, that by adopting such methods they excite not the sympathy but the strongest condemnation of every newspaper and every public man—then, and not till then, shall we see the cancer of anarchy eradicated from the soil.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.*THE BENGAL TENANCY (AMENDMENT No. 2) BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING introduced a Bill further to amend the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

He said :—

'Sir, I beg leave to introduce the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Bill, of 1918.

The Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Bill, 1918.Mr. Cumming.

The object of this Bill is to maintain the policy of the framers of the Cess Act—a policy from which the Government have never resiled,—before a departure from that policy becomes crystallized. Now in section 41 of the Cess Act, we read as follows :—

‘Every cultivating raiyat shall pay to the person to whom rent is payable one-half of the road cess and public works cess.’

When the Act was first introduced in 1871, Government took the precaution of issuing a proclamation, pointing out that every raiyat was bound to pay to the person to whom rent was payable, along with his rent, one-half of the rate of road cess imposed by the Road Cess Committee, and the zamindars and other holders were authorised to levy a cess at the half rate; and 14 years afterwards when Government found that some zamindars were recovering from their raiyats the full amount of road cess payable, a notification was again published, pointing out that the amount payable with the rent on account of the road and public works cess by any cultivating raiyat was only one-half of the full rate of cesses levied in the district. It has, however, since been held by the highest judicial authority that the provisions of section 41, to which I have already referred, were neither exhaustive nor prohibitive; and that there was nothing in its terms to prevent the parties, if otherwise competent, from entering into a contract under which the tenant contracted to pay the whole of the road and public works cess. Government are, however, concerned with the policy on the basis of which section 41 was framed, and while the legal interpretation of the section as drafted in 1871, which is being judicially maintained, may be perfectly correct, it does not represent the intention of the framers of the Act, especially in view of the proclamations issued in 1871 and 1885. Enquiries have been made, and it has been found that in certain districts of this province, kabuliyats have been taken, under which raiyats agree to pay more than half anna in the rupee, and that such kabuliyats have been accepted by the civil courts. The object of the present legislation is to maintain the policy of the framers of the Act; but it is recognized that it is not right to affect injuriously any payment which has hitherto been made either under the terms of any agreement executed between the parties with the protection of the civil courts, or without any such special contract, mistake and coercion always excepted. For that purpose, a proviso has been drafted that no suit shall lie for the recovery of anything paid before the date on which this Bill may become law. The object in view has been effected by drafting a second clause containing such a proviso to section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, which deals with impositions in addition to the actual rent which are prohibited.

I should like to add that when the provisions of this proposed Bill were circulated in 1917, the opinion was advanced in certain quarters that it was desirable to protect the cases of permanent tenure-holders. It will be noticed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that this has been considered, and the proposed amending Bill will not affect contracts entered into by the holders of permanent leases who will still be subject to the provisions of section 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. This provision, as is well known to all those in this Council who have a special knowledge of revenue law, is one which permits the holder of a permanent tenure to grant a permanent lease to his tenant on any terms agreed between them, which may, of course, include any special provision regarding cess. I may inform the Council that two of the leading judicial decisions on the subject deal with such cases, with which the present Bill is not concerned.

These then, Sir, are the intentions of Government in connection with this Bill,—first to make a clean sheet of what has happened in the past; and secondly, to lay down explicitly what will be considered contrary to law in future.

The motion was then put and agreed to.

*The Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill 1918.Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan : Mr. Eden.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.*THE CALCUTTA HACKNEY-CARRIAGE BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble SIR BIJAY CHAND MAHTAB, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, moved that the Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukherji Bahadur, the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Carter, the Hon'ble Mr. Eden, the Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali, the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation at the September meeting of the Council.

• He said :—

“My Lord, I do not think that it requires many words from me at this stage of the Bill, but I would like to point out to this Council that they have by now received the opinions from the different public bodies and associations on the Bill. Among these opinions, that of the Calcutta Corporation is undoubtedly the most important. In that opinion a new question of principle has been discussed, namely, that of the transfer of power from the hands of the Corporation to that of the Commissioner of Police. I may say that at the present stage Government propose to maintain an open mind on this question of control and will await the recommendations of the Select Committee before they decide what course to follow. It will therefore be open to the members of the Legislative Council to approve or otherwise the report of the Select Committee, when it is received, on this point. I may, however, point out to the representatives of the Corporation in this House that Government cannot entertain their proposal of transferring the power from the Commissioner of Police to the Corporation as regards the Calcutta Fire Brigade. This question does not arise as it is beyond the scope of the Bill.”

The Hon'ble MR. EDEN said :—

“My Lord, when introducing this Bill on the 19th February last the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha gave us a brief history of the events which have led up to the introduction of the Bill. There is one matter, however, to which he omitted to refer, and to which I now wish to call attention. At the Council meeting held at Dacca on 7th August 1916, when the Report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Amending Bill of 1916 was presented, several Hon'ble Members offered suggestions for consideration when the new Consolidating Bill was being framed.

In speaking at that meeting to the motion that the Amending Bill be not further proceeded with, I recommended that when framing a new Bill to deal with the hackney-carriage service of Calcutta, the whole of the hackney-carriage services, whether horse drawn or mechanically propelled, should be placed under one controlling authority, and that bullock and buffalo carts, motor lorries, palanquins and rickshaws should be included in the scope of the new Bill.

In replying to the speeches of Hon'ble Members the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Syed Shams-ul-Huda, referred to the various suggestions which had been made; and with reference to the question of placing the regulation of hackney-carriages and motor cabs under one controlling authority he said that the matter would be considered before the new Consolidating Bill was placed before the Council, and he gave his assurance to Hon'ble Members that their suggestions would be taken into consideration and, if desirable, would be incorporated in the Consolidating Bill when it was drafted.

The Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918.Mr. Eden.

The Bill has been published and has been circulated to the Corporation and other public bodies inviting their opinions on it, and from the replies which have been received, I see that there is a strong feeling which is supported by the Corporation that the Hackney-Carriage Department should be transferred from the Corporation to the Police.

Under the Bill which is now before the House, it is proposed to continue the anomaly whereby the registering, licensing and regulation of horse-drawn hackney-carriages are to be controlled by the Corporation, while those of taxi cabs are to be controlled by the police, and while at the same time the control of all vehicular traffic in the streets is in the hands of the police.

I do not want it to be supposed that I am dissatisfied with or find fault with the Corporation's administration of the Hackney-Carriage Department; I believe that much credit is due to the Corporation for their administration of the department within the limitation of the power provided for them under the existing Act; and in this connection it must be remembered that the Amending Bill of two years ago and the Bill now before the House is the direct result of many years of appeal to Government by the Corporation for greater and additional powers to enable them to exercise a more effective control and to deal more efficiently with the hackney-carriage service.

But although I am not expressing dissatisfaction with the administration and control of the Hackney-Carriage Department by the Corporation, I am of opinion that in order to provide the City of Calcutta with an effective service of public conveyances plying for hire, a great deal more requires to be done than the Corporation have given evidence of doing, or than it is possible to do under the present system of a department of the Corporation.

The object to be obtained is to secure the greatest efficiency with a complete power of control over all classes of public conveyances plying for hire. Such can best be obtained by a single control, and such control can best be exercised by the authority which already possesses the power of control over all classes of vehicular traffic in our streets.

The Corporation have recommended that the Hackney-Carriage Department of the Corporation should be taken over bodily and formed into a separate Traffic Department of the Police in charge of an officer of the status of a Deputy Commissioner.

I go further than this, and recommend that an entirely new department should be created which would administer under one combined control the regulation of the traffic in the streets as well as the registration and licensing of all public conveyances plying for hire, including horse-drawn hackney-carriages, motor taxi cabs, palanquins, rickshaws, motor lorries, and bullock and buffalo carts. The department should be under the control of the Commissioner of Police with an officer of the rank of a Deputy Commissioner in charge of it, who would give his whole-time service to the department. This new department would take over the present Hackney-Carriage Department of the Corporation and also the present Motor and Taxi Cab Department of the Police; the two should be amalgamated and such other departments which deal with bullock and buffalo carts should be included.

I shall be sorry to delay the passing of a Bill which has for its object the improvement of the hackney-carriage service. Such a measure has already been too long delayed, but while the matter is before us, it is better to submit to some further delay if by doing so greater improvement can be obtained.

In supporting the motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, I do so, with the recommendation that the Select Committee shall consider the proposals which have been made for the creation of a new department to control all public conveyances plying for hire.

There is another matter to which I wish to refer. Several proposals have been put forward recently, which have received a considerable amount of support for the more humane treatment of hackney-carriage animals.

The Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918.Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

These proposals may be summed up as :—

- (1) The provision of stables for hackney-carriage horses under the control of the authority administering the Act.
- (2) The provision of veterinary care and inspection of animals and the control of the hours worked by and the condition of animals.

A very strong opinion is held that in no other way can the humane treatment of hackney-carriage horses be secured.

In putting forward this proposal for the care of horses, I have no intention of advocating that the cost of hackney-carriages to the public should be increased or that the vested interests of owners should be unduly interfered with or their legitimate profits decreased. But I repudiate any suggestion that the public desire cheapness of fares at the cost of injustice and inhumanity to dumb animals and I must leave the working out of an equitable settlement of the interests of the public and of the owners to subsequent enquiry and arrangement.

There is no doubt that at present there is a vast amount of cruelty to hackney-carriage horses: the fact that about 2,500 prosecutions by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in one year in respect of horses were successful is convincing evidence."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

" My Lord, I venture to place a few suggestions before this Council.

The Hackney-Carriage Act, Bengal I of 1864, was introduced in the Bengal Legislative Council by Nawab Abdul Latif Khan. The objects of the measure were to avoid the extortion of native livery stable-keepers, to provide a regulated scale of fees and to place the relations between the carriage-hiring community and the owners and drivers of gharries on a satisfactory footing. Mr. F. R. Cockerell's amending Act V of 1866 which was a retrograde movement was amended by Mr. Reynolds' Act in 1878. By this Act the Local Government placed the registering officer under the control and supervision of the Calcutta Corporation. The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton, in introducing the Bill, remarked that the public of Calcutta, both the residents and visitors to the place, have complained, and with good reason, of the extreme inefficiency of the ticca gharries of the city and of the disreputable manner in which they are turned out. We are concerned in framing good and effective laws. There is a public sentiment that the present Act has not done much good. The same high charge and extortionate demand of gharri-wallas exist as it were in 1864, 1866 and 1878. The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton observed that the expression "suburbs of Calcutta" has, however, no legal meaning since the greater portion of the old suburban municipality has been amalgamated with the town. It does not and never did include Howrah. But at present the Corporation conducts the business not only for the town but also for neighbouring municipalities including Howrah and makes over to them a certain portion of the registration fees. In order to legalise this procedure the new Bill authorises the Local Government to include or exclude within the limits of Calcutta any local area in the vicinity of the same. Although there is a clause in the Bill empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to extend its provisions to any town or place it would seem that such extension implies a separate administration and not the administration by one authority—vide 1st April 1891 Calcutta Gazette, Part IV, paragraph 12.

The present Hackney-Carriage Bill is framed to consolidate and amend the law relating to hackney-carriages and palanquins and to make certain provisions with regard to rickshaws in Calcutta. The Bill when passed into law may be extended by clause 2 to any other town or local area and by clause 82 effect is to be given to the provisions of the Act. It is, therefore, necessary that I should venture to discuss some of the principles enunciated in the Bill for the consideration of the Council. Just as you come to Sealdah or Howrah Railway station your trouble commences with the hackney-carriage drivers. One feels that the charge is exorbitant and sometimes extortionate. The intention of the Bill is to do away with this inconvenience. In every mufassal town where the present Act is in operation the remark applies in full force. To begin with, the definition of 'hackney-carriage' is defective. In the mufassal motors are excluded from being taxed. If marketable commodities only are taken in hackney-carriages, will the definition given be sufficient? In clause 6 the power of removal of the Registering Officer does not appear clearly. The present Act, however, allows that (section 5, clause 3). The commencement of the year should be from April to be consistent with the provisions of section 123 of the Bengal Municipal Act for levying a tax on a carriage or horse. In clause 9(1) I do not think it will be judicious to introduce the words 'any person' for the word 'owner.' Ownership and possession should be traced to the hackney-carriage. This principle should not be lost sight of. In clause 13, there is no provision for suspension and cancellation of the registration of a carriage if any horse or harness used in such carriage is found unfit for public use. The present Act contains no such principle. The words 'duly registered under the Act' under clause 17(1) have given rise to a few Judicial decisions. There is nothing in the clause which indicates the local area.

Provision in the Bill should be made to do away with this ambiguity and the words 'duly registered' under the Act should be supplemented with the words 'duly registered' in the Act within the local area or the municipality wherein the carriage is intended to be used or plied for hire.

The Bill now before the Council does not provide anything to prohibit double registration and the levy of double fees like that of Calcutta and the suburbs. It is necessary that there should be a distinct provision in the Bill. I may refer to the proceedings of the Legislative Council, dated 18th April 1891, when the Hon'ble Sir Henry Cotton presented the Hackney-Carriage Bill. Clause 82 of the present Bill demands amendment. It is the intention of the framer of the Bill to allow amalgamations of one or more municipalities. This may be allowed as the case in Calcutta. There are various other points which the mufassal municipalities may present to the Council for being introduced into the Bill. Supposing a railway station is without the limits of a municipality, can the Commissioners compel the driver of a hackney-carriage to take the passengers to the station under the Hackney-Carriage Act? Practical difficulties were felt in administering the Hackney-Carriage Act and many prosecutions were unsuccessful. Again passengers felt a difficulty to pay legal hire to the drivers and there was none to enforce the law in the railway stations. A complaint in the Magistrate's court is felt to be very troublesome and vexatious. There ought to be some remedy to put an end to the trouble of the passengers. The police officers are also bad customers. Sometimes these hackney-carriage drivers decline to go to the railway stations which are not within the limits of the municipality. These are matters of daily experience to those who are in charge of municipal affairs in the principal towns outside Calcutta. I beg to bring to the notice of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill to modify the provisions of the Bill so that the Bill when passed may remedy the grievances of the people who stay in the principal towns where the law is to be extended. It is very difficult to state concrete cases within a limited time to persuade him as to the absolute necessity of making the law elastic so as to meet the difficulties felt by the rate-payers residing within the jurisdiction of mufassal municipalities. There are places where hackney-carriages and horses are kept in stables which are outside the limits of municipal towns. There ought to be provisions to regulate the fare which the drivers demand.

The Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; The President; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I do not know whether I shall be in order to move a slight amendment. The members of the Select Committee have been selected by Government without any reference to the wishes of non-official members composing the Council. That is the practice which has been going on ever since I have been associated with the Council and long before that. I do not know whether I shall be in order to move an amendment to the effect that the name of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur be added to the Select Committee."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Member is entitled to move amendments at this stage and it will then be for the Member of Government in charge of the Bill to express his view with regard to the amendments moved."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"With Your Excellency's permission I move an amendment that the name of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur be added to the Select Committee. The Hon'ble Member has studied the Bill carefully and I believe that his presence in the Committee will facilitate the work of the Council and we shall be benefited by his advice as coming from one who has been the Chairman of a mufassal municipality for many years."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR of Burdwan said :—

"I am quite prepared to accept the amendment of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Unless any other member wishes to speak on the amendment, I will put the amendment now. The discussion on the main question can then continue."

The amendment was then put by the President and carried.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I shall now make some observations in regard to the Bill. I must point out that the different amending Acts were all introduced into the Council mainly on the recommendations of the Corporation of Calcutta. The Bill which is now before us is also the outcome of the recommendations of the Corporation. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Eden, although he desires that hackney-carriages should be placed in the hands of the Commissioner of Police, still pays a tribute to the efficiency with which the administration of the Hackney-Carriage Department was carried on by the Corporation. My Lord, a new proposal has been made by the Corporation that the Hackney-Carriage Department should be taken out of the hand of the Corporation and made over to the Commissioner of Police. Those who have perused the proceedings of the Corporation must have observed that that motion was carried by a bare majority. In fact I remember that when votes were taken there was an equality of votes and the Chairman was in a fix on which side to give his casting vote. Then a poll was taken and it was found that one or two of the Commissioners came to the Chairman's rescue. Therefore it will be seen that the opinion of the Corporation was very distinctly divided on the subject. My Lord, there was another condition on which their recommendation for giving up the Hackney-Carriage Department was made and that condition, which was accepted on the recommendation of the Chairman of the Corporation, was that the Fire Brigade should be made over to the Corporation in exchange. I believe that the Corporation would not have agreed to part with the Hackney-Carriage Department if they knew that they could not get the Fire Brigade Department in exchange. I understand from what has fallen from the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur that no such bargain can be entertained, and therefore I think that the recommendation of the Corporation to make over the Hackney-Carriage Department to the Commissioner of Police also falls to the ground, because it was a conditional offer and in no way an unconditional one. The Hon'ble Mr. Eden suggested that there should be an entirely new department which shall have control over not only the motor service, the taxi cab, the hackney-carriage but will also include bullock and buffalo carts—that, of course, is not included in the recommendations of the Corporation—and that they should be under a superior officer who shall be under the Commissioner of Police. He thinks that if his suggestion is adopted there will be an improvement in the condition of carriages and carts and even of animals. But, my Lord, I must say this that while there is some force in the observation that these should all come under one department, I do not see why he is so anxious to overburden an already hard-worked department with more work when they cannot cope with the ordinary traffic in the northern quarter of the town. Why should this department be under the nominal charge of the head of the Calcutta Police? There is the Corporation of Calcutta who will be better able to take charge of such a department than the Commissioner of Police who is already overburdened with work. Of course, a single officer will be the dictator over this department. But I think in these days of progress it would be going backward to place the administration under one person. A public administration like the Hackney-Carriage Department to which may be added the motor service, the cart registration, etc., may be amalgamated and placed under the Corporation. In your country, my Lord, I find that the Hackney-Carriage Departments are in the hands of public bodies—the District Councils and the County Councils. I find on page 83 of the book 'Local Government,' by Wright and Hobhouse, that the licensing and registering authorities of hackney-carriages are the District Councils. And why should it be made over to the Commissioner of Police here? Why should it be placed in the hands of a single officer? It would be going behind the times in this progressive age. Then, my Lord, it has been proposed that like the traffic the registration of hackney-carriages should also pass under the control of the Police. But this requires a knowledge of the diseases of animals, the condition of horses and carriages and such other things and I think it requires expert knowledge and the Commissioner of Police is least capable of doing it. These things should be left to an expert staff such as the Corporation have got. It may be said that Corporation have passed a resolution recommending the transfer. But it must be borne in mind that the bare majority were led to believe that by giving up the Hackney-Carriage Department they will get the Fire Brigade. But that is not to be the case now as has been declared by the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur. Ever since 1878 the Hackney-Carriage Department of the Corporation have carried out their work admirably. There have been considerable improvements in carriage, etc., as a result of the admirable suggestions made by various members of the Corporation who took an interest in the affairs of hackney-carriages. As regards the history of the transfer of the Hackney-Carriage Department to the Corporation from the hands of the Police, I might remind the Council that it was done at the instance of a Police officer who was also a Deputy Commissioner of Police. I allude to John Blessington Roberts who came out from Scotland Yard as a constable and rose to be the Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. He was a most active member of the Corporation. His motion for transferring the hackney-carriage service to the Corporation was carried. The Government accepted the decision of the Corporation at the recommendation of Mr. Reynolds who was appointed to inquire into the matter and the Bill was accordingly passed in 1878. Ever since that time the Corporation have been administering the affairs of the department and no reason has been shown why it should now be transferred again to the Commissioner of Police. Some have observed that there is bribery in the Corporation Hackney-Carriage Department. But there is bribery also in the Police Department. The gharricallahs should not be fleeced both ways. That sort of arrangement, my Lord, was placed before the Corporation. Like the traffic Police the registering Police may constitute a separate department but that won't save the gharricallahs. They will have to pay the subordinate Police staff both in the Registration and Traffic Departments, if they are so inclined. On these grounds, my Lord, I strongly oppose the transfer of the Hackney-Carriage Department to the Police. I am gratified to know that Government have kept an open mind in the matter. Although the Chairman of the Corporation and I are in opposite camps in this matter—the idea of transfer emanated from him—I am sure the select Committee, constituted as it is, will give it its due consideration.”

The motion was then put in the following form and agreed to:—

“That the Calcutta-Hackney Carriage Bill, 1918, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukharji Bahadur, the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Carter, the Hon'ble Mr. Eden, the Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali, the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray and the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation at the September meeting of the Council.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI asked permission to withdraw the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to inquire into and report upon the desirability of taking legislative action for discouraging professional beggary in all municipalities in Bengal including Calcutta.

He said:—

“My Lord, as there is a difference of opinion among the Hon'ble Members and having given the matter my best consideration, I ask for Your Excellency's permission to withdraw the motion.”

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM, in objecting to the motion being withdrawn, said:—

“My Lord, with regard to this motion, I shall in my remarks not discuss the municipalities other than Calcutta; because, first, I have no knowledge of the municipalities outside Calcutta; and, secondly, their treatment, speaking generally, should be quite different from that accorded to Calcutta.

Resolutions.Mr. Crum : Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

There are three classes of beggars in Calcutta. First of all, there is the religious mendicant ; secondly, the professional beggar who sets up his house in the corner of the streets and goes there every day ; and thirdly, the casual and really indigent beggar. Now, of these three classes I am perfectly certain that as regards the religious mendicant no Member of this Council has any desire to interfere with in any way or to offend in any way the religious susceptibilities of the people of Bengal. I, therefore, propose to leave the case of religious mendicants out of my consideration.

As regards the professional beggar, I think that anybody who has been through the streets of Calcutta and seen the conditions of these beggars must agree with me that something is really and urgently necessary as regards the present powers of the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta. Under the Calcutta Police Act, there are powers to arrest beggars generally and to deal with them under sections 70 and 70A of the Calcutta Police Act. Section 70 gives power to a Magistrate to imprison a beggar for one month with or without hard labour. Section 70A gives power to a Magistrate to send a beggar to a certain place such as the Refuge, specially set up for the purpose. Section 70 deals really with the professional beggar who sits in a corner of the street and elicits the sympathy of the passers-by and finds it much easier to obtain his livelihood by begging than by any other means. Sometimes a child or a woman is sent out to beg and a man farms and collects their daily saving. It is interesting, I think, to discuss the results that this section of the Act has achieved. Last year, I am told, in Calcutta 2,739 beggars were arrested. Out of these 2,151 were either dismissed with caution or detained until the Court had finished sitting. About 130 were sent to the house of juvenile detention and a few more were sent to the Leper Asylum and five more sent to the Refuge. I submit, my Lord, with reference to professional beggars who sit in the corners of streets daily, that there is either something defective in the Act, or that the Magistrates do not take seriously enough the behaviour of these people.

Then, we have the third class, i.e., the real casual beggar ; and I am quite satisfied that there are a number of people in Calcutta who are really indigent and there is nothing at present to provide for these people except the Refuge and a few similar institutions of charity. I am afraid I am opening out a very big question, but it does seem to me that the time has come when the whole question should be discussed. The position is, however, quite different in the villages. I am told that in the villages—although I am not myself acquainted with the conditions of affairs there—there is still a very wonderful system of private charity ; while in Calcutta that has gradually disappeared. The associations of the Hindu joint family system are nothing like so strong as they were 20 years ago. Therefore, seeing the number of the really poor beggars in the streets who are unable to provide for themselves, it seems to me that the time has come to provide for these people by some kind of work-house or institution or alms house. The Refuge is the only place at present where they can go and the people in charge of that institution do the utmost they can to keep it going. But Hon'ble Members who have seen it will agree with me that it is not a very desirable place ; all classes are mixed up there and it is in a very undesirable locality in Bowbazar Street. What I propose is not legislation but examination, and I do not know whether legislation is necessary or not ; but I think that the time has come for an enquiry into the whole condition of the poor in Calcutta. I hope Government will see their way to accepting this resolution in this sense that an enquiry may be held into this matter, which I feel is a real disgrace to the fair name of Calcutta."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"I do not know, my Lord, whether this motion has already been withdrawn or is still being discussed."

Resolutions.The President ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The question of the withdrawal of a motion rests with the Hon'ble Members of this Council. A motion cannot be withdrawn except by leave of the Council ; when I asked that by pleasure of the Council the motion might be withdrawn an Hon'ble Member rose and objected to this being done, as he wished to discuss it. The resolution must therefore be discussed before it is disposed of.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"This is a very interesting subject and I have some knowledge of the sort of begging that goes on in Calcutta. The discussion that has been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Crum is also interesting from another point of view. The first issue is whether we should approach Government to take some steps in connection with the professional beggars and, secondly, whether any legislative action should be taken in connection with the matter. So far as professional beggary is concerned, it is confined, apart from religious medics, to that class of persons who make something out of the earnings of disabled beggars. That is to say, these men employ the beggars and collect their earnings and feed and look after them. The beggars are generally cripples and the men who employ them are of the very lowest class. Whether a home should be provided for the beggars is a matter for the consideration of Government. I think it is quite within the power of Government to provide some place for these helpless poor. Then I come to the next class of beggars—persons in distress who cannot actually come and beg in the street. This class, I should say, is growing day by day. A man earning Rs. 10 or 20 a month dies, leaving his family consisting of his wife and, say, one or two children destitute. They cannot beg from street to street as they had some sort of respectability. As Secretary of the Indian section of the District Charitable Society I have to deal with this class of people. I do not know whether this motion will be accepted by Government, but if an inquiry is started, it will bring all these facts into light and steps may be taken to train this section of the poor to learn some sort of industry and earn their living. It may be said that there is private charity. There is indeed among the Hindus the system of mushti bhiksha, that is to say, a beggar can call any morning in any Hindu house, before the hour of the last meal, and get something from the mistress of the house either in the shape of cooked food or at the least a handful of rice. In that way a large number of mendicants eke out their living in Calcutta. But I am not asking relief for them. I am more concerned with the distress of the crippled and the Bhadralog poor, who cannot go from door to door, and it is a question which should be considered by our community. As regards the Alms House, I may inform the Council of its history. It was in the early thirties that the idea of a Alms House was first mooted. A committee is now sitting under the auspices of the District Charitable Society to consider the matter of providing a new Alms House. Looking into the past history I find that a joint committee was appointed in the early thirties and even the idea of an Indian Alms House was considered by a special committee consisting of Ram Gopal Ghose, Rama Nath Tagore and others. I find among the old records that only about Rs. 2,000 was provided for an Indian Alms House. But the idea was abandoned when it was found that not many Hindu or Muhammadan widows would resort to it. The difficulty is still the same. Those who have got some sort of respectability would never go to such a home. The professional class of beggars will not come either as they find street-begging more profitable, and they are disinclined to do even the slight work which they would be required to do in the Alms House. These are the questions to be considered by Government who should ascertain what are the needs of the country at the present time in regard to this important matter.

Resolutions.Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said:—

My Lord, if my Hon'ble friend Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri had chosen to press his resolution for consideration, I should have felt very great difficulty in giving my support to him having regard to the words of his resolution because he wants the appointment of a Committee not to suggest means for the alleviation of distress in the town of Calcutta and other municipal towns in the Presidency but to report upon the desirability of taking legislative action for discouraging professional beggary in all municipalities. Speaking for the town of Calcutta I think there is sufficient legislative provision in the powers given to the Commissioner of Police in this matter. I do not think that without providing poor houses for meeting the wants of people who are obliged to beg, we should take legislative action for the purpose of further discouraging professional beggars. I do not like to be hard upon the poor, as the poor are always with us. If they cause you annoyance you have to put up with that annoyance to some extent, and I think the time has arrived when you should seriously consider whether you should have poor houses in all municipal towns. I think after you provide that, there will be time enough for giving more powers to the Commissioner of Police to arrest people for begging for alms in the streets and send them to a place where they would be under no necessity for seeking alms. That is, my Lord, my attitude in this matter."

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said:—

"The question which has been raised is a very interesting one, but a little consideration will show Hon'ble Members that this is not so much a question as to how to deal with this problem but one of ways and means. It is for that reason that, with Your Lordship's permission, I would move the following amendment:—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that an inquiry be held into the question of professional beggary in the town of Calcutta, to suggest practical steps to effectually put a stop to such beggary and inquire into the causes thereof."

My Lord, the object with which I have ventured to propose this amendment is that Your Lordship's Government as well as the public should know what the real problems are. At the present moment we have a general idea of the problem, but more than that is necessary. We should know, for example how much we shall have to pay for effectually stopping beggary which is a source of great annoyance in Calcutta. At the present moment we are told that Magistrates are often disinclined to impose drastic sentences. It is not for me to question the acts of these Magistrates, but I think it is rather cruel that a man should be sent to jail without allowing him an opportunity to earn his livelihood. As regards the man who, in spite of such opportunities, would not avail himself of them it may not be improper to send him to jail. As we have no institution where a man can earn his living, it is only right that we should know what the total cost for such institutions will be. There is one more point to which I should like to draw attention of Hon'ble Members. In my amendment I have limited it to the town of Calcutta and I have done that, my Lord, for more than one reason. We all know that the mufassal towns are comparatively poor. Questions of the most pressing importance—questions of water-supply, drainage, and of education which vitally affect the health and the life of the dwellers of these municipalities are neglected, and apart from other reasons they are neglected because of the poverty of the municipalities. We all know that save and except the towns of Howrah and Dacca and the mill municipality of Bhatpara, there is not a single municipality which has a population of more than fifty thousand. These being the condition of affairs in these municipal areas it will perhaps be unjust to saddle them with the expenses of looking after their beggars. The second reason why I have limited it to Calcutta is because the question is not as pressing in mufassal municipalities as it is in Calcutta. The third reason is that if any municipal town can bear the expense it is Calcutta. For these reasons, my Lord, I move this amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. MACKENZIE said :—

"My Lord, I could not quite catch why the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution wished to withdraw it, but I strongly support the Hon'ble Mr. Crum in his suggestion that some enquiry on the line suggested in the resolution should be proceeded with, as there is no doubt that the nuisance which the resolution seeks to discourage is a growing one. As the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has pointed out, under the Calcutta Police Act and the Calcutta Suburban Police Act, the Police have powers to deal with the matter so far as Calcutta and its suburbs are concerned, but it is quite obvious that these powers are insufficient inasmuch as notwithstanding a large number of arrests, amounting in the case of Calcutta to some 3,000 or more per annum, the Commissioner finds it extremely difficult to rid the streets of these beggars. He therefore finds it necessary to ask for additional powers to enable the Police to deal satisfactorily with this problem. I hope that these powers will be given him and will also be extended to other parts of the Presidency. There is a special feature of the nuisance to which I wish to direct particular attention and that is the large number of beggars one sees in the streets suffering from unsightly diseases. In their own interest no less than in the interests of the public generally these unfortunate people should be removed from public thoroughfares. I understand that under section 70A of the Calcutta Police Act Government may, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, declare any institution situated either in the town of Calcutta or in the suburbs thereof to be a refuge for the reception of aged, infirm or incurably diseased persons convicted and sentenced to imprisonment under section 70. So far as I understand only one such place has been so notified—the Refuge in Bowbazar Street—and as the Hon'ble Mr. Crum says this Refuge is not a very satisfactory institution and I understand, moreover, it is largely supported by public subscription, I suggest that it is not right that the support of an institution of this kind should be left to individual effort. To my mind it is clearly the duty of the Government to provide suitable accommodation for these unfortunate people and, if need be, to tax the whole community for its maintenance. I hope that if an enquiry is made, this feature of the case will not be overlooked."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The original question before the Council is—

'This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to inquire into and report on the matter with a view to taking legislative action for discouraging professional beggary in all municipalities in Bengal including Calcutta.'

To this an amendment is proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter in the following terms :—

'This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that an inquiry be held into the question of professional beggary in the town of Calcutta, to suggest practical steps to effectually put a stop to such beggary and to inquire into the causes thereof.'

I would point out to the Hon'ble Member that as the amendment has only just been handed in, it is open to any Hon'ble Member who desires to do so, to object to the amendment being moved. Is it the pleasure of the Council that the amendment be moved?"

ResolutionsSir H. Wheeler.

Objection not being made, the Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

“ My Lord, it will be convenient if I now briefly indicate how this question is regarded by Government, and possibly in the light of what I may say, it may be regarded as unnecessary either by the mover or by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter to move either the substantive resolution or the amendment.

The attitude of Government in this matter is one of full recognition of the important considerations involved, but it is also inspired by a certain degree of caution as to whether we have yet reached the stage of setting on foot a formal enquiry of the type contemplated in the resolution. There is a defect in the resolution, and I doubt whether it has entirely been cured by the speeches that have been made to-day, inasmuch as although it refers to the advisability of legislation on a somewhat difficult question, it gives very little inkling as to the kind of legislation which is to be advocated. As has been pointed out, especially in Calcutta, certain legislation is already in force. Outside Calcutta, it is of a very mild kind, merely covering that section of the Police Act which makes it an offence to expose or exhibit any bodily ailment or deformity. In Calcutta, the law is a little more elaborate; a man may be arrested for begging and on conviction he may be sent to jail or to a Refuge. Still, even in Calcutta, it is somewhat elementary legislation, and, as we have also been told, it has not been very effective in its working. A certain number of men are run in every year and in a very short time they resume their previous activities. But the solution of putting a man in jail, even if the permissible term was extended, say to six months or so, is not final or satisfactory. The difficulty cannot be met merely by penal action, and if we go further than provisions of this description, we drift quickly, as has been recognised this morning, into something of the nature of a Poor Law. I have always understood that it has been regarded as one of the happiest features of Indian social organisation that, unlike less fortunate countries in the West, it has been possible, hitherto in this country to deal with this question of extreme poverty by the existing recognised social obligations instead of having to invoke the more elaborate and less elastic machinery of official relief. I apprehend that there are still large sections who would prefer to see the problem continue to be grappled with on these lines rather than by more mechanical State methods.

But apart from that, we have also special difficulties in India, such as the case of religious mendicants, as also the religious aspects of the distribution of charity. Moreover, when we get to a Poor Law we are entering upon what has been found in the West to be a most difficult and complicated problem, a problem upon which even now there are very divergent schools of thought, and a problem which is far from being satisfactorily solved. Any sort of official relief, as contrasted with private charity, is inevitably somewhat hard and unsympathetic, as it is bound to proceed according to rules and regulations in a matter in which human sympathy and understanding play a large part. But we have also to differentiate between different types of beggars—the man who is the victim of circumstances, the maimed, the halt and the blind, for whom asylums may be required; or again the person who is referred to in old literature as the incorrigible rogue, the man who can work but won't work, against whom more drastic methods must be employed; then there are the deserving poor, suffering more from misfortune than their own fault, for whom any form of indoor relief may be inappropriate unless characterised by greater elements of kindly charity than is usually possible under such a system. All these are difficulties of the problem, and as the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter has remarked, they are all matters which involve very great expense. Poor Law is ordinarily administered from local poor rates, and their imposition is bound to add considerably to the existing burden of local taxation. The problem cannot be merely solved by asking Government to help, although I may inform the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie that to 'the

Resolutions.Mr. P. C. Mitter : Mr. Crum ; Moulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

Refuge' Government has in the past made very considerable contributions ; only the other day a sum of about Rs. 50,000 was given to it, in addition to previous large donations.

These being the facts, we feel that it would be a little premature to appoint a committee at this stage, but we are willing to do what will probably meet the Hon'ble Members' wishes, and that is to address those persons and bodies likely to be interested in the subject, and make enquiries of them as to whether the problem of professional beggary has assumed serious proportions and on what lines they would recommend action against it ; also by whom the cost of any such relief should be met. Some Hon'ble Members would confine the enquiry to Calcutta, but while I fully admit that the case of Calcutta differs very considerably from that of mufassal municipalities, the case of the latter has been introduced into this debate, and it may perhaps be as well to include it in the reference. By writing round to all and seeing what the general trend of opinion is, material will be collected from various bodies—in Calcutta from the Corporation, the District Charitable Society, etc.—and we shall know how we stand and what steps can best be taken. If we then find, in the case of Calcutta in particular, that there is room for a more elaborate enquiry, I do not think that we shall hesitate to undertake it."

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I think our purpose will be served by getting more information ; and later on perhaps Government itself may bring forward what is necessary. Under these circumstances I do not wish to press my amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM said :—

"I agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter and have no objection to the resolution being withdrawn."

The resolution and the amendment were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee be appointed to consider what recommendations can be made to Government for bringing about as much improvement as possible in the present conditions so as to reduce the acute distress prevailing in the country owing to the present high prices of cloth.

He said :—

"It is with somewhat confident feelings that I rise to move this resolution. The acute distress that has been prevailing for some time past in the country is now too much a matter of common knowledge to need any discussion in this Council. I doubt if there is at the present moment any other matter, so far as the Indian section of the population is concerned, which is causing to any equal extent the apprehensions that have been aroused in the minds of all classes of the community by the high prices now prevailing of cloth. It is also an admitted fact that this acute distress is due to the abnormally low prices of rice and jute, and also to the abnormally high prices of cloth. As is well known, in former years a cultivator could purchase at least two pairs of dhotis by selling one maund of rice and at least three pairs by selling one maund of jute. Roughly speaking, under the present conditions he has to sell about two maunds of rice or jute in order to be able to buy one pair of dhotis—I am told that even two maunds would not be sufficient. Roughly speaking, the expenses of a cultivator have gone up four times and have put an unnecessarily heavy burden on his otherwise slender resources.

My Lord, I find on the agenda paper this morning that amongst the interpellations that have been made, there are no less than 12 questions relating to the high prices of cloth and also to the connected question of the cultivation of cotton in a larger measure in order to provide some sort of remedy for the present condition of things that is now prevailing in this country. I believe it is known to the Hon'ble Members of Council that there are reports of many a sad tragedy in the domestic life of the people—cases in which people have committed suicide for not being able to purchase the necessary wearing apparel for themselves or members of their family. In answer to one interpellation, Government stated that there was at least one genuine case of this character that had been substantiated on enquiry, but I believe that there are many cases that have not been reported in the newspapers and which have not come within the purview of the investigation that was set on foot by Government. I have reason to believe that more cases of suicide have happened within the last few months than would appear in answers that have been given to the interpellations. Therefore, it goes without saying that it is the bounden duty of Government to try and take immediate steps. I am also aware that Government itself was keenly anxious to meet the requirements of the situation and trying its very best to find out some remedy. I find that this question was brought to the notice of Government as long ago as the 4th September 1917, by a question that had been put by my Hon'ble friend, Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray, to which the Government was pleased to give the following reply :—

'The Local Government are aware that, as is unfortunately the case with other articles, the prices of dhotis and cloth have risen recently. No special enquiry into the circumstances leading to this result is contemplated, as the main facts relative to the effects of the war on manufacture and freight are known, and it is to these effects in general that the rise may be attributed. Government is not aware of the precise stocks of cloth at the moment available in Calcutta, while the legislation to which the Hon'ble Member presumably refers is contained in Ordinance IX of 1914. As at present advised the Local Government do not consider that there is a case for action under that Ordinance in the matter of imported cloth, which is apparently the course which the Hon'ble Member has in mind.'

Then a resolution was moved on the 19th February 1918, by the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, to regulate the prices of the necessaries of life including cloth, etc. To this resolution, the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler gave a lengthy reply and although Sir Henry opposed the resolution, he gave us something like a history of the efforts that had been made to meet the situation. Sir Henry added that, although profiteering might have been going on, the difficulty was really one of supply, and he concluded his speech by saying : 'What we can do, we will do.' These are italicised by way of prominence. I would have made certain definite suggestions, but I prefer to ask Your Excellency's Council to appoint a committee. Whatever suggestions may now be made by us, they may be open to the objection that we are not in possession of all the facts and therefore are not in a position to advise Government. It is admitted that Government is quite as anxious as anybody to do whatever can possibly be done and the only question is of ways and means. I submit, therefore, that a Committee would be in a better position than any individual member of the Council to consider the question and to consider all the proposals that can be put forward by those interested in the matter, and if all these questions are considered a conclusion will be come to satisfactory to all concerned.

"My Lord, I beg to refer to one matter of very great importance that there is a popular belief—I have been very much surprised to hear it—that Government is not willing to undertake any steps for regulating the prices of cloth, etc., because the Government is very much afraid of displeasing the Marwari community. I find that several members of that community are in the upstairs visitors' gallery to-day. I think that they have taken the alarm lest the non-official majority in this Council may force their will on the official minority, but whatever that may be, I should like to hear from Your Excellency's Government a disclaimer of the apprehensions that have been aroused in the minds of the public by these rumours. This can more effectively be done by accepting this resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

My Lord, it is scarcely surprising that in the present economic circumstances of the province we should again have ventilated in this Council this very difficult question, and I take no exception to any discussions which are likely to throw any light on a possible solution of it. The matter, as the Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Huq has said, came before us in February last, and in the course of the remarks that I then made, I brought forward certain points: firstly, that it was undoubted that prices had risen considerably. I could corroborate this by subsequent and later figures, though it is scarcely necessary to do so, as the facts stand beyond all dispute. Secondly, however high our local prices may be in Bengal, they are substantially below the prices at which fresh piece-goods could be brought out from Manchester at the present moment. Thirdly, while profiteering may have been going on, the real difficulty—the essential factor in the whole situation—is the shortage in supply, due to conditions arising out of the war and to the comparative failure of the cotton crop in all parts of the world with the resultant high prices of raw material. These conditions unfortunately still hold good, although the happenings of later months have given prominence to other points which are extremely relevant, namely, that our imports since the war have dwindled very seriously year by year, while as regards forward business, the situation now is anything but satisfactory.

The diminution of imports can be substantiated in detail by figures and it is beyond doubt, but as giving a concise idea of the facts, I may draw attention to statistics which recently appeared in the papers on the authority of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, which showed that importations of cotton piece-goods for the four years 1914-15 to 1917-18 had been, respectively, 2,418 millions of yards, 2,116 millions of yards, 1,890 millions and 1,353 millions. So in four years we have got down from 2,418 to 1,353 million yards. There has been a corresponding rise in local production, but it is in no sense sufficient to make good the gap, and on taking the total of the two there is still a very serious deficit. Again, figures which the Collector of Customs has lately given me for Calcutta only, show that in the years 1914-15 to 1917-18 the percentage of annual diminution of imports of all kinds of cotton goods were successively 14, 26, 38 and 51 per cent. as compared with the first year of the series. That unfortunately is a serious position, the more so when it is read in the light of the fact that Manchester prices are still some 25 or 30 per cent. above ours. That is the crux of the whole situation—how to get more stuff; and no amount of regulation or control will re-establish cheap prices unless we can tackle that difficulty.

In February last I said that we would do all we could to find a way out, and we have been doing so, but the remedy does not lie entirely in our hands; after all, we are only a local Government, and unfortunately the main sources of supply are outside our limits. Imports come mainly from Manchester and Japan, while the principal sources of raw cotton are on the Bombay side and in the Central Provinces. Neither, so far as we know, is it necessarily the case that the conditions of the Calcutta market are an absolutely true index of the conditions all over India. We have been told, for instance, that conditions are not entirely the same in Bombay as they are here ; that being so, we have had to represent our difficulties to the Government of India and since the discussions of February last, we have done so on various occasions. I may add that His Excellency, during his recent visit to Simla, particularly drew the attention of the Imperial Government to this question, while we know that our difficulties are fully realised by them, and that they are giving them their most anxious attention. We are told that they have received the report of the Bombay Cotton Committee and that they hope to come to final conclusions on it very soon. As all must have seen, they have also requested us to take a census of the cotton stocks in this Presidency, and that is going to be done on the 6th July. We understand that the Government of India will closely examine those figures to see whether they afford any evidence that stocks are being improperly withheld from the market, in which case they will most certainly consider a remedy. And with reference to certain of the Hon'ble Mover's remarks, I have sufficient respect for and belief in the Marwari community to think that they will be the last to expect that their susceptibilities should be allowed to stand in the way of any remedies that are likely to be required in the interests of the country as a whole. We will collect this further information within a few days, and we hope that we shall then learn finally the views of the Government of India.

The finding of a remedy will not be easy, as may be gathered from the suggestions which we see put forward from time to time, and if I run over these briefly it is not by way of pronouncing finally on their merits, but of indicating the difficulties which characterise the problem. We are sometimes told that the obvious remedy is to regulate prices, but the mere regulation of prices will not be a solution by itself. Apart from its efficacy or otherwise in respect of imported goods, it is not easy to enforce. There are a very large variety of piece-goods on the market, and the difficulty is to ensure that any regulation of prices which may be applied to the first-hand importer will pass down through the various intermediaries to the consumer, so as to benefit the actual purchaser in the mufassal. As regards the local mills, regulation might be more easy, though the question is primarily a Bombay one, but within the last two or three days we have seen an interesting example of complaints from an important industry against the regulation of their sale prices unless the prices of other things which they consume are similarly controlled. Another course that is sometimes advocated is the importation of cloth in some way by Government, possibly accompanied by some standardisation of quality which would meet the needs of the poorer people ; but that again is a question which must turn largely on conditions in the manufacturing centres of which we are not well aware.

Another remedy which has been pressed in the papers is that Government should either prohibit or curtail the export of raw cotton or manufactured cotton. It is perfectly true that at the present moment there are exportations of raw cotton going out from India, mainly to Japan, and that these exportations have increased since the war. Cotton yarn is similarly exported, largely to China, while manufactured piece-goods are exported, in continually increasing quantities since the war, principally to Aden, Persia, Turkey, East Africa and the Straits. Some people say, 'Why not stop all this and place the goods on the local market, thus increasing supplies?' But there again, the problem is not quite so easy as it sounds, for if you cut these outside countries off from the supplies for which they have hitherto looked to India, they will have to look for them elsewhere, possibly in other markets on which India also draws, while as regards raw material we do ourselves receive a considerable amount of it back in manufactured form. It would only be advantageous to keep that raw material here if we could make it up ourselves, and it has yet to be shown that we could.

Resolutions.Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

These are the remedies which have the most direct bearing on this particular resolution, though others have been mooted which refer to the organisation of the weaving industry and the encouragement of cotton growing in India itself. These will be discussed in connection with a later resolution, but obviously while they may be helpful, so far as they go, yet for immediate purposes they will not afford very great relief.

That, sir, is the position. I admit it is not as satisfactory as we could wish, and we are still groping for light. The actual proposal of the resolution is that we should appoint a committee; we have not the slightest objection to doing so; as I said before, we welcome any advice from anybody who can help us in this difficult matter, and I will willingly accept any suggestions as to the names of any gentlemen who can assist us. In that sense, I accept the resolution, on behalf of Government, though I might add one word of caution, namely, that the reference to a committee will, of course, only be on the subject of cotton piece-goods. As the resolution is worded, it might be taken to authorise the committee to wander off into remedies of a general character which have no direct bearing on the question of cotton piece-goods."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member in charge I do not think it is necessary for me to say anything more. Coming from the mufassal I know full well that there is real distress and something ought to be done. A proper enquiry into this matter will satisfy the people."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I beg to associate myself with the terms of the resolution moved. The high price of the dhuties and saries is now a national grievance. The question is what has been done to alleviate the serious distress now prevailing in the country arising out of the cloth difficulty? The situation is indeed drifting from bad to worse. My Lord, this subject has been discussed on the public platform and brought to the notice of Government by the press but without any tangible result. It is high time that Government should interfere.

This is not the first time that the subject is brought to the notice of the members of the Council. Are we to understand that the present extraordinary situation of the cloth market is due to the laws of demand and supply and Government is powerless to interfere? Is it to be contended that Government cannot come to the rescue of the distressed millions? My humble suggestion is that Government may be pleased to appoint a Cotton Controller as the Bombay Government have done. I am led to believe that the profiteering in the sale of cloth by a few Calcutta merchants may be at once stopped.

My Lord, the working of the ordinary economic laws ought not to be suspended on the idea that this acute distress has arisen for war conditions. The State is the guardian—the centre authority—the controlling power in all matters affecting the happiness of the people. The indigenous industries are dying. The handlooms are very few. The weavers are now operatives in the mills of the riparian Municipalities. This, my Lord, is no exaggeration. The bilati dhuties of Ralli Brothers are sold at Rs. 5-3 per pair and saries are sold at Rs. 5-6 per pair (coarse cloth). The Banga Luxmi Mills sell a daisae dhuti at Rs. 4-3, sari Rs. 4-6. The synthetic dye is not available in the market. The sale of a maund of jute cannot secure a price of a piece of cloth. In one word I beg to say that the Hon'ble Member may agree with me that acute distress prevails at every hamlet, village or town and Your Excellency, whose popularity is immense, owing to your love for the people may allow me to say that Government must find out means to control the merchants who are making large profits. Your Excellency's Government must have been in possession of facts which are reported by the Magistrates of the various districts in Bengal."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to take up more than a minute or two of the time of Your Excellency and the Council. It is needless for me to say that we all associate ourselves with the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Haq. I wish to thank the Hon'ble Sir Wheeler for accepting this resolution because I know there is a great deal of misapprehension about the attitude of Government in regard to this question. The people are in such acute distress, that they blame the Government for not moving in the matter. I therefore hope, my Lord, that all possible means will be found to assure the public that every endeavour is being made by Government to ease the present situation, specially through the agency of the Publicity Bureau, of which my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas is in charge."

The resolution was then put and carried.

At this stage the Council adjourned for lunch.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee, consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Sanitary Commissioner to the Government of Bengal, Sir Nilratan Sarkar, Kt., a representative of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the Bengal Legislative Council and the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, be appointed—

- (1) to inquire into the complaints and allegations made by the persons interned in Char Lawrence and Kutubdia, and
- (2) to inquire whether proper arrangements were made by Government for keeping the détenus in the same condition of life as they were accustomed to live.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I have been asked by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray for permission to postpone the resolution which stands in his name until Hon'ble Members have had an opportunity of studying the papers which I have promised to publish, and I am prepared to agree to the postponement. I now call on the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move Item No. 8."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government do take up the amendment of the Village Chaukidari Acts (Bengal Act VI of 1870 and Bengal Act I of 1871), with a view to raise the maximum tax payable by any one person from Re. 1 per mensem to Rs. 4 per mensem, and with a view to make chaukdari tax payable by residents in municipal towns for the maintenance of the town police.

ResolutionsMaulvi A. Kasem; Kumar S. S. Ray.

He said :—

"My Lord, it is with some diffidence that I venture to move this resolution, because I have been told that the resolution has caused certain misapprehension amongst a certain section of my countrymen. I have been told that this resolution seeks to introduce a new tax or to raise the existing tax, but those who will examine it carefully will find that nothing of the sort is being proposed. I know, my Lord, that the chaukidari tax is the most unpopular tax payable by my countrymen, and I know it causes great hardship on the rural population, and nobody would have been more glad than myself if I could see my way to ask for an abolition of the chaukidari tax altogether. Such a proposal in the present circumstances of our finances would be absurd, and even if there was an improvement in the finances I would hesitate to make such a proposal because I think that the public revenue has better and greater demands upon it than the payment of the rural police. What I ask, my Lord, is that the tax may be equitably distributed and the burden should fall on the shoulders of those who are more able to bear it than the poorer population. In the present Act it is stated Re. 1 is the maximum tax which is payable and firstly the Act also lays down that the richer people have first to be assessed and then the poorer, and if we have a maximum so low as Re. 1, the natural result would be that in order to meet the expenses of the chaukidari union, we would have to place the tax on the poorer members of the community, and the rule which provides that exemptions should be made in favour of poor men cannot always be adhered to because the money has to be found and this money naturally raises the maximum to Rs. 4 as payable by one individual. I must submit, my Lord, that Rs. 4 a month will not be a heavy sum considering the fact that it will be levied on persons who are able to pay and who are comparatively very rich in the village. The poorer people, by which I mean the day-labourers, the poor artisans and others, have very little need of the village chaukidar. In the present state of the rural population these people have scarcely anything in their houses which even a thief will condescend to steal, and besides their services are utilised in a very large number by the richer members of the community in the village. Formerly the chaukidar was a sort of village servant and was paid by land. In my humble opinion it was a mistake to resume these chaukidari lands and to make this cash payment to the chaukidars by the imposition of this tax. But we must take things as they now stand. I therefore propose that the maximum be raised to Rs. 4; there will be no unfairness because the wealthier cannot be unduly taxed by the village panchayat, who will not care to do anything wrong to the richer people and it will only give the village panchayat or the Deputy Magistrate or the District Magistrate an opportunity of relieving from taxation a large section of the people who deserve and ought to be relieved. The second part of my proposal is that people living in the municipal area should be made to pay chaukidari tax for the maintenance of the village police; whereas the rural population which is comparatively very poor has to pay for the maintenance of the village police. People living within municipal areas who are comparatively rich are exempt from these police charges to which the rural population contributes more largely than the town people. Therefore it is on the question of equity and justice that we demand that the people within the Municipal area should be made to pay police tax just as the people in the rural area pay it. The saving thus caused to the public revenue might be better utilised in many other ways and many other reforms which cannot be carried out for want of money, and I have reason to believe that this Council will accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY said :—

"My Lord, my esteemed colleague has surely forestalled me in moving the present resolution. But as far as the latter part of the resolution is concerned, I fully support it. During the last debate on the Budget I referred to the anomalous distinction between the rural and urban population in the matter of local police taxes and though I was then summarily dismissed for resuscitating ancient history, I still hold that the Government should take some steps to remove this anomalous distinction. If we, the people in the country, are to be separately taxed for maintaining our police, I do not think that our brothers in the towns ought to claim an exemption from a similar tax and continue to be policed, from general revenue, at our cost. We pay something like rupees fifty lakhs in police taxes. If a similar tax is imposed on the urban population, I think that at least a sum of rupees ten lakhs of the general revenue would be annually free to be devoted to meet one of the many pressing needs of the country.

As for the first part of the resolution which urges the raising of the amount of maximum tax from Re. 1 to Rs. 4, I would like to point out that the people whom the Hon'ble Mover has in view in this connection, derive very little benefit from chaukidars. They undoubtedly can afford to pay the amount specified, but it must not be forgotten that they cannot depend on the chaukidars alone but have to keep their own guards to protect their property in the country. Under the circumstances it would be rather hard upon them to raise their tax.

I am, however, of opinion that the Chaukidari Acts require some useful changes and the Government would be well advised to take up an amendment of these Acts."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, this resolution raises two somewhat incongruous points which have no particular reference to each other, although the Hon'ble Member for some occult reason has brought them up together.

His first proposal is that the maximum chaukidari tax leviable on one person should be raised from Re. 1 to Rs. 4 per mensem, and he has justified it on arguments touching the pressure of this taxation on the poorer classes and the advisability of equalising its incidence by placing a heavier burden upon the rich. Into the merits of the proposal I do not think it necessary to go at the present time. There is a good deal to be said for it, and for the connected proposition that the pay of the chaukidar should be higher than it now is, but the whole position is under reconsideration in connection with another Bill, which is now before the Council. It is true that the Chaukidari Act does impose this monthly maximum of Re. 1 on an individual assessee, but if the Government proposals in connection with the Village Self-Government Bill are approved, that maximum will disappear; and if Hon'ble Members will refer to clause 39 of the Village Self-Government Bill, they will see that the rate to be imposed shall be an assessment according to the circumstances and the property within the village of the persons liable to the same, therefore all maximum will disappear, and people will pay according to their capacity. I submit that it is somewhat a waste of time, with this proposition before us in the near future and under reference to various bodies for opinion, for us to debate a resolution whether a particular section of the Chaukidari Act shall or shall not be amended, when the whole Act will in all probability go by the board in a very short time.

The second part of the resolution has reference to a point which was raised in the budget debate, and on which I then gave a very brief answer. The idea of the Hon'ble Mover is that inasmuch as the rural population pays chaukidari tax, it is only fair and equitable that the town population should pay something equivalent to the same. The argument from analogy is always somewhat dangerous, as it is apt to overlook many, contingent circumstances.

Resolutions.Sir H. Wheeler.

There is no very close analogy between town police and village chaukidars. The police entertained in towns are not chaukidars, and, as I shall support by a subsequent question from the report of the Police Commission, they must be maintained in the interests of efficiency as part of the ordinary police force. There is nothing in a municipality similar to the old village life and village control as represented by the panchayat, and the analogy is therefore in no sense complete. But, apart from that, the history of municipal taxation for police purposes is one which it is well for the Council to remember. In the old days, municipalities used to contribute towards their police. In the eighties, when the Local Self-Government Reforms were under discussion by Lord Ripon's Government, it was definitely proposed that they should be relieved of taxation in order that they might apply their funds to sanitation, education, etc. In a letter from the Government of India of October 1881, the following paragraph occurs :—

'His Excellency in Council observes that at present the total annual amount spent on police by municipalities in British India amounts to about 27½ lakhs of rupees. The only function which the municipalities discharge in regard to police is the provision of funds for the purpose of meeting the whole, or a portion, of the cost of the municipal police force. They practically exercise no control over the police, and cannot therefore be expected to take any special interest in the efficiency of the force, or to look with sympathy on a provision of the law which treats them as a machinery for raising taxes to be spent on a department over which they have no control, and in the efficient and economical expenditure of which they have but little direct interest and no immediate responsibility. The Governor-General in Council would therefore be glad to see municipal bodies relieved altogether of the charge for police, an equal amount of expenditure on education, medical charity, and, if possible, Public Works of local interest, being transferred to them with as full control as may be practically expedient over the details of such expenditure.'

In the succeeding year, in February 1882, in pursuance of that policy, the Local Government remarks that it was the intention of the Lieutenant-Governor to relieve municipalities entirely of charges for police under a guarantee that the income then devoted to that object would be expended on education, sanitation and other works of improvement, the charges falling on Government being reduced, and the whole of the expense of maintaining police in municipalities, unions and stations in Bengal (with the exception of Calcutta, the Suburbs and Howrah) was eventually assumed by Government with effect from 1st April 1882.

Therefore, in the eighties, rightly or wrongly, these municipalities were relieved of these charges on condition that they spent their money in other directions of more immediate benefit to the towns. I cannot conceive, therefore, how the somewhat retrograde proposal of the Hon'ble Member can commend itself to those who represent municipal bodies in this Council. But there is a second argument. Apart from what was done in the eighties the whole system of municipal police was condemned by the last authoritative enquiry conducted by the Police Commission. Apparently at the time of that enquiry in some municipalities in Bengal these contributions still continued, and the Police Commission gave a very decided opinion on the point. They said :—

'In some provinces the police employed in the municipal towns other than the three Presidency towns and Rangoon which have been dealt with already, are paid wholly or in part from municipal funds. It is objected to this system that much-needed improvements are prevented by the inability or unwillingness of the municipal bodies to meet the necessary increased expenditure. The police in such towns are generally undermanned, there are no reserves, and an inferior agency is employed because it is cheaper. There is difficulty also in employing municipal police beyond municipal limits, and there is thus loss of efficiency through the town and the suburbs being under separate police forces. The Commission fully recognise that the cost of the police is a fair charge upon municipal revenue, but for the reasons just stated the system does not work well in any but largest cities. They consider, therefore, that in general the charges should be transferred to provincial revenues, which should in turn be relieved of expenditure on other departments which municipalities can better control'

Resolution.Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur; Babu M. N. Ray.

So, therefore, on the merits, there is the very authoritative and considered declaration of the Police Commission, and in pursuance of it, the Local Government of the time took action in 1907-08 to relieve the Howrah Municipality from such police contributions as it then made. As far as I know, no exception was taken at that time in Council or elsewhere to this step; therefore the present policy is one which was accepted for good reasons more than 30 years ago, and I submit to the Council that there can be no justification for now reverting from it."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I beg to oppose this resolution. The resolution is divisible into two parts : first with regard to the increase from Re. 1 to Rs. 4 of taxation, and second, with regard to the distribution of the tax in the municipal areas. If my learned friend would have referred to the history of the imposition of this tax, he would have been satisfied that the assessment of Re. 1 was fixed after some discussion, and perhaps his experience will warn him that any increase over Re. 1 will be a great hardship to those who live in the village. Now that we are going to have a new Act which will deal with village unions, it will not be expedient or politic or desirable to have an enhancement of the rate. If the opinion of the villagers be taken I am almost sure that there will be a strong opposition, and although my Hon'ble friend considers that the poor people should be exempted and the rich men made to pay, he ought to remember on what standard and on what principle the assessment is to be made. I do submit that this part of the resolution ought not to be pressed upon the attention of the Council.

With regard to the second part of the resolution as to the distribution of the money to municipal areas, the learned mover ought to refer to the provisions of section 85 of the Bengal Municipal Act. That section deals with two parts ; (a) with reference to the imposition of a personal tax, and (b) the imposition of a rate. Will it not be hard if the residents of the municipality will have to pay for the benefit of the villagers? The municipality has nothing to do with the villages, and secondly, I cannot understand the reason which leads my friend to press upon the attention of the Council that the municipal residents ought to contribute some money to the village unions. I consider that this is an unreasonable proposition of law and fact, and it cannot be contended that those who live within the municipal jurisdiction ought to contribute anything for the benefit of the villages. Your Excellency's Government is aware of the fact that the present tax which is imposed upon the residents of the municipality is considered something like an income-tax. The language of the section is that the tax should be levied according to the circumstances of life and property. Many persons view the imposition of such a tax as income-tax. As a matter of fact they pay the income-tax and they are obliged to pay also the personal tax, so that there is a difference of opinion as regards the imposition of the tax. I would not be privileged, Sir, at this stage to refer to the mode of imposition, but I would ask my friend to withdraw this resolution with Your Excellency's permission, because various questions are to be discussed in all their bearings and it will be a great hardship if such a resolution were successfully carried in Council."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My lord, I had in mind that if my learned friend pressed his motion. I would vote silently on it, but it is perhaps desirable that I should say that in my opinion there is absolutely no justification for the resolution which he has thought it proper to move. The present maximum rate of assessment—the rate of Re. 1 per month—was arrived at after a careful consideration of the expenditure which is likely to be incurred, and the Hon'ble Members will see from the manuals on this subject which are available, that the revenue raised is intended to meet certain expenses for which budget provision is made annually. The budget contemplates the pay of a dafadar and two chaukidars. As the Hon'ble mover of this resolution may know, the pay of the dafadar and two chaukidars and other incidental expenses is amply met by the rates now raised, and there is no justification for the suggestion that the maximum rates should be raised from Re. 1 to Rs. 4 per month.

With regard to the amendment suggested to make the chaukidari tax payable by the residents in the municipal towns for the maintenance of the town, that involves such a fundamental change in the principle of municipal government that I do not desire to detain the Council by an elaborate discussion of this part of the resolution. There is absolutely no reason why this change should be made."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, after the statement made by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler I do not think I am justified in pressing the resolution before the Council, but in asking permission to withdraw it. I should like to make a few observations on what has fallen from my learned friends the distinguished Chairman of the Municipality of Howrah and the Chairman of the Municipality of Houghly. That the chaukidari tax has been imposed to meet the budget expenditure. That was the reason why the maximum should be raised. The budget has to be met now by taxing the poorer people more than the richer people. What I wanted to suggest was that the richer people should be taxed. However that discussion does not arise, as under the new Village Self-Government Bill the maximum question has been removed and there will be no limit to taxation so that difficulty will no longer arise. As regards the enforcement of the police tax on the residents of the municipal areas, I think that my proposal is only fair, if a rural population have to pay for their police force, I say, whatever guarantees Government may have given in the past, I see no reason why the public revenue should be made liable for the payment of the police in the municipal areas. True it is that they have to spend their income on sanitation and education and many other things, but these benefits are derived by the people living in the municipal towns and they enjoy all the advantages of municipal towns. That was the reason why I gave notice of the resolution. After what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member, I think my purpose has been served. I therefore beg permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that all proposals for the increase of fees in the Dacca College be abandoned.

He said :—

"My lord, in moving this resolution I do not wish to take up the time of this Council at any great length. I understand that the governing body of the Dacca College have recommended that the fees in that college should be raised from Rs. 6 to Rs. 9. Ordinarily, it might appear that an increment

Resolution.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

of Rs. 3 a month was not much, but I think that the members of this Council are well aware that a large majority of the parents who send their boys to College find it very difficult to have to pay even Rs. 3 per month or Rs. 36 annually; that means a very substantial portion of their income.

I think that Rs. 9 would be a burden which many of them will not be able to bear. I find that a question to this effect has been put by another member, and Government has already admitted that this proposal has given rise to much dissatisfaction. This proposal has not been received very favourably by the public, so I submit that it should not be given effect to. One of the reasons may be that the school fees in the Dacca College are somewhat lower than they ought to be, but it is much better that Government should come forward and bear the extra burden than that the parents should be obliged to pay more than they actually do in the present conditions. I submit that in view of all that has been elicited in the course of the replies that have been given to questions, and in view of the fact that the proposal has not been favourably received by the public, the proposal for the increase of fees should be abandoned."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My lord, I brought forward a similar resolution as regards the Rajshahi and some other Colleges in connection with the last Financial Statement. I have no doubt that this proposed increase will fall very heavily on the purses of poor parents. I further think that education should be made nowadays much cheaper than it is, and the fee rates in the colleges should be as low as possible. I have nothing further to add, and I cordially support this resolution."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My lord, the proposal that the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has in mind is a proposal of the governing body of the Dacca College to the Director of Public Instruction. This proposal has, however, not come up to Government; the proposal was for a general increase of fees to be accompanied by a proposal for the grant of a concession rate of Rs. 3 a month on 20 per cent. of the admissions. I may tell the Hon'ble mover of the resolution that Government have no intention of raising the fees at present; but of course it must be clearly understood that in a matter of this kind, a guarantee that fees will never be raised cannot be given.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri thinks that the expenses of education should be kept as low as possible. I am afraid that I must differ from that view entirely, because every day education will not become cheaper but dearer; and if any degree of success in self-government is to be achieved in this country, the expenditure on education must go on increasing, and it cannot be expected either for Government or for any public bodies to maintain their colleges by simply giving out grants and leaving the fees at the rates that they are at present. As I have already said regarding the Dacca College, Government have no intention of raising the fees at present, and, therefore, I hope that however on receipt of this assurance the Hon'ble Member will withdraw his resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I think in effect my resolution has been accepted." I am prepared to add the words 'at present' as that will meet the position taken up by Government."

Resolution.Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan ; Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My lord, I do not think Government can accept the resolution when there is no proposal before the Government. Therefore, the Government cannot accept the resolution as it stands. The proposal not being before Government the question does not arise."

The Hon'ble MAULVI FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, in that view of the matter, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a selected Muhammadan officer be placed on special duty to inquire into the management of waqf properties within the limits of Calcutta and the suburbs and to collect materials with a view to taking such action regarding the proper management of such properties as the circumstances of each case may render advisable.

He said :—

"This is one of the questions which are well known to the public and about which the public are agreed that something ought to be done, and the only question, therefore, is one of ways and means as to what ought to be done. In order, therefore, to collect materials and prepare some data for action that might be taken my suggestion is that a selected officer might be placed on special duty. There are some waqf properties in Calcutta about which so far as members of my community are concerned the facts are so well known about the mismanagement of these properties by the matwalis and others responsible for their management that it has become something like a public scandal. In the case of one of these properties, the annual income about 25 years ago was a little over Rs. 15,000 and at the present moment it has come down to Rs. 3,000 and even then the major portion of the income is not devoted to the purposes for which this income was primarily intended. The reason why I propose that an officer be placed on special duty is this : We find that private individuals seldom think it worth their while to devote their time and attention and the labour that is necessary to collect materials before any action can be taken, and since the proper management of these endowed properties is as much a matter of concern to Government as to the beneficiaries under these endowments, I submit that it would not be a waste of public money to appoint an officer who will devote his time and energy and attention in order to collect information for the consideration of this question. There are probationary officers in every district, and one of these officers may be set to work out the scheme. It won't be a serious interference of the public service if one such officer is placed on special duty. With these few words, my lord, I beg to commend the resolution to the Council."

Resolution.Maulvi A. Kasem : the President ; Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, I beg to associate myself with the resolution that has been moved by my Hon'ble friend to my left, and if Your Excellency will kindly permit me, I would suggest an amendment that the words 'within the Municipality of Calcutta' be deleted from the resolution itself. My object in making that amendment is that in the mufassal there are waqf properties which are grossly mismanaged, and, if I may go so far as to say, the funds of which are misappropriated. I will cite an instance. Even in these hard days Government felt themselves in duty bound to institute a civil suit in a district in Northern Bengal against a matwali and this cost a large amount of money in the Civil Court. So there is no doubt whatever that there has been gross mismanagement and misappropriation of these waqf properties. Unfortunately, several waqf properties in my own district and also in some other districts have been disposed as private properties. Matwalis who used to take care of these properties sometimes would even go so far as to appropriate the surplus money and devote it to their personal use. The action suggested in the resolution would be justified if only in the interest of the beneficiaries. About the year 1885 or 1886, a commission was appointed presided over by the late Sir Charles Elliot and of which the late Mr. Nolan was a member to inquire into the whole question, and if a copy of their report is obtainable now, it will be found that there were large educational endowments in connection with many waqf properties, and we are in urgent need of money at present for Muhammadan education. The Government of Bengal are not in a position to make any grant towards Muhammadan education at present and the Government of India will not allow us to tax ourselves for this purpose. I hope Your Excellency's Government will see their way to accept this resolution and institute some sort of inquiry into the condition of waqf properties. My Hon'ble friend has suggested that he will be satisfied even if a probationary Deputy Collector is appointed for this purpose. But I hope and trust that a senior officer with more experience will be chosen for this onerous duty."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"To the original question an amendment has been proposed, to leave out the words 'within the limits of Calcutta and the suburbs.'" Since due notice has not been given of this amendment, it is open to any Hon'ble Member to object to the amendment being moved."

Objection not being made the Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, much as I sympathise with the Hon'ble mover and the seconder of the resolution as regards some Government action in regard to waqf properties in Calcutta and its suburbs for making some sort of inquiry into their management, I find it difficult to support this resolution, because, as proposed by the Hon'ble mover, it will not be a workable scheme. It is no doubt desirable, in the interest of the public, to get information as regards the management of these waqf estates, but how is this inquiry to be made? My Hon'ble friend suggests that if a Government officer goes to the matwali, all the materials would be placed before him. I think I have some experience of these matters. I should think that even the presence of the Member of the Board of Revenue before the matwali would not influence him to disclose informations as regards the management of the estate under his charge and he would certainly refuse to give him any information or lay any papers before him. In that case what can a Government officer do? He will be quite powerless to do anything. As the situation stands at present it is only a Court of law which can make the inquiry, and that also at the instance of a suitor interested in the affairs of the estate, if the Advocate-General moves in the matter, or if the Collector of the district in which the estate is situated, helps any person interested in the affairs of the estate to go to Court and give him the required sanction. It is a tedious and laborious process and very few persons are public-spirited enough to move in the matter and do the needful. I know, and I quite sympathize with the Hon'ble Member on the other side of the House, that waqf properties should not be allowed to be wasted in that way. But the proper remedy would be some legislative measure under which the matwali will be compelled to give certain information just as persons connected with Joint Stock Companies have to do to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies. If you can modify the statute in this way then it will be possible for persons interested in the waqf estates to cause an inquiry to be made into the affairs of the estates. But as matter stands now the person knows nothing and has no reliable information about the affairs of the waqf estates. These estates may be utilized a good deal for the promotion of education among Muhammadans. The pious endowers naturally wished to have the money spent for the good of their community. It is time that the State should intervene and see whether some statutory enactment could not be provided for giving facilities for better administration of waqf estates. Entertaining these views, I oppose this resolution."

Resolution.Mr. M. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble MR. M. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My lord, last year I wanted to bring in a resolution somewhat to this effect, but under some rules it could not be brought before this Council and so it was rejected. I wanted that an officer be appointed as a permanent Inspector-General of Waqf Properties. Perhaps that was one of the reasons why the resolution was rejected. I forget what was the exact resolution, but it was something like this : 'That a Muhammadan officer be appointed and that he be empowered to take necessary steps, etc.' My lord, it is an open secret that most of the waqf estates in our country are not managed or treated as they ought to be managed or treated. This reminds one of benami transactions. A man purchases a property in the name of another. He cheats his creditor by saying that the property is not his. And if the benamidar gives trouble, he can always say that he only holds it in trust for him. The matwali holds the waqf property as God's benamidar. When his creditor comes to him, he says it is God's property and when God comes he says it is his own property. It is God's property when it is to his advantage and it is his own property when that is to his advantage. My lord, this is what is going on with the waqf properties. In many estates in Bengal, the matwalis spend the money for their own purposes diametrically opposite to for what they were intended and which they have no right to do. I do not see what harm is there in appointing a Muhammadan officer who from time to time will make inquiries as to how the income of the waqf properties is being spent by the matwalis. He could collect evidence from men who knew what the matwalis were doing. And if he is satisfied that a particular property is being mismanaged, he can bring a suit in a Court of law and bring that man to justice. The cost of the case might be borne by the estate. I wanted the officer for the whole of Bengal, but my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Abul Kasem has anticipated me. Of course it is particularly necessary for Calcutta. Nobody knows what property is waqf property in Calcutta. The Improvement Trust tries to open out a congested part of the town perhaps, and then somebody comes out and says that his miserable hut is a waqf property, thus creating a deadlock. There should be a register of waqf properties in Calcutta. In the whole of Bengal, we do not really know who are the trustees and who the beneficiaries. Take the case of the Mohsin Endowment. We derive benefit from this fund only because there was a litigation over the appointment of a matwali and the estate went into the hands of a receiver, and with the money saved, during the time the estate was in the hands of a receiver, some Government papers were brought and the interest being in the hands of the Government, we derive some sort of benefit. This is the sort of case in which Government is justified in taking action, and I hope that they will take action in respect of all waqf estates."

Resolution.Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"My lord, the proposal before the Council is that an enquiry should be made into the management of wakf properties within the limits of the metropolitan area, in order that material may be collected with a view to taking further action regarding the management of such properties. I can assure the Hon'ble Members of this Council that Government are not unaware of the fact that there is an uneasy feeling in the minds of certain sections of the public regarding the administration of these properties, and the Government are also aware that a wish has been expressed that Government should come to the assistance of those who hold such opinions. I may, however, inform the Council at once that the resolution has already been anticipated by Government—not this Government but the Government of India—as the matter is more than one of provincial concern. It will be noted at the outset that the Hon'ble Member has limited his enquiry to Calcutta and its vicinity; but, as has been explained by another Hon'ble Member who moved an amendment that there is an objection to such limitation, it is obvious that any action regarding waqf property should have a wider application than the limits of Calcutta. But apart from such an objection, I may explain to the Council that there are two main grounds why Government are not prepared to accept this resolution. The Hon'ble Rai Debendra Chandra Ghose Bahadur, quite unconscious of what Government has done, has pointed out the imperfections in the proposal and the appropriate remedy in the form of legislation. The first ground is obviously that any such action, as the appointment of a Government officer for this purpose, would be futile in that the officer selected would have no statutory powers. The second ground is obviously that such statutory powers as are required for the purpose of enquiry into and control over waqfs should be conferred by the Imperial Council.

As regards the first point, as I have said before, such a special officer whom the resolution proposes to appoint would have no legal status or authority. Waqf managers would have merely to greet him with a definite refusal of information, and he would be powerless; besides, a waqf is a private trust and Government would be no more justified without special legislation in interfering with the management on the lines of the resolution than with any other private business.

The second ground which I have already mentioned, namely, that statutory powers must be taken in the Imperial Council is the more important. The Hon'ble Member is himself aware that early in 1916 he submitted the draft of a bill entitled the Bengal Waqf Registration Act which he desired to introduce into the Bengal Legislative Council. He was informed in May 1916 that the subject of the administration of religious and charitable endowments in India had received the full consideration of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State, who had approved the proposal that Imperial legislation should be undertaken. A bill for the purpose was drafted; but the Government of India at that time decided to postpone its introduction; and the Hon'ble Member was informed that any separate provincial legislation on the same subject could not conveniently be introduced until the Imperial Bill had been passed into law. The facts, therefore, are that the Government of India contemplate legislation on the subject which is at present suspended; that without legislation no statutory powers can be conferred; and that without statutory powers an enquiry of the nature suggested by the Hon'ble mover would be infructuous.

Resolution.Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri has explained in the course of his speech that he made a similar proposal about a year ago. His proposal, I may inform the Council, was that an officer should be appointed by Government to inspect not only wakf but also debottar properties; and he was informed that without legislation, which was a matter primarily for the Imperial Council, no such officer could be appointed with the requisite powers. I can understand the impatience that is felt by the Hon'ble mover and other gentlemen of his persuasion; I can realise that he feels strongly on the subject of the alleged scandals in connection with the management of such trust properties; but I feel sure that he will recognise that the greater includes the less in this case; and that when his draft Bill has not been accepted, a proposal of this kind, although at first sight it looks very much smaller and therefore possibly acceptable, must be governed by the same principle.

On these grounds, Sir, on behalf of Government, while I am in accord with the textual wording of the amendment, I must oppose the resolution in its original form."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I had originally nothing to say in reply, but the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose's speech compels me to say something if only to explain my position. As regards legislation, I may tell the Rai Bahadur that the matter did not escape my attention. But we must collect materials before we can take any action. Some sort of legislation is undoubtedly necessary, and the officer who is to be deputed must be armed with statutory powers. It is with this object in view that I drafted a Bill which I formally submitted to Government and asked their permission to introduce it in Council. As the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has said Government were not prepared to give me that permission for reasons which were communicated to me and which have been read out just now. I was then given to understand that the Government of India contemplated taking legislative action in this matter, and I was given to understand that in view of the action which the Government of India were going to take, it was superfluous on the part of a provincial Government to do anything further in the matter. But I doubt very much whether this good intention of the Government of India has any chance of being put into practice within a measurable distance of time. Of course I understand that it is engaging the attention of the Government. But it is for the sake of beneficiaries of these waqf estates that I have proposed, as a temporary measure, that a certain officer may be appointed and that he be deputed to take certain action before legislative action is taken by Government. Mine is only a temporary measure, and this will not prevent Government from taking action by means of legislation. The Rai Bahadur has pointed out certain obvious difficulties in the way of the officer who may be deputed for this purpose from collecting information. He says that even if the Member of the Board of Revenue is present, the matwali will withhold information from him. I do not know whether the Hon'ble Member has forgotten but I remember that in a case before the Collector at Alipore he appeared for one of the matwalis and most unconsciously, in the exercise of his profession, was of great help to the matwali so far as this particular point is concerned. But of course what he did he did in the best interests of his client. There are records in Courts and these records will show how, in the case of most of these estates, that so-called matwalis have recourse to law in order to bring about all sorts of complication and they have recourse to all sorts of legal proceedings to deprive the waqf properties of some of their most valued possessions and ultimately become owners of these properties and misappropriate their income. So far as the matwalis are concerned, I do not believe that they can withhold information from a Government servant of some standing. But even if they do so, there are other sources from which information can be gathered and it would give us ample materials for any action to be taken. Of course we all know that it is open to us, as members of the public, to take action under section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but so far as that is concerned, certain information have got to be gathered before any action can be taken, and it is for this reason that I am pressing for the deputation of a suitable Government officer. I still hold the view that it would be some time before legislative action is undertaken, and I therefore suggest that an officer be placed on special duty for collecting materials for action to be taken in this matter. I am proposing to accept the suggestion of the Hon'ble Maulvi Ashraf Ali that the resolution be so worded as not to be limited to Calcutta and its suburbs but be extended to the whole of the Presidency. In spite of the remarks that have fallen from the Hon'ble Member who has replied on behalf of Government, I do not think that I can do anything but press the resolution."

Resolution.Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

*Resolution.Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate steps be taken to introduce a system of compulsory military drill in all Government schools and colleges.

He said :—

My lord, in moving this resolution I have every hope that I shall get the sympathetic consideration of the Government and the whole-hearted support of this Council, and I think it requires no very lengthy argument from me to convince this Council of the urgent necessity of taking active steps to inculcate in the rising generation a chivalric spirit of devotional service to the King and the Motherland. In order that this spirit may be properly developed it should form part of the educational system, so that it may foster and create habits of self-control, discipline and fortitude, under disturbing conditions, amenable to the command of the guiding authorities.

Recent experience from the working of the Bengal Ambulance Corps and the Bengali Regiment has taught us that even after a very long period of complete inaction there is still a martial spirit in the Bengali blood, which, if nurtured with care, may, at no very distant date, give, out of the Bengali population, a substantial unit in the Indian Army.

I am aware that my friend the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Dutt has suggested in his notice of resolution that military drill should be introduced in all colleges and schools. Really there is no difference between him and myself. I think no time should be lost and Government should at once introduce in all the schools and colleges under their control, and the private educational institutions may follow their example in due course.

Circumstances, my lord, to which I need not refer in detail, have forced upon us the inevitable conclusion that every able-bodied man should be ready, whenever required, to take up arms in the defence of his hearth and home—his mother, sisters and children and thereby to maintain the peace and integrity of the Empire we live in. If we are to do this the beginning should be made in the educational institutions. The educated community really is the backbone of the country, and they are the truly loyal subjects of His Majesty the King-Emperor, and it is from the educated people mainly that we have been able to gather recruits. And therefore if these educated people are made to grow up—not for the dark rooms of the Secretariat, adding and subtracting figures day after day for thirty bright silver coins at the end of the month—but as men to realise life with its infinite potentialities, they, I am sure, my lord, will be a real strength to the Empire.

I may take it that the Government also have realised this necessity as is shown by their acceptance of the resolution moved by Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma in the Imperial Council on the 21st March, 1917, recommending the urgent desirability of encouraging the Boy Scout movement among Indian students. On that occasion the Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair said 'So far as the Indian Boy Scout movement is concerned, the Government are prepared to encourage it in India,' and the whole country is thankful to the Government for the same. My present resolution, I think, my lord, if accepted by this Council, will be only a step in furtherance of the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, and will be an additional stimulus to the progress of the Boy Scout movement among Indian students. And this step becomes also necessary as a preliminary in view of the recent pronouncement by the Government that Commissions—though only a limited number of them—in the Indian Army will be given to Indians in the future. I am very glad to notice that a resolution almost similar to mine was moved by my friend the Hon'ble Dr. Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari in the Senate of the Calcutta University on the 18th May last, and that the matter is being considered by a committee of the same.

And lastly, my lord, I hope that the step suggested in my resolution is very likely to be a cure for the malady which we are all very sorry to notice here and there now and then—I mean the spirit of anarchism—for, my lord, to my mind if the Boy Scout movement is encouraged and military drill introduced, the playful spirit of the young will find sufficient scope, and will not seek other dangerous and mischievous outlets.

With these few words I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the House."

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM said :—

"My lord, I wish I could persuade the Hon'ble Member who has moved this resolution, and those who are in favour of it, to withdraw it. I have a certain amount of experience of compulsory military drill, and for that reason I think it is both impracticable and unsuitable for Bengal. As regards its impracticability, I do not know how many schools there are in Bengal; I was told the number the other day, but I do not remember it, but I think the late Vice-Chancellor of the University will be able to give us the information; but at any rate, I think probably that all the instructors in the British army in India would be needed to instruct all the boys in military drill. It is perfectly obvious that you cannot introduce compulsory military drill without proper instructors.

The second reason why I think it is unsuitable as far as the boys in this country are concerned is that I do not remember anything more trying or boring than the hour of drill that I used to go through at school—I daresay Your Excellency has as lively a recollection as I have of the daily hour of drill.

The Hon'ble mover has referred to the scout movement in India. I shall refer to what Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who is the greatest authority on the scout movement, says about military drill for boys :—

'Military drill gives a feeble unimaginative officer a something with which to occupy his boys. He does not consider whether it appeals to them or really does them good. It saves him a world of trouble.

Military drill tends to destroy individuality, whereas we want to develop individual character; and when once it has been learnt it bores a boy who is longing to be tearing about on some enterprise or other, it blunts his keenness.

And again—'When I see a troop drill well but fail to follow a trail or cook its own food I recognise that the master is no good as such. The indifferent or unimaginative officer always falls back on drill as his one resource.'

This, Sir, is the opinion of the greatest authority on the training of boys and in view of this, I really very much wish that the Hon'ble mover of this resolution would withdraw it; I am perfectly certain that five years hence he or his successors will ask this Council to take away this compulsory military drill from schools."

Resolution.Sir D. P. Sarvadhikari.

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARVADHIKARY said :—

"My lord, it would have been better if this motion had come up after the Committee of the Senate which is considering this question submitted its report. The question is not an entirely new one. When Sir Gurudas Banerjee was Vice-Chancellor the question of compulsory drill was taken up. There was opposition probably for such reasons as have been advanced by the Hon'ble Mr. Crum; any way the scheme fell through. And the result has been an absolute state of unpreparedness. The principle of the scheme was, however, accepted in a half-hearted way and a lifeless and unimaginative sort of drill was introduced in some of our schools and which is now conducted by imperfectly-trained drill-masters. But what is there to prevent us from teaching our boys real drill? The Hon'ble Mr. Crum thinks that there are not enough instructors in the British army for Bengal schools and colleges. I do not know what the number is of the instructors in the British army. But difficulties in this and other directions have to be overcome if we are satisfied that the matter should be taken up in right earnest. And the system which Mr. Crum calls unimaginative has to be replaced. It is by no means perfect, but still it is something. The object of the proposal of substituting military drill, boy-scout training or whatever else may be decided on is that we should, in the first place, inculcate ideas of discipline in the minds of the boys, and in the second place, try to be in a state of preparedness for any emergency that may arise. I have no doubt that our boys would have been able to do their work much better if they had some sort of training of the kind indicated. Of course there are difficulties in the way. But the position that would arise if the present state of things continued be much more difficult. Without traditions, without any sort of preparedness we have been able to raise men for the Ambulance Corps, the University Infantry, the Bengal Light Horse, the Bengali Battalion and the Indian Defence Force who have not discredited us on the whole, though regrettable isolated cases of abuse have proved to be inevitable. I shall not pause to enquire whether the criticisms about military backwardness that are levelled against us are just or not, but we do feel that we are not doing nor are able to do anything like our little bit because of the lack of discipline and the condition of unpreparedness, and we strongly plead for a better order of things. The responsibility of continued inefficiency will be on those who deny us this. My Hon'ble friend has asked for the introduction of some sort of training. If the scout training which Mr. Crum advocated will do for the purpose, let it do for the school boys. But for the College boys we advocate military training, unimaginative though it may be. My lord, we have had enough of soul-uplifting agencies in this country, educational, philosophical and otherwise. It is time that we had something the other way, for the stern realities of the situation have to be faced. We can only indicate our readiness and formulate our demands. It is for the authorities to solve the question of ways and means. And if we formulate our demands, indicate our readiness and if there be lack of means or willingness on the part of the authorities to avail of this unquestionable and unquestioned willingness, why then the result will be anything but encouraging. It would not do to rest the question or give it up because of the supposed unimaginative aspect of the thing or because of its difficulty. If there are not enough instructors available, some of the teachers may be deputed to get some sort of training from military instructors in the same way that they are sent to training schools now. Of course it cannot be done all at once; it will have to be done slowly. If we are to get recruits for the army, it must be the educated people who will show the way for a long time to come yet. They have always done it in other fields, and it is some satisfaction to know that they are doing it in this field also. But what they are doing is not nearly enough; because of the lack of surroundings and atmosphere, there is an admitted decision, which can however be remedied by what is suggested in the resolution.

As to the sentimental aspect of the question. But there is also a sentimental aspect to it. As I have already stated that if from the point of view of sentiment we have to leave out schools from our proposals for want of competent instructors, then let the training be confined to colleges for the present. The drill may be improved and the scout movement may be introduced. The instructors will have to take up only 50 colleges or less perhaps, and that is not a large number. Whether the M. A. classes come under the term colleges need not enter into the question at all for the present. The great thing is to give it a start at once even if we cannot take up the whole thing.

The Hon'ble Mr. ARDEN-WOOD said :—

"My lord, the practical interest of this question is, to my mind, bearing upon the physique of the pupils in the schools and colleges of Bengal. I have had extensive opportunities of observing the effects of compulsory military drill both with arms and without arms upon school boys. And it is my deliberate opinion that the value from the physical education point of view of military drill with arms is very doubtful. The same objections, however, do not hold for military drill without arms, and such drill no doubt has its value in teaching boys to move about intelligently in bodies, and in giving them what, I believe, is called a smart and soldierly manner. But all these advantages can be had by introducing in schools one or other of the forms of what is called Swedish drill. This form of physical education has for school boys the advantages that military drill has, and is without its disadvantages, and therefore I should be inclined to support the resolution if the word 'military' were deleted."

The Hon'ble Rai MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BHADUR said :—

"My lord, I beg to support this resolution. When engaged in recruiting work in the mufassal, I have got the impression that the recruits have had no preliminary training in drill. If our boys had been trained properly in military drill, this difficulty would not have arisen. I am led to think that, in the circumstances in which we are situated at present, if this system is introduced at the early stage all these difficulties will be obviated. The system of drill which is introduced in our colleges and schools in the mufassal are based upon some recommendations made by Dr. Gray in his little book, which is chiefly recommended for physical drill. I submit respectfully that a compulsory drill should be introduced. The question is however of some difficulty, as what sort of military drill is to be introduced into our colleges and schools. If we can get the men who can teach our boys properly, it will be indeed a good thing to introduce compulsory military drill at once. If a delay is made, I think we cannot expect to get better results. For these reasons, my lord, I beg to support the resolution, which, I consider, will have a very salutary effect in teaching our boys in the military line. If about 40 years ago military schools and colleges had been established, Your Excellency would have got thousands and thousands of boys well trained to go to the battlefields. But, my lord, that policy was not followed. Although I am aware that when I was a boy in the college about 40 years ago, application after application was made to the military authorities for such facilities were not entertained. My lord, I do not see any reason why our boys should not be allowed any sort of military education. My idea is to have a compulsory drill; and if instead of having more physical education, we have more military education, we shall have more physical education. That is my reason for supporting this resolution."

Evolution.

The Maharajah Raja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADITRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My lord, I think what most of the members who have spoken on this subject including the mover of the resolution have in their mind is that Bengal has suddenly been awakened to the necessity of having good Bengal soldiers, and there is no doubt that the Bengal Ambulance Corps movement as well as the Bengali Regiment have revived the martial spirit, and I may say, instilled the martial spirit into the educated classes of Bengal; but while that is so, the resolution which the Hon'ble Babu Kisori Mohan Chaudhuri has proposed recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate steps be taken to introduce a system of compulsory military drill in all Government schools and colleges. There is a similar resolution standing in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta who wants to go a step further and introduce that system in all schools and colleges in Bengal and not simply limit it to the Government institutions. This resolution has two aspects; first of all, that which relates to the schools and then that which relates to the colleges. I propose to take up, first of all, the aspect so far as the schools are concerned before I can deal with the other aspect. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum spoke at some length on the inadvisability and impracticability of having military drill introduced into schools. I think he said that he disliked the one hour's drill which even Your Excellency had also to undergo, but that it was a drill without arms which makes a distinct difference. I shall come to that point later on. Meanwhile, I would like to add one or two authorities to the quotations made by Mr. Crum regarding the inadvisability of introducing military drill into schools. He has already quoted Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who at another place says that 'if you want to spoil a soldier give a boy military drill.'

Sir William Aitkin, Professor of Pathology in the Netley Medical College, says 'Boys given military training at eighteen or before make soldiers who are less robust and efficient than men with whom this training was deferred a few years remaining in civil life until after their bones, heart, lungs, liver, etc., were more matured and developed. Recruits at eighteen or under show immaturity which results only too frequently in their ending in the hospital or being discharged as invalids.'

'Military opinion in all countries accepts this point of view. Military drill can be easily and quickly taught: the great trouble is that of conditioning the men. Given the material, the soldier is soon made, and the material is developed by systematic scientific physical training suited to its years.' In England shortly after the outbreak of war certain schools acting as they thought in response to the needs of the time substituted military drill for school drill: this was promptly censured by authority as harsh.

I shall go back for a moment to the question raised by the Hon'ble mover of this resolution regarding the Boy Scout movement. I may say that Government is not indifferent at all to the Boy Scout movement in Bengal. In fact, in Calcutta—and the Hon'ble Mr. Crum will bear me out in this—a governing body has been created for the Boy Scout movement known, I think, as the Boy Scout of Bengal, and I believe they have shown excellent results in a very short time. Of course, Government are waiting to see whether the material available would justify their sanctioning it in certain other centres later on in Bengal; but for the present we must watch the movement now started in Calcutta. On the other hand, regarding the Boy Scout movement I wish to remove an erroneous impression. It must be clearly understood that the Boy Scout movement is an entirely non-military movement; it is a movement which is just as much concerned with the discipline of boys as physical drill or Swedish exercises. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum has said that the Government are not indifferent to the Boy Scout movement in Bengal. I am glad to hear that. I am glad to hear that the Government are not indifferent to the Boy Scout movement in Bengal. I am glad to hear that the Government are not indifferent to the Boy Scout movement in Bengal.

Resolution.

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, the late Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, has taken a great interest in this question of military drill in Bengal, and as he has just now said, he would have preferred the postponement of the discussion of this resolution until the report of the Committee appointed by the Senate was received; but if I understood him rightly he was not so anxious for military drill in schools, as long as some kind of drill was introduced. That being so, it simplifies my case so far as he is concerned. I think many of the members of Council are aware that in most Government schools and colleges there is a system of physical drill, and also in some aided schools and private institutions, some kind of physical drill has been introduced. If the Hon'ble mover of the resolution and those who have supported him were to bring forward a proposal that greater endeavours should be made to introduce a system—perhaps a more elaborate system than at present—of physical drill in schools. I am sure Government would give it its closest consideration. But here, again, I must sound a note of warning; as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Crum, so far as military drill is concerned, there is a difficulty about instructors and this applies with equal force to the question of physical drill. For the present, it is almost impossible; even later on, we will not be able to get in a day the number of instructors required for the purpose. Then, again, there is another aspect. If we are to accept the idea that military training is not suitable for schools, but that some kind of drill as would train the boys, teach them discipline and enable them to join any military corps in colleges after their school career; even then the fact must not be lost sight of, that in private colleges or in aided schools, it might be a hardship on these institutions to begin with. Even if you were to leave out private institutions and if you insisted on physical drill being introduced and made compulsory in all schools, it would result in Government having to stop its grants to those schools and colleges which would not be able to introduce physical drill according to the standard Government might prescribe. Therefore in considering this question that aspect will also have to be taken into consideration.

Then, again, military drill has a specific purpose, to train selected young men of good physique to better physique and endurance, and to carry out movements necessary in war, whereas school drill has its specific purpose—to give all children physiques and constitutions, better health and strength and mental and bodily alertness. Military, medical and educational opinion in, I believe, every experienced country holds that it is a mistake to attempt to identify them; that the child is spoilt as present child and future soldier if he is prematurely introduced to formal military drill. On these grounds, I think I have made it abundantly clear that it is impossible for Government to accept the question of military drill so far as schools are concerned.

In schools where the Government think that there is room for development, physical drill such as Swedish gymnastics might be introduced, but even then one will have to proceed cautiously as it might prove a hardship to those aided-schools who may not be able to afford an instructor straight off for the purpose. Moreover, I do not know whether it would be quite wise also to make it compulsory in private institutions, but this is a matter which will require further consideration.

I now turn to the other side of this question which relates to colleges. Regarding this I would like to point out that I do not think that sufficient time has elapsed to judge the result achieved by the University Unit under the Indian Defence Force. I think we should await that before we consider the desirability or otherwise of extending the system of military drill in colleges, whether Government or otherwise, in Bengal. Moreover, I think that you cannot achieve that in a day or two, nor can you make the people of Bengal military in a generation, when there has been stagnation for centuries past so far as military aspirations are concerned. Then, again, I would like to point out that this is the most unsuitable time to press upon the attention of Government the question of raising further difficulties so far as the military authorities are concerned regarding new units of military course of training in colleges. You have at present the Indian Defence Force, and I believe, although I cannot give it out in exact figures, that there is a proposal to raise the number of the Indian Defence Force so far as the non-European section is concerned. Then, again, you have the Bengali Regiment ; you have your University unit under the Indian Defence Force ; you have recently noticed in the newspapers the announcement made that commissions are going to be given in the Army to selected Indians ; what is further, that 10 cadets. I believe, a year are to be recommended to go up for training at the Sandhurst College. Now you will admit that these are very considerable advances, and before you try new tests with your young men, let us see how these work. The military are not in a mood just now to have further taxes on their patience, put and I therefore request the Hon'ble member on the ground that it is not only inadvisable but impracticable to have military training in schools, and secondly for the present, we should watch the results of the University Corps and the Indian Defence Force and the other military organisations in which Bengalis can participate, that would be better for him to withdraw this resolution. I may add that Government cannot accept it."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I am asked to speak, but I do not wish to prolong the debate with any observations of mine."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My lord, I must make my point clear at the outset by saying that I advisedly used the word 'Government' in referring to schools and colleges in my resolution. If the training is confined only to Government schools and colleges then a large number of instructors will not be necessary. I have not submitted any scheme of military drill as I am not the proper person to do it. All I want is that our boys should be trained in such a way as will prepare them in due course to take up military training whenever required. If for that purpose the word 'military' in my resolution is found to be unnecessary, I have no objection to omit it. In what form the drill should be introduced can only be considered by Government in consultation with both military and educational authorities. My object is not to start military schools and colleges but it is to give our boys some sort of training—something better than what they are getting now—boy scout training or anything, and I want it also to be extended to colleges. Whether the training will be with arms or without arms it is not for me to say, although, I think, with proper safeguards arms may be used. But a beginning has got to be made. I do not know whether Your Excellency thinks that it would be better for us to wait till the report of the Senate Committee is submitted. But all I ask is that the matter should not be rejected. If the principle is accepted by Government, we might wait for the Senate's report. As regards the objection raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Crum about the dearth of instructors and the form of drill with a view to train our boys for a military career, I think, if the principle is accepted those difficulties won't stand in the way. In that view I hope that my resolution will not be rejected. I am not very anxious in what form it is accepted. I perfectly understand that the scheme shall have to be considered in consultation with military and educational authorities. The time has now come for a military training. The reason why there are not more Bengali Battalions is that we have had no military training and no martial spirit was inculcated into our minds. We do not know whether the services of all able-bodied men will not be required for the defence of the country. And I earnestly pray that my resolution will be

*Resolution.Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The following resolution which stood in the name of the Hon'ble BARU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA was held to be covered by the debate on the previous resolution and was deemed to be withdrawn :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a system of military drill be introduced in all schools and colleges in Bengal.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government do advise the Calcutta Improvement Trust that in disposing of surplus side lands as building sites, the Trust should, where possible, lot them—

- (i) in the case of newly-made or broadened streets, having a width of eighty feet and upwards, into plots of not less than one bigha in area ;
- (ii) in the case of streets having a width of sixty feet, into plots of not less than ten katas ;
- (iii) in the case of streets having a width of forty feet and less, into plots of not less than four katas ; and
- (iv) where the surplus land lies by the side of a park or square, into plots of not less than ten katas.

He said :—

"My lord, I crave leave to say a few words on the operations of the Calcutta Improvement Trust created some six years ago with the object of promoting the structural sanitation of Calcutta. Let me assure those connected with that body who happen to be members of this Council that their schemes and their energy in pushing them through are appreciated, and that the criticism which might be offered now is expressed with a sense of regret that, having had the opportunity of shaping the city of Calcutta on the lines of Jeypore in India or Paris in Europe, they have neglected it, and have been content to open out streets without regulating for assorted class and types of side buildings and only keeping their eyes open on the main chance of getting a high price on the land sold.

The Improvement Trust Act cannot be said to be the happiest piece of legislation for the purposes in view, and it is to be hoped that the time is not distant when its proper amendment will be taken in hand. But I must congratulate the Trust Board that despite the damping effect of the war, and the temporary cramping effect of judicial pronouncements, they have made very good progress in their works. They have opened, and are opening out, some wide main thoroughfares of eighty, one hundred and one hundred and fifty feet in width ; a few are of sixty feet, and the great majority are of forty feet in width. The Trust have been selling their surplus lands in the Surtibagan, Shambazar and Bhowanipore sections of the town, and it will be convenient if I refer to their operations in the latter to illustrate the method which I propose to condemn and to show what should be done in furtherance of sanitation and beauty.

Resolution.Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

Most people are aware that when building sites are sold in this city, the rate for measurement unit for small plots becomes higher than what one gets if the plot is larger in area. If the reason for existence of the Trust had been only to widen existing streets and then to make large profits by selling surplus lands in very small plots independently of any consideration for their after use, then there is nothing to be said against this way of increasing their cash balance and improving their financial position. That the purchasers would not in such cases be able to leave more than one-third of their respective lands open to the sky, and that they would be compelled to erect four-storied buildings to make their purchases remunerative and make the surroundings insanitary is their affair, and not of the Trust vendor.

This intensive construction of buildings in broad streets which the Improvement Trust are forcing people to make by their lotting surplus lands on broad streets into three to five or six katas for sale as building sites bodes no good to the future of the city. Such a fine street as Russa—the continuation of Chowringhee—is being spoiled in this way. Plots of such small areas may be quite sufficient for the 40-foot roads opened out by the Trust under Scheme No. V in the belt between Russa and Lansdowne Roads so well planned for improvement by them. Men with shorter purses will have opportunities for investment there. But those with longer purses are denied opportunities of putting up large detached buildings anywhere. There is only one plot in Russa Road (North) which has any respectable dimensions—I mean plot No. 90 which looks like ground for an intended extension of the Russa Engineering Works, a concern which deserves well of the city and Government.

I believe the Trust made a mistake in not acquiring lands on both sides of Russa Road and also by making so many exemptions. Exemptions should be made in 40-foot roads, and not so freely in the 80 or 100-foot roads. Small investors should be encouraged to go to narrow streets, and to suit their convenience a broad street should not be spoiled by the sale of lands on it in small plots. If the Trust Board are not interested in the architectural beauty of their streets, they should at least do things in such a way that twenty years hence there might not be again a cry of overcrowding and for getting a new body of Improvement Trust to undo this part of the work of the present body. I hold in my hand a copy of the map published by the present Trust Board showing the lots in Russa Road intended to be sold and also a few which have been already sold. My lord, you will be surprised to learn that a good plot of land between two to three bighas in area abutting Russa Road on the east with a fine frontage of about 300 feet has been divided into twenty-two small lots for sale. When this scheme No. IV for Russa Road widening was put forward, it was estimated by the Trust Board that the nett cost for acquisition of additional land would be nil. Probably double the price for surplus lands was anticipated then. The few sales which have already been effected point to an increase four times, and I submit that the Trust should in consideration of such a large increase in the price forego the temptation of pursuing the Trust's method of selling in small plots of land on broad roads.

Public bodies when once they come to a determination erroneously on a question, generally stick to their position, and seldom acknowledge their error. I have no hope the case would be otherwise on the present occasion. But the evils looming in the future of the present short-sighted policy of the Trust is my apology for troubling Your Lordship's Council with a prayer for modification of this policy. My difference with them is not much as regards their way of disposing of side lands of 40-foot roads which are larger in number, but with their lotting of sale lands on broad roads."

Resolution.Mr. Bompas.

The Hon'ble Mr. BOMPAS said :—

"My lord, I am instructed to oppose this resolution on behalf of Government. The position of Government is this. Under the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act, it is the business of the Improvement Trust to submit improvement schemes to Government for sanction. When Government receives such a scheme, it deals with it as it thinks proper, i.e., it may sanction it, or alter it before sanctioning, or it may refuse sanction, in which case it is returned, and if the Improvement Trust wishes to proceed with it, it has to be altered so as to meet with the approval of Government. This Council will, therefore, see that Government has the fullest control over the improvement schemes which are executed in this city. That is the constitutional method provided by the law by which the control of Government is exercised. For Government to issue general instructions that the Trust should carry out its work in such and such a way is a method of control which is not provided for in the law and which would probably be infructuous; for the Improvement Trust is not a branch of Government or composed of officers of Government. It is composed of 11 Trustees, of whom 5 are elected and who are under no liability to pay any attention to general directions of Government. There are also 4 Trustees nominated by Government and those gentlemen, who have hitherto served as nominees of Government, have by no means been of the 'ap-ke-waste' type; and I imagine that if these nominees were expected to surrender their discretion in matters that came before them, we should not have ready to serve on the Trust the same type of gentlemen as have hitherto done in the past.

Further, if Government were prepared to issue any such general instructions, it would not issue the particular instruction desired by the Hon'ble Member. I am personally extremely pleased when any citizen of Calcutta takes any interest in the work of the Improvement Trust. The work of the Trust will intimately affect the welfare of the future citizens of Calcutta and it affects many vested interests; and the more those who are able to advise, favour the Trust with their advice, the better pleased myself and my fellow-trustees are. This question of plotting out of lands is a very important one, but it is not quite so simple as the Hon'ble Member appears to think. A great deal has been written about it, and I have read much of what has been written. It affects the style of buildings which are to be erected and that affects directly the health and welfare of the citizens. It is true that the Hon'ble Member owns a large house in the immediate neighbourhood of Russa Road and if the land on which his house stands had been made a part of Improvement Scheme No. IV, for the widening of Russa Road, then the Hon'ble Member could have obtained one bigha of land on Russa Road; he would have acquired the land which now intervenes between his own and the road and would have obtained a very nice site. But because the Hon'ble Member would like that lands on the Russa Road should be laid out in plots of one bigha each, it does not follow that everybody wants to have so much as a bigha, and I very much doubt whether that is so. When the Improvement Trust makes a road in the centre of the town, a cotta is there worth Rs. 10,000, and if you parcel out land in plots of one bigha each, the land will alone cost about Rs. 2 lakhs and to put up an adequate building on such a site would cost another Rs. 1½ lakhs or at the present rates even Rs. 2 lakhs. A moderate capitalist would be debarred from acquiring lands on the main thoroughfares constructed by the Trust, and I think that there are a great many people who consider that it would be extremely undesirable to place a monopoly of that kind in the hands of the very rich.

There is another question. The plotting of land of a bigha in area means that the depth will be 170 feet. Now if all building plots on the main thoroughfares constructed by the Trust are to be 170 feet deep, it means that a great deal of land will have to be taken up and that means a great deal of destruction of property. I am very glad that the Hon'ble Member recommends such a proposal. Many people think that the Trust acquires too much land, and as a matter of fact we have not the courage to acquire more than 120 feet deep when we improve a road through a populous neighbourhood; but it is encouraging to know that the Hon'ble Member is prepared to recommend to the Corporation the policy he has advocated.

The Hon'ble Member has in particular referred to the Russa Road; but I do not propose to go into the details of what has been done. I may, however, point out that that quarter is a populous neighbourhood; and it is possibly true that we had not the courage to take up enough of the existing property; but to have acquired to a depth of 170 feet or 180 feet on each side of the road would have involved the destruction of a large amount of property of poor middle class people, the destruction of whose property causes the greatest possible amount of hardship. I may also remind the Hon'ble Member that in one place the Trust did take up a particularly deep area which was not covered by residences but chiefly by insanitary tanks. In consequence of this acquisition, we were involved in expensive litigation, and the Courts held that 60 feet should meet our reasonable requirements. The Improvement Trust has had to continue the litigation as far as the Privy Council in order to get that view of the matter set aside. The fact of the matter is that in plotting out lands one has, as far as possible, to anticipate what the demand of the public is; and although it is probable that in the outskirts of the town, people may desire to have large plots on which they can lay out tennis-courts, gardens and out-houses, it is by no means certain that in the centre of the town, people are prepared to buy on such an extensive scale, and if they bought such large plots they would probably be subdivided and the subdivision will be conducted on inconvenient and insanitary lines. These are practical reasons why we cannot adopt the policy of the Hon'ble Member.

The Hon'ble Member has said that there have been exemptions. The law compels us to grant exemptions if the land can be exempted. It is the spirit of the Act and the spirit of the law which, I know, meets the sentiments of the public of Calcutta. Where a man is willing to pay, he should be left in undisturbed possession of his property and there should be as little dis-possession as possible; land should not be acquired simply to be given to another. Exemption constantly takes place, and it is obviously the intention of the law. But if the policy advocated by the Hon'ble Member were to be given effect to, it would render that section of the law practically nugatory. For these reasons, Government are not prepared to issue general instructions for the plotting out of lands in the way the Hon'ble Member desires."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I regret to say that the two members of the Corporation in this Council are on the present occasion on opposite sides. All that need be said on this resolution has been very succinctly said by the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas. My lord, in the first place I want to bring to the notice of this Council that the Russa Road scheme before being taken up was sent to Corporation for their opinion and also published for general criticism. My Hon'ble friend the mover of the resolution as a member of the Corporation had a chance of criticising the scheme in which it was clearly shown that so much land will be taken up for widening the Russa Road and so much land on both sides of the road will be surplus land. The scheme was referred by the Corporation to a Committee and my Hon'ble friend was, I believe, a member of that Committee and I never heard from him at that time that he wanted a larger area to be provided for building sites. If he had proposed it at that time then I believe the matter would have been better threshed out by a more popular and representative body—not that I mean to say that the Hon'ble Council was not a representative body. In that case, my lord, perhaps my Hon'ble friend would have been required to sacrifice his own house for the purpose of providing one-big-ha building site. I find, my lord, that between his house and Russa Road there is a strip of land considerable portion of which has been swallowed up by the roadway and a narrow strip is left over for building site. But if we had followed the policy of laying out a big-ha that would have destroyed his property. If I were he, my lord, I would have fought hard for my dwelling house. The central avenue goes right through the heart of the densely-populated Bengali residential quarter. There surplus land to a depth of 75 to 100 feet has been generally taken, and with great difficulty we managed it. Mr. Bompas wanted much more but we had to restrain him and he became somewhat manageable. If you want a big-ha for building site, you have got to double that depth. In that case, it would have led to the destruction of residential houses of a larger number of poor middle class people. And how are these displaced people to be housed is a question with which we are confronted. They are generally people of small means earning perhaps 30 or 40 rupees a month and they cannot afford to buy land on a street 100 feet wide and a big-ha in area. As regards reinstating these people, I find there was hot discussion in the Council between Mr. Bompas on the one side and Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu and Sir Deba Prasad and Rai Sitanath on the other. It was over sections 78 and 81 of the Act. If the Hon'ble Member's resolution is accepted the problem of reinstating displaced people would become more complicated and difficult. I have tried to clearly put the case. I am intimately associated with the Trust as also with the people. I know the people's need for they come to me morning, noon and night, and I know that the Hon'ble Member's proposal would cause great hardship to the poor middle class people."

Resolution.Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said:—

"My lord, I was prepared to have an opposition speech from the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas, but not in the taste which has been displayed this afternoon, referring to my misfortune of being a resident in this quarter; and I thought that the taste displayed by him would not be an example to any other Hon'ble Member of this Council, but it seems that it caught its contagion in my friend to the left (the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur). My lord, I was anxious to hear the arguments on the merits of the case and not to my having been a resident in this neighbourhood. It stands to reason that one who is resident in that quarter is expected to take an interest in the matter and to put forward his views before the constitutional Tribunal or Council; and I think that by being a resident of Bhowanipore I have been able to put forward certain facts which have not been controverted and it shows that it is an advantage to hear one who is a resident of this locality.

Now the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas says: 'What has Government to do in this matter? I am the Chairman of the Improvement Trust and if you interfere in our business, myself and the trustees will withdraw from this work.' It is a threat which, I hope, does not indicate the state of the mind of his colleagues. Whatever may be his own feelings, I imagine they have got a sense of their duties and are receptive of criticisms, though I know that corporate bodies when they come to a decision always stick to it, never mind whether it is unwise or drastic, and they are always reluctant to acknowledge their error. The Hon'ble Members who have made opposition speeches have not shown that my arguments are unsound. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is a member of the Improvement Trust Board, and I gather from his speech this afternoon that he has been instrumental, as he said, in persuading the Chairman to come to this decision that the plots should be as small as possible, so that the poor and middle class people who throng his house every morning and evening should have their views adopted by the Trust. It seems that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur is playing to the gallery and evidently he has no thoughts of posterity. He should remember that Calcutta is a historic city, and when a traveller from the far West comes to Calcutta, having heard that it is the second city in the British Empire, and passes St. Paul's Cathedral southwards, he passes to a place which is very unsightly and insanitary. What is the argument we have got from the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas. ? I do not think he has given us any substantial arguments whatever. He says that he has done it to suit the necessities of the poorer people. I suppose, Sir, that poor people sometimes expand and become suddenly rich. I suppose that many Hon'ble Members are aware that a section of the Indian community have got money as a God-send owing to the war. Those who are engaged in trade or any business have suddenly become rich. If the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas had been at the sales which were recently held, he would have known that the buyers at those sales were not local men with the exception of very few, but are outsiders who are engaged in trade and who have made a lot of money on account of their speculations and are now investing their money in these land purchases. This could have been easily ascertained from the men of this locality. But, as I said, poor people expand and suddenly become wealthy. What I suggested was that lands on two or three wide streets such as Russa Road, etc., should be dealt with in such a way that men with long purses would have opportunities to put up good buildings there, and I am very sorry that my Hon'ble friend opposite (Mr. Bompas) should have chosen to have a fling at me and to bolster up his position. My lord, I should have welcomed some substantial arguments as to why the continuation of Chowringhee Road should not be dealt with in such a way that people might consider it equally sanitary and fine looking and not as a road meant for residence of 'natives' and therefore its sides and surroundings made nasty in perpetuity. It is for the consideration of the Council whether my resolution should be accepted or not."

The resolution was then put and lost.

The PRESIDENT said :—

I have received a request from the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Dutt for the postponement of the next Resolution (Item No. 14 on the Business Paper), on the ground that he has been unable to reach Calcutta this afternoon, and I have agreed to do so. For the convenience of Hon'ble Members I propose now to take up Item No. 15 and after its discussion to adjourn till to-morrow.

There is a meeting of the Provincial Agricultural Association to-morrow at 11 A.M., and I understand that some Hon'ble Members desire to attend that meeting. I propose that after we have concluded the discussion on Item No. 15, we may adjourn till midday to-morrow.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.

The Hon'ble MR. PROVASH CHUNDER MITTER moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate steps be taken to organise the cloth weaving industry in Bengal with a view to relieve the distress caused to the poorer population of the province owing to the prevailing high prices of cloth.

He said :—

“ My lord, at this late hour I shall speak as briefly as possible. Knowing your lordship's sympathy in the matter I refrain from discussing the question apart from general principles. I have asked a certain statement which I have compiled from the census table, to be handed to the Hon'ble Members of this Council; and from that statement, Hon'ble Members will see from column 2, that the total number of male weavers in Bengal is 144,168 and the number of female weavers is 45,303. I may perhaps explain that the females are generally engaged in helping their male relations in various preparatory processes. In the district of Midnapore, the total number of male weavers is 13,619; and there are large centres such as Jessore, where there are 10,597, Pabna 9,064, Dacca 12,567, Faridpur 10,187, Tippera 9,159. There are some districts where the weavers are in larger numbers than in others. If we take the total number as one lakh whom we can organise by active attempts, let us consider what the position will be. In order to consider the position, I ought to tell the Hon'ble Members that at the present moment, most of the weavers use their primitive looms which are good enough for ordinary purposes. By using the Serampore fly-shuttle loom, they will be able to weave 10 to 12 yards of cloth daily. That means that a lakh of weavers at their present rate, i.e., 5 yards per day, can weave 15 crores of yards a year. If we could introduce the Serampore fly-shuttle loom, they could at least double their outturn, and that outturn will amount to 30 crores of yards. My lord, the cost of a Serampore loom is only Rs. 25, but it does help the weaver in earning at least 5 annas a day more. So it stands to reason that if the industry can be organised, it will be a very good thing for the weavers and also for the community at large. My whole point is that the weaving industry is at present disorganised and a better loom should be introduced. The total amount of cloth which Bengal requires at a rough computation is something like 90 crores of yards. Manchester does not supply all that cloth but a large percentage of it. At the present time at least 10 crores of yards are supplied locally. Therefore if the industry is organised it will not only bring more money to the weavers in the shape of living wages but it will be of great assistance to meet the present situation.

My lord, there is another point on which organisation might help a good deal and on which I desire to touch very briefly. It is well known that by the time the yarn goes to the weaver its price goes up as it passes from the big importing houses to the weaver through several middlemen, and the same process is repeated with regard to the finished article. I do not think that I should discuss the nature of the organisation in detail, but I may suggest some of the main heads. The first is by an extension of the co-operative movement. I know, my lord, that Your Excellency's Government is already doing much in this direction; but perhaps regard being had to the present situation, more may be done. Government has already established outlying branches of the Serampore Weaving School in several places such as Bankura, Malda, Tangail and Cox's Bazar. It may also be possible, provided suitable persons are forthcoming, to encourage private enterprise by Government help in the shape of expert advice. But it is obviously a point which depends on the fact whether suitable private enterprise is forthcoming. I therefore refrain from discussing details.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has intimated in the course of the debate this morning in connection with another resolution that a committee will be appointed. All that I ask for is that this resolution may be sympathetically considered and may be given effect to as far as possible. I need hardly add that the acceptance of the principle of this resolution will have a very reassuring effect on the public mind at the present moment."

Resolution.Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"Sir, I shall endeavour to emulate the Hon'ble mover in the commendable brevity of his remarks at this late stage of the present sitting. The Hon'ble Member desires that steps should be taken to organize the cloth weaving industry in the province. I should like to say at once that Government are prepared to accept this resolution. The Hon'ble Member has made several suggestions as to the forms and agencies by which his proposals may be carried out; and I will say on behalf of Government that in accepting the resolution they do so on a certain understanding. This understanding is that the agencies for any advance should be, first, the co-operative movement to which the Hon'ble mover has referred, secondly, the Weaving Institute, and, thirdly, the agricultural improvements. On all these lines Government are taking action at the present moment. On that understanding Government accept the resolution; for it must be realised that there are some factors in the problem over which Government can exercise no effective control at all.

Without going into details I may inform the Council that it is a matter of common knowledge that the weaving class is probably the most conservative of all the industrial classes in the Presidency, and there is no class which seems to be in such a chronic state of insolvency to money-lenders. Nevertheless, there is some ray of hope in the organization of co-operative movement amongst the weavers. Such organization has been created in the Bankura and Pabna districts and further developments are expected in Tippera, Midnapore, Hooghly, Nalia and Jessore districts. I am glad to inform the Council that a most definite advance has been made in the Bankura district owing to the demands of the Munitions Board; nevertheless, whatever may be done by the co-operative movement the fact remains that cloth can only be produced from yarn and the yarn has to be bought. The next matter therefore is the provision of yarn at moderate prices, and that is really the crux of the position at the present moment. The supply of cotton yarn is rather a commercial problem than an industrial problem, and the matter has been fully discussed in connection with the resolution of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. As regards cotton growing, the record of the Agricultural Department is unfortunate. Any cotton grown at present in Bengal is grown in certain hill areas, in the Chittagong Hill Tracts and in Hill Tippera. Many attempts have been made since the middle of the last century to grow long-staple cotton in the plains of Bengal, but every attempt has so far been a failure. This year 200 maunds of seed have been imported from other provinces and have been supplied to various people in the province, and experiments have been made in the Dacca Agricultural Farm with the object of determining the suitability of certain cotton for sowing on high lands. The great obstacles to the spread of cotton growing in Bengal are the heavy rainfall and the great variety insect pests to which cotton is peculiarly susceptible. Notwithstanding the conservatism of the class in question, the high price of the yarn and the climatic opposition to the prosperity of the cotton crop in the plains of Bengal, both the Registrar of Co-operative Societies and the Director of Agriculture have been and will be desirous of increasing the production of the raw product and the manufactured article. On such an understanding, Sir, Government are prepared to accept the resolution."

Resolution.Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

“ My lord, I accept the understanding.”

The resolution was then put and carried.

Adjournment.

The Council was then adjourned to Thursday, the 4th July, 1918, at 12 noon, at Government House, Calcutta.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 16 & 17.

The following two resolutions stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU AMBICA CHARAN MAZUMDAR :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the grant-in-aid rules, as approved in the Government of Bengal, General Department, letter No. 408 Edn., dated the 25th February, 1918, be either withdrawn or so modified as to leave a substantial measure of independence to the School Committees.

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the powers given to the inspecting officers for supervising the promotions of pupils from one class to another and for selecting candidates for the Matriculation Examination, be wholly withdrawn, such powers being vested in the Head Master subject only to the supervision and approval of the School Committee concerned.

The PRESIDENT said :—

I have received a request from the Hon'ble Babu Ambica Charan Majumdar for the postponement of items Nos. 16 and 17 on the ground of illness, and I have accepted that as a reasonable ground for postponement of the motions till the next meeting of the Council.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that so long as no European officer of the Indian Educational Service is available for the post of Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education, a Muhammadan member of the Provincial Educational Service be appointed to hold the post.

Resolution.Maulvi A. Kasem.

He said :—

“My lord, I believe that the suggestion in this resolution is very simple, and I hope that Your Excellency's Government will see their way in accepting it. About the year 1913, it was thought desirable to appoint a special officer as Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education, in order to enquire into the difficulties which Muhammadans feel in prosecuting their studies and also to adopt the best means for spreading education among the Muhammadans; and Mr. Taylor of the Indian Educational Service was first appointed as the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education. Mr. Taylor has since gone to military duty and as there is a dearth of European officers of the Indian Educational Service the arrangement at present is that the official duties of the Assistant Director for Muhammadan Education are now performed by the General Assistant Director Mr. Gunn. I know, my lord, that this officer is a very able and energetic officer and has a great capacity for work and is well known for the despatch of work in his office. But the reason why I move this resolution is that the work concerning questions of Muhammadan Education requires the officer holding that post to go out to different parts of the Presidency to enquire what the needs of Muhammadans are and how they can be met, either by Government or by local organisations. Mr. Taylor used to spend a good deal of his time on his tours, and on his return to headquarters he used to make certain recommendations which were duly considered by the Director of Public Instruction; now Mr. Gunn, the gentleman who is doing Mr. Taylor's work in addition to his own duties, has to dispose of a large amount of work, and I trust, and the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction will admit, that his duties are very heavy and that he cannot afford to go out often on tour. There was some apprehension in certain quarters that the post of Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education had been abolished. So I put a question to that effect and was assured that there was no intention of abolishing the post and it was explained by Government that the duties of the two officers were now combined in the same individual simply on account of the want of officer of the Indian Educational Service. I may add that when the appointment was first created, a suggestion was made that the appointment should be held by a Muhammadan; but the Muhammadan gentlemen whose opinions carry weight, were of opinion that the appointment should be held by a European and a member of the Indian Educational Service. I think the suggestion, so far as we are concerned, was quite satisfactory, and did in fact bring about excellent results. But what I suggest at the present moment is that during the period of war, when no officer of the Indian Educational Service is available, these duties should be performed by a member of the Provincial Educational Service and thus fill up the gap during the absence of the permanent incumbent. This has been done in many other services, as in the Indian Medical Service, the places of those officers who have been requisitioned for military duty have been taken by Assistant Surgeons—several of these Assistant Surgeons are now officiating as Civil Surgeons. In the general administration the places of many I. C. S. Subdivisional officers, who have gone on military duty, have been filled by men of the Provincial Service. In this particular case my suggestion is that a Muhammadan officer be appointed temporarily as Assistant Director of Public Instruction, who may go about the whole province and look into the needs of the Muhammadan community and submit his recommendations to the Director for his approval, and also be in correspondence with the different Inspectors of Schools in consultation with whom he may be able to solve many questions. At the present moment, we cannot afford to neglect questions concerning Muhammadan education. Everyone admits that so far as Western education is concerned, we are still very backward; and we have just begun to take keenly to higher education, and we are exercising an influence in this matter. At this moment any want of encouragement or advice or any neglect will retard the progress that has been made, and it will indeed be very difficult to make up the lost ground. I submit that there will be no difficulty in making an appointment of a Provincial Service officer, and although I have mentioned the word 'Muhammadan', I am not very keen to the office being held by an official of my persuasion and religion; I did it because I thought that it would be more acceptable to Government; I have, however, no objection to a Hindu Provincial officer being appointed to hold charge. I believe that any officer who takes an interest in the work will do the work honestly and conscientiously. What I want is a special officer to hold charge of the office. As regards the members of the Provincial Service I beg to submit that there are many senior members who, previous to the present arrangements, held independent charge of Divisional Inspectorships and whose services were duly recognised both by Government and the Department of Education. I see no reason why they should not be thought eligible to hold this office temporarily. There is a grievance amongst my countrymen that the claims and the interest of these Provincial Service men, who have held permanent charge of Divisional Inspectorships, are overlooked and neglected at the time when members of the Imperial Services were intended for these appointments. With these words, I beg to commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council."

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI said :—

"My lord, I wholeheartedly support this resolution. I do not wish to take up the time of this Council, but I wish to say a few words. If a Muhammadan officer be appointed to this post, it will give him a trial to prove whether he is able to discharge these onerous duties. This will further be an encouragement afforded by Government to the Muhammadans. As everyone knows, we are very backward in English education and there is no doubt about it. A Muhammadan is expected to know more about the needs of our community than any other officer of other persuasions. With these words, I cordially support this resolution."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My lord, I am afraid the Hon'ble mover of this resolution has brought in a question which does not really assist the object which he has in view. We have got first of all to look at the duties of the Assistant Director for Muhammadan Education, and looking at that we find that there was sufficient reason for the conference in 1916 on the question of Muhammadan Education to make this recommendation. Recommendation No. 94 runs as follows :—

'That we understand that, according to the original orders sanctioning the post of Assistant Director for Muhammadan Education, Bengal, this officer should be placed in respect of Madrasahs and Maktabas in the position of an Inspector of Schools and should be given full powers of initiation and control which are vested in an officer of this class; that he should correspond direct with the Director of Public Instruction with regard to these institutions and that they should be removed from the jurisdiction of the Divisional Inspector of Schools. In addition, the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education has to visit educational institutions of all kinds in order to look after the interests of Muhammadans in these institutions. We feel that it would be to the disadvantage of Muktabas and Madrasahs if they were removed from the control of the Divisional Inspector. Muktabas in particular get all the grants from the District Boards through the District Deputy Inspector of Schools, who is an officer subordinate to the

Resolution.Maulvi A. Kasem.

Inspector of Schools. As far as administration is concerned, we feel that it would be a mistake to move these institutions from the control of the Divisional Inspector.

'We think that the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education should be an integral part of the Director of Public Instruction's office, and that his chief duties should be to see to the interests of Moslems in general educational institutions. In this case there would be no need for his separate office and establishment.'

Then the report goes on to discuss the question of office and establishment.

Now, my lord, looking through the report—and I hope the Hon'ble Member will correct me if I misunderstood what he said—we find that when this post was created, there was a considerable consensus of opinion among the Muhammadans that the post should be held by a European. Moreover, some members of the conference who knowing the backwardness of their own community, even went to the length of suggesting that the Headmasters of Government high schools should be Europeans or Eurasians generally. This is a quotation which I make from the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhuri's opinion. This shows that the Muhammadan gentlemen who were then consulted were of opinion that for the best interests of Muhammadan Education it would be better to have a European official at the head of affairs specially in a post like the one now under discussion. Moreover the present arrangement has been accepted after the consideration of many alternatives as being best in the present circumstances, both for education in general and for the Muhammadan community in particular. The present officer in charge, Mr. Gunn, has high qualifications and wide experience, and Government is confident that the welfare of Muhammadan Education is receiving and will receive proper attention from him. Government is therefore of opinion that the appointment of a Muhammadan officer of the Provincial Educational Service would not add to efficiency. Moreover, if the point is, as Mr. Kasem has pointed out in his speech, that Mr. Gunn cannot do any touring, I may say that when Government has made this temporary arrangement owing to the paucity of officers it has also arranged that Mr. Gunn should go on tour in the latter half of July to Dacca and other places, to look into the interests of Muhammadan Education. For these reasons Government, as at present advised, cannot accept this resolution, and I would point out to the Hon'ble mover and the gentleman who supported him that for the best interests of Muhammadan Education itself it would be wise to leave the present arrangement as it is. Government is perfectly aware of the fact that there are Muhammadan officers who are able and who in time, no doubt, will be able to hold appointments like this, but I think that when Government takes so much interest in Muhammadan Education, and that when it presses that the present arrangement is the best for Muhammadan Education, the Hon'ble mover will withdraw his resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, after the statement made by the Hon'ble Member in charge, I do not think that it will serve any good purpose to press this resolution. In asking for permission to withdraw it, I only wish to state that I am glad that arrangements have been made for Mr. Gunn to go out on tour for a few days, but what I wanted to press was that Mr. Taylor used to visit all the districts every year and he used to tour for about nine months in the year. However as Government is not prepared to accept this resolution, I have no alternative but to ask for permission to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

*Resolution.Maulvi A. Kasem.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the number of members of the District Board of Burdwan be increased from eighteen to twenty-four.

He said :—

“My lord, it would appear that it is a question of too trivial a nature to deserve the attention of the Legislative Council, but as I found it difficult to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government to this matter by any other means, the only course open to me was to bring it up in the form of a resolution. The prayer in this resolution is that the number of members of the District Board of Burdwan should be increased from 18 to 24. From the Local Self-Government Act, it appears that it rests with the Government of India to fix the number of members, and the Government of India, for reasons which were known to the officials in charge of that Government, fixed the number at 18 for the district of Burdwan, and if I read out to this Council the numbers fixed for other district of a smaller nature, Hon'ble members will understand the reason for my demand.

Burdwan 18 members with an area of 2,368 sq. miles.

Hooghly 27 ditto ditto 2,261 sq. miles.

The income of Burdwan is Rs. 6,15,000, whereas that of Hooghly is only Rs. 5,343.

Similarly, in Howrah, Midnapore, Murshidabad, 24-Parganas, we have got generally 25, Jessore 21 and Bankura 17, but the latter is a very small district. Mr. Lees, the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, is reported to have remarked that he could not see any reason why that number (18) was fixed for Burdwan. The Burdwan District Board has a large area and a large income, and we want that the number should be increased to 24. My reason for this increase is that the number being small the vested interests in the district cannot be properly represented.

The Muhammadan community for example is very poorly represented on the District Board, and if Government proposes to give adequate and fair representation to the Muhammadans, then other interests will have to suffer and some of these will have to go unrepresented on the District Board. Then, my lord, we have got four subdivisions including the Sadar, and as is the case with other district board, if we have all the subdivisional officers as members of the Board to give the Board their official experience, in that case we cannot have more than twelve nominated members because with the Civil Surgeon and the Deputy Inspector of Schools, there are at least six salaried servants, and at least twelve nominated members, and in order to have twelve nominated members under the present Act, we must have twelve elected members; the present practice is that they nominate the subdivisional officers by rotation, that is, on one occasion the subdivisional officer of Katwa, on the other the subdivisional officer of Kalna. The Sadar subdivisional officer has never been given a seat on the District Board. It was only on the last occasion by some arrangement that five officials got into the District Board. The Asansole local board failed to choose their representative, and their right vested in the Government and by that right the Government appointed the subdivisional officer of Asansol as one of the members. I think on that ground and also on the ground that all the interests are not properly represented on the Board, the number should be increased. There is also one other reason.

Resolution.Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Burdwan is one of the few districts which has the privilege of rather the honour of having a non-official as Chairman of the District Board. I submit that in order that our choice may be popular that the electorate should be a little larger than what it is at present. I submit also that the request to raise the number to 24 is not at all an unreasonable one. I might be told that in view of the Government of India resolution on Local Self-Government, the constitution of the District Boards and the municipalities are to be changed in the near future, and that there is no immediate hurry in considering this question at the present moment. With reference to that I submit that whatever may be the future constitution of the District Boards, what I want is this, that the Burdwan District Board, so far as its strength and number of members are concerned, it should be put on the same level as that of neighbouring District Boards such as Hooghly, Nadia, Jessore and 24-Parganas. I hope that Your Excellency's Council will accept this recommendation. I may inform this Council that the members of the District Board approached the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division with a similar request and he promised to look into the matter. However, I do not know what has been done, and I submit this resolution at the request of several members of the District Board, including the Vice-Chairman himself, and I hope that it will receive acceptance from Your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I support the resolution. It is a fact that there is truly a limited number of representatives in District Boards. From subdivisions there are very few elected members. Under the provisions of the Act, Local Boards are to send in their representatives to District Boards and that two-thirds of the members are to be elected and one-third nominated. This is a point which deserves consideration. There should be changes, my lord, in the constitution of the Local Boards, so that more elected members may be sent to the District Boards. There ought to be an extension of the electorate and there ought to be popular representation throughout the district. In this view of the matter I ask the Council to consider whether it is desirable to increase the number of members of the District Boards."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My lord, it is true that for some reason unknown to us at present, the Hooghly District Board—from where the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur comes—with a population of nine lakhs should have 27 members. But if we were to take Burdwan with its 18 members and compare it with that of Bankura and even Midnapore, and also if we went further and compared it with Chittagong and Tipperah, we would find that Burdwan is not doing so very badly. But in this connection what I must first of all point out to the Hon'ble mover of this resolution is that in a matter of this kind Government cannot move on its own initiative. They are, however, quite prepared to consider proposals provided they come up from the District Board itself. If the members of the District Board were to approach Government through the proper channel, I am sure the matter would receive the fullest consideration. As to the inadequacy of Muhammadan representation on the District Board of Burdwan, I can assure the Hon'ble mover that Government have taken notice of that fact already, and I believe a remedy is under consideration such as may be possible under present circumstances. Moreover, the thing is not as easy as it appears on the surface. In giving any increase in the number of members of District Boards, we shall have to take into consideration the different Local Boards in the district. We shall have to consider how the seats are going to be distributed, and these things cannot be done until we have the reports of the local officers on the subject, and I would, therefore, request the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution that if he could get his District Board to come up with its proposal for an increase, I am sure it will receive the careful consideration of Government."

Resolution.Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Babu A. U. Dutta.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, I shall only express my thanks to the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan for his assurance that if representations are made to Government by the District Board, they will receive careful consideration at their hands. I could not certainly expect more than this. I will lay this before the members of the District Board and I am sure they will do the needful.

Reference has been made to Muhammadan representatives in the Board. I do not like to speak about this, but as the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur, fortunately for me, is familiar with all the affairs of Burdwan, especially the Muhammadan question. I beg to submit for his consideration, that the Muhammadan gentleman came to be appointed by the District Magistrate at the recommendation of the Muhammadan Association, who chose him at one of their special meetings in which we were not called for reasons which we do not know. This gentleman does not live in Burdwan but lives in his father-in-law's house in another district as a ghar-jamai, which, by the way, is a very humiliating position for an Indian. With these words, my lord, I beg leave to withdraw this resolution and I hope when the District Board of Burdwan comes up with their representation Government will do the needful.

The resolution was then, by leave of President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to safeguard the interests of the growers of jute in Bengal and to ensure an equitable apportionment of profit between the jute mills and the jute growers.

He said :—

"My Lord, a word about the wording of the resolution. The wording of the second portion of the resolution is not quite happy. I did not mean to say or suggest that the profits that are now being made in jute mills should be shared with the growers. I did not mean anything like this. All that I meant to suggest is that steps may be taken which would ensure the growers a fair price for his jute. That is all that this resolution seeks to recommend.

Bengal is the only jute-growing country in the world. She supplies raw jute and jute manufactures to the whole world. She sends gunny-bags and cloth to the United States, United Kingdom, Australia, Australasia, France, Portugal, Russia, Italy, Roumania, Greece, Chili and Peru, Cuba, Hayti, Argentina, Canada, Java, Natal, Cape Colony, Egypt, East Africa, Transval, Rhodesia and Nyassal and Mauritius, West Indies, Hong Kong, Porto Rico, the Sandwich Islands, the Philippines, Ceylon, Japan, and Madagascar, the Straits Settlements, China, Formosa, Siam, the Philippine Islands, and Dutch Borneo, besides Burma, Madras, Karachi, Bombay,

Resolution.Babu A. C. Datta.

Pondichery, the Punjab, the United Provinces, and other Provinces in India. Some idea about the extent and magnitude of the jute trade may be formed from the fact that it represents over 60 per cent. of Calcutta's export trade. Nature has given her a monopoly of jute. It is a commodity which is not only useful but is indispensable for various branches of trade and commerce without which the world cannot get on now. In fact the cornsack and bags of other descriptions for holding various kinds of grain is now looked upon by the civilised world as a prime necessity of life. A position of greater advantage can not therefore be conceived. In ordinary course the jute growers of Bengal should be in a position to dictate their terms to all the customers hailing from the different parts of the world, from China to Peru. But in spite of this unique advantage of her position the poor cultivators cannot keep their heads above debts. In normal times the conditions of cultivators is anything but what it should be. The demand for jute and jute manufactures has, however, increased beyond all measure during the war. If the jute growers and the jute manufacturers should prosper at any time that time should be this. As a matter of fact the jute mills of Bengal have enjoyed unparalleled prosperity even since the outbreak of the war. The profits they have been making are simply fabulous. The advance in the gunny trade has been substantial and enormous, the expansion being both in volume and value. The Collector of Customs, Calcutta, describes the prosperity of the mills in his report on the maritime trade of Bengal for the official year 1916-17 in these glowing terms.

'Reference has already been made to their stupendous prosperity for nine months of the year under review. At the close of 1915 their profit, for that year of Rs. 4.4 crores, was considered a marvellously good aggregate, but what is this compared with the Rs. 6.49 crores of profit with which 1916 has been credited?'

We take the following from the Indian Daily News of a recent date.

'The Gouripore mill has paid Rs. 150 per share for the half-year and Fort Gloster eighty rupees per share for the same period and Kinnison has paid Rs. 125 per share. Gouripore has 1,255 looms, Fort Gloster 1,250 and Kinnison 1,221. Gouripore is now under the Mackinnon group, which is said, in the bazar, to have gone bull and surpassed all the rest in money making and the Indian mill results are much talked about. Budge-Budge has made about 22 lakhs for 782 looms, which seems to work out as good as any results published hitherto. Albion is said to have made 13 or 14 lakhs on 340 looms, which is even better.'

It is not merely the aggregate profits which have created such a flutter in the mercantile world but the price has also risen very remarkably. The price of bags has risen from about Rs. 16 to about Rs. 32 per 100 bales. The 'money and markets' column of the newspapers has become an extremely interesting study and shows how the price of jute shares are rising by leaps and bounds, the price of shares in some mills having risen to about Rs. 800. These are the blessings of the war so far as the jute manufactures and the Jute manufacturers are concerned. It is a fundamental principle not only of political economy but also of common sense that the price of raw jute should rise and fall in a certain ratio with the rise and fall in the price of the jute manufactures. A gunny bag is made of raw jute. The price of raw jute must therefore rise as a matter of course with the rise in the price of gunny bags. It is difficult to conceive the price of paddy (ধান) falling when the price of rice (চাউন) is rising. The last four years should, therefore, have been an exceptionally good time for the jute growers of Bengal. But, my Lord, ours is a land of surprises where the most unexpected always happens. For nothing is more uncontroversial to-day than the fact that the price of raw

Resolution.Babu A. C. Datta.

Jute has fallen simultaneously with the rise in the price of Jute manufactures. The cultivators of Bengal must be an extremely ill-fated people and by an irony of fate, the war, which has brought plenty for the manufacturers, has reduced the growers to a most abject condition of utter helplessness and misery. The god of war has come with gifts in his two hands, bringing in his right hand phenomenal prosperity for the manufacturers and abject misery in his left for the growers. The fall of the price of raw jute with the rise in the price of jute manufactures is an economic phenomenon which it is difficult to appreciate. My Lord, there must be something radically wrong somewhere in the machinery of jute trade, which alone must be responsible for this economic anomaly and absurdity. The poor cultivators of Bengal appeal to Your Excellency to find out the plague-spot and to take such steps as will secure to them the fruits of their labour.

A true diagnosis must precede a prescription of remedy. The question therefore arises what is the root cause of this great anomaly? 'The great scarcity of tonnage,' 'the financial difficulties in exchange,' 'the continued non-participation of the Central powers' in the trade these are some of the circumstances which are said to have contributed to the fall in the price of raw jute. The difficulty of tonnage cannot be altogether overlooked. But at the same time we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that gunny bags and cloth are being incessantly exported and that the tonnage difficulty has never been allowed so far to stand in the way of such export. So far as the tonnage question goes it does not matter very much whether what is exported is pucca bale or jute manufactures. I am informed that very recently the Government has allowed some pucca balers to export jute to meet the requirements of Dundee mills. This explanation therefore does not go far enough. What is true of the tonnage difficulty is also similarly true of the difficulty in exchange. This difficulty has never prevented the Government of India from sending gunny bags and cloth from the local mills to Russia, France, Australasia, Peru and other countries.

The true explanation must be sought elsewhere. It appears to me that the absence of all competition both, foreign and local, is the plague-spot in the system of the jute trade at the present moment. Competition amongst the customers ensures a fair price to the growers as monopoly of purchase, direct or indirect, is disastrous to their interests. Before the war there was a competition amongst all the countries to which jute was exported. Export has of course been stopped to those countries who are at war with the British Empire, and nobody can complain of this. These countries must be ruled out of the market. But there has been a persistent tendency to prohibit export of jute to other countries also. On the 7th March 1917 exports of raw jute were prohibited even to the United Kingdom, the Government taking possession of all jute then in transit. The export was also discouraged by the enhancement of duties. On the 1st March 1917 the export duties were doubled, only the war bags and cloth being exempted, and consideration being also shewn to back commitments. These restrictions no doubt undermine very considerably the wholesome competition which guaranteed a fair price to the growers before the war. But the greatest blow upon the competition was given by the special contract which has been entered into by the Government of India with the local mills and under which the latter supply gunny bags and gunny cloth to meet the military requirements not only of the British Empire but also of all the allied armies. Quarterly agreements were come to between the local mills and the Home Government, the necessary supplies being contracted for in the first instance as from the 1st October 1915, at something under current market rates. Under these arrangements no less than 297 million bags and 35 million yards of cloth were supplied in 1915-16 under the order of the British Government, to the United Kingdom, Russia and France. In 1916-17 the quantities despatched were 385 million bags and 135 million yards of cloth. Of the bags, 307 million went to the United Kingdom, 35 million to Russia and 25 million to France. The United Kingdom also took 84 million and France 51 million yards of cloth. But for this contract, these countries would have purchased raw jute from Bengal. The result would have been a two-fold competition between these countries themselves and competition between them and the local mills. This arrangement while shutting Russia, France and other allied countries off the open market, gives the mills practical monopoly of all business with those countries, so far as their military requirements go. Thus by one stroke of the pen the growers and dealers of Bengal are made to bid good-bye to their exporting customers and the only purchasers left to them are the local mill owners, who of course take full advantage of this unique position and compel the growers and dealers to accept any terms which they may be pleased to offer. The inevitable and disastrous result of this arrangement is now well known. It is abnormally low price of raw jute and abnormally high price of jute manufactures. Those who grow the jute are starved. It does not fetch them enough food to keep their body and soul together and enough raiment to cover their shame. So inspite of the increased and increasing demand for jute and jute goods caused by the war, the lot of those who grow them is not only not improved, but has deteriorated very greatly. The toiling masses are deprived of their morsel of food only to enrich a few capitalists. What is loss to the growers is gain to the manufacturers. The loss on the part of the cultivators is loss of the barest necessities of life—it is literally a loss of food and raiment. The gain on the part of the capitalists is addition of wealth which has been so happily described by the Collector of Customs as “stupendous prosperity” and which according to the Indian Daily News is now so much talked about. My lord, this can only be justified by the doctrine of the maximum of good for the minimum of people.

I shall quote here the verdict of a most disinterested and dispassionate critic. Mr. R. B. Rees, member of the Victoria Legislative Council, Australia, has said only the other day :—

‘When the war broke out, the jute trade of Calcutta got into the hands of the mill owners, the balers and the speculators of the bazar and stock exchange. Being free from foreign competition this combination pressed down the raiyat (growers of jute) until the price paid to the grower is below pre-war prices, and only on a par with what the grower got 20 years ago, yet the price of the finished article, hessians, twill, etc., is more than double the price before the war.’

It is certainly interesting to know why on earth the British Government goes out of its way and enters into a contract with the local mills on behalf of all the allied powers? Why not allow France and other allied countries to carry their own dealings with the dealers and balers and mill owners of Bengal unhampered by any action of the Government? Why not allow them to deal with each other at arm's length? Why not allow the growers to reap the full benefit of competition amongst all the customers? Why interfere with their trade? Why not allow the growers to take the full advantage of the unique position which they hold in the world with respect to jute, subject to only such restrictions as may be necessary to be imposed on Germany and her colleagues? Why does the Government take up the agency of so many customers? These are questions which are bound to occur even to the most superficial observer. My lord, I do not propose to give my own opinion; I shall only place before this Council the version which the Collector of Customs has placed before the world on behalf of the Government. ‘The principle,’ we are told, ‘underlying the arrangements made was direct negotiations between the representatives of the British Government and the mills to secure favourable rates, not only for their own military requirements.

Resolution.Babu A. C. Datta.

but also those of the allied armies.' So the object of this contract professedly was to secure favourable rates not only to the United Kingdom but also to all the allied countries, and let us hope that they have all benefited by the contract. That the arrangement secured favourable rates also to the other party to the contract is also admitted, because the mill owners are getting double the price by virtue of this contract. The contract must therefore be a very merciful contract, for it has blessed those who give the bags and cloth and those who take them. But has the contract been unkind to anybody? The expression 'favourable rate' carries with it a necessary implication that there is some other party to which the rate was not favourable and was not intended to be favourable. Now who is that third party as against whom the parties to the contract were much on the alert and as against whom they wanted to secure a favourable rate? Is he the poor grower? Can he possibly be the grower whose destiny the providence has placed in the hands of the British Government and whose interest it is the duty of the Government to protect? Who else can be that party? Is he not the only other party concerned? At all events we know that ever since that memorable contract the price of raw jute is falling simultaneously with the rise in the price of the bag and cloth.

Now let us critically examine for one moment the precise situation of the growers. The abovementioned contract has resulted in a combination of all the allied countries including the British Empire. Then there is a further combination of all the local mills. They have got the mill owners' association and act always in concert to keep down the price of raw jutes; one of the devices adopted is that by an arrangement between themselves not more than one or two mills go to the market at the same time. There is thus no competition foreign or local. The usual competition between the balers and the mill owners is also non-existent, for the balers have no foreign customers and must surrender to the local mill owners. The competition between European and Indian dealers is also made impossible owing to the preferential treatment the European dealers systematically receive from the mills. Great as the evils of these combinations were before the war, they have been multiplied by the stoppage of export and the monopoly which the mills practically enjoy under the contract with the Government. There is thus a world wide conspiracy against the poor growers. It is, conspiracy of millionaires against the most destitute of people. It is a most unequal fight. It is a fight between the strong and weak. It is a fight between the most educated people on one side and most ignorant cultivators on the other. It is a fight between shrewd business people on one side and simple village folks on the other. It is a fight between people ever vigilant and people who do not know their own position and strength. It is a fight between capitalists who can wait indefinitely and people who have no staying power and find themselves compelled to surrender to any price in order to avoid starvation. It is a fight between people who have got their guilds and associations and people who have not only not got any such associations but who have not even got the capacity to form guilds and associations. It is a fight between two sets of people, one set exploiting upon the ignorance of the other set. It is a fight in which the Government is not an idle and indifferent spectator but is admittedly an active participator. The mill owners are purchasers and the growers are sellers. So there is a conflict of interest between these two parties and in this economic fight, the Government have lent their powerful support to the stronger party. The Government have always placed their boundless resources at the disposal of the stronger party. What is a preliminary jute fore-cast but a census taken of the area which is likely to be under jute cultivation in the next season only to help the mill owners with such accurate information as will enable them to fight the growers to their best advantage? Was not the system of final fore-cast of jute crops introduced for the benefit and at the instance of the mill owners of Bengal and Dundee? These statistics are collected by the Government machinery maintained at the cost of the people only to be used by the mill owners both here and abroad against the grower of jute in regulating their offer of price and the volume of purchase they should make at any particular time.

My Lord, the Textile Committee in England has only the other day recommended that advantage should be taken of India's monopoly of production of jute to safeguard for Britain and her Allies supplies of jute and advised imposition of export duty on shipment of raw jute from India to all destinations with total rebate of duty in favour of the British Empire, total and graduated rebates in favour of the Allies, and graduated rebates in favour of neutral countries offering reciprocal concessions. The interest of the growers is of course an irrelevant talk and was never taken into consideration in formulating these recommendations.

These are some of the grievances of the growers of jute which I feel it my duty to place before Your Excellency. The specific recommendation which I venture to make for Your Excellency's acceptance is the fixing of price of raw jute and the appointment of a jute controller for the purpose under the provisions of the Defence of India Act. This may be opposed by interested parties on the plausible ground of interference with free trade. But I am pleading for the appointment of a Controller not as a permanent office, but only as a war-measure to deal with a certain situation brought into existence by the war. There is certainly no less necessity for regulating the price of jute than there is for regulating the price of coal, cotton and numerous other commodities. I shall venture, my Lord, to put my case on a higher ground. The low price of jute being to a certain extent the immediate and inevitable effect of the intervention of the Government, it is only fair to the growers that the Government should adopt measures to safeguard their interest. Is it fair that the poor cultivators of Bengal should be sacrificed to secure favourable rates to the rich people of distant countries in Europe? The Government is not a private customer of the mill owners. It has a duty to the growers more imperative and more sacred than they have to the inhabitants of France and Russia, who are certainly able to protect their own interests and do not stand in need of the chivalrous assistance of the British Government. That duty requires that a reasonable price should be ensured to the jute growers. When settling the price of jute manufactures as between the Government and mills, the former should, as a part and parcel of the same contract, insist upon the fixation of the price as between the mills and growers through the dealers and bailers.

In the long run, the low price of raw jute cannot be of any advantage to the mill owners either here or elsewhere. It is an established fact that the area of jute cultivation varies almost from year to year with the price, not of jute manufactures, but of raw jute. The Administration Report of 1915-16 says that marked feature of that year was a general decrease in area which was attributable to the fall in jute prices after the outbreak of the war. When the price falls the area decreases as a matter of course. Although Bengal is the only jute producing country in the world, the reverse is not true and Bengal is not jute producing only. The jute fields are paddy fields to boot. When the price of jute falls, the cultivator at once replaces the jute by paddy. The jute field of this season becomes the paddy field of the next. So if the present low price continues, the jute cultivation will be given up and the cultivators will fall back upon the paddy. This is a prospect which the mill owners can not possibly contemplate with indifference. You may exploit upon the ignorance of the cultivators as long as they grow jute but you can not force them to grow it when eventually they give it up as unprofitable. The mills on the two sides of the Bhagirathi are there because the cultivators raw jute. Their very existence and occupation depends upon the growth of it. First jute, then jute manufacturers. So an attitude of sympathy and solicitude for the growers is the best policy in the long run for all those who are interested in the jute trade. You may or may not care for the Bengal cultivators but your business instinct and your love of dividend should dictate nothing but sympathy and consideration for them. There is after all a common platform upon which the growers and manufacturers must eventually stand and if the outside world care at all for jute and the jute trade."

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING said :—

"Sir, the resolution of the Hon'ble Member seeks to mitigate the disparity between the price which the producer in the jute growing districts receives from the lowest grade of middlemen for the raw jute and the price which the manufacturer in India has been receiving for the manufactured article. In pointing out this disparity, the Hon'ble mover has introduced a good deal of prejudice into the discussion, although in the beginning of his speech he indicated that he did not wish that the mills should give up part of their profits to the cultivators ; but in effect that was after all the solution for which he asked. He has evidently given considerable thought to the subject, and his speech indicates his view that there must be something radically wrong in the matter of the jute trade. The disparity is well known, and all I can say is that the economics of the jute trade are, by no means so simple as some of the critics would suggest. The inequality between the profits is not due to any special defects on the part of the cultivator nor due to any unusual degree of skill, industry or enterprise on the part of the manufacturer. I propose to explain to the Council that the inequality is due to causes over which neither the cultivators nor the manufacturers have control. In doing so, however, it is hardly necessary for me to emphasize the fact that it requires no exhortation on the part of the Hon'ble Member to request Government to safeguard the interests of the cultivating classes. Government did intervene with state help in 1914 ; and as pointed out by me in this Council in connection with a similar resolution on the 19th December 1917, Government have anxiously scanned the horizon for danger signals. Government have the interests of the cultivating classes and of the jute cultivators as much at heart as those of any other classes of His Majesty's subjects, but there are limits to effective intervention by Government and I shall explain that the remedies that the Hon'ble Member suggests, although attractive, will be ineffective to attain the remedy which he desires.

Let us consider, in the first place, the conditions which led to the low price of jute in the jute year, 1917-18. I must ask the indulgence of the Council while I place some statistical results before the Hon'ble Members. Now the price, which the cultivating raiyat receives, is a function of three variables, the outturn, the quality and the demand. From 1910 to 1914, there was a steady increase in the outturn which was synchronous with an increase in the acreage ; during the same period, there was a corresponding increase in the price paid for the raw jute by the manufacturer. The apex of that curve was reached in the beginning of 1914, when the cultivator reaped the benefit of these conditions by getting the high average of Rs. 10 to 11 per maund for the 1913 crop. Then came 1914, when the difficulty of export, owing to reduced tonnage caused by the military requirements of the Empire on the outbreak of war, reduced the average price to Rs. 4 to 5 per maund at the raiyat's door. The raiyat, thereupon, used his natural weapon to readjust the conditions, and reduced his acreage from three and one-third million acres in 1914 to two and one-third million acres in 1915. In that year, 1915, there was a revival in the export of raw jute and a considerable increase in the export of manufactured jute ; so the reduced crop with the increased demand brought up the average price at the raiyat's door to about Rs. 7 per maund.

It is from 1915 that one must seek to understand the reason for the abnormal conditions which have since obtained. Since 1915 the export of manufactured jute has remained fairly high and constant. On the other hand, from 1916 till the present, the export of raw jute has fallen in the most remarkable fashion. During the last year, 1917-18, the export of raw jute was less than a half of what it had been in the pre-war period ; and indeed it was the lowest export on record for the last 40 years. In the year before the war, the proportion of the crop exported in the raw state was more than half ; the proportion has gradually fallen till last year when it was less than one-fifth. The cultivators, however, proceeded to sow more jute in the two years 1916 and 1917, after they had recovered from the shock of 1914. The corresponding increase in the outturn of 1916 gave them a high average price at their own door, namely Rs. 8 to 9 per maund. Hence, for 1917, we have the conditions which would normally tempt the cultivators to continue to increase their acreage, which actually did happen ; and with the increased acreage the outturn of 1917 increased to the vicinity of 90 lakhs of bales.

Let us then consider the conditions in 1917. A high demand for the manufactured article together with a good local price had increased the acreage with the proportionate increase of outturn ; and yet the average price at the door of the raiyat fell to Rs. 5 per maund. The explanation is, however, simple. Owing to the fall in the export of raw jute, the only effective competition for the raiyat's produce was from the local manufacturers. The mills not only bought their normal requirements, but they bought largely in excess of their immediate requirements to the utmost capacity of storing accommodation of which they could get hold. They not only filled their own godowns, but they filled hired godowns with purchased jute. Two facts, in this connection, must not be over-looked : First, that the enormous decrease in the exportation of raw jute left the market flooded with jute for local purchase, and that naturally depressed the price. Furthermore, had not the mills purchased very much more than their immediate requirements, the price would have been still further depressed to the disadvantage of the raiyats. The imports from all sources into Calcutta up to date of the 1917 crop have been in excess of the imports of the 1916 crop for a corresponding period. It is also the fact that the jute manufacturers realised that there was a danger point beyond which the prices must not be depressed, as that would mean further restriction in area ; and it was to their interest to continue free-buying to the utmost of their capacity. But, nevertheless, these purchases of raw jute, large though they were, could not compensate for the failure in the export trade of raw jute which I have already indicated, and did not cover the whole crop. Indeed, the local exports of both the manufactured and the unmanufactured article in 1917-18 equalled in bulk only two-thirds of the crop harvested in the rains of 1917 ; whereas in the previous year the equivalent in bulk of about nine-tenth of the whole crop was sent abroad in a manufactured or unmanufactured shape, and in the year before that, in 1915-16, practically the equivalent of the whole crop was exported in some form or other. It is obvious that the supply of raw jute in the country was far in excess of the demand in the last year, 1917-18.

The next main question is : if there is such a superfluity of cheap raw jute, why is the price of the manufactured article so high ? The answer is that there are many factors besides the price of the raw material which determine the price of the manufactured article. In this connection, I should like to correct a misapprehension, to which expression has been given in the press. It is alleged that the high profits, the result of such high prices, have been made out of Government. It is not my intention either to attack or defend the mills regarding their net profits, which, as the Director of Statistics has recently pointed out, have increased from the index of 100 in 1914 to the index of 570 in 1917. But it is not a fact that these great profits have been made unpatriotically out of Government. I shall revert to this later.

A reply was given in March last in the Imperial Council to a question of the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerji, in which he asked whether the attention of Government had been drawn to the steady rise in the price of hessians. Now, the highest market price of standard hessians has varied, as is well known in the jute world of Calcutta, between Rs. 11 and Rs. 22 per unit between 1911 and 1915. There was a slight rise in the maximum in 1916 to Rs. 25 and a further rise in 1917 to Rs. 30; while in the current year a rate of Rs. 60 has almost been touched. Several causes have contributed to this result.

First of all, the large Government orders restrict the open market. Such orders have been absorbing at least a quarter of the mills' total output; and, indeed, during the early portion of the current year, nearly half of the production of the mills was booked for Government requirements. Hence the balance is insufficient to meet the ordinary trade demand.

In the second place, the orders from Government arrive with little previous notice, and thus complicate the arrangements for meeting the ordinary trade demand, inducing thereby acute competition.

In the third place, there is the scarcity of freight to carry the manufactured goods away from the country. These causes, together with the difficulties of exchange, have made the market-rate jump up and down like a barometer in a cyclone.

To put the two cases succinctly, the low price to the raiyats is due to the fact that the supply of raw jute is greater than the demand, and the high prices of the manufactured article from which the profits of the mills accrue are the result of the fact that the public demand for the manufactured articles, apart from Government orders, is much in excess of the supply. The one cause operates to depress the price against the cultivator, and the other cause to enhance the price against the overseas purchaser. On the one hand, we have an elastic commodity which responds in output to changes in the harvest price; on the other hand, we have a rigid manufacturing agency which has little resiliency owing to the restriction on the flotation of new companies and on the import of machinery. The looms in 1918 were only one-fifth more in 1918 than in 1913: such an increase, however, was insufficient to handle the increased load put on the local mills. Recently in Dundee the open market was paying more for bad damaged jute than the British Government was paying for good sound jute.

The Hon'ble mover has left his remedy to the extreme end of his speech and it was with some difficulty that I could elucidate what that remedy was. If Government were to take over the whole jute crop in the same way, as the wool clip of Australia and the wheat crop of the Argentine Republic have been purchased by the Imperial Government, it would be necessary to fix the prices to be paid by the mills to the middlemen who supply the raw material; but that would not benefit the raiyat unless it were also to be decided what each agent, through whose hands the jute passes, should receive as a minimum price. Anyone who has the most elementary knowledge of the jute trade, of the number of middlemen, through whose hands the jute presses, the paikar, the bepari, the aratdar, the baler's agent and the baler, also of the different grades and qualities of jute, will realise the difficulty if not the impossibility of enforcing any provision of minimum prices. It is impossible to enforce co-operation between cultivator and mill owner by a stroke of the pen. But apart from that, if the supply be in excess of the demand, it would practically be impossible to enforce such orders, because the buyer would easily evade the order as the cultivator would assist him in doing so. In any ordinary times, when there is a perfectly free market, the cultivator receives 75 to 80 per cent. of the Calcutta prices. Suppose, however, that the market has the proposed restriction in the selling price. It seems a simple enough thing to say that the bepari is not to pay less than Rs. 7 a maund to the cultivator. But suppose a bepari wishes to buy 100 maunds, and finds would-be sellers in a village holding 500 maunds. What will then happen? How is the minimum price to be enforced? Then again, the Hon'ble Member wishes to interfere in the interests of one class; but if the raw product were subject to such a control in price, in the interests of the producer, would not a request for a maximum for coal and lubricating oil be equally logical in the case of the manufacturer? Furthermore, as the mills are well supplied with raw material, they could afford to suspend for a time purchases altogether and thus defeat the object of the minimum prices.

The essential point for consideration in connection with this proposal is that the cultivator has the remedy in his own hands, a remedy which he has exercised in the year 1915, after the slump of 1914, that is to say, he reduced his acreage. I am not able to anticipate in this Council the total of the district figures which are at present being published, district by district, of the preliminary jute forecast for the present year; but they will show whether the depressed prices of last year have or have not caused the raiyats to restrict their cultivation. As I have explained above, it is not in the interests of the manufacturer that the acreage should be too much restricted. But what is still more important is that the raiyat is not himself insensible to the fact that the termination of the hostilities in this terrible war will create an effective demand for his produce in the advantages of which he would like to participate. If that reduction is found to be general, the raiyat is putting into action his compensation lever; but if the average raiyat does not materially reduce the total area of his crop in the present year, it will mean that he is still prepared to gamble on the chance of getting the advantage which he hopes will accrue in accumulating a sufficiently large stock to meet the time when the world demand for jute is re-opened for trade purposes.

I trust I have been able to explain to the Council why this disparity to which the Hon'ble Member has drawn attention, does exist.

The Hon'ble Member is on good ground in suggesting that there should be a remedy; but, if his remedy be that the State should have taken its share of these abnormal manufacturers' profits, this would not have made the cultivator more prosperous, though it might have afforded him less ground for jealousy. While the Government sympathise with him in thinking that the position is hard on the raiyat, neither he nor I can fight against economic laws. The jute cultivator, like other people, must take the rough with the smooth. In the past, in the year 1913, he was getting for some jute Rs. 15 a maund; this gave him an extravagant profit, of which, I regret to say, he took very little advantage. It is true he spent a good deal on food, clothes and on his house; but he did not make proper use of this prosperity in clearing off his debts or in saving it against the proverbial rainy day. No one suggested at that time that there should be a maximum price. Just as the high prices with high cash profits of 1913 were not an unmixed blessing to the raiyats either morally or economically, so it may well be that the low prices may not prove altogether an unmixed evil.

The real hardship is that this depression in jute prices is co-existent with the high prices of clothes which the raiyat wishes to buy and the cheap price of the rice which he wishes to sell. It a pradox that in a year in which there was one of the finest rice crops on record the cultivator should find it to be to his disadvantage. While the cheap price of rice benefits large masses of poor people, yet the dear price of clothes affects every body.

I do not advise the Council to accept the remedies proposed by the Hon'ble Member.

*The President's Address.The President's Address.

The President said :—

At the commencement of our proceedings yesterday I found it necessary to address the Council on a matter of disagreeable nature. It now falls to our lot in bringing our proceedings to a close to make an announcement of a pleasanter character.

It will be within the memory of Hon'ble Members that at a meeting of this Council held on December 13th 1916, a resolution was moved by the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, recommending that the system of trial by jury should be extended throughout the presidency. The Government of the day expressed their inability to accept the resolution as it stood, though they stated that they were prepared to consult the High Court and other authorities on the subject. At the conclusion of the debate the Council divided on the question and the resolution was carried by 24 votes to 22. At the same time, a supplementary resolution, recommending the extension of the system of trial by jury to all offences triable by the Courts of Session, was withdrawn.

Government thereupon took the matter up, and instituted careful enquiries as to the working of the system in the twelve districts in which it was in force. I need not trouble the Council with any very detailed history of the somewhat chequered career which the system has had since its first tentative introduction under Resolution VI of 1832. It will suffice, if I briefly recall the more important landmarks.

By virtue of the Resolution of 1832 any person not professing the Muhamadan faith when put on trial for an offence cognizable under the general Regulations, might claim to be exempted from trial under the Muhammadan Criminal Code and in such case the Judge was ordered to proceed with the trial with the help of a Panchayat, assessors or jury. This form of trial, however was seldom put into practice and it was not until the year 1861 that a regular system of trial by jury was established. Under the provisions of Act XXV of that year sanction was accorded to the system and it was put into operation in seven districts in respect of certain categories of offences in the year 1862. Thereafter the orders governing the operation of the system underwent various changes, one of which namely, the Notification of October the 20th, 1892, containing certain restrictions on its working, led up to the appointment of a Commission consisting of Sir H. Prinsep, Sir Griffith Evans, Sir Jatindra Mohan Tagore, Sir Romesh Chandra Mitra and Mr. C. A. Wilkins. From that time onwards the tendency has been to add to the categories of cases triable by jury and to increase the number of districts in which it is in force. In 1895, for example, offences relating to marriage were made triable by jury where the system was in operation, and in 1897 the system was extended to the districts of Chittagong, Mymensingh, Rajshahi and Jessore. The last extension given was to the district of Khulna in 1905.

After careful consideration and with the concurrence of the High Court and the sanction of the Government of India we have now decided to extend the system to the districts of Buckerganj, Bankura, Birbhum, Bogra, Dinajpur, Faridpur, Malda, Midnapur, Noakhali, Pabna, Rangpur and Tippera. The effect of this will be that the system will come into operation throughout the whole of the Presidency with the exception only of the non-regulation districts, namely Darjeeling, Jalpaiguri and the Chittagong Hill Tracts. At the same time it is proposed that offences under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code and under section 32 of the Indian Post Office, 1898, should be added to the list of offences so triable.

The President's Address.

If the Hon'ble Members of this Council were men who considered it necessary to cut off their kindlier nature and with their entry into the Council Chamber to adopt a spirit of factiousness and petulance, they might be disposed to receive this announcement with the observation that the mills of Government grind somewhat slowly. I am happy to believe that if I were to suggest that the members of this Council acted in this way I should be doing them a grave injustice. And I assumed with complete confidence, therefore, that Hon'ble Members will regard this announcement as a signal proof that Government do give to the recommendations made to them by this Council their most careful and sympathetic consideration."

The Council was then adjourned sine die.

(i) the causes for such deterioration, and

(ii) what action they are taking in this connection?

Seven additional peons have been entertained for issuing the warnings. Warnings will be telegraphed by the gauge reader at Ranigunge direct to Jamalpur, where a telegraph office has recently been opened, and from this centre the information will be distributed from Lakra downwards along the right bank.

Above Lakra the warnings will be issued by Canal dâk and special peons from Edilpur.

The gauge reader at Ranigunge will also telegraph warnings to the officer in charge of the Raina thana at the terminus of the Bankura-Damodar Railway and also to the Civil Subdivisional Officer, Arambagh. (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table copies of letters issued by the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, to the Chairman of riparian municipalities on the subject of the dangerously contaminated condition of samples of unfiltered water taken from the Ganges (Bhagirathi) and which were examined chemically and bacteriologically in his laboratory during the week ending the 25th May, 1918? Contamination of the Ganges water.

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking immediate steps for the prevention of a large amount of pollution of the river water probably derived from human excreta?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what action they are taking for the supply of filtered water to those riparian municipalities where the main source of water-supply is the Ganges water which is now in a dangerously contaminated condition?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether the faecal bacilli now present in the Ganges water are completely removed by filtration without boiling the water, and

(ii) what is the process of filtration of the Ganges water by the Corporation of Calcutta?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

(a) A copy of the Sanitary Commissioner's letter No. 679-701, dated the 5th June, 1918, to the Chairmen of Municipalities along the Hooghly is laid on the table. As there appears to be some misapprehension on the subject, it may be explained that faecal bacilli (sometimes also called excretal organisms), some of which are derived from animals and some from human beings, are present in practically all surface waters, e.g., rivers and tanks, in inhabited areas in India. Government are advised that the organisms themselves are probably innocuous and that 90 per cent. die within 48 hours in a stream exposed to the sun, but that if there is a very large number of them or the pollution is very recent, it is probable that pathogenic organisms, such as those which cause cholera or typhoid fever, will be present among them. In other words, it is not the faecal bacilli themselves that are the cause of disease, but other organisms which may be present with them though in infinitely smaller numbers. The faecal bacilli serve to indicate possible danger and are therefore an index of pollution.

(b) The riparian municipalities have been urged in the Sanitary Commissioner's letter No. D-862-84, dated 15th June, 1918, of which a copy is laid on the table, to prevent nuisances being committed on the river bank. Government will consider what other measures can be taken to prevent pollution.

(c) A scheme for the supply of filtered water to the municipalities shown in the margin has been prepared and the municipalities and mills concerned have been asked whether they are willing to join in it. The Sanitary Board are considering their replies. The scheme involves an initial cost of 36 lakhs and a recurring cost of Rs. 68,000, which will ultimately rise to Rs. 78,000 a year; and it will not be possible for Government to give it financial assistance till normal financial conditions are restored.

Questions and Answers.

(d) (i) Government are advised that efficient filtration will remove 99 per cent. of faecal bacilli, and that boiling destroys them.

(ii) The Calcutta water is purified by settlement in large settling tanks exposed to the sun and air; and settling is aided by the use of alum or allumino-ferrie which assists in the precipitation of suspended matter, including bacteria. After settlement the water is passed through slow sand filter beds, which remove a very large proportion of the remaining bacteria. The water is constantly being analysed both chemically and bacteriologically and a high standard of purity is always insisted on.

Letters referred to by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY in his answer to question No. 6 (starred) asked by the Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR at the Council meeting of the 19th August, 1918.

No. 679-701, dated the 5th June 1918.

From—DR. C. A. BENTLEY, M.B., D.P.H., D.T.M. & H., Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal,

To—The Chairmen of all Riparian Municipalities.

I HAVE the honour to report for your information that samples of unfiltered water taken from the Ganges (Bhagirathi) were examined chemically and bacteriologically in my laboratory during the week ending the 25th May, 1918, and as a result it was found that the water contained countless bacteria in 1c.c. and showed non-resistant type faecal bacilli in 101c.c. indicating that it contained such a large amount of pollution, probably derived from human excreta, as to render it dangerous to use it for drinking purposes unless it has first been filtered or boiled. Neglect of these precautions will expose persons to the risk of contracting cholera, typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhoea and other water-borne diseases. It is also unsafe to use the unboiled or unfiltered water for cleansing dishes and plates or other vessels used for food.

In the case of municipalities possessing a proper filtered water-supply distributed by means of pipes, people should be urged to use this water for drinking purposes and cleansing dishes, etc., in preference to water from any other source.

In every case the attention of the whole population should be called, if necessary, by beat of drum, to the dangerously contaminated condition of the river water as shown by this report.

£ —————

No. D-862-84, dated Darjeeling, the 15th June, 1918.

From—DR. C. A. BENTLEY, M.B., D.P.H., D.T.M. & H., Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal.

To—The Chairmen of all Riparian Municipalities.

My attention has been drawn to the fact that the river banks in the neighbourhood of your municipality are frequented by persons for the purpose of committing nuisances. In certain cases also brickfields are situated on the river banks and the coolies employed thereon invariably foul the banks of the river with nightsoil. In this way the water of the river is constantly being polluted and in consequence of this there is great risk of the spread of cholera and other water-borne diseases. I have the honour accordingly to request that you will be so good as to take immediate steps to have the banks of the river within your municipal boundary carefully inspected, and, if necessary, guarded and to take immediate proceedings against anyone found committing a nuisance there and thus endangering the health of the community.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

(The answers to which were laid on the table.)

By the Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR :—

I.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is true that some poor paddy cultivators of the district of Jessore, who had manufactured a few seers of common salt from ashes of paddy stalks for personal consumption, were prosecuted for illicit manufacture of salt and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 2 each by the trying Deputy Magistrate, Babu Mohit Chandra Ghosh?

Prosecutions for the manufacture of salt.

(b) Is it true that the views of the Government of Bengal for ignoring such cases of manufacture, as expressed in this Council at the meeting held on the 22nd January last through the Hon'ble Mr. Donald, were brought to the notice of the said Magistrate at the trial?

(c) Are the Government aware of the feelings of the cultivators that it is far better that paddy stalks should be utilized in this way than that these stalks should be allowed to be wasted through fear of criminal prosecution?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of instructing the Salt Department and the Police not to start such prosecutions, and to issue public notifications enabling such people to make free use of their paddy stalks for the purposes which were found by the Magistrate to be illegal as also for the use of cattle?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

"(a) Six persons were sent up by the police for having manufactured illicitly 3, 5, 7, 7, 20, and 25 seers of salt respectively. In each of the first four cases fines of Rs. 2, and in the last two fines of Rs. 5, were imposed by Babu Mohit Chandra Ghosh, the trying Magistrate.

(b) The trying Magistrate held that the quantities of salt manufactured were greater than were required for the personal consumption of those concerned, but prima facie prosecutions might have been withheld at least in the first four cases mentioned.

(c) Government have no information on this point.

(d) The instructions already issued should suffice. A certain amount of discretion must be left to local officers, but so far as the statistics show, the orders are being interpreted liberally."

By the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI :—

II.

(a) With reference to the location of the subdivisional headquarters of the proposed western district of Mymensingh at Dhanbari, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table copies of opinions given on this question by the public associations and the officials consulted?

Location of the
headquarters of the proposed western district of Mymensingh
at Dhanbari.

(b) Is it a fact that in selecting a site for the Sadar subdivision of western Mymensingh, His Excellency the Governor, while he visited Dhanbari, did not visit Madhupur, and that the claims of Madhupur as represented by the people of the locality have not been considered?

(c) Is it a fact that there is a good District Board road connecting Madhupur with Mymensingh and Sarisabari, Subarnakhali, Baushi and Tangail, whereas, in point of communication, Dhanbari is comparatively at a disadvantage?

(d) Is it a fact that Madhupur possesses the additional advantage of a navigable river which connects it with Narayanganj and Dacca, whereas Dhanbari has no river communication?

Questions and Answers.

(e) Is it a fact that Madhupur is situated on a high raised-land with large areas around, whereas Dhanbari is largely a marshy, low land, the greater portion of it being under a vast sheet of water during the rains?

(f) Have the Government ascertained what will be the comparative cost of location of the proposed subdivisions at Dhanbari and Madhupur?

(g) Are the Government aware of the opinion that has been expressed that Madhupur is healthier than Dhanbari and that Madhupur is more centrally situated than Dhanbari?

(h) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement giving the names of village unions within the Kalihati police-station and their respective distances from Tangail and Dhanbari?

(i) Is it a fact that the jurisdiction of the Kalihati police-station which, as proposed, comes under Dhanbari, extends up to within three miles of the Tangail subdivision?

(j) Is it a fact that certain places in the southern portion of the Kalihati police-station which stand at a distance of about 30 miles from Dhanbari and only three miles from Tangail, are, by the proposed inclusion of the Kalihati police-station within Dhanbari, cut off from Tangail?

(k) Have the Government considered the inconveniences which will thus be caused to the people of the locality within the Kalihati police-station?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the memorandum which was published on the 16th August, 1917. Government do not propose to lay further papers on the table.

(b) As shown in the memorandum, the question of selecting Madhupur as a district or subdivisional headquarters was fully considered, but the objection to Madhupur is that it is situated in the extreme east of the new subdivision and is not sufficiently central. For this reason, His Excellency the Governor did not think it necessary to visit Madhupur.

(c) Madhupur is connected by road with the places mentioned, but the road from Madhupur to Baushi passes through Dhanbari, and this is also the easiest route from Madhupur to Sarisabari. From Dhanbari there are roads running north to Baushi, west to Bingula and Pingna, south-west to Gopalpur and south-east to Madhupur and Tangail. When the projected Tangail-Jamalpur line is constructed through Dhanbari, communications with that place from all parts of the proposed subdivision will be much easier than with Madhupur.

(d) The river which passes Madhupur is navigable throughout the year for boats of a capacity of 500 maunds. Boats can go by this river to Narayan-ganj and Dacca. The river Jhinai passes within two miles of Dhanbari. It flows into the river Jamuna and is navigable in the rains.

(e) There is a site at Madhupur about 30 or 40 feet above sea level. There is ample high land above flood level at Dhanbari for a subdivisional headquarters, and it will need only local raising in places.

(f) The cost of establishing a subdivisional headquarters at Dhanbari is estimated at 6 lakhs, of which Rs. 7,000 is required for levelling and draining. No estimate has been framed for Madhupur, but it is probable that the cost would be approximately the same.

(g) Madhupur is reported to be unhealthy, owing to the proximity of the Madhupur jungle and a defective water-supply. Dhanbari is said to be malarious at present, but this defect is capable of remedy. Government are not aware of any opinion having been expressed that Madhupur is more centrally situated than Dhanbari, and in any case such an opinion would be incorrect.

(h) A statement is laid on the table.

(i) The nearest point in Kalihati to Tangail is about four miles from the town of Tangail.

Questions and Answers.

(j) and (k) It is a fact that Kalihati thana as a whole is nearer to Tangail than to Dhanbari, and to this extent the people of Kalihati will be inconvenienced by their inclusion in the Dhanbari subdivision. In nearly every subdivision, however, there are places which are nearer to the headquarters of an adjoining subdivision than to the headquarters of the subdivision within which they are situated. The same objection in regard to Kalihati would apply if Madhupur were made the headquarters of the new subdivision instead of Dhanbari.

With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XXII of the 3rd July, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state whether the decision of the Railway Board as to the alignment of railway between Tangail and Jamalpur has been conveyed to the Government? With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XXI of the 3rd July, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state the result of any expert inquiries that may have been made in regard to the existence of iron ore in some parts of the Pacca district and its economic value?

(a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XVI of the 4th April, 1918, will the Government be pleased to state the dates on which—

- (i) Mr. Meyer applied for permission to take up the management of the whole of the Shaistabad estate;
- (ii) he took charge of the said estate;

Questions and Answers.

(iii) the Board of Revenue wrote to the Commissioner refusing to allow the application;

(iv) the Board re-affirmed the orders; and

(v) Mr. Meyer relinquished charge of the Shaistabad estate?

(b) When was the "misunderstanding" referred to in the said answer discovered, and what was the nature of it?

(c) If it is a fact that Mr. Meyer took charge of the whole of the Shaistabad wakf estate without previously obtaining the permission of the Board of Revenue, are the Government considering the desirability of making a deduction from the salary of Mr. Meyer proportionate to the total amount drawn by him as salary for the management of the said Shaistabad estate?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a) The dates are—

(i) The 19th September 1915;

(ii) The 14th September 1915;

(iii) The 16th February 1916;

(iv) The 8th March 1918; and

(v) The 28th March 1918.

(b) The misunderstanding was discovered in March 1918 and arose from the Commissioner and the Manager both being under the impression that the other would communicate the Board's orders.

(c) Mr. Meyer took charge with the sanction of the Collector and on the initiation of the District Judge and in anticipation of sanction from the Board of Revenue. As Mr. Meyer's management of the Bakarganj portion of the Nawab's Estate was uniformly successful, the Government does not propose to take any further action in the matter."

(a) Having regard to the indebtedness of the Nawab of Dacca's estate, are the Government considering the desirability of appointing an experienced Indian officer in place of the late Mr. J. Hodding? The Nawab of Dacca's estate.

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of appointing an experienced Indian officer as Barisal Agent of the Nawab of Dacca?

(c) Who is at present officiating for Mr. Meyer at Barisal and what are his qualifications for holding that position?

(d) In what estates, and in what capacities and on what emoluments was he employed previous to his appointment in the Nawab's estate?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing separately the expenditure incurred for the late Mr. J. Hodding and for Mr. Meyer on account of salary, house-rent, motor car charges, carriage charges, steam launch charges and for personal servants for the last five years ending on the 31st March, 1918?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" (a), (b), (c) and (d) The appointments referred to are made by the Court of Wards and do not require the sanction of Government. Government have ascertained that the management of the Nawab's estate is in process of reorganization and that a fully qualified Indian officer with special experience has been appointed as Superintendent of the Bakarganj property. Further, a new post of Assistant Manager for the whole estate has been created, and an Indian officer with experience as Court of Wards Manager has been appointed to it.

Questions and Answers.

(e) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement furnished in answer to question No. 16 (unstarred) at the Council meeting of the 22nd January, 1918. As owing to the death of Mr. Hodding Mr. Meyer has been transferred from Bakarganj to Dacca as Manager of the whole estate, no useful purpose will be served by requiring the Court of Wards to compile the additional information now asked for."

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that litigation costs of the Nawab's estate have largely increased year by year in all the districts, viz., Dacca, Mymensingh, Tippera and Barisal since 1907? If so, what are the reasons therefor?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to fill up these vacancies by promoting officers of the Provincial Civil Service?

(b) The cadre of Joint and Assistant Magistrates is intended as a training and leave reserve for the superior posts open to members of the Indian Civil Service. Members of the Provincial Civil Service, which has its own training and leave reserve, cannot be appointed Joint or Assistant Magistrates, but owing to the number of members of the Indian Civil Service absent on duties connected with the war, members of the Provincial Civil Service are holding a larger number of superior posts, ordinarily held by Indian Civilians, than would otherwise have been open to them. Ten superior posts in the Indian Civil Service are listed as open to members of the Provincial Civil Service. At present sixteen such posts are actually held by members of the Provincial Civil Service, and, in addition, a number of Deputy Collectors are holding charge of important subdivisions which would, in normal circumstances, be held by Civilians."

Will the Government be pleased to state the means that are adopted to advertise vacancies in the Secretariat and the offices under Heads of Departments so as to give due notice to intending Muhammadan candidates?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to rule 21 (1) of the rules for the regulation of appointments in the clerical service of the Secretariat of the Government of Bengal, a copy of which is laid on the table. In addition, if candidates are not available otherwise, notices are displayed at the entrances to the Secretariat, the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education is informed, and District Officers are consulted.

The practice in the offices of Heads of Departments is not uniform, but, generally speaking, vacancies are advertised and in some instances special efforts made to get into touch with Muhammadan interests."

Rule 21 referred to in the above answer.

21. (1) The head of an office will also reserve the power of appointing suitable Muhammadans to either the Upper Division or the Lower Division. In the case of the Upper Division of the Secretariat every third appointment in each office made under rule 3 shall ordinarily be given to a Muhammadan, provided he possesses the educational qualifications required by rule 3 (a). In the Lower Division of the Departments of the Secretariat every third appointment in each office shall ordinarily be given to a Muhammadan who possesses the educational qualifications required by rule 15 and furnishes the evidence required by rule 16. Before candidates are selected for appointments in either Division, all vacancies shall be advertised in Muhammadan papers and Muhammadan Anjuman shall be informed. In the Lower Division such selection shall be made only when there is no suitable Muhammadan candidate in the competitive examination to whom the post can be offered.

(2) Until the proportion of Muhammadans in the various offices reaches one-third the claims of qualified Muhammadan candidates shall be considered in filling up all vacancies.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table any circular or order in this behalf, and state the amount of emoluments enjoyed, and the nature of the work done, by such Inspectors during this period of recess?

(c) When did this practice originate and for what reasons?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) and (b) A copy* of Government Order No. 1786 T.G., dated 24th September, 1912, is laid on the table. It will be seen that all Inspectors of Schools, except the Inspector of Schools, Rajshahi Division, are permitted to spend one month in the year (from 20th May to 20th June) in Darjeeling subject to certain conditions. The case of the Inspector of Schools, Rajshahi Division, is governed by Government Order No. 3676, dated 7th August, 1908, as modified by Government Order No. 2185 T.G., dated 31st October, 1910, of which copies are also laid on the table.

The Inspectors of Schools draw only their salary if they spend one month in Darjeeling, and they are responsible for the work in their Divisions during this period.

(c) This arrangement was sanctioned in 1912 on the following grounds :—

(1) that during the month in question the schools are closed for the summer vacation, so that there is no inspection to be done and work is light;

(2) that a visit to Darjeeling at this time of the year would benefit the health of the officers concerned and lead to increased efficiency; and

(3) that it would give them an opportunity to study educational and administration questions, and to discuss them with one another and with the Director of Public Instruction."

(ii) Miss Brock, the permanent Inspectress, used to take the Assistant Inspectress for Zenana work and Muhammadan Education with her to Hindu schools when she intended to visit a maktab or zenana agency immediately after finishing her work in a Hindu school, or in some cases when she had to consider the desirability of opening a zenana agency or a Muhammadan school in the place where a Hindu school is situated. (c) Is it a fact that Babu Jogesh Chandra Mitter was elected Chairman of the Kalna Municipality and that the District Magistrate of Burdwan, in deference to public opinion, refused to permit him to act as Chairman?

(c) Babu Jogesh Chandra Mitter, who is Sub-Registrar of Kalna, was elected Chairman of the Kalna Municipality. Will the Government be pleased to explain the preventive and remedial measures that are usually adopted by the Government at the outbreak of such diseases as cholera, small-pox and plague in the rural areas?

Remedial measures regarding epidemics.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“The responsibility for the prevention of epidemic diseases in rural areas rests with the District Boards. When an outbreak of small-pox occurs, the Civil Surgeon deputes licensed vaccinators to vaccinate the people of the affected area, and, when necessary, the Sanitary Commissioner deputes an officer to advise and report. When there is an outbreak of plague (which is fortunately rare) the District Magistrate, in consultation with the Civil Surgeon, deputes medical officers to treat patients, to arrange for the disinfection of houses and to inoculate any persons who are willing to be inoculated : the Sanitary Commissioner also deputes an officer to advise the local officers and report to himself on the action taken. In other cases District Boards take action to prevent the spread of epidemic disease by deputing medical officers, disinfecting sources of water-supply, etc., and the Sanitary Commissioner, when necessary, deputes officers to advise and report.”

(c) What action has been taken for the suppression of these crimes since attention was drawn to their prevalence in this Council in July 1917?

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) As shown in the statement which was laid on the table on the 3rd July, 1917, Midnapore between 1912 and 1916 had a higher annual average of these cases than any other district. Figures for 1917 are not yet available for all districts.

(b) Six cases of cattle poisoning were reported in Midnapore in 1917, as compared with an annual average of 18 in the previous five years. No cases of flaying cattle alive have occurred since the 1st January, 1917.

In Patashpur, no case of cattle poisoning has been reported since 1912. One case of flaying cattle alive was reported in 1916, but it was not detected.

(2) Third year.—Applicants who pass the Intermediate examination from the Presidency College are regarded as having a prior claim. Their claims having received consideration, the same principles are followed as in the case of the first year.

Dacca College.

First year.—In the first place consideration is given to Muhammadans who have matriculated in the First Division and steps are taken to ensure that 25 per cent. of vacancies are given to Muhammadans, then suitable matriculates are taken from the Dacca Collegiate School, Armanitola High School and other local schools ; next, candidates from schools in the Dacca Division, who are willing to reside in the College hostels, are admitted ; family connection with the College and relationship to local Government officers constitute, in all cases, special claims to consideration.

Third year.—All students who have passed the Intermediate examination from Dacca College are admitted ; with regard to the admission of students who have passed from other Colleges, the same principles are observed as in granting admissions to the first year class.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 3 to 6.*THE CHITTAGONG PORT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Chittagong Port Act, 1914.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I rise to beg leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Chittagong Port Act of 1914. The Bill is known as the Chittagong Port (Amendment) Bill, 1918.

The amendment proposed is very short and very simple. It is solely in the interests of the port and is non-contentious ; and it has already received the approval of the Government of India and the Secretary of State. The relief suggested is also very urgent. Hon'ble Members will see that in the agenda it is proposed to take the Bill into consideration at the present stage, and intimation of this has already been given by the publication of the Bill in the Gazette of the 7th August and by the circulation of copies of the Bill to each Hon'ble Member of this Council. It will, therefore, be convenient if, when introducing the Bill, I explain very shortly the change proposed and the urgent necessity for the same.

Section 58 of the Chittagong Port Act, 1914. gives to the Port Commissioners power to impose river dues on all goods landed or shipped. Sub-section (2) of that section imposes a maximum of 4 annas a ton. In connection with certain subsidies given to the port by Government, the Government of India had suggested that this maximum should be removed ; and apart from that, the Port Commissioners themselves have desired that this maximum should be removed and, in view of the unsatisfactory conditions of the finances of the port, that the river dues which are at present levied at a maximum of 4 annas a ton should be increased. The commercial community of Chittagong, as I have ascertained recently from my visit there, also realise the propriety of increasing without delay the revenues of the port by means of the river dues ; and, finally, Sir George Buchanan, in his recent report on the development of the port of Chittagong, which was received by this Government after measures for the abolition of the maximum river dues had been initiated, has recommended that the Chittagong Port Act be immediately amended and the limitation to a specific sum, be deleted from the Act.

“ These, Sir, are considered sufficient reasons for amending the Act, and they also explain the urgency of the measure which is now before the Council. Hon'ble Members will, I am sure, at the same time, appreciate that the abolition of this limitation is quite distinct from the determination of what rate per ton will hereafter be considered appropriate for the conditions of Chittagong. Such a determination is naturally and primarily a matter for the consideration of the Port Commissioners themselves.

It is proposed to attain the required object in the proposed Bill by the omission of sub-section (2) of this section 58, which contains the limitation of 4 annas per ton ; and there is a consequential amendment in sub-section (3) insomuch as there is therein a reference to the existing sub-section (2.)

On the ground, therefore, of simplicity, of urgency and of the absence of controversy, I think there is good justification for asking Your Excellency, as I shall shortly do if the present motion be accepted, to suspend the rules of business and permit the Bill to be taken into consideration at once. It may be suggested that much more than the abolition of the existing limitation as regards river dues requires to be effected in connection with the development of the port of Chittagong : that is quite true ; but the fact that other forms of relief are required, should not preclude the grant of this relief in the shape of the removal of the statutory limitation which could be granted without delay."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING also moved His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules of Business to admit of the Bill being taken into consideration.

The PRESIDENT having declared the rules suspended, the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming moved that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The Hon'ble MR. MARTIN said :—

"My Lord, the Bill before the Council to-day has been framed for the purpose of removing a defect or at least an anomaly in the Chittagong Port Act of 1914. When that Act was framed no one could be expected to anticipate the calamity of a world-war and the strain which would be put upon the finances of the port by the loss of revenue resulting from shortage of tonnage. The strain has been so great that we are faced to-day with a situation which makes it imperative that the limit of 4 annas per ton River Due imposed by the existing Act be removed forthwith, and that the rate be increased as soon as possible.

Speaking for the Commercial Community of Chittagong I may say that this is looked upon as inevitable and the necessity is recognised, so that there need be no hesitation in passing the enactment now before us.

And now, with your permission, my Lord, I should like to say a few words on the position generally.

I have had the honour to sit in this Council as representing the Port of Chittagong since the year 1916, and though I have not sought to press the needs of our port on the attention of Government or the Council from my place here it is not because our needs have been met or that they have disappeared, but that Government have been fully advised of the situation in other ways.

I can assure this Council that if tireless and frequent representation could have accomplished it we should have a very flourishing port at Chittagong to-day, and we should not be in the position in which we now find ourselves of having to implore the Government of Bengal or the Imperial Government, or both, to save us from total extinction at a cost vastly greater than would have been necessary had we been listened to, as we had every right to expect to be, years and years ago. We have had the misfortune to be caught in the whirlpool of partition and repartition, of having to plead our cause with a new Government, and just as we had managed to convince them, of having to begin all over again with another—an uphill task, if ever there was one.

Lest it be thought even now that the port of Chittagong, if developed, will serve only the interests of a few merchants who happen to be established there, and that we are presumptuous in a claim for development and expansion by means of funds from the public Exchequer, it is only necessary to say that the port is the natural doorway serving a tract of country some 80,000 square miles in area, much of it as densely populated as any in India. It is fitting that this should be brought to mind here in Dacca, for Chittagong is without a doubt the proper and legitimate port for this vast and wealthy province of Eastern Bengal. If further argument is necessary, I need only refer to the potentialities of development represented in the Assam-Bengal Railway.

Without a port at its terminus this Railway is so severely handicapped that instead of being a paying concern as it should be, it remains a burden on the State.

My Lord, we have now reached a crisis in our affairs. Conditions in the Kornaphuli river are so bad that the port is menaced with becoming closed to ocean traffic and this I need hardly remind you means bankruptcy and ruin. It means the abandonment of all the valuable works with which the port has been provided at a cost of enormous sums of public money. I am not an expert in these matters, but I do not think I am wrong in saying that if the silting up of the river is allowed to continue it will be impossible to get it in hand later on.

I have already indicated that this terrible state of affairs might have been prevented had action been taken years ago, but do not let us think of that now. Let the situation be faced and the remedy found, whatever the cost may be. The investment will be large, but even now it will be sound. I do not speak without authority in this. Sir Francis Spring in 1914 and Sir George Buchanan this year were eloquent and unanimous in their opinions as to the paramount necessity of rendering the port navigable, and the beneficial development which will result therefrom.

They have pointed out the way in which this may be carried out and I think it will be agreed that the opinions of these two gentlemen represent the greatest weight of authority which can be brought to bear on the subject of port development in India to-day.

The economic welfare of a country must be of necessity the first consideration of its governing authority, for without expansion of trade and commerce there cannot be expansion in any other direction.

Add to its opportunities for accumulating wealth and a community cannot fail to go ahead.

Surely it is for the Government to see that nothing is neglected which will increase those opportunities. Still more would it seem to be the duty of Government to see that the facilities which exist of bringing wealth and prosperity to the country are not allowed to go to ruin owing to neglect or apathy or procrastination.

Sir George Buchanan visited Chittagong with a mandate from the Imperial Government (Railway Department) to report on the condition of the port, and prospects of development. His report is a most valuable one and sets forth in the clearest possible language what should be done. The Hon'ble Member in charge has visited us quite recently and I take this opportunity of expressing to him on behalf of those I represent, our appreciation of his sympathetic recognition of our most urgent needs. The Port Commissioners and the Chamber of Commerce have been asked to address Your Excellency's Government in the matter and this has been done.

We are forced to ask for large sums of money in the shape of grants, as we are quite unable in our present financial position to undertake to repay or to meet the interest on loans. We ask for permission to undertake the most urgent works immediately, and we specially ask that provision of suitable dredging plant be made without delay. The difficulties are great, but if the need is really recognised, I feel confident that they can be overcome. Once more, my Lord, I would respectfully beg to impress upon Your Excellency the urgency of the matter. Further delay may mean disaster, and I appeal to Your Excellency and to Your Excellency's Government, on behalf of the many important interests which are involved, for all the assistance which it is in your power to give."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.RESOLUTIONS

(under the Rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The following resolution which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray went by default owing to the Hon'ble Member being absent :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee, consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Sanitary Commissioner to the Government of Bengal, Sir Nilratan Sarkar, Kt., a representative of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the Bengal Legislative Council, and the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, be appointed—

- (1) to inquire into the complaints and allegations made by the persons interned in Char Lawrence and Kutubdia, and
- (2) to inquire whether proper arrangements were made by Government for keeping the détenus in the same condition of life as they were accustomed to live.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 8 and 9.

The following two resolutions which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar went by default owing to the Hon'ble Member being absent :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the grant-in-aid rules, as approved in the Government of Bengal, General Department letter No. 408 Edn., dated the 25th February, 1918, be either withdrawn or so modified as to leave a substantial measure of independence to the School Committees.

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the powers given to the inspecting officers for supervising the promotions of pupils from one class to another and for selecting candidates for the Matriculation Examination be wholly withdrawn, such powers being vested in the Head Master subject only to the supervision and approval of the School Committee concerned.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that having regard to the rate at which houses can be rented in Darjeeling nowadays, the present rate of house rent allowed to Government servants drawing below Rs. 100 per month be raised to Rs. 20 per month.

He said :—

“My Lord, I do not think that I need say many words in commending this resolution to Your Excellency and to the Council for acceptance. The facts are very simple. The house allowance granted to the assistants of the Bengal Secretariat who have to move to Darjeeling for the season was fixed many years back and house rent in Darjeeling has increased very much since then, and I am told that houses cannot be got, or proper accommodation secured for less than Rs. 20 a month in Darjeeling. It is very hard on the poor clerks drawing salaries of less than Rs. 100 to have to pay for their accommodation out of their salary, and not out of the house rent paid to them by Government. For a few months also they have to pay house rent in Dacca. I hope, my Lord, that this resolution will be accepted ; it will entail only a small increase in expenditure and it will relieve a very deserving number of Government servants who help to a very great extent in assisting those who carry on the administration of the country. With these few words, I beg to commend the resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. DONALD said :—

"My Lord, I do not think that the Hon'ble Member knows the position or has correctly stated the facts. The allowance which he speaks of is an allowance given to assistants for whom it is found impossible to provide accommodation in Government buildings. Rupees 25 a month is given to assistants drawing over Rs. 400, Rs. 20 to those drawing Rs. 100 and more, and Rs. 10 to those drawing less than Rs. 100. It is true we have accommodation in Darjeeling for, roughly speaking, about two-thirds of the assistants who go up, and so far there have been no complaints about the high rates of rent at Darjeeling. The solution surely is that junior assistants should be provided with free quarters and that senior assistants with their bigger allowances should be turned out. The Hon'ble Member says that they cannot get a house at less than Rs. 20 a month. I have got the actual figures. There were 48 assistants drawing less than Rs. 100 during this last hot weather ; 28 of them had free quarters and 20 drew house allowance. Of those who drew house allowances, three were actually paying less than Rs. 10 for their accommodation, 14 paid Rs. 15 and five paid more than Rs. 15. If we are going to give more than Rs. 10 as house allowance, the money will not go to the landlords, but to the clerks who will put it into their own pockets. Besides this house rent, the assistants are given other allowances ; a clerk whose pay is less than Rs. 60 gets an allowance of Rs. 40, and a clerk whose salary is between Rs. 60 and Rs. 100 gets Rs. 50, so if they have to pay a few more rupees in house rent, it does not trench on their pay.

We have information also as regards the rents paid by the senior assistants and we find that they can get accommodation at the rates allowed to them by Government ; but in any case, their allowance, which is still more liberal, makes it easy for them to pay a little more than the amount which is allotted to them by Government as house rent ; and it is easier for them to do so than for the junior assistants.

Our proposal is to provide junior assistants with free quarters, and to allow senior assistants to look after themselves if they cannot find accommodation in Government quarters. It is on these lines that Government propose to work. They will look into the case further and make provision for the junior assistants in preference to the senior assistants. I think that this fairly meets the position of hardship to which the Hon'ble Member refers, and I think, in view of this, he will withdraw his resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, after the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald in reply to this resolution, I beg leave to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

*Resolutions.Maulvi Abul Kasem; Mr. Donald.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that, having regard to the inconvenience caused to the junior assistants in Government service in journeying with menials and other lower class people, the Government of India be approached with a view to removing the restrictions imposed by Note 1 to Article 1011 of the Civil Service Regulations on these assistants and permitting them to travel by second class on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the note to Article 1011 of the Civil Service Regulations lays down that on all railways where there is no intermediate class accommodation, Government servants who are entitled to intermediate accommodation are allowed to travel second class, but the note to that article makes an exception in the case of the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway. I do not know on what ground the Government of India excluded this railway from this concession and it is not necessary for me to draw attention in this Council to the fact that the assistants in the Secretariat have to travel third class on this line where there is no intermediate accommodation and that they have to travel with menials and low class persons, coolies and others travelling in the Darjeeling district, and altogether there is great inconvenience in doing so. There is to my mind no reason why the same concession should not be shown to the assistants of the Bengal Secretariat as is done to those Government servants in other parts of the country where they travel on lines where there is no accommodation for an intermediate class. It is a very small matter, and I think that the attention of the Government of India has only to be drawn to it, to remove this restriction, and I hope that my resolution will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble MR. DONALD said :—

“ My Lord, the exception made in the note to Article 1011 of the Civil Service Regulations, to which the Hon'ble Member refers, was made very many years ago. It was considered that that rule should apply to the ordinary railway systems of the country, and it was not the original intention to apply it to a special line like the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway which is more of a tramway than a railway, and where the fares are very much higher than those of ordinary lines. Then again, the second class accommodation on ordinary lines usually secures sleeping accommodation during night journeys ; but this is not the case on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway, where the journey from Siliguri to Darjeeling is performed in daylight and covers only five hours. Another point is that the second class accommodation on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway is very limited and it should be reserved for those who can afford to pay for it. These were the reasons which led to an exception being made in Article 1011 in respect of this railway. This was done many years ago, and the position is not different nowadays. But, after all, there is not much hardship to the junior assistants in travelling with menials and other low class people. There are about 50 assistants going up on or about the same day and they can easily arrange to occupy a carriage or at least a compartment among themselves. Then, again, the second class accommodation on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway is very limited, and if Government servants all go up together on one or two days in the second class, they will fill up all the second class accommodation available, and thus cause a good deal of inconvenience, particularly to ladies travelling with children, who usually travel up to Darjeeling at or about the same time as Government.

Resolutions.

In these circumstances, Government are not prepared to make any alteration in the note."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"I beg permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a school for teaching weaving and spinning on approved lines be opened at Dacca and other suitable centres in Bengal.

He said :—

"My Lord, it is now my turn to set the ball rolling so far as my resolutions are concerned. But before I take up the resolutions concerned, I wish to make a statement which, I am sure, will give something like a relief to my colleagues and certainly to those who have been charged with the duty of noting all our speeches—I mean the silent victims of our eloquence, the reporters, who are sitting over there. Certainly the attendance of the non-official members of the Council is most discouraging....."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Order, order. I do not quite see what bearing this observation has on the particular motion which the Hon'ble Member is now moving. I must ask the Hon'ble Member, when moving his resolution, to confine himself to the subject-matter of the motion itself."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL HAQ said :—

"My Lord, I was only giving vent to a feeling which was uppermost in my mind. I was going to submit that having regard to all the circumstances and to the attendance in this Council, I will not waste the time of the Council unnecessarily and try to be as brief as possible. And in return, my Lord, I expect a little sympathetic treatment so far as the resolutions are concerned, at the hands of the official members of the Council."

"My Lord, in moving this resolution I need hardly point out that the question raised by me in the resolution has acquired an unusual degree of interest in consequence of the high prices now prevailing of cloth and the consequent distress in the country. I need hardly say anything about a matter which is obvious, that before we could get our cloth we must have our own cotton, and we must have our own yarn. We must have our spinning machines and we must have our own weavers if not our own spinning mills. So far as the weaving question is concerned, there is at present at Serampore a fairly well-equipped weaving school, but as far as my information goes, there is no such school in this part of the country. If we look for a moment to the number of weavers in Dacca and adjoining districts as published in the census reports, we find that this part of the country is largely inhabited by persons who take to weaving as a profession and who have long been known for the skill with which they have carried on their profession in the past. To come to exact figures, I find from the latest documents I could consult, that in Dacca there are as many as 44,000 weavers, in Mymensingh 25,000, in Faridpur 26,000, in Bakarganj 23,000, making for the Dacca Division a total of 125,000. It is true that most of these weavers have taken to cultivation and have given up their hereditary calling for the very simple reason that weaving on approved lines is something that they do not know anything about, and it does not pay for the trouble as well as for the capital they spend for the purpose. The question, therefore, arises if something could not be done to induce these weavers, who have given up their hereditary profession, to go back to it and also to teach them improved methods so that they can compete with persons who have taken to produce cloth on approved principles, and to turn out a much better quality of cloth than uninstructed weavers can be expected to do. In this connection some attempts have been made by that useful association, known as the Bengal Home Industries Association, whose report for the year 1917-18 I have before me. It appears that in 1907 or thereabouts, the Director of Public Instruction wrote to the District Board, Dacca, asking for his opinion as to the desirability of opening a weaving school in this part of the country. The District Magistrate thereupon consulted several local gentlemen and somehow or other, they could not agree as to details or as to ways and means, and the final report that went up to Government was that there was very little prospect of a successful weaving school here. The matter was allowed to drop. Then about the end of last year a weaving expert was brought up by Mr. Hart from the Bengal Home Industries Association. This officer went round the chief weaving centres and suggested several methods; and upon the report of this expert the Principal of the Serampore Weaving School wrote to the Director of Public Instruction and he wrote to the Chairman of the District Board asking for a reconsideration of this question. I am not in possession of all the facts, but I am told that this question is in some shape before the Home Industries Association. I take it, therefore, that the importance of the question is realised and also the urgency, and the only problem before us is as to ways and means. I do not know if we have got all the officers necessary. If not, these must be secured before we can have a school on improved lines, but I think we can have something like administrative centres at suitable places like Dacca, Mymensingh, Faridpur and elsewhere. In this matter, I must respectfully ask Your Excellency's Government to take opinion and also direct attention in order that something might be done to give an impetus to an industry which is now fast dying out. It is no use concealing the fact that the weavers are desperately poor and weaving industry at least in Dacca is something which is a relic of the past. It is most regrettable that Dacca which was once regarded as a great weaving centre, one of the best in the world at one time, should now be reduced to such a position. I am only moving this resolution in order to ascertain in what light the Government looks at the question. Having regard to the urgency of the matter, I hope Your Excellency's Government will do all that is possible in the matter. With these few words I commend the resolution to the acceptance of this Council.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

" My Lord, I fully support the views of the Hon'ble Member. The want of cloth is justly felt all over Bengal. Hand-loom industry cannot compete with power-loom but during the swadeshi movement it has been seen that though strenuous efforts were made, it did not succeed. At present the price has gone up so much that it has become a necessity, and I think if such schools be established in different centres at least where there is some need for it, it will help the poor classes to a very great extent. Everywhere in Bengal the hereditary weavers have taken to cultivation because it pays them more, but, as I submitted, the position at present is not so. If such schools be established and instructions either with the help of experts or by providing stipends in schools the art is taught, machines can be got on the hire-purchase system and at a cheap rate. I believe it can be done. In my district of Rajshahi there was a weaving school; there was room for improvement of matka cloth; an attempt was made to teach hand-loom work also, but somehow or other it had to be discontinued, but now as the necessity is very great, I think it can be safely revived with profit to the poor cultivator. I hope Government will see its way to do something for their relief in this direction. With these few words, I beg to support the motion."

Resolutions.Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, in replying to this resolution, I may be permitted, in the first place, to sketch briefly our existing organisation for instruction in up-to-date methods of weaving, and then to state what action Government propose to take in order to give further instruction and to help to resuscitate the industry."

We have already at Serampore the Government Weaving Institute to which the Hon'ble Member has referred. At this Institute instruction is given to two distinct classes, the first consisting of young men of good education who are likely to qualify as teachers, overseers, managers—in fact, young men who are likely to be organisers of the industry. The second class consists of those who are themselves weavers and their sons. The Institute also serves as a centre from which instruction is given to weavers through schools of weaving which have been established in different centres of the industry. The Hon'ble Member is, I think, unaware that there are some weaving schools in this part of the Presidency, there being two weaving schools at Cox's Bazar and at Tangail. There is also one at Malda and one in Pabna in Northern Bengal, and one at Bankura in West Bengal. Not only do young men receive training in these weaving schools as well as at the Weaving Institute at Serampore, but Government help them to set up business when they pass through their course, and give them advances for the purchase of looms and other accessories.

In spite of this, it is recognised that the use of the fly-shuttle loom and the adoption of up-to-date methods of weaving have not spread as fast as could be desired. It seems that the introduction and spread of up-to-date looms and up-to-date methods through the villages cannot be given full effect to by means of weaving schools at fixed centres. A scheme has therefore been prepared for peripatetic instructors who will go about the villages, demonstrating the use of the fly-shuttle loom to the weavers themselves, instructing them in preparing their yarn before the actual process of weaving is begun, and also assisting in creating weavers' co-operative societies. It is hoped that these instructors will succeed in getting fly-shuttle looms adopted more rapidly than at present, and that they will help to create a greater demand for instruction in modern methods. If this is the case, the attendance in weaving schools will rise, and the number of schools will have to be increased. One such peripatetic instructor has already been appointed in the Burdwan district and there has already been a fair amount of success; a certain number of fly-shuttle looms have been bought by the weavers, and they are earning their livelihood. The Principal of the Serampore Weaving Institute is anxious to extend the system and has proposed that four more peripatetic instructors should be attached to the weaving schools at Tangail, Malda, Bankura and Pabna; the Managing Committees of all these schools are very anxious to have peripatetic instructors. Besides that, the Principal proposes that peripatetic instructors should be employed in districts in which no weaving schools are established. I understand that these men will work in the districts of Dacca, Noakhali and Khulna, as well as in Chittagong, where there is already a weaving school at Cox's Bazar.* I think it will be recognised that this arrangement has a certain advantage, namely, that the villagers will be reached more easily than if there is a weaving school at a fixed centre. Again, in the districts in which we already have weaving schools, the work done by the schools will be brought home to the weavers, and I think the knowledge of the modern methods will be more easily disseminated in this way. The proposals of the Principal of the Government Weaving Institute at Serampore have not yet reached Government. They will shortly, however, be submitted by the Director of Public Instruction, and I can assure the Hon'ble Member that they will receive sympathetic consideration. That, my Lord, is one line of advance.

Another line of advance consists of the organisation of Weavers' Co-operative Societies. Mr. Hoogewerf, the Principal of the Serampore Institute, has been put on special duty to facilitate the production of hand-woven cloth in Bengal and generally to assist in the development of the industry. Mr. Donovan, the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, has for some months been busy organizing weaving societies and introducing spinning wheels: three ex-masters of weaving schools have been appointed inspectors for the inspection of these societies. A number of difficulties have to be met, e.g., want of capital, want of yarn, want of an organized market, the indebtedness of the weavers and their conservatism. They are for the most part in the clutches of mahajans who are very unwilling to let them go. Many weavers will not work on certain days of the month—I believe they depend on phases of the moon—some weavers are unwilling to weave a longer or a wider piece of cloth than they have always woven, although it would pay them better. I believe, again, in Dacca and Mymensingh many weavers weave a kind of fine cloth which hardly pays them, and they are reluctant to weave a coarser cloth. However, already much has been done in the way of establishing co-operative societies. In Bankura, a number of these societies has already been organized. The Registrar of Co-operative Societies reports that the weavers there are trooping in to be organized in societies and he hopes that in six months' time he will have two to three thousand weavers at work. A similar programme has been undertaken in Pabna, and it is proposed to start organization almost immediately in Brahmanbaria and then in Midnapore and perhaps also in Hooghly and Kushtia, and to develop Jessore where we already have societies. In Barisal also the possibility of starting societies is to be looked into. In Dacca itself the Joint Registrar has been making enquiries for the purpose of organizing societies as soon as the views of the Committee which has been considering the question are known.

From what I have said, I hope it will be realized that Government have been taking steps for the development of the weaving industry. As I have already said, there are already several Government weaving schools. Then there is a scheme for supplementing the work which is being done in these schools by demonstration by peripatetic instructors in the villages. In districts where there are no weaving schools, it is not proposed to establish them but to meet the demand for practical instruction by peripatetic instructors. Besides this, there is the scheme for establishing weaving societies which will strengthen the weavers' position, produce greater efficiency and increase production. In view of this statement of what Government are doing and what it is proposed to do to meet the situation, I beg to suggest to the Hon'ble Member that it is scarcely necessary for him to press his resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR NILRATAN SARKAR said :-

"My Lord, I think it my duty to support the proposal moved by my hon'ble friend. Technical schools are generally opened on account of demands from factories for operatives. That is not the situation here. We know what the prevailing situation here is. Here we want cloth. There is a demand for it and it is increasing every year. The question whether the production of home industries can compete with the produce of factories does not arise. We know there is a large demand for home produce and I believe that with the help of the artistic faculties of the people which may be noticed by even the most superficial observer in the products of our home industries that they are bound to hold their own against the products of any number of factories. But the question before us may be looked at from another point of view. There is the consumer's point of view. We want more cloths and cheaper cloths if possible. There is another point of view. We want to give instructions to a lakh and twenty thousand persons of this district who or whose ancestors had been engaged in the trade of weaving for generations. There is no reason why their activities should be confined to agriculture or some such profession. And to do that we must train them in these particular lines. And what is the method? That is the question—whether there is a necessity for training these men. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said that the Government have been doing their best towards this direction. In fact, he has accepted the programme of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. He said that the Government does not only admit the necessity of inspecting instructors but that they have actually employed them, and that the latter are going about the country. We appreciate this activity on the part of the Government. As regards the existence of co-operative societies, we certainly welcome them with our whole heart. But we still demand that there should be some institution here permanently interested in the promotion of the weaving industry in this part of the province. So far as the circumstances are concerned, they are here more favourable than at Serampore. I cannot conceive of any difference in circumstances. On the other hand if there be any difference at all, it is all in favour of Dacca. We want that, like Serampore, this place should be a scene for the promotion of weaving as an industry in the homes of the weavers of this division. My Lord, it may be urged what is the necessity of this school? Why should not these boys take their training as apprentices? They do so at the present moment. As many of them can join the weavers, do so as apprentices, but only a very small number of them can be admitted in this way. Then there is another point. They cannot receive the best training as apprentices. It is that the industry cannot be carried on simply with the ordinary appliances that are used in home industries. Appliances are to be improved. In fact it is the hand-cum-machine system which is the most effectual. I do not mean huge pieces of machinery. I mean that isolated looms or a large number of them can be run at a very small expenditure by machinery. These are the things in which they are to be trained. It is quite possible to give them instruction in mechanical knowledge as well as in the knowledge of weaving, and I think that a school in this connection can go a long way in helping the development of the industry in Bengal. I do not see any reason why Government should refuse to accept this resolution. Government recognized the necessity, we all feel the necessity of promoting this industry and the Government have already taken steps to introduce weaving on a very extensive scale in many parts of Bengal. We appreciate these activities. And here is a proposal which will further help the promotion of the industry in this district and I hope that Government will kindly accept the resolution."

Resolutions.Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I support the motion of my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. In doing so I will only say this. At the present time the necessity of introducing weaving and spinning has been proved by the fact that the price of cloth has risen so high that it means great hardship to the poorer classes of the people. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has given a very interesting description of the steps that have been taken by Government to foster this industry.' But, my Lord, I do not quite follow what he means by peripatetic instructors. Of course I know the meaning of the word "peripatetic", but to my mind it seems that if the number of such instructors are increased and if they are sent, having regard to the present needs of the country, to all parts of Bengal, it will be of considerable help to the country. I do not know whether peripatetic instructors include female instructors also. My impression is that in the families of the poorer middle class, the ladies of the house would be glad to have instructions for the preparation of home-made cloths for their own use and if Government will help them by placing female instructors at their disposal a great service will be done to the country. As regards the immediate necessity of starting weaving and spinning schools at Dacca and other places, I do not know much, and perhaps my friends are in a better position to know it. But what I feel is this : that 75 per cent. of the people do not know that peripatetic instructors are available, but if this fact is more widely known and the number of instructors are increased, a great service would be done to the country, I am sure "

Resolution.

• Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

" My Lord, I am much obliged to the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley for the very lucid manner in which he has explained to us the Government position and I do not think there is any one amongst the non-official members of this Council who would fail to appreciate what the Government have done and are doing in regard to the improvement of the weaving industry in Bengal. At the same time I confess that I feel a little bewildered when I come to consider what attitude I should take up so far as this recommendation is concerned. I cannot get rid of the impression that the efforts that are now being made by Government and others are of a somewhat transitory character. The present distress prevailing in the country has no doubt induced many of us to think of bringing about some sort of improvement in the weaving industry and if I may respectfully say so, has also stimulated the Government to a more than usual spell of activity. But, after all, these efforts must be short-lived. After the present circumstances have passed away, there may come a time when we will slip back into our usual lethargy and I do not think that there is any guarantee that all the efforts that are being made will lead to any permanent result. I therefore fully agree with the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar that the establishment of a weaving school at Dacca would be taking a step which would be of some permanent character. I am told that in this part of the province there are weaving schools. I have heard of two technical schools. But I think I am free to say that both these institutions are not very much known to fame. My opinion is that these institutions are not prospering. The profit that is now made in price may or may not continue after the present circumstances have changed. On the other hand I fully recognize that Government are alive to the necessities of the situation and that they have got a definite programme of work. The question therefore, before us is whether I should press the resolution for acceptance by Your Excellency's Government or leave the matter entirely in the hands of Government for the present. I know that if I take up the latter position, Government will fully consider the matter and perhaps reconsider the steps they have already taken, and I am sure something will be done which will be satisfactory to everybody concerned. But at the same time I cannot overlook the importance of the question that has been raised by this resolution, and although we have all listened to a very instructive speech by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley I must confess that I have not heard anything which would convince me that there are difficulties in the way of the Government accepting my resolution. In these circumstances, having reconsidered the matter and having regard to the importance of the question that is raised; I am sorry I cannot but press this resolution. I hope Government will reconsider the question and accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"I think, my lord, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has given expression very clearly to the attitude of the Government regarding the weaving industry in Bengal generally. I am afraid we cannot accept the resolution as it is worded or as it stands ; but after what the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said, and after the assurance that I propose to give, the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib, I hope, will see his way to withdraw the resolution. What we propose to do with regard to the establishment of a weaving school in Dacca is to consult the Educational authorities and to see what can be done to make an early start in that direction."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, I think that it would rather be asking too much if I pressed this resolution. I would, therefore, ask Your Excellency's permission to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a selected officer be placed on special duty to report on what steps are immediately necessary for improving the prospects of cotton cultivation and increasing the supply of cotton in Bengal.

He said :—

"The question raised by this resolution is somewhat connected with the one that we have just discussed because all these questions are ultimately connected with that of the increased supply of dhoties and other wearing apparels. But before we can think of increasing the supply of dhoties we must have our cotton, because without our cotton we cannot have our yarns. As regards cotton there are two distinct varieties which we get from what is called 'tree cotton' and the other variety that we get is what is called 'field cotton.' The climate of Bengal is not considered suitable for the production of long staple cotton or, in other words, the only cotton that we have in Bengal does not give us exactly the kind of yarn that is necessary for weaving fine kind of cloth. It is, therefore, to what is called the tree cotton that we must look for the supply of the proper kind of yarn which is necessary for weaving cloth and the question before us, therefore, practically resolves itself to this : what are the prospects for the improvement of the cultivation of tree cotton and what steps can be taken for this purpose. It is well known that we had in Dacca an industry which was famous throughout the world. I refer to the industry of muslins and the question naturally arises where it was that the people of Dacca used to get their cotton in the olden days. I was casually discussing this matter yesterday with the Hon'ble Mr. Crum and at that time I had not sufficient information to give in regard to the question raised by our discussion. But after I came here I met some of my friends and from inquiries I have come to know that there was at that time in Dacca a sufficient supply of cotton of the variety called, tree cotton which used to grow in abundance and which used to yield the finest yarn in the world. It was in the days of the East India Company a certain General, who was afterwards known as Sir Stephen Hamilton (?), reported that at a certain place near Dacca there was a variety called tree cotton which produced such a fine quality of yarn that he was actually surprised and he recommended that all possible steps should be taken for the development of this variety of cotton. An inquiry showed that Sir Stephen Hamilton was referring to that part of the district now known as Kapasia. Kapas means cotton and the place was appropriately called Kapasia. But tree cotton has ceased to exist in that place. It is therefore not correct to say that there are no facilities in Bengal for the production of tree cotton and that all our efforts in that direction are bound to result in failure. The problem really is one which the Agricultural Department can tackle and it is somewhat unfortunate that although they must have been doing something to improve the cultivation and increase the supply of cotton, their efforts so far have led to no appreciable results. The proposal that I make is that a selected officer specially fitted for the task be charged with the duty of reporting to Government what steps may be taken for improving the cultivation and increasing the supply of cotton. I may be told that there is the Department for the work. But, my Lord, if an officer is placed on special duty it goes without saying that he would be able to give his undivided attention to the subject, he would be able to devote all his energies and his suggestions are bound to be of a valuable character. I am not quite sure, but I was told yesterday and I think it is generally believed, that District Officers have been asked to collect information something on the lines suggested in the resolution. I do not know whether it is a fact, but even if it were it would not meet the situation, because, after all, the District Officers have got other duties to look to. They will perhaps depute one of their subordinate officers—very likely one not fully equipped for the task. Enquiries made by District Officers will not be useful. But if an officer is placed on special duty he can tour through at least the suitable part of the province and he will find out what has been the history so far as the cultivation of tree cotton is concerned. He will take note of the soil and note other conditions that are necessary for the improvement and development of this kind of tree cotton and it goes without saying that his report is bound to be of a most valuable character. I only want that a selected officer be placed on special duty to tackle the problem of the increased supply of cotton, which is a most important problem at the present moment. And I do not see that there is any difficulty for Government to depute one of its expert officers for that purpose. So far as this resolution is concerned, I would most confidently commend it to the Council."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I beg to support the resolution. The mover has already brought to the notice of the Council that there are places in this part of the province in which cotton of the finest quality used to be grown. I come from West Bengal and I can also say that there are villages in West Bengal where cotton used to be grown and those villages are still known as Kabas-danga. I do not find any such village in my district. But I know that in many villages in other districts the people used to cultivate cotton. But where are they now? Their descendants are now working as mill-hands in riverside mills in the riparian municipalities. So far as the Government Agricultural Department is concerned, I cannot but say, My Lord, that the cultivation of cotton has not been properly looked after by Government. I have read with great attention the reports of the Agricultural Department, but I am sorry to say that the reports are very discouraging. I have made personal inquiries about seeds and I am glad to inform the Council that seeds are available in many parts of the province. But the Agricultural Department, I am told, get their seeds from Bombay and are selling them at Rs. 10 per maund but, allow me to say, that if proper inquiries are made it will be found that seeds can be had here at a price not above Rs. 2 or Rs. 3 per mound. If a special officer is appointed to look into these matters, I am perfectly convinced that the proper step will be taken in the direction of cotton cultivation. We talk of weaving schools, but to my mind what is the necessity of them unless proper attention is paid towards the improvement of cotton cultivation? Therefore, if a special officer is appointed, whether from the Agricultural or from any other department, I am almost sure that there will be an improvement in the present state of things. Moreover, if there be cotton cultivation in our own province the present difficulty will be avoided. With these words, I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I support the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. That there was cotton cultivation in Bengal can be proved from old zamindari papers. Cotton was known as kapas. But why it has deteriorated—whether on account of people taking to some other cultivation or owing to the unsuitability of the soil—is a matter for investigation. This ought to have been done by the Agricultural Department by this time, but I am sorry that no such thing has been done. To import cotton seeds from Bombay would be of no use to us as we do not know whether the variety brought from Bombay is suitable to the soil of Lower Bengal. It is therefore necessary that an investigation be made and proper means be devised for improving cotton cultivation in Bengal. If we import cotton seeds from Bombay, it will not be possible to turn out cotton at a cheap rate. It is, therefore, necessary that we should improve our own cultivation so that we could produce cotton at a cheap rate. I do not think it necessary to speak much on the subject, but I fully agree with the Hon'ble Mover that a special officer should be appointed to properly investigate into the matter."

The Hon'ble SIR NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the resolution. I do so because I have faith in two things. The first in the honest laborious work of experts and secondly in the soil of Bengal. In spite of discouragement that we have received, I still believe that the last word has not been said with regard to the Department of Agriculture. My Lord, to illustrate the matter, I might cite one or two instances. We all know that within the last few years by the investigation of Mr. Milligan we have been able to add considerably to our knowledge of sugar and we have also been able to very nearly approach the solution of the question in regard to that industry in Bengal. My Lord, as regards sugar, we were told in the year 1915 that there was no hope for sugar in Bengal till a particular kind of cane was introduced in Rajshahi which produced an yield of 40 maunds per acre, and only recently I had occasion to come across an European gentleman just casually who had come over to Rajshahi in order to get land worth several thousand rupees. In fact, he had no objection to purchase any extent of land for the purpose of starting a sugar factory. And it was only in 1915 that we were told that the soil of Bengal was not fit for sugar cultivation! I believe that the character of the soil is not the same throughout the whole of the district. The character of the land in Bikrampur, in Tippera, Noakhali or Chittagong may differ but places may be found in these districts which may be found suitable for the cultivation of a particular kind of cotton. In fact, what is wanted is an efficient, hardworking expert who should be able to devote his whole time to the task. It is the whole-time worker that is wanted who would be able to devote his energies on one particular experiment and whose report would not contain vague generalities. It may be, that after experiments such an expert may not be able to give us a good report. But what of that? Then at least we shall have the satisfaction that we have done our duty. We know that in certain parts of Tippera have been found traces of the base of former rivers. I have noticed certain spots in Chota Nagpur, where cotton can be grown. And I take the responsibility of saying that it is a case for an inquiry. I hope that the Government will not give up the question either of silk growing or of sugar growing or of cotton growing without a more thorough inquiry."

Resolutions.Mr. Cumming

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING said :—

"My Lord, the reply of Government to the Hon'ble Member's resolution can be expressed very shortly. Government are at one with the Hon'ble Member and the other speakers in their desire to promote, as far as possible, the cultivation of cotton in this province, but the point on which Government differ from him is the method to be adopted. It is quite true, as has been mentioned by one speaker, that the cotton that is being grown in any quantity, apart from a very small area in the Bankura and Midnapore districts, is to be found in the areas of Hill Tippera and the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur and Hon'ble Babu Kisor Mohan Chaudhuri have stated that enquiries should now be made as to whether cotton cannot be grown in other areas in the plains of Bengal. If I have understood them correctly, the suggestion from their remarks is that nothing has hitherto been done in this direction. It is not inaccurate to say that for more than half a century special enquiries have been made from time to time to promote the cultivation of cotton in the plains of Bengal. It is an obvious remark to make that cotton was grown at one time, and there is sufficient evidence of that fact; but in the plains of Bengal, as at present constituted, partly from rainfall, and partly from certain diseases to which the cotton plant is liable, it has not been found possible to promote that cultivation.

Now, I have said that Government differ as to the method. As the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar has mentioned, the last word has not been said on the subject. I myself am also still somewhat of an optimist in the matter.

The proposal before the Council is that a selected officer be deputed for the purpose. To this, I can only say that the only officer who can, at the present time, be spared, or who will be suitable for such an enquiry, is our Economic Botanist, and he is at present giving a great deal of attention to the subject and is examining a number of indigenous and exotic varieties of cotton under the conditions pertaining to Bengal. It is true that if he were placed on special duty he might possibly be able to do more; but the Economic Botanist has several and varied duties to perform at the present time. Apart from him, the Agricultural Department as a whole are giving special attention to the matter. In the first place, members of the district agricultural staff are examining a number of plots in order to gain information regarding the suitability of the exotic varieties; and in the second place they are preparing indents for seed for the crop of next year.

For these two reasons, Government, I am afraid, are not prepared to accept the special recommendation of the Hon'ble Member; first, because any officer specially selected outside the Agricultural Department would simply interfere with the existing organization; and in the second place, if the officer were to be selected from within the department, he could be no other than the Economic Botanist who, as I have already said, is giving his special attention to this subject.

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

It will thus be seen that Government fully recognize the importance of the enquiry to which this resolution refers ; but, at the present moment, they are not able to do more than request the officers of the Agricultural Department to follow up these lines of enquiry, and in particular, to instruct the Economic Botanist to give, as far as possible, a large proportion of his time to this particular enquiry.

With these words, my Lord, I desire, on behalf of Government, to say that Government are not prepared to accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

" My Lord, I must begin by saying that I consider the reply that has been given by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming as absolutely unsatisfactory. and that I propose to press this resolution to a division. I would most earnestly request my non-official colleagues to bestow a little attention to this question. We have been told that an officer has got to be selected from outside the Agricultural Department if one is to be selected for the purpose I have in view. What is the good of having an Agricultural Department at all, if that department cannot supply one officer with expert knowledge to take into consideration the prospects of the improvement of one of the most important crops, viz., the improvement in the cultivation of cotton in the districts in Bengal? What is the good of Government spending so much money and nursing a department which sends out officers to the villages simply to look after the old fashioned days of our agriculturists and which cannot devote its proper attention or its energies to find out a solution for a problem which is agitating the public mind so much at the present moment? Is it necessary to go outside the Agricultural Department? Is there no officer in that department who has received a training not merely in India but who has gone outside India? I know that there are gentlemen who have received such a training not merely in this country but outside it and who are fully equipped to take up this task. I am told that the Economic Botanist—I could not catch the expression, but by whatever formidable name he may be called—is at present weighed down with other duties and can only devote a portion of his time to this work. Why, my Lord, should parsimony be shown, when it comes to a question of looking after the needs of cotton cultivation, and that this officer should do this work in addition to his other duties? Why is it that we cannot get a whole-time officer who can devote his undivided attention to this important matter? It is for this reason, my Lord, that I have asked that a certain officer be placed on special duty. We might perhaps be told that the district agricultural officers or the different officers who belong to the Department of Agriculture are in some way concerned with this question. But is that sufficient? What we want is not a man who has come into contact with the Agricultural Department, not a man who has got a superficial knowledge in agricultural improvements and can use fine phrases which we do not understand by which he shrouds his problems with a mystery. But what we want is a man who has received a good training in this particular matter and who can really be called an expert and who must devote his whole time and attention to this matter. I do not know, my Lord, whether the importance of this matter has been fully recognized. Why is it that Government cannot spare an officer for a month or a couple of months in order that he may consider this very important question? After all, what I ask for is that Government should take steps to improve the supply of cotton in this province, i.e., the yield should be increased and that the prospects of the cultivation should be improved. Are the Government to tolerate a situation in which the price of a pair of dhoties has gone up from Rs. 3 to Rs. 8, and when Government have received reports of cases of suicide and lamentable occurrences in the domestic life of the province?

Resolutions.Mr. Crum.

After all these, are we going to be told that Government are afraid to consider this question which is of the supremest importance at the present moment?

Are not the Government aware of the vital needs of the Empire at the present moment? We, who are discussing this matter, do realize what this distress means, what the price of a pair of dhoties means, what an acute feeling has been caused by so many tragedies which are known to us. I submit, my Lord, that in the face of these, if Government cannot find an officer from the Agricultural Department who could be placed on special duty for a couple of months, I must then earnestly ask Government to take this matter into their consideration and abolish that department altogether and save some money to the public tax-payer. We might be told that there are no district agricultural officers who possess an expert knowledge which is necessary for an examination of this problem. It is for this reason that I have suggested that an expert officer be deputed for this work. I do not understand the position which has been taken up by Government without hearing our arguments and that is the reason why we are driven to have recourse to moving resolutions in Council. I must strongly urge upon the personal consideration of Your Excellency the acceptance of this resolution."

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM said :—

"My Lord, I am afraid that I am unable to agree with the very strong way in which the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has pressed his resolution; but at the same time, I do not think that the Government answer to the question is quite satisfactory. The question of cotton cultivation in Bengal resolves itself into two parts. First of all we have the ordinary staple cotton which is grown in many other parts of India, and which we would wish to encourage now as a war measure and, if possible, to reduce the price. I do not think it is necessary to bring over cotton seed from Bombay and try to grow it in the plains of Bengal, because I am definitely satisfied that except possibly in some places such as Midnapore or Hill Tippera, as the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar says, it is perfectly useless to attempt to grow short staple cotton in the plains of southern Bengal; but the mover of the resolution did touch during his first speech on what, I think, must be regarded as rather an important point, and that is the produce of long staple cotton in the Dacca district. Years ago Dacca used to produce an extraordinarily fine muslin and this was made from long staple tree cotton, so I am told. The industry apparently died out many years ago, because it could not compete with machine-made English goods in the same style, and possibly because the demand for this very fine muslin disappeared or was reduced. Twenty years ago, the price of ordinary American cotton was 3d. per lb., before the war, 4 or 5 years ago, it was 6d. per lb. and nowadays it is 22d. per lb. The price of superior cotton, such as Egyptian cotton and other varieties of long stapled cotton, has equally increased in value. As regards the high prices, we may not perhaps see anything like the old prices for a great many years to come, if ever; and I do think it is conceivable that an industry such as tree cotton in Dacca which has died out a considerable number of years ago, because it could not compete with the other types of the same industry at that time might now owing to the higher price of cotton be a feasible trade. Therefore, on that point, I would like Government to tell us what they think of the tree cotton trade of Dacca and if they intend to make enquiries on that point. There has lately been a Committee sitting in Bombay on the question of cotton in India, and it might be possible to get into communication with that Committee and find out what they have got to say on the subject. It is possible that some of the gentlemen who were sitting on that Committee would be available to examine this question in Bengal. Therefore, although I do not propose to press for the resolution, I would suggest that Government might do more than they propose to do at present."

Resolutions.Mr. Crum.

*Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the headquarters of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, be permanently located at Dacca.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is one of our hardy Dacca annuals. I have been persuaded to bring up this resolution for the simple reason that the orders that have recently been passed for allocating the office of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, in Calcutta, might be reconsidered by Government. The reasons for allocating the office at Calcutta and not at Dacca as given by the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell on the last occasion may be briefly summarised as follows :—

First, there was the proposal for the establishment of a provincial co-operative bank which would be under the control of the Registrar, and secondly that although there are more societies in Eastern Bengal than in Western Bengal the needs of Western Bengal were much greater than the needs in Eastern Bengal and therefore required the constant attention of the Registrar, and thirdly that money was flowing in rapidly so that the Registrar had to interview the investors and intending capitalists and that he should be there to be in touch with all those persons. Another argument which was advanced was that since the Hon'ble Member in charge of the department had to be in Calcutta it was very necessary that the Registrar, the head of the department, should also be in the same city. But now it has become necessary to consider all these reasons in the light of the facts that I am now going to place before this Council. I may begin by saying that exactly the same arguments were put forward as regards the location of the Agricultural Department permanently in this city and I would ask Your Excellency's Government to consider whether after the recent decision of the Government with regard to this department the office of Registrar of the Co-operative Societies should not be located at Dacca. I have not brought forward this resolution in order to embarrass Government in any way but simply because I feel that the activities of the Registrar of the Co-operative Societies and of the Department of Agriculture are so closely bound up together that it is very necessary that the head of the Department of Co-operative Societies should be in touch with the head of the Department of Agriculture far more so than with the Hon'ble Member in charge of the department. We have all heard that one of the means by which Government proposes to introduce a larger amount of weaving or induce weavers to get cotton is by starting Co-operative Societies. My Lord, is it not therefore necessary that the Registrar should be somewhere near the Agricultural Department, so that the two departments may co-ordinate their efforts to bring about the best of results? As regards the reasons that had been given I would presently show that they do not hold good at the present moment. As regards the provincial bank the operations may as well be directed from here. We know that there is a Joint-Registrar at Dacca and I think the duties of the Registrar for the purpose may very well be performed by the Joint-Registrar. As regards the second reason that was given, namely, that the needs of Western Bengal are greater, I submit that we have got two or that purpose for the Western Bengal districts, as against one in the Eastern Bengal districts. It therefore follows that provision has already been made for the needs of Western Bengal. The only question now to be considered is whether the office should be located in Calcutta. As regards the point that the Registrar should be in touch with the Hon'ble Member we all know that the state of things which the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell represented do not now exist as the Registrar has not now got his office in Writers' Buildings but somewhere outside it in a place called Dacre's Lane. Therefore, so far as those little conferences between the Hon'ble Member and Mr. J. M. Mitra which are said to have led to such useful results are now at an end. The reasons for allocating the Director of Agriculture at Dacca have been proved to be untenable by experience. We were told it was practically impossible to move that officer from Calcutta. But it has proved to be quite possible and the system is going on very well in spite of what the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell said. He said that the Director of Agriculture should be in touch with the mercantile firms of Calcutta and it was absolutely essential that he should remain in Calcutta. The mercantile firms have no branches at Dacca, yet they get their informations from the Director all the same. Therefore I would appeal to Your Excellency and to Your Excellency's Government not to take up an unsympathetic attitude in this matter but give it their careful consideration. I think a possible objection may be made to this resolution with regard to the position that is occupied by the Registrar of the Co-operative Societies regarding his office. I know something of the working of the Co-operative Societies and therefore I know that the argument may be based on the fact that the Registrar is now the chairman of the Central Bank. But I may tell the Council that no less than seven Directors of the Bank belong to Eastern Bengal. And if the Registrar has his office at Dacca it would be more convenient for the Directors to meet there than in Calcutta. Western Bengal districts supply only four members. For all these reasons, I submit that the office of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies should be located in Dacca."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said —

"My Lord, Government are entirely at one with the Hon'ble Member in his desire to encourage the co-operative movement in this part, as well as in other parts of the Presidency, but this can be done without the transfer of the head of the Department from the headquarters of the administration. Lord Carmichael in 1913, when this matter was suggested, referred to the possibility of the transfer of control in the case of certain departments in which the mass of the business tended for the moment to gravitate to this part of Bengal. I shall explain shortly that this is the reason why there has been a change in connection with the Agricultural Department.

The Hon'ble Member has referred to the discussion on the subject in 1917, i.e., last year, when the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell pointed out that the mass of the business before the Registrar then concentrated in Calcutta. It is true that the position is not quite the same as last year; but on the other hand, it is not so far different, that there appears to be sufficient justification for the transfer of the Registrar. In the first place, as regards the arguments raised with reference to the provincial bank, the Hon'ble Member says that the bank has not been created. It is true that the provincial bank, as a bank, has not been created. But the federation of central banks, to which he refers, was the association of banks to which my predecessor was referring last year. This federation has been created in the course of the last 12 months; it has its office in Calcutta and is in the immediate personal control of the Registrar. On these grounds, it is desirable that the Registrar should retain his headquarters in Calcutta. In the second place, there has been a decentralisation of authority since last year. Since the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell spoke in August 1917, three officers, as the Hon'ble Member has mentioned, have been appointed to assist the Registrar with co-ordinate powers. He is not precisely correct in stating there are two for the Western Provinces and one for East Bengal. The three officers appointed are one for Northern Bengal, one for Western Bengal, and one for Eastern Bengal; and at present there is in Dacca a Deputy Collector on special duty with the special powers of a Joint-Registrar. Surely from this it does not follow that the Registrar should be transferred here, but rather that the necessity for the transfer here has considerably diminished.

The further argument that was used by the Hon'ble Member when speaking in support of the resolution was that last year reasons were given why the headship of the Agricultural Department should not be removed from the centre of the administration, whereas it is a fact that the Director of Agriculture has now his headquarters in Dacca. But there is a difference between the two cases; in the case of the Agricultural Department there has undoubtedly been a greater concentration of work within the last year in Dacca, and it is not therefore inappropriate that at present the headship of the department should be at Dacca. But in the case of the work of the department dealing with Co-operative Societies, there has not been such a concentration of work in the eastern districts of the province. As the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell pointed out last year, the Registrar is essentially a touring officer who gives his services to East Bengal as well as to other parts of the province. In fact, one district belonging to the Dacca Division, namely, the Faridpur district, is really under his own personal control at the present moment. I, therefore, submit that there appears to be no justification for permanently locating the headquarters of the Registrar away from the headquarters of the provincial administration; and in view of the fact that the Registrar is represented in Dacca by an officer who has co-ordinate powers with the Registrar, the Hon'ble Mover will realise that the grounds for transferring the Registrar have, as I have stated, very much decreased; and I hope he will perhaps not press his resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My Lord, I have very little to add to what I have already stated. I must admit that after all the Government must be allowed to judge where particular officers should be located. We can only put forward suggestions. If, therefore, in this particular matter Government find that there are difficulties in the way of permanently locating this office at Dacca, I would not be well advised in pressing this resolution. Besides, I do not wish to make the location of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies dependent on the location of the office of the Director of Agriculture in Dacca, because I find that there is very little chance of my motion being carried; and, after all, we may lose the Director of Agriculture also. I do not, therefore, wish to press this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

President's Address.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"It will perhaps be for the convenience of Hon'ble Members if, before we adjourn for the luncheon interval, I make some remarks with reference to item No. 22 which appears on the agenda, in which the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq proposes to recommend to the Governor in Council that a Committee of non-official members be appointed to consider the list of subjects to be transferred to popular control, as suggested in paragraph 238 of the Report on Constitutional Reforms. I am going to suggest, for the consideration of the Hon'ble Maulvi, that he should not move that resolution to-day; and I make that suggestion for two reasons: the first is that the Government have no more control over the non-official members of this Council than the Hon'ble Maulvi has himself; and Government cannot order non-official members to serve on committees against their will. It is perfectly easy for the Hon'ble Maulvi, if he desires to do so, formally to suggest a committee without moving any resolution on the subject in this Council. My second reason is one to which I attach more importance, and it is this: I think it would be more satisfactory from every point of view, if the Hon'ble Members of this Council desire to discuss the Reform Scheme and express their views upon it, that they should be given a special opportunity of discussing the scheme as a whole from every point of view. That being so, I am prepared to summon a special session of the non-official members of Council for that purpose. The only question is the time at which such a session should be held. I suggest for the consideration of Hon'ble Members two alternative dates. I should be prepared, for instance, to summon such a special meeting to take place at the conclusion of the ordinary business of the Legislative Council which will be held during the first week in September; that is one date for your consideration; or again I would be prepared, if that date be not convenient to the majority of members, to summon such a meeting later in the autumn, say some time early in November. There are advantages and disadvantages attached to each of these dates. Hon'ble Members may say that they desire to express their opinions before the Government submit their views to the Government of India; and that is an argument in favour of holding a special session early in September. On the other hand, non-official members of this Council have been asked individually to submit their views to Government, so that the argument which I have just adduced in favour of holding a special session early in September is not necessarily a very cogent one. The arguments in favour of holding such a meeting later are, I think, that it will give Hon'ble Members greater time in which to digest the many complicated proposals which are contained in the scheme and will enable them to express a more matured judgment upon them. But I do not wish to influence Hon'ble Members one way or the other. I am quite prepared, as I have said, to summon a special session either during the first week in September or early in November, and I would suggest that those non-official members who are present here to-day might perhaps meet the Vice-President before we re-assemble this afternoon and tell him what their views are with regard to this question of dates.

I would propose that we should now adjourn, and that we should meet again at a quarter before 3 o'clock. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler will be pleased to be here at 2-30 P.M. and discuss this matter with Hon'ble Members who wish to do so."

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

AFTER LUNCH.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in view of the distress now prevailing in the country, Government be pleased to sanction an increment on a suitable scale to the pay of all public servants drawing monthly salaries up to Rs. 100 a month.

He said:—

"My Lord, I feel I need not say very much in commending this resolution to the acceptance of Your Excellency's Council. It has been admitted on all hands that the distress prevailing in this country is very acute, and that all public servants drawing a very small pay, say up to Rs. 100 a month, find it very hard to make their both ends meet, and it would be a great relief if Government could see their way to add any increments to their salaries in any way Government might think fit and proper. I am told that action on these lines have already been taken by other Governments and the Government of India specially, and that private companies also and employers of labour have thought to give increments to their servants in view of the distress prevailing. The harder case is that of the menial servants who draw a salary which is not even sufficient for them to purchase a pair of dhooties at the rates prevailing in the country. A pair of dhoti now costs about Rs. 7, and supposing there are six members in the family and each member requires a pair throughout the year, he has got to spend on dhooties something which is equal to his annual income, which leaves barely anything for the maintenance of his family. Officers in the enjoyment of high salaries do not feel so acutely as the poorer servants, whose case I have cited. It is on their behalf that I would urge this resolution for acceptance by Your Excellency's Council. I do not think that it would entail a heavy expenditure, because the increments they would draw would be very small. With these few words, I beg to commend this resolution to the acceptance of Your Excellency's Council."

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, this resolution is of a type which necessarily presents the Financial Department in a somewhat invidious attitude. We all like to feel that we had done something in the course of the day to help those whom the circumstances of life may have temporarily hit somewhat hard, and the Financial Department shares that amiable weakness with other members of the Council. But, on the other hand, the Financial Department is particularly entrusted with the task of administering to the best of its ability the income and expenditure of the Local Government, and we are bound, therefore, to insist on certain practical possibilities before undertaking fresh expenditure.

In the first place, we have already recognized to some extent the conditions to which the Hon'ble Member has referred, and we have given some relief in the case of the lowest paid servants of Government, who, he will doubtless agree, have the first claim. The Hon'ble Member has put his limit at Rs. 100; we have put ours somewhat lower, and have dealt first with the menial servants, the more humble employees of the chaprassi, farash and peon type. Even before the war, as is well known, the economic conditions in this country were tending to drive up the rates of lower paid labour all round, and that is a very serious problem with which future Local Governments will be faced. These conditions were intensified by the war; but, even apart from the war, we prepared a very elaborate scheme to benefit these subordinates which we had submitted to the Government of India. In contradistinction to the Hon'ble Maulvi's happy anticipation that this will not cost a heavy sum, I may tell him that it will involve an expenditure of something like Rs. 17 lakhs. Although we could not face the full cost of the scheme, we did, in view of war conditions introduce it in part; we have done so by raising the minimum pay to Rs. 10, Rs. 9 and Rs. 8, according to the classification of districts in respect of the relative expense of living. In addition to this, we have given an extra rupee to those who are drawing less than Rs. 12. There is nothing very magnificent in this, but even that comparatively small measure involves an outlay of Rs. 4 lakhs approximately. I leave it to the Council to calculate roughly what it is going to cost if we undertake sweeping relief on the lines of this resolution.

As regards what has been done by the other Local Governments, we have not got full information, but as far as we can ascertain, the Bombay Government has given special relief in the Bombay and Karachi cities. Judging by what we see in the papers, the conditions of these two towns have become abnormal in a very marked degree, the influx of troops and all sorts of labour connected with the war having raised the cost of living to a level far higher than that in other cities. Presumably it was for this reason that the Bombay Government had to undertake special measures of relief. The Government of India seem to have given special allowances to the Post and Telegraph and Railway Departments; but both of these departments have borne an exceptional strain by reason of the war, and they are both departments whose efficiency cannot possibly be allowed to deteriorate during the war. As far as we know, no Local Government has attempted to do anything of the very wide character of this resolution.

Therefore, Sir, we cannot promise anything to that extent. As I have said, we have done something in the case of the lowest paid servants of Government, and in the course of the year, I have no doubt we shall do more in individual cases as they arise, since specific cases of this description are sure to crop up from time to time. I am afraid, however, that we could not possibly, in the present state of our provincial finances, when economy is being enjoined upon us, promise that we would give something to all in receipt of less than Rs. 100 in recognition of the high rates of living due to the war. The difficulties arising out of the war are shared by us all, and we have got to bear them with what philosophy we can; but in respect of the clerical classes, in particular, it is to be remembered that, in so far as grain prices have been far lower than the average of the past few years, they have benefited to that extent, even though they are paying more for cloth and other necessities of life. We do not deny that there is hardship, but we can only relieve it up to a point; and for the rest, with all sympathy for those who are suffering, I am afraid things must continue as they are."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said:—

"My Lord, I do not wish to fix Rs. 100 as the unalterable limit. It is really for the Government to say where the line should be drawn, and I admit that in this respect the Government would be the best judge of the matter. In addition to what I said I would only bring to the notice of the Government the case of two classes of public servants whose claims for an increment of pay Government have assured us that they would be considered. I refer to the case of the Civil Court peons and clerks of the Registration Department. As regards both of these, schemes have been prepared for an increment of pay, and as far as I can understand, these schemes are being held up owing to the abnormal condition prevailing in consequence of the war. But I would press their claims again on the attention of the Government. As regards the statement that no Local Government have done anything, I would beg leave to point out that as the times are somewhat abnormal, the prevailing conditions in Bengal are also somewhat abnormal. We are all suffering no doubt in consequence of the war and we will suffer patiently because we know that all these sufferings are not certainly of our own seeking. It is due to circumstances over which we can have no control. But at the same time we must remember that this suffering is acutest in the case of those whose income or salary is small. And I therefore submit that those whose pay is of the lowest grade—they have got the first claim on the attention of the Government. I am glad to hear that Government have taken certain action in the matter and will take further action as soon as a sufficient case is made out. I am convinced that the wheels of Government move very slowly. Therefore, it becomes necessary to press this matter on the attention of the Government. It is in their hands that the destiny of these poor men lie. A difference of a few rupees may mean much to them, while it may not mean much to Government and it is they who are the acutest sufferers in the distress now prevailing in the country. I wish everybody knew fully of the extent of the distress that is now prevailing. Everybody says that there is distress, but how many realize the acuteness of that distress? A pair of dhotis costing Rs. 3 before are now selling at Rs. 8. It may be an increase of Rs. 4 or Rs. 5 only, but it may mean taking away a good substantial portion of an ordinary man's monthly income. It is for this reason that I press this resolution on the attention of the Government although the total expenditure may come up to 17 lakhs of rupees. What I would suggest is this that not only a beginning should be made, but that the beginning should be a substantial one and ways and means must also be found out by Government. It may be by paying occasional bonuses to these people or by any other way. That I leave to Government. I do not wish to say anything further.

• The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the orders recently issued by the Government for the retirement from the public service of officers attaining the age of 55 be sparingly used in the case of members of the Provincial Judicial Service so long as the conditions of initial recruitment to that service are not improved.

He said :—

"My Lord, I am told that this resolution of mine has caused something like a furore in the ranks of the munsifs. They think that if the Subordinate Judges are allowed to hold on, it will block the promotion of munsifs and it is for this reason that they fear that what may be good for the Subordinate Judges may be something like an injury to their own interests. If there is any munsif who think so, I am sorry that my resolution should have given rise to that impression. What I mean is that cases of exceptional character might occur and I ask Government to take such cases into their consideration. To begin with, we know that these munsifs are not confirmed in their posts till they attain the age of 32. Even if they are confirmed at an earlier age they cannot complete 25 years' service before they attain the age of 55, and as under the new rules he would have to retire then, he would not be entitled to draw half pension. Of course, he would be entitled to half pension if he has completed his 25 years' service. It may so happen that a Subordinate Judge is compelled to retire at 55 and if he has a few months' more service to complete his 25 years, it would be very hard for him if he is not allowed an extension so as to get the benefit of drawing full pension. I would ask Your Excellency's Government to consider these extreme cases, especially in the judicial service. I expect that when some improvements take place in the judicial service, officers may be confirmed at an earlier age than at present. Then in that case this question would not arise. With these words I beg to move the resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I support the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend. Ordinarily we are not for granting extensions, but there may be occasions to which reference has been made by the Hon'ble Mover where it might prove very hard for an officer if he is not allowed to complete his 25 years of service and to draw full pension. Their cases ought to be considered. I believe Government are also anxious to grant in such special cases certain concessions. Moreover, efficient officers of Government expect that they should be allowed to draw full pension. There are cases in which concessions ought to be given and I support the proposal. It is not necessary to speak much on the subject. As regards members of the Executive Branch since they are nominated, they pass through a probationary period and that is counted towards pension. But the munsifs are not confirmed before they attain the age of 33 or 34. Of course, in their cases the officiating period is counted, but very few of them get an officiating appointment within 3 or 4 years of their service. Under those circumstances I think it is quite reasonable that concession should be shown especially to the efficient and hard-working officers. With these words I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My Lord, I am afraid I have got to disappoint the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq regarding this resolution; for I do not think that a strong case has been made out for the acceptance of the Government, nor that by the acceptance of this resolution would the Maulvi Sahib be doing any real service to the judicial service regarding which he wants a certain amount of concession and consideration shown. The new rules have just come into force and the Provincial Government is bound not only to accept them but to make a beginning of a question which has been allowed to go on unchecked for a long time. I think, I may remind the Hon'ble Member that Government have already given their assurance that they will accept the question of the increase of pay in the junior grades as soon as a reply from the High Court is received on the subject. As to using the power of granting extensions more extensively rather than sparingly, as I have already said Government are bound to carry out the new rules under the Civil Service Regulations by which extensions are not to be granted to officers of any branch of the service except where there is an unquestionable public advantage by retaining that officer, or where the officer is really physically fit to continue. The age limit of 55 has been found to be a good working limit for retirement, and therefore there is no reason why exception should be made for one particular service. Every extension granted delays, as the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib himself knows, promotion of junior men, and if no extensions had been granted, there would now be no munsif over two years' service in the lowest grade. In these days of efficiency Government must also stipulate, like all private individuals, on having the best men available for every service, and I think that this holds good for the judicial branch of the executive, just as much as for the executive branch of the same service. Government cannot make any differentiation in a matter of this kind. Moreover, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has said that he wants this clemency to be shown in cases of an extreme nature. I would ask him to leave this to the discretion of the Government. If it is really a case where it so happens that a Sub-Judge has to complete only a few months to get his Government pension and if that officer has really done good service to Government, I think the Maulvi Sahib can rest assured that the Government are not likely to overlook such a case, but Government cannot as a general principle show such leniency to a particular service."

Turning to what the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri has said, I am afraid that I could not follow him very carefully; but I should like to say that there is some likelihood of there being a demoralising effect on the services by allowing Subordinate Judges more extensions than by disallowing them. I think the munsifs and younger men should be given a chance, and except in extreme cases, Government is bound to carry out the new rules which have only recently been issued by the Secretary of State and the Government of India. For these reasons and with the assurance that the Government will certainly in special cases look into the matter on its own merits, I hope that the Maulvi Sahib will not press this resolution before the Council. Government cannot accept it."

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"I beg leave, my Lord, to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ asked for leave to withdraw the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the annual exodus of the Government to Darjeeling be abandoned.

He said :

"My Lord, as regards this resolution I beg leave to withdraw it without discussion, as there is very little chance of its being accepted."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

18. The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that pending the establishment of Muhammadan Arts Colleges in Calcutta and Dacca, such colleges be opened in hired houses and steps be taken to make them immediately available to Muhammadan students.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is one of the questions that the Muhammadan Members of this Council have tried often and often to press upon the attention of Government, and I feel bound to say that although we have done all that we possibly could to induce Government to take some definite steps in the direction suggested in this resolution, we have still got this grievance that nothing practical has been done, and that there is no sign that anything is going to be done in the near future. I may, however, admit that in certain respects Government have done something to help Muhammadan students in pursuing their studies. For instance, the reservation of a certain number of seats in colleges and hostels; but I would earnestly ask Your Excellency to consider whether the concessions that have been made so far are really sufficient to meet the needs of the situation. My Lord, so far as the case for a Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta and in this city is concerned, we have been discussing this even since the year 1912, and we are all agreed that every year the number of Muhammadan students who, after passing the Matriculation examination, seek admission to these colleges has been gradually increasing. I do not think that I will meet with any contradiction from Government when I say that a very large number of Muhammadan students have to give up their studies in consequence of their inability to find accommodation in the existing colleges. I was taken to task for using the expression "a large number of Muhammadan students," but after all a census was taken, and I believe that I can confidently assert to-day in this hall that the number of students who have got to give up their studies for want of accommodation is really very, very large. If I am correct, the question arises whether the case for a Muhammadan Arts College has not been made out. We have discussed the question over and over again and we have been told in reply that the real difficulty in our way is one of funds. I will also admit that so far as this aspect of the question is concerned, I find that at the present moment the funds at the disposal of Government are not abundant, and that unless and until normal conditions are restored, we cannot reasonably ask Government to embark upon a fanciful expenditure. But I would, at the same time, ask Government to consider whether the proposal I am now pressing is not of a much humbler character.

After all, what is it that I want? I want that a college be started in some hired house, meaning thereby that the matter should be left primarily to private enterprise, and that Government should come forward to our help by allowing us some sort of monthly grant. Supposing the expenses of a fully equipped college come up to Rs. 5,000 a month roughly, and we raise about Rs. 3,000 by means of fees and donations, we would only require Rs. 2,000 a month or Rs. 24,000 a year from Government. If this is done, we can wait till better times are restored and we can have the genuine article. But if we are told to wait indefinitely till normal conditions are restored, I submit that we would be asked to wait much too longer than human patience can bear. We have waited five years already, and we are still harping on the same string at the present moment. I therefore submit that, so far as this proposal is concerned, there is no very unsurmountable difficulty in the way of Government accepting this resolution; and I therefore confidently hope that Government will be pleased to accept it. I might possibly be told that the Calcutta University Commission is considering the whole question of University teaching in this province, and that it would be somewhat premature to take steps in the direction I have suggested till the decision of the Commission is known.

Now, as regards the decision of the Commission, that again introduces an element of uncertainty into our calculations. We do not know how long we shall have to wait; it may be as long as the war lasts or very much longer; but I would say this much that whatever the decision of the Commission may be, there should be no possible difficulty in our having a college in a hired house and ultimately that college may be established under the rules that are to be framed by the University. I myself do not see any difficulty; and if there are any, I would like to have them pointed out; and if they are reasonable, I would not press my demand on the consideration of Government. But I have asked Government to consider this matter, and personally I do not see any difficulty in the way of it. I might have withheld my resolution till later after we received the recommendations of the University Commission. I reserve my comments till I know the attitude of Government towards the question which I have raised. With these words, I commend my resolution for the acceptance of Council."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said:—

"My Lord, I rise to support the motion which is moved by my friend to the right. I admit that the policy which the Muhammadans have followed some years back has been wrong with reference to Western education, and I think everyone will admit that we have already paid the penalty of our folly; but, I beg to submit, my Lord, just as the Muhammadan student begins to take to Western education and University education, difficulties arise in the way of the student. First, there come University regulations which limit the number of boys in schools and also the course of teaching, by which a Muhammadan student cannot get into any college that he may find near his home, because the subjects which a Muhammadan boy is likely to take up or which will give him a good Muhammadan education as well as a good high education are not taught in every college, and that is the difficulty which a Muhammadan student has to meet with. Under the present rules of the University, some colleges are affiliated in particular subjects of the University, and some of them in other subjects; so that the student has to choose a particular college to get admission, and the difficulty is that these colleges cannot admit as many Muhammadans as seek admission, because the number of colleges which provide good education for Muhammadans is limited. I therefore think that it is advisable to have a college specially for Muhammadans where subjects which are likely to be taken up by Muhammadan arts students will be taught, and so relieve the other colleges of the difficulty they find in accommodating Muhammadan boys. If my suggestion may not be considered preposterous, I may add that the best way to deal with the question, so far as Calcutta is concerned, would be to add additional classes in the Presidency College, and these classes reserved for Muhammadan boys. This can be done with very little increase in the capital expenditure and also a little increase in the running expenditure as well, because the running expenditure will certainly increase because the additional classes will mean additional professors; but we will also get some income, as my friend has stated, from the fees, which will come to about Rs. 3,000 a month, the expenditure will be Rs. 5,000, and the balance will be about Rs. 2,000. If I may be permitted, I would suggest that a similar attempt may be made in this city, which looks more or less like a city of deserted houses, and we have got a large number of buildings which are unoccupied, and they can be utilised for the temporary use of the Muhammadan Arts College; although these buildings were never intended for use as colleges or schools, they might be utilised for such a purpose with a little alteration. It will be a great relief if a college be established and the Muhammadans put there. There was some difficulty as regards hostel accommodation; our difficulty will be removed if an attempt is made to have these institutions in hired buildings. Why we press for it is that if a college is started in hired buildings, Government will feel keenly the necessity of having a Muhammadan Arts College, and we hope and believe that the establishment of a college building will be expedited. It will then be considered more urgent than it is at present. There is an impression, my Lord, right or wrong, that if Government feel the necessity for it and want to do it, it will be done without any serious inconvenience, and that ways and means could be found as ways and means have been found for many other projects which the other departments have found necessary and have given preference to other schemes. I hope, my Lord, that as this question has been discussed so often, we shall at any rate come to a solution this year and in this city which was primarily intended as the capital of Muhammadan Bengal."

Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My lord, I think it must have occurred to all Hon'ble Members on receiving notice of this resolution that the Hon'ble mover has chosen a peculiarly unseasonable time for urging these demands upon Government. The resolution as placed before us to-day is new in form; it is, however, a variation of a theme that has frequently been before us, has been discussed in this Council on many occasions, and has received the attention of the Department of Education and of Government for many years. Government's sympathy with the project is well known, and its desire to help is well known; and I think it is well known also that if the war had not intervened, our plans for ensuring special facilities for the higher education of Muhammadans would have assumed a material form by this time. The war, however, has upset our calculations, has introduced financial difficulties and has introduced difficulties relating to the recruitment of staff and equipment, and no action has been possible for the last two or three years. This suspension of action due to the war did not commend itself to many members of the Council and so the matter was brought to debate in March last, on which occasion Sir S. P. Sinha put forward the view of Government in these words :—'Government were unable to accept the resolution of pressing the institution of a Muhammadan College because we could not get the money and we could not get the staff, and even if we could, it would be necessary, I submit, even then, to wait till we know what the recommendations of the University Commission would be with regard to a matter of this kind.'

Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth ;

That was the attitude of Government five months ago, and that attitude was supported by this Council when the matter was pressed to a division. We are therefore entitled to ask whether there is any change in the situation to justify new proposals on a matter so recently dealt with. From Government's point of view, there is none. If strict economy was necessary a few months ago, it is no less necessary to-day, and if there were difficulties in recruiting staff and in procuring equipment of colleges a few months ago, these difficulties exist to-day; and if a few months ago it was considered advisable to wait for the report of the University Commission, it is no less desirable to-day when the publication of that report is presumably a few months nearer. From the Hon'ble Member's point of view, I think that the crux of the situation is, the belief that there is a very great need of additional accommodation for Muhammadan students this year. We have been told in rather vague language of the large number of Muhammadan students who have to give up their education because of their inability to secure admission into colleges. The Hon'ble Member's knowledge in this matter outstrips my own. I have made such enquiries as I have been able to make in the time at my command since I received this resolution, and have been unable to discover any clear evidence in support of the Hon'ble Member's point of view. I have written to a large number of Principals of Colleges in this province; I have consulted personally many others. I have consulted gentlemen who are not Principals of Colleges, but are engaged in educational work. I am a member of the executive body of the Calcutta University. I sit on many governing bodies and other educational committees, and only in one instance this year has any representation come before me about a difficulty of this sort, and this representation when examined was found to be scarcely substantiated by the facts.

On the other hand, I have these figures from the Presidency College, a College justly popular among Muhammadans which offers them great advantages in the matter of fees and great opportunities for the study of those subjects that are of peculiar interest to Muhammadans. This year I am informed that the number of Muhammadan students who applied within the time appointed was 50, 36 applied late; these 86 applicants were considered, and 48 were selected for admission. Of these 48, 12 failed to join in spite of the concessions that were offered, and of those 38 who had already been refused, the Principal found it impossible, when 12 vacancies were left for Muhammadans owing to the failure of these 12 to join, to secure Muhammadans to take the vacant places. This is not perhaps a conclusive argument, but it is indicative of the situation; and we may fairly assume that at the time when these unexpected vacancies occurred, the number of Muhammadan students who had not been admitted in the Presidency College, had been admitted in other colleges in Calcutta or elsewhere. No Calcutta College tells me of any special difficulty or of any specially large number of Muhammadans refused admission, nor is any such evidence forthcoming from Dacca itself. Government, therefore, cannot accept the Hon'ble Member's contention that there has arisen a special need which demands special action at this moment. The resolution, as explained by the Hon'ble Member, is rather surprising. As it reads, it suggests that Government should take action for the opening of temporary colleges in hired buildings, but the Hon'ble Member has explained it as meaning that private colleges should be opened in hired buildings, and that Government should come forward with a grant-in-aid. There is no reason that I am aware of why any gentlemen or any association interested in

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Muhammadan education should not establish their own colleges in hired houses or elsewhere. Whether a grant-in-aid would be given is a matter which can scarcely be argued in this Council. It will depend upon circumstances; upon the probable efficiency of these colleges; upon their financial stability and upon many other considerations, and I would only add the remark that there are certain colleges recently come into existence that have already pressed for Government aid, and that Government have not this year been able to encourage their aspirations. Hired houses might be used for colleges, but it is doubtful whether houses built for other purposes could be easily turned into colleges in such a way that the University would accept them. But supposing all difficulties of accommodation, staff and finances were surmounted, there still remains a difficulty which I do not think can be surmounted in any way. Colleges in Bengal, whether private or Government, must work in affiliation with the University. To secure affiliation a college must apply long in advance, and must show that it is fully equipped to do the work, and if any gentlemen started now to establish a college the earliest date by which they could be admitted to affiliation under the University, would be July of next year. Between this and July of next year many things may happen; one, I hope, will be the receipt of the report of the University Commission; another a considerable relief in the financial situation; and I would therefore put it to the Hon'ble Member, that since a delay is for many reasons necessary, it might be as well to accept once more the position that was accepted in April last, and to await the publication of the University Commission's report, and the return of more favourable financial considerations."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I would have gladly accepted the suggestion made by the Director of Public Instruction but for the fact that some of the statements which I made in support of my resolution seem to be challenged by Government. I will begin by saying that so far as the Department of Education is concerned we have no grievances whatsoever, and I may also mention here that I do not wish to embarrass the Hon'ble Members who are very sympathetic, and if we do not get what we want it is because, I am fully convinced, that the facts have not been properly placed before them. I know of a case where a number of students were refused admission in a Government College. Government had to prepare the statistics and the task was entrusted to an officer, who, in his turn, entrusted it to a subordinate Muhammadan assistant, who collected an information which contradicted a statement made at a meeting at which the Director of Public Instruction presided. I mention this facts only to show that fact, and support my argument that figures collected by Government are liable to contain errors. The Director of Public Instruction has taken up the position that all the Muhammadan students who passed the Matriculation Examination and those who passed the Intermediate Examination in Science found seats in existing colleges, but here I must strongly join issue with him. We know the number of the Matriculation passed students and it cannot possibly be that the existing colleges with accommodation for 25 per cent. Muhammadan students were sufficient for them. If he really presses the point, I will prove it to satisfaction that this is not a fact. The late Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam in the year 1910 were so fully convinced of the necessity of a separate Muhammadan Arts College that a scheme was ordered to be made out and a scheme was made out, when the partition was annulled and the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam ceased to exist. Am I to understand that what was necessary in 1910 is not necessary in 1918 although attention has been repeatedly drawn to it by the representations of the community. Am I to understand that the necessity has ceased to exist in 1918? I would say most emphatically that it has not. I do not know whether I should be challenged, but I propose to place these facts before the Director of Public Instruction. Then we are told that economy is necessary. I do most certainly agree. The previous resolution was based on the recognition of an economical necessity. The police budget is extravagant. We all agree that economy is necessary there, but the general complaint is that no economy is practised under that head. I am reminded in this connection of a story. A gentleman was asked to practise economy. He went over his budget and found that the only way he could practise economy was by curtailing the amount which he used to spend on charity. We are asked that in order to practise economy all we have got to do is to cut out Rs. 25,000 meant for a Muhammadan College. I want to put the question seriously to Government that if they are agreed that there should be economy, is this the direction in which economy should be practised? I think that this scheme should be taken in hand now. It is no use arguing as I am prepared to admit that the scheme may possibly have to be postponed in consequence of the recommendations that are going to be made by the Universities Commission. Then we have been told that if the war had not intervened we would have got something. The scheme was prepared by the Eastern Bengal and Assam Government, then came the re-partition which prevented the scheme from being put into operation. Then the proposal was taken up by the Government of Your Excellency's predecessor, and before a scheme could be prepared came the war. Then we again raised the question before Government. I do not know how many obstacles still there are to encounter. But unless Government do really take this matter up in right earnest, there will never be a real solution of the problem.

There is one thing more which I want to press most strongly for the consideration of Government and it is this: How is it that although year after year we are bringing this question to the notice of Your Excellency's Government, sometimes during the Budget discussion, sometimes by moving resolutions and sometimes by putting interpellations until the question has become one of the most pressing questions in this Council going from year's end to year's end, and yet nothing has been done? Your Excellency may know that at the time of the annulment of partition, a solemn pledge was given to the community that something would be done in the matter of education. At that time we thought that we would have the Dacca College and along with it a Muhammadan Arts College at Dacca. I take it that these solemn pledges are pledges which the Government are bound to fulfil. We are told that the present moment is most unseasonable for a resolution of this kind and that I should not have brought it up. Unseasonable indeed! There seems to be a season for everything. There seems to be a season for the establishment of the Patna University and the Bihar High Court. But when we urge anything upon the attention of the Government, we are told that the time is unseasonable. There seems to be a season for everything but no season for improving Muhammadan education. We have been asking for that something for which the Allies are fighting—the desire for the redemption of something like a solemn pledge."

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to go over trodden ground or bring forward facts and figures; but I think that the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq has been carried away somewhat by his enthusiasm and his earnestness in having the scheme now started, has overlooked a fact which the Director of Public Instruction brought out in his speech, viz., that if you were to start a new college even now, the chances were that you could not get affiliation from the University till July, 1919. If that be correct, I think the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution may be easy in his mind that we shall receive the report of the Calcutta University Commission before that ; and that being so, I would ask him to consider very carefully whether or not, in the best interests of Muhammadan education, it would be just as well to wait a little longer. Government is not blind to the fact of the growing need of Muhammadan education in the country, and Government would certainly have done more had not the war restrictions come in between ; and I think that if the Hon'ble Member will weigh this point in his mind, and when he finds that really and truly the University Commission's report is likely to come up earlier than the affiliation of a new college, I think he would be well advised to wait. That is all I have to say. The Director of Public Instruction, on behalf of Government, has already stated the reasons for which the resolution cannot be accepted."

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS ITEM No. 19.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HUQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Muhammadan opinion be invited as largely as possible on the question of legislation to provide for the levy of a voluntary tax on Muhammadans in Bengal to raise funds for Muhammadans education.

He said :—

"My lord, I think it necessary to explain the position which I take up in urging this resolution for acceptance by Your Excellency's Government. We have all felt that for several years past that one of the chief difficulties in the way of Muhammadan students is not merely the want of accommodation in existing colleges, but also the obstacles that naturally arise from the fact that Muhammadan students belong to a very poor community. We also recognise that under present conditions Government cannot give us much substantial aid, and we therefore thought that one of the best courses that we could adopt was to tax ourselves to raise funds for the purposes of Muhammadan education. I might at once be told that if such is our decision, why should we not do it by non-official means among ourselves by providing for it, instead of asking Government to legislate in this direction? The reasons, my lord, are obvious. In the first place, it is very difficult to organise the levy of a tax and its realisation. Secondly, I must admit, that if such a matter were undertaken by private enterprise there would be some chance, at any rate, of funds being misappropriated, if not actually misapplied to improper purposes. We, therefore, thought that the best course under existing circumstances would be to have legislation taken on the lines suggested in the recommendations contained in the Bill which I formally drafted and presented to the Secretary for introduction in this Council in order to levy a voluntary tax on Muhammadans for the purpose of raising funds for Muhammadan education. Before that Bill could be introduced, it was necessary to obtain the sanction of the Government of India, but the Government of India, I was informed, had objected to the introduction of that Bill for reasons which were not communicated to me in detail. The real reason, it seems to me, is based on the language of section 79 of the Government of India Act which enacts that the local legislature of any province may not, without the previous sanction of the Governor General, make or take into consideration any law affecting any tax for the time being in force—I have read from the relevant portion of this section. I thought, my lord, that with the proper interpretation of this section, the Bill that I presented in this Council was unobjectionable. The Government of India having, however, ruled otherwise, it was not possible for me to press upon the Government for permission to introduce the Bill. But what I would suggest by this resolution is that Muhammadan opinion may be unofficially invited, and if we find that Muhammadan opinion is practically unanimous, and that there is a large body of Muhammadan opinion behind this demand, we may have made out a case to go up to the Government of India for a reconsideration of that decision. I do not say that opinions should be invited as if the Bill has been already presented in Council, but what I do respectfully ask Your Excellency's Government is to address the leading Muhammadans and associations and other persons interested in Muhammadan education inviting them to state their opinion clearly on the question of the feasibility of a tax of that character; but as regards the larger question as to whether such a tax would be acceptable to the Muhammadan community, if the Government find that there is a strong body of Muhammadan opinion in favour of it, I think we might then make out a good case for going up to the Government of India for the introduction of my Bill. With these explanatory remarks, I beg to commend my resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

Resolutions.Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, we are told that in order to take our proper place in the public life of the province we must get ourselves properly educated, but we find that facilities are wanting. And when we want that difficulties may be met we are told that money is not available for the purpose. Now we want to be allowed to tax ourselves and we are not allowed to bring forward a Bill for that purpose in the Provincial Council. I think I am right when I say that at least two Provincial Governments were favourable to a legislation of this kind—I mean the Governments of Bombay and Bengal. My Hon'ble friend here made out a draft Bill and the Legislative Department circulated a notice in which it was stated that the Bill was likely to be introduced at a particular meeting of the Council. But when the agenda paper was issued we found that that item was not in it. We subsequently learned that the Government of India have refused sanction for introduction. The Bombay Government also tried to introduce Mr. Sharda's Bill but the Government of India could not see their way to sanction its introduction. The Government have not a private fund ready for us. We have tried in various ways to raise a fund. First, we wanted to raise money by taxation and, secondly, we have tried to utilize the waqf funds by taking measures by which they could be used for Muhammadan education—the purpose for which they were intended. We have been refused assistance on both occasions and, as my Hon'ble friend has just remarked, we have been told that if the Muhammadans are so willing and so anxious to tax themselves then why not have a voluntary taxation? But, my lord, there are serious difficulties in the way of our doing so. If it is believed that there are 23 millions of Muhammadans who would gladly pay just as they pay Government revenues, then in that case, my lord, it would be putting too much value on the patriotism and public spirit of any community in the world. These men have to pay land revenue and if they fail to do so their estates are in danger of being sold. Is it likely that without some such safeguard the money will be forthcoming? Besides, there will be men of all sorts and dispositions in every community. I do not think the Muhammadan community is an exception to it. Believing that the money will be forthcoming and intending to have the work equitably distributed and also to make it suitable to all persons the only means which we could adopt was to tax the Muhammadans for the purpose of advancing

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

Muhammadan education. I have got a particular interest in the matter because the constituency which I represent is one which is particularly poor but where the desire for education is very great. The Muhammadans whom I have the honour to represent belong to a race who lived by public service in the old days and they are a class who without education have got no other profession to follow. They have now fallen into very bad times and the only means by which they can retrieve their fortune is by getting a thorough and sound education. That education they cannot receive unless some pecuniary assistance is forthcoming. That assistance cannot be forthcoming from Government as their resources are limited. And if we are not allowed to tax ourselves all that we want is that the Government of Bengal may be pleased to ascertain whether a large, an overwhelming body of Muhammadan opinion is or is not favourable to this taxation. I make bold to say that it will be found to be favourable and it is quite apparent from the fact that people have demanded it in our conferences and also by the fact that two members of Provincial Councils had taken the trouble of drafting a Bill. There is a genuine desire for it. And if an inquiry is made it will convince the Government of India that it is a measure which may be allowed to be introduced into this Council. We may be told perhaps that so far as provincial taxation is concerned, it may be one of the questions that will come up before the reformed Council and so it is premature to take up this question now, and that it may be left to the new Council to decide about the taxation. But, my lord, the Government move slowly and by the time the reformed Council can go into this question and no action had been taken in the meanwhile, it will be too late perhaps, so far as the less educated of my community is concerned. Unless they are allowed or in other words unless they are given proper facilities for receiving education, I am afraid they will not be able to take their proper place in, or to share the responsibilities of, the Government under the Reform scheme. So we can hardly afford to wait, and I hope Your Excellency's Government will be pleased to take the matter into their favourable consideration."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My lord, I would like to say a few words with reference to one remark that has been made by the last speaker. He has cited as an example of the unsympathetic and obstructive attitude of Government towards the laudable desire of the Muhammadan community to tax itself in the cause of education, that a Bill of this type in another province was rejected by the Government of India even against the wishes of the local Government. I happened to be Home Secretary at the time when that question was under discussion, and I may tell the Hon'ble Member that he has been misinformed as to the facts, which were these. The Hon'ble Mr. Bhurgri submitted a Bill, desiring self-taxation by the Muhammadan community for purposes of education in Sind; it was supported by the local Government and the then Commissioner of Sind, who, I think, was Mr. Younghusband. Its various aspects came under criticism by the Government of India, with the result that prima facie certain points appeared to be unsatisfactory, and it was referred back to the local Government for further consultation with Muhammadan opinion and examination. By that time there was a new Commissioner in Sind, so far as I remember—Mr. Lucas; and on further enquiry he ascertained that his predecessor had been misled by certain enthusiastic advocates of this taxation, the true facts being that the Muhammadan community as a whole did not desire taxation and did not favour the measure. In consequence of this further report the local Government withdrew its support to the Bill, which then lapsed. It is incorrect to say that the Bill was rejected by the Government of India against the wishes of the local Government."

Resolutions.Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My lord, this resolution is couched in general terms, viz., that the opinion of the Muhammadan community be invited on the question of legislation to provide for the levy of a voluntary tax on Muhammadans in Bengal to raise funds for Muhammadan education.

The Hon'ble mover has, however, explained that what he has in view is not a referendum to the Muhammadans on the general question whether legislation of this kind is necessary or desirable. He realises that there must be concrete proposals showing what is intended, how money will be raised and how it will be spent : in fact, the people must be shown exactly how their pockets will be affected. What he desires is that the views of the Muhammadan community should be obtained not on a general question but on a particular measure, and that is the Bill which I believe he himself drafted and the introduction of which was refused by the Government of India. I gather from the Hon'ble mover's speech that he is not fully aware of the reasons why the Government of India refused to sanction the introduction of this Bill. I propose to tell him the reasons briefly. One of the features of the Bill was that among the Muhammadans who were to be made liable to pay an educational cess, were those paying income-tax ; and it was proposed to levy a super tax of 25 per cent. on the amount they paid as income-tax. The Bill provided that the cess should be levied from all Muhammadans in Bengal ; and this was one of three classes on which it was to be imposed. The Bill, as required by the rules about proposed legislation, was submitted to the Government of India. The Government of India, in exercise of their powers under the Government of India Act, were unable to sanction its introduction, because the Bill affected public revenues by a proposed increase of 25 per cent. to the income-tax ; and the Government of India could not permit the proposed addition of 25 per cent. In consequence of this decision of the Government of India, this Council has not and cannot have seisance of the Bill. In spite of this, the Council is asked in this resolution to recommend to Government that Muhammadan opinion should be invited on a Bill which could not be introduced. I ask, my lord, whether a referendum on a Bill which cannot be introduced can serve any useful purpose. I venture to submit that this is not a practical proposition.

I confess to some surprise at the resolution being moved at all. In the statement of objects and reasons which the Hon'ble Member appended to the Bill, he stated that the Muhammadan community was almost unanimous as to the necessity of a Muhammadan educational cess, and that the Bill was intended to give practical effect to the almost unanimous wishes of the entire community. If this is the case, I fail to see what is the good of Government consulting Muhammadan opinion on the matter. Government, however, have no evidence of any demand from the Muhammadans of Bengal for a voluntary tax for educational purposes, or any proof that they would welcome the imposition of an educational cess. It is true that after the Hon'ble Member had sent in his Bill, a resolution was moved by the All-India Educational Conference at Calcutta in favour of the Bill, but apart from this, Government have nothing to show that such a measure is demanded or would be welcomed by all the Muhammadans in Bengal. Perhaps, what the Hon'ble Member desires is that the District Associations and the Anjumans, which are numerous in this Presidency, should be given an opportunity of publicly expressing views which so far they have not expressed. But it is perfectly open to the Hon'ble Member to obtain their views himself. He can easily get publicity given to his proposals for legislation ; in fact, this debate will give a certain amount of publicity to them. Public opinion has ample means of expressing itself, and if it does not choose to avail itself of them, it is not the duty of Government to advertise the proposals, and if I may use such a phrase, beat up public opinion for the Hon'ble Member. This being so, I must, on behalf of Government, oppose the resolution with an uncompromising negative."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I have followed with great interest, the discussion on the proposal of two accredited representatives of the Muhammadan community, of taxing themselves for the purpose of advancing Muhammadan education. I have observed in public prints statements to the effect that if any portion of the administration of this country is entrusted to the people they will be very loth to tax themselves and all the discredit of failure will recoil upon the Government. But here I find, to my surprise, that two representatives of the Muhammadan community are asking for permission to impose taxation upon themselves for the purpose of promoting education. That shows the real earnestness of the community which they represent.

My lord, an observation has been made by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler with regard to the introduction of certain Bills in the Bombay Council, and it is this : One Divisional Commissioner found that the Muhammadan community were anxious that Government should permit them to tax themselves, while another Commissioner found that the community were opposed to it. Is it not then the best course to invite the opinion of the whole community saying that such a proposal has been made, what is the opinion of the community on the subject? I think that that is the best way. My lord, I do not know what are the contents of the Bill, but, if I have followed Mr. O'Malley right, the Bill suggests an increase of 25 per cent. on the income-tax and as he says it would encroach on the Imperial revenue. I do not know whether the Muhammadans want an increase of 25 per cent. in the income-tax or to levy an education cess, but if it is stated in the Bill that the money would be spent towards Muhammadan education and if it is brought before the community, they would be free to state whether they accepted it or not. Perhaps they would be more ready to welcome an education cess. It has been stated that it is for the Muhammadan community to express their opinion and not for the Government to advertise the proposal. I find that the All-India Muhammadan Educational Conference asking Government to empower them to impose taxation upon themselves. There have been one or two other Muhammadan public bodies asking Government help on this matter. It may be said that they do not constitute the entire Muhammadan community. But, my lord, is there any objection to ask for a public expression of opinion on the subject or is it that there have been certain matters in the Bill with which Government do not entirely agree? I know of an analogous case where the people wanted legislation but Government would not have it. There was a great difference of opinion between the Government and the people over the Religious Endowment Bill of the late Mr. Ananda Charlu. I know that there is a great demand in the Indian community for years and years together for a Bill to provide for control over their religious endowments. I am speaking from my personal experience extending over a quarter of a century."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"Is the Hon'ble Member in order in introducing these arguments?"

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I think the Hon'ble Member is getting dangerously near the border line. I hope the Hon'ble Member will see that his remarks bear on the particular proposal before the Council."

Resolutions.Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR continuing said :—

"If the Government would ask for an expression of public opinion especially on an important proposal like this, I am sure they will be in a better position to know the opinion of the community than can be known through public conferences or public bodies which may not represent all sections of the community. It may be asked why Government should advertise? But it is not a question of advertisement. And Government, even before the Reform proposals are given effect to, does not mean the Government of bureaucracy only. I think, therefore, that we can ask Your Excellency to ascertain public opinion on any public subject and especially on an important subject like this on which the Government are not convinced that public opinion has been adequately expressed. I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"I am extremely sorry that the attitude of Government should be so frankly hostile for I felt convinced when I gave notice of the resolution that the recommendation which I was making to Government was of a perfectly innocuous character. I would not have taken up the time of the Council further because I know the fate of my resolution, but that I want to clear up one or two points to which reference has been made in the official reply. It is said that the Bill affects the public revenues. I have considered the terms of the section and I fail to see how the Bill can be said to affect the public revenues of the country. After all, what I propose is that a cess should be imposed under certain conditions and at a certain rate on all Muhammadans residing in this Presidency and all that can be said if this tax is imposed is that it takes away to a certain extent the taxable capacity of a particular section of the people, namely, the Muhammadan community. Now let us consider that in consequence of various requirements the Muhammadan community are to be taxed, say, up to 50 per cent. of their income. But after all if we have imposed all the taxes we propose to levy we are going to leave to the people a certain margin out of their income. And this proposal of mine can be given effect to by taxing only an infinitesimal portion of the income left in their hands for bare sustenance. I therefore fail to see how the proposed taxation can possibly affect public revenues. However, that is the opinion of the Government of India and it must be accepted for the present. I am then told that it is useless wasting our time to invite opinion on a Bill that cannot be introduced. Well, if I thought that the position taken up by the Government of India were unassailable, I would certainly have never come up before Your Excellency's Government. I believe that the Government of India have arrived at a hasty decision and that if further facts are placed before them, they will reconsider their decision and give leave to introduce the Bill in this Council. Although at the present moment the Bill cannot be introduced the reason why I make this proposal is that if we invite public opinion I feel sure we will have collected materials which will enable us to make out a strong case for the reconsideration of the decision arrived at by the Government of India. I have next been told that instead of Government collecting the opinion why not collect the opinion ourselves? I certainly thought of that, but there are certain difficulties in my way. I wrote to several leading Muhammadan gentlemen. 73 in number, about this measure, and the Hon'ble Members will be surprised to hear that not more than five of them condescended to reply to my letter. I met many of them personally and they seemed very enthusiastic, but they did not reply to my letter because they said they could not appreciate the importance of it. We have got to deal with men who have this idea, if I may be excused for saying so, and it is for this reason that I thought if Government were to ask them for an opinion they would certainly give it. Mr. O'Malley has read out the preamble of the Bill which says that the Government are convinced there is a strong consensus of opinion amongst the Muhammadans that this tax should be imposed. But I may be permitted to point out that we have got to anticipate it and without an inquiry it cannot be said that it is incorrect. I am told there is no evidence that the Muhammadans wanted to be taxed and that there is certainly not good evidence for collecting their opinion. It may mean some trouble to Government, but I thought that the Government would be the proper machinery for collecting evidence on this particular point. It would be most welcome to the community that Government should undertake this work. Then I am reminded of the fate of a Bill of a similar character which was attempted to be introduced in the Bombay Council. I know of the case. But as far as I know in Bengal there is a genuine desire that this Bill should be introduced and that is why I want that public opinion should be consulted. After all I have tried to place my views before the Council. And I cannot help pressing it to the attention of Government."

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that definite steps be taken to organise and develop technical and industrial education in Bengal, especially in connection with the Dacca School of Engineering.

He said:—

"My lord, this again is one of our hardy Dacca annuals. I moved a similar resolution in this very House in the year 1916 when I had the privilege of listening to a very able and instructive speech from the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mukherjee, who spoke in opposition to my resolution, and brought all his expert knowledge to bear on the question then before the Council. I do not know if it will serve any useful purpose to go over the same ground which we covered on the last occasion, and it is for this reason that I have tried to note down some of the definite proposals which I want to make in connection with the proposal now under discussion. It will be seen, my lord, that this is somewhat different to the proposal which I brought forward in 1916. On that occasion I made a definite proposal, but on the present occasion I leave it to Government to take whatever steps may seem proper for organising and developing technical and industrial education in Bengal, especially in connection with the Dacca School of Engineering. I wish to make a few suggestions. In the first place, I suggest that in the interests of these important branches of study, the question of their control and supervision should be taken out of the hands of the Director of Public Instruction and placed under the Director of Industries. There are various obvious reasons for doing so. We must admit that the time of the Director of Public Instruction is fully occupied with general educational matters and he cannot possibly be expected to devote much attention to the development of technical and industrial education as the needs of the problem demand. Secondly, the Director of Public Instruction, as far as I am aware, has not any officer subordinate to him who can be entrusted with the work of controlling the technical and industrial education of this province. Then the Director of Industries is supposed to be a wholtime officer for the purpose to which technical and industrial education really relate. It is but fair to ask that he should be entrusted with the work. The second proposal that I propose to make is that demonstration shops in technical and industrial institutions may be opened where artisans and skilled labourers may learn different kinds of industrial work. The third proposal that I make is that boiler examinations be begun in Bengal, and the students from the Sibpur Apprentice Department and the Dacca School of Engineering may be given equal facilities to sit at these examinations. The fourth recommendation that I want to make is for the amalgamation of the three existing joint, technical and survey boards, making one consisting of experts to control all the technical and industrial education in Bengal. The next proposal I want to make is that the electrical and mechanical classes in the Dacca School of Engineering be re-opened. These are principally the main proposals that I propose to make in connection with this resolution.

As regards the Dacca School of Engineering I do not wish to take up the time of this Council by urging the question over again, but I would simply urge this fact for the consideration of this Council, that the question that was raised by the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookherjee can be answered at least to some extent at the present stage. One of the points that he raised was that there are no workshops where these persons could get some sort of technical training as well as theoretical, but what he wanted was a large number of workshops where they could learn the practical part, and this dearth of workshops really made the question of the location of a suitable school of engineering in Dacca, so far as technical education was concerned, difficult.

I do not know much about the matter, as I have to speak as a layman, but if the railway workshops can be utilized for the purpose, they will provide sufficient opportunity for the kind of training on which the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookherjee laid so much stress. If the railway workshops can be utilised for the purpose, one of the main reasons given by Sir R. N. Mookherjee in opposition to my resolution would certainly fall to the ground. I do not wish to take up the time of the Council, but the importance of the matter must be recognised by all. I do not doubt that the Government are prepared to do all that can be done. The only question is whether any steps can be taken in the direction indicated by my resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My lord, I have very little to add to what has been said on this resolution by the Hon'ble mover himself. The attention is one which has engaged the attention of Government for a long time, and I believe that Government are as much anxious as the people of this country to find employment for the young men of the middle classes in Bengal, other than those of a clerk or a lawyer. I believe that in order to secure for them employment, we must give them a proper training and one of the avenues of employment would be that of a mechanic and an electrician, and other professions. Therefore I think that it is a very desirable and reasonable proposal that technical and industrial institutions should be established in Bengal, particularly in connection with the Dacca School of Engineering. We want a good deal of facilities and apparatus and some sort of workshop where students can be given this sort of education. I believe the local people, so far as the formal part of the resolution is concerned, would be only too willing and glad to come forward with their help to make this institution successful. I think Government should take the initiative and leave the organisation in the hands of Government officials.

With these few words, my lord, I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My lord, there is great divergence between the terms of the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi and the definite recommendations into which that resolution has resolved. I think the Hon'ble Member will scarcely expect me to return offhand, on behalf of Government, a definite answer to such definite and technical proposals. I can assure him that these recommendations will be placed in the proper quarter; some of them have long been receiving consideration though they may not mature in the exact form in which they are now framed, and I hope the Hon'ble Mover will be content with that assurance with regard to his specific proposals. As the departments are at present organised, the Director of Industries is not in any way concerned with industrial or technical education; his functions are of a very specific character, and are determined at this moment by specific problems due very largely to war conditions; and I do not think it is possible to contemplate that the functions now exercised by the Director of Public Instruction in the Department of Technical Education should be transferred to the Director of Industries."

I would refer next to the proposal that the electrical and mechanical classes should be re-opened at the Dacca School of Engineering. In the debate on the Hon'ble Member's resolution of two years ago, the situation was clearly explained by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Lyon; and it was then pointed out that the facilities granted at Dacca to students for the study of mechanical and electrical engineering were being used to a very small extent. I have the figures here; and I find that in 1913-14, there were only four students in this department out of 266 in the school. In 1914-15, there were only 9 out of 211; and in 1915-16 there were 5 out of 211. The expenditure was considerable; there was at the same time but a small number of students taking these classes at Sibpur, and Government as trustee of the public revenues felt it impossible to continue these classes at such heavy expenditure. Accordingly, this work was concentrated at Sibpur; and it will be remembered that Sir R. N. Mukherjee and other members of the Council also strongly urged this course, because of the peculiar opportunities offered to students who follow their studies in large engineering and industrial centres. Since then, these classes at Sibpur have become very popular; and there is at the present moment a very large demand, a demand indeed almost too large to be met at the present moment. Government, therefore, is doing its best. There are difficulties of staff and the recruiting of competent men is almost impossible at the present moment. There are difficulties in securing additional machinery. If these difficulties obtain in connection with Sibpur where extension might be possible, surely the difficulties would be much accentuated if we endeavoured to re-establish similar classes at Dacca. Further, we are advised at present that the heavy demand on the classes at Sibpur is the demand for the opportunities that Sibpur gives, not merely a demand for training in mechanical and electrical engineering, but for training in those subjects under the peculiarly favourable conditions which attach to the Civil Engineering College at Sibpur. It is true that Eastern Bengal students find it more expensive and more inconvenient to follow their studies in Calcutta than in Dacca, and by a natural sentiment which we all appreciate and which in educational work is peculiarly valuable, they would prefer to have the opportunities here; but sentiment and cost are not the only considerations. In the matter of engineering training the opportunities for a satisfactory practical training are a very potent determinative and the extra expense to which Eastern Bengal students who go to Sibpur are put is more than compensated by the additional prospects they have in after life.

For these reasons, and unless there occurs any fundamental change in the situation, Government is not able to take into consideration the re-institution of the teaching of these subjects at the Dacca School of Engineering.

Proposals for the development and improvement of the work of the Dacca School of Engineering are under consideration, as also schemes for the improvement and development of the Civil Engineering College at Sibpur and other institutions. I trust that the Hon'ble Member will be satisfied with the answer I have given, and will see no necessity to press this resolution to a vote."

The Hon'ble MAULVI FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I can say that I am satisfied with the reply given, and I would beg Your Excellency's permission to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM NO. 21.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that questions relating to the appointment and transfer of Muhammadan Marriage Registrars be finally decided by Government on the recommendation of the Permanent Committee and that the said Committee be reconstituted, if necessary, so as to place it on a workable basis.

He said :—

"My lord, this is a resolution which exclusively concerns the Muhammadan community; but for one or two matters which have given rise to this resolution being pressed in this Council, I would not have chosen to take up the time of this Council by bringing forward a resolution of this character. I know that the orders of Government in this connection have already been put into force regarding the rules for the future appointment of Muhammadan Marriage Registrar and it might seem somewhat futile to move a resolution at the present moment. I think that the resolution of Government has put into force certain rules which provide for the appointment of Muhammadan Marriage Registrars; there are certain reasons why I thought fit to place this resolution before the Council in order to get the opportunity of placing, for the consideration of this Council, certain matters of a somewhat important character. In the first place, the proposals that have been accepted by the Government are that the appointments should be made by the local Anjumans and Muhammadan Associations; and that after the Anjumans have made certain suggestions their recommendations are to go up to Government, and one out of two nominations should be selected for the vacancies. I wonder if Government really took into consideration the fact that most of these Anjumans or Muhammadan Associations are hardly organised institutions, and that they exist only in name. There are some which come into existence only when the Governor goes to visit a particular locality, in order to have the honour of presenting an address to His Excellency. Disorganised institutions of this kind can hardly be entrusted with the work of selecting persons for appointment in responsible position. It is obvious that if these powers are given to Anjumans, there is always one man who runs the whole show and he will be able to exercise in some cases some sort of nepotism which in all cases should be condemned. Secondly, my lord, the decision of Government was arrived at without any reference to public opinion. No association was consulted and no Muhammadan of any position in this Presidency was consulted, and the Government took this decision on its own initiative without allowing the public to have any say in the matter. The permanent committee, which has been recognized for 30 years was not allowed to express any opinion on these proposals. I might be told that a member of the Government who himself is a Muhammadan did introduce this change. I must confess that that argument does not appeal to me at all. I submit that if a member of the Government does propose a certain measure, affecting to a certain extent the rights and privileges of any section of the community or of the people, it is the bounden duty of that member to consult public opinion and to act accordingly. To act on his own initiative, without consulting public opinion, is to act like an autocrat and it is not made the least objectionable because he happens to be an Indian. If he tries to drive a coach and four through our rights and privileges, he is liable to still more condemnation than any European who wants to do so. I therefore submit that this decision, which was taken by Government without consulting public opinion in a matter of this character, is an insult direct to the community, and an insult to the permanent committee. I do not know whether Government could be moved to reconsider their decision, but I have recommended in the resolution itself that the Permanent Committee if necessary be reconstituted so as to place it on a workable basis. I freely admit that the Permanent Committee is a huge body, and is hardly a body which can be of any practical use so far as these questions are concerned; and therefore I recommend that the Permanent Committee be reconstituted, and that after the district associations have submitted their nominations, Government may be pleased to consult the reformed Permanent Committee in finally making appointments. In this way Muhammadan opinion both in the districts as also the representatives from various parts of the Province would be taken before final appointments are made. With these few words I beg to commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

“ My lord, it is on very rare occasions that I find myself in disagreement with the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq and unfortunately it is one of those occasions. The Hon'ble Mover has said that the rules for appointing Marriage Registrars have been framed without consulting Muhammadan opinion. So far I agree with him. But the decision taken by Government is a wise decision and it will serve very useful purpose. I do not deny that in some parts of Bengal Anjumans come into existence on the eve of an official visit and for the purpose of presenting addresses to him. I know that there are in this Presidency at headquarters of districts both in Western and Eastern Bengal, Muhammadan Associations which have done good and useful work and even granting that there are Associations which are practically one-man shows—when these Associations are given a certain amount of responsibility in recommending the appointment of Marriage Registrars, they will do better work than they have hitherto done. If it is one-man show then that one man will lose the influence which he now exercises and he will have to make room for other people and the Association would become more active and more popular than they are to-day. I certainly agree with the Hon'ble Mover that these recommendations from these bodies may be placed before the Permanent Committee before being finally accepted by the Government, and that out of the two recommendations by these Committees one may be selected by the Permanent Committee itself. I have no objection to that, but what I want to place before Your Excellency's Government is that so far as the original nominations are concerned I would leave them to the local Associations and I think that if these local Associations are given this and other responsible work they will get some amount of responsible and popular support. By this way they will gradually help in the formation of Muhammadan public opinion in the mofussil and also stimulate activity in Muhammadan public life. On these grounds I would press that the present system be maintained so far as original nominations are concerned, but I want the right of recommendation for the appointment of Marriage Registrars being vested in public working bodies representative of the community. With these words I beg to say that whatever decision Government may take, the present rules should not be departed from."

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING, said :—

"My lord, the Hon'ble Mover has recognised that this matter has very recently been under discussion and consideration; that the whole question was examined very carefully last year, and that the views of Government at that time were recorded in a resolution of September 1917. At that time, the Government of Bengal had the special advantage of the advice and experience of a Muhammadan gentleman as a member of the Bengal Government; and in this connection, I must say I do not understand what was the exact relevance of the remarks which the Hon'ble Mover made on that subject. The decision then made, Sir, was that while this Permanent Central Committee should remain, it was desirable and convenient that it should only perform the functions of an Advisory Committee on general questions, while retaining the functions of an examining body; but the duties of the selection of candidates were decentralized among local Advisory Committees which were to be constituted. The decisions then made were embodied in the rules which were published so recently as April last; and, indeed, it was only in June last that the proposals of the Inspector-General regarding the personnel of these Advisory Committees were approved. In making his recommendations, the Inspector-General followed the instructions of Government that where there were suitable Muhammadan Associations they should be recognised, and where such suitable agencies did not exist, local committees were to be formed ad hoc and consulted.

"Now, the Hon'ble Member has raised in this connection two questions, viz., the appointment and the transfer of Muhammadan Marriage Registrars, but the most of the arguments in his speech were directed to the question of appointment. As I have stated, it has been decided that, as a matter of policy, Government should obtain the assistance of these local Advisory Committees for appointments; but as regards transfers, they should be retained in departmental control. The Hon'ble Member apparently desires that the Central Committee should have powers under these two heads. His first argument is that these local bodies are not organised, and that they are unsuitable agencies. The answer is that the Inspector-General has been informed that where an Anjuman is not suitable, or where there is no Anjuman, he should, in consultation with the District Registrar, submit the names of suitable nominees for the local committees. In the second place he has argued that the change was made without consultation with the Muhammadan public, and without consultation with the Permanent Committee; and I am afraid that it is really here where, if I may use the expression, the shoe pinches. I may say perfectly frankly that it is premature to decide whether further changes are now necessary. It was only in June last that the personnel of the new Committees were created and such experience as has been obtained is to the effect that the new arrangement is working more satisfactorily among the Muhammadans than the old one. It has been admitted by the Hon'ble Member that the Permanent Committee is not a suitable agency for dealing with appointments throughout the province, and the Hon'ble Member who supports him has urged that, after all, there is a great deal to be said for this decision.

"In the next place, as regards transfers, on which the Hon'ble Member has lightly touched, but which is a subject which is included in the resolution. I may say that the authority to sanction transfers, with which might be included suspensions and dismissals, was at no time specially included by

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Government amongst the functions of the Central Committee. In this case also orders were passed quite recently. Therefore, I must oppose this resolution, on behalf of Government, on the main ground that the present arrangements were settled after careful consideration so lately as September 1917; and that nothing has occurred since that date to justify a resiling from the decisions which were then made.

"I should like, however, to state in this connection that in that same resolution, the Government of Bengal did undertake on the return of normal financial conditions, to appoint two special officers for the inspection of Muhammadan Registration offices in view of the fact that the inspection of these offices is at present inadequate. If such appointments are made, it may be possible to meet the views of the Hon'ble Mover and those who think with him on this subject of Muhammadan Marriage Registrars. But as I have said, Sir, there are good grounds for opposing the resolution as it at present stands."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I can well understand the feelings of the members of this Council by having to listen to a discussion at this late hour of the day, especially on a subject which is of no interest except to three of us sitting in this corner. But I feel obliged to say a few words, because I want that the points that have been raised by me in moving this resolution ought to be cleared up whether my resolution be accepted or not. I have been told, as anticipated, that the decision was arrived at by a member of Government who was himself a Muhammadan. That argument however does not carry conviction with me; he might be a Muhammadan or anybody else. The point is not whether the decision which was arrived at was wise or right; but the point is that the decision was arrived at without consulting public opinion on a question of principle which affects a large section of the community. I want to point out to Your Excellency that although public opinion may have been disregarded, we cannot allow this sort of policy to pass without a protest. I maintain that the members of the Permanent Committee who had offered advice to Government for more than 30 years and whose functions and privileges were going to be curtailed, ought to have been allowed to have their say in this matter. Supposing, my lord, the Government want to take away the privileges which we enjoy in this Council, without consulting us, or giving us an opportunity of expressing our opinion. Would it not be a most humiliating position for us if we had allowed that sort of thing to be done?"

We are told that there are public associations which may be entrusted with the task of making selections for vacancies. Why was it, my lord, that this decision was taken in the dark and flung upon us in the public by means of a resolution. I object not to the decision, because the decision may have been wise; but I object to the principle of arriving at a decision without consulting public opinion.

My friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, who said that he was going to oppose me on the present occasion, has, I am glad to find, unconsciously supported me in the speech which he has delivered. He has stated that the original nominations may be entrusted to the local Anjuman but that the decision may be made on the recommendation of the Permanent Committee. If he reads the Resolution he will find that my resolution refers to the final decision; and he is prepared to agree with me there. I think, therefore, he has in fact supported my resolution.

I am told that the Permanent Committee will still be an examining body; but examinations are held only once a year. I am next told that the District

Resolutions:Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Committees are working satisfactorily. Government may be in possession of the information which we do not know but I may tell this much that it was only yesterday that on setting foot at Dacca I heard that there has already been a squabble and quarrel in connection with the nomination of the Dacca Association and representations have been sent to Government. This is the first result of the introduction of the present system of reforms, by which power has been taken from the Permanent Committee and delegated to District Committees. That is, however, a matter with which Government will have to deal. It is useless to argue the case any further because Government has already made a decision. When Government takes up an unpromising attitude, to go against Government decision will be to dash one's head against a rock. I do not wish to make any further observations; but I would still press this resolution for Your Excellency's consideration."

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 22.

THE PRESIDENT said :—

"I think that this item should be formally withdrawn in Council."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq accordingly withdrew the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee consisting of non-official members of this Council be appointed to consider the list of subjects to be transferred to popular control, as suggested in paragraph 238 of the Report on Constitutional Reforms and referred to in the Illustrative List II appended to the Report, with instructions to submit their report to the Secretary to the Legislative Council for circulation to members in time for discussion at the September sitting of the Council.

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 23.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that all steps which are being taken or are in contemplation in pursuance of the scheme for the partition of Dacca be postponed.

He said :—

"My lord, the question of the partition of Dacca came before this Council in consequence of the decision arrived at by Government to invite public opinion on this project. It was found that since this proposal was made, public opinion immediately expressed itself. I believe several meetings have been held and several representations made to Government to postpone the question of the partition of Dacca at least for the present. In recommending the postponement of the consideration of this question, I beg to submit for the consideration of Your Excellency's Government certain facts which, in my opinion, ought not to be ignored before any decision is arrived at by Government in this matter. I will begin by saying that I was given an opportunity of giving evidence before the District Administration Committee and there I freely admitted that the administration units should be as small as possible because I freely confess that in my opinion the smaller the administration unit the greater the efficiency in the administration. If that principle be accepted, I also admit that in some cases there are existing administrative units which ought to be partitioned. But the question whether a particular district ought to be partitioned or not is entirely a different matter. But even taking for granted that Dacca is one of those districts which ought to be partitioned, I would submit, as I was told in a previous resolution, that a more unsuitable occasion could not have been found out for taking up that question. In the first place, without going very much into the merits of the question it is necessary that the people should be allowed the fullest possible time and opportunity to consider the forthcoming reform proposals and that no other proposals should be before the public which are likely to distract public attention or to take away from the earnestness with which they should look at all the problems arising out of the constitutional reform scheme which are now before the public. I therefore submit that one of the strongest reasons for postponing the question of the partition of Dacca at present is the outstanding fact that we have before us proposals of a far more weighty character which should be considered in a calm atmosphere free from controversy. It is evident that the question of the partition of Dacca rightly or wrongly, has given rise to controversy and that there should be nothing before the public at the present moment anything of a controversial character. Secondly, we do not know what the effects of the reform will be as regards the position of the District Officer as the head of the unit of administration. We do not know what effect the large principle of administration will have on the position of the District Officer and we do not know what the position of the District Officer—who can be said to be overworked at the present moment and I say this without any reference to conditions—will be in reference to the constitutional reforms but his position is certain to be affected. For these reasons, therefore, if for nothing else, I would strongly urge upon Your Excellency's Government to reconsider the decision for inviting public opinion and to leave this matter alone till we have got through our schemes of constitutional reform and calmer times are restored. It may be said that the matter is of some urgency. So far as Dacca is concerned I do not think it can be said that the matter is of any urgency. Even if Dacca is included in the list of those districts which should be partitioned, I submit that the District Officer of Dacca gets at present proper help in matters of administration from a sufficient number of officers who have been carrying on the work and who can certainly be expected without any appreciable inconvenience or difficulty to carry on the work for some time longer. I do not think that a case of extreme urgency has been made out and I am very strongly of opinion that unless such a case is made out, it should be postponed for the present. With these few words I commend this resolution for the acceptance of Your Excellency's Government. I say nothing as regards the merits of the scheme of the partition of Dacca.

The Hon'ble RAI SRI NATH RAY BAHADUR said :—

“My lord, I beg to support the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Government Resolution published in the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 17th July 1918, proposing the partition of the district of Dacca has greatly disturbed the minds of the people of this district. Several persons and some of the Associations and the press have in unmistakable language expressed their opinion against this proposal. They have all been vehemently opposing it since the publication of the District Administration Committee's report.

My lord, my proposal is a very simple one. I do not stand for the final abandonment of the scheme now, though I am strongly in favour of it. I plead only for its postponement. Both the Government and the people will be in a better position after the war and after the action of Parliament on the Reform Scheme, to see the needs and difficulties of the country due to the changed circumstances. Till then the scheme should stand adjourned.

Some of the reasons for which the people oppose the partition and their criticism in respect of the grounds set forth in the Government Resolution in favour of the partition may be summarised below :—

That the larger schemes of partition, such as the partition of Mymensingh and Midnapur, are not yet being carried out on account of financial difficulties. It is not desirable that a proposal for the partition of another district should be taken in hand and thereby create unnecessary discontent among the people while there is no probability of carrying it into effect immediately or in the near future. District partition requires heavy expenditure, both recurring and non-recurring, which the present exigencies of the finance do not warrant.

The financial resources of the present District Board is pretty large and it can take up large works of public utility in connection with education, sanitation, communication, etc., but after the partition each district will have too small an income to undertake any such measure, nor will it be easy for the District Boards to co-operate in a common cause, each being guided by its own necessity.

After the partition a large number of people who are now residing at Dacca or have valuable houses there will have to leave for the new headquarters to carry out their business, and they or at least those of them who are poor will thus be deprived of the full benefits afforded by such good institutions as the Mitford Hospital, Dacca College, Engineering School, Medical School, Eden Female School, Northbrook Hall Library and proposed Residential University. And many of these people or their ancestors have contributed in some shape or other towards the establishment and development of these institutions. It should also be noted that the general principle followed by the Education Department, enjoins that the students of the district to which the Educational Institution belongs, are given preference in the matter of admission. So it would be difficult for the students of the new district to get admission in the Dacca Institutions; nor is there any possibility of such institutions being established in the new district.

Some people in every quarter of the district have their houses in Dacca. But after the partition the people within the jurisdiction of Munshiganj and Narainganj subdivisions will have to build new houses in Narainganj where land is not easily available and, when available, it is sold at prohibitive prices. On the other hand, those who will have to leave the present district headquarters will be compelled to part with their house property at Dacca at a considerably low price. It is also undesirable that the solidarity of the people should be disturbed without their consent.

Bikrampur and Sonargaon are places of historical importance and their connection with Dacca is also historical, and the people of these parganas are naturally averse to be separated from that connection, nor is it desirable that the importance of this old historic city should be considered as negligible. I am aware, my lord, that these considerations may be repudiated as sentimental, but my lord, sentiment is a predominating factor in all human affairs. It is distinctly laid down in the Constitutional Reform Report that territorial redistribution should be avoided, when the people are against it and the area is small and people homogeneous. The consent of the people is considered as absolutely necessary when any scheme of partition is proposed.

Resolutions.Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur.

Your Lordship will see that the people oppose partition on reasonable grounds and it is neither in their interest nor for their convenience that the partition should take place. Let us now see for what expediency the proposal is made. It appears from the Government resolution proposing the partition that it is necessary for administrative convenience as suggested by the report of the District Administrative Committee. The time and circumstances which guided the said Committee to make this and similar other suggestions have vastly changed. The Government policy of administration and the public opinion have also undergone enormous changes and the administrative principle which then held good, does not hold good now. There may be people both at the present and the proposed headquarters who oppose or support the partition on the ground of personal interest, but their number is very small and their opinion is not worth much, but the opinion of the general public ought to carry weight.

The policy of creating small districts is not liked by the people, as we have seen in the case of Mymensingh when the partition of that district was finally settled. That district is nearly three times as big as Dacca in area still the people thought that it should not have been divided, if division was necessary, into more than two districts. Though it pleased the Government to divide that district into three and though the people may yield to the inevitable, the discontent will rankle in their hearts for a long time to come.

The reasons given in favour of the partition do not appear to be convincing. The district is small in area comprising 2,777 square miles while the average area of an Indian district is 4,430 square miles as mentioned in the report on the Indian Constitutional Reform. If the partition of districts is carried out on this principle then the number of the districts in Bengal will shortly be more than double, entailing enormous administrative cost. All the sub-divisions of the district of Dacca, including those in contemplation, are connected either by railway or by water channel and the district officers have already been supplied with steam launches. If there be still any difficulty of communication these may be better overcome when the district is undivided and can spare more money for the purpose. Division will not make communication easy.

Munshiganj subdivision is mentioned as "the most advanced rural tract in India". I, my lord, have the honour to belong to that subdivision and I am thankful to the Government for the compliment; but I am unable to follow the argument that this is one of the reasons for partition. We often see that advanced people are more docile and amenable to reasons than those who are not so, and the district officers are not likely to have much administrative trouble from that quarter. Even if Munshiganj Subdivision is considered as a criminal subdivision this may be met by posting permanently a Superintendent of Police there as at Serampore which has not been raised into a district. The people of Dacca were never reconciled to the partition of Bengal and it is impossible that they will willingly agree to the partition of their own district. Large number of petty estates complexities of land tenure and volume of litigation be easily dealt with by increasing the number of officers. If according to the Government resolution, the Civil Court officers can carry out the civil administration from Dacca, I do not see why the executive cannot do so by dividing the jurisdiction. In Mymensingh the Sadar subdivision is too big and there are two subdivisional officers, one in charge of the northern part and the other the southern part and the work is going on smoothly. Narainganj which is proposed to be the headquarter of the new district is only ten miles from Dacca and there is also railway communication. It will make very little difference to the people whether the administration is conducted from Dacca or from Narainganj. But western Bikrampur being nearer to Dacca the people of that quarter will be inconvenienced to go to Narainganj if their headquarter is located there. Dacca City, which is under the control of a municipality with a non-official Chairman, does not appear to be a source of great trouble to the District Officers. The formation of village unions has reduced the work of the District Officer and further reduction is expected when Village Courts will be created. Non-official Chairman of the District Board is shortly expected which will materially relieve the District Officers of a very important charge. A further relief is sure when the Local Self-Government Bill is passed into law. The Constitutional Reform Scheme which is now on the parliamentary anvil unmistakably indicates that the administration will gradually by stages pass within a short period from the hands of the officials to the people. His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State apprehend in their report on the Indian constitutional reform that they may be blamed for having left no room for official activity.

My lord, it is not expedient in the interest of the country to increase the administrative expenses if they can be helped. The large schemes of rural sanitation and popular education have to be taken up without delay. Village Committees will soon be established throughout the province. All these require money. Under the new financial arrangements of the Reform Scheme the policy of Imperial grants to provinces will come to an end. The income tax and general stamps will soon be purely Indian sources and Bengal will get no share of them. There practically exists no other elastic source of revenue for the province, Bengal will financially be in a very bad position. No scheme of additional expenditure should therefore be undertaken with a light heart. It should not be said that Your Excellency's Government have without sufficient and strong reason increased the financial burdens of the province.

Under all these circumstances it is clear that the work of the District officers has been considerably reduced and if they consider their charge to be still heavy it is only temporary, for further reduction is shortly expected after the introduction of the Reform Scheme. It is therefore desirable that the Government will not force partition on an unwilling people permanently for a temporary cause.

On these grounds I beg to urge that the consideration of the proposal be postponed till after the war and the final settlement by the Parliament of the Indian Constitutional Reform, when both the Government and the people will be in a better position to discuss the matter calmly and dispassionately and it may be that the Government will not then consider the partition at all necessary."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

My lord, when I arrived yesterday at Dacca I found that there was a volume of opinion against the partition. I have not had an opportunity of going through the arguments for or against the partition, but so far I am certain that this is not the suitable occasion for the partition of the district of Dacca. It would indeed be a wise policy if the subject of partition be postponed at the present moment, and I would only urge upon Your Excellency's attention that the partition of Dacca may be postponed until the Reform Scheme is introduced, and we have an opportunity to understand what the position of the Magistrates would be under that scheme.

ResolutionsBabu Kisor Mohan Chaudhuri; Sir Nilratan Sarkar.

The Hon'ble BABU KISORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

My lord, I rise not with a view to add to what has already been submitted by several representatives but with a desire simply to support the contention of the Hon'ble Movers who are intimately connected with the district of Dacca and who are fully interested in this matter. The proposition is not for the abandonment of the partition of the district, but Your Excellency is only asked to postpone it for some time. It is hardly the time when Government could undertake a thing like this. As regards the partition of Midnapur and Mymensingh much progress could not be made on account of the lack of funds, and I do not see any reason why another partition should be taken up and, in fact, against the wishes of the people. That is a position which we submit for Your Excellency's consideration. There is also no special urgency so far as we have been able to see. The partition indeed is a question in the interests of the efficiency of the administration and Government are no doubt the best judges to decide that point. The partition of a district is always distasteful to the persons who are specially concerned, and if the solidarity of the people is disturbed there ought to be some special reasons for it. As I have already said, the proposition is not for the abandonment of the scheme but simply for its postponement in view of the present situation and also in view of the coming reforms, and I hope and trust that this prayer will be considered and further progress in the matter will be postponed for the present. With these few words I beg to support this resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My lord, I beg to support the resolution of my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul Haq. This question of partition is bound to be looked at from different points of view. The people of Dacca and the people of Narainganj will necessarily look at the matter from opposite and interested points of view; but there are two other subdivisions and they are even more interested than the people of Dacca or Narainganj because Dacca has its headquarters and Narainganj will also have its headquarters; but none of these subdivisions will have any. Be that as it may, it appears to me that this proposal is not without serious disadvantages and these disadvantages I would like to place under three heads. (1) Financial; (2) those caused by the wrecking of associations which have been formed in the last three centuries or more around Dacca and the interests created in Dacca during this long period; and (3) the difficulty under which our friends in Dacca shall be placed if the partition proposal is carried into effect. The last one appears to me to be very important, as I am deeply interested in the question of local self-government. Dacca will have after the proposed partition only her mutilated Councils, whether it be the local bodies, or whether it be the Municipal or other boards, that may be formed there. It will have to work with only half her men, half her money and half her resources. That is certainly putting them in very great disadvantage, particularly at their time of trial upon which the confirmation of the powers that are going to be conferred upon us, will depend. During this period of trial they will have to work under these disadvantages if the proposal for partition be carried into effect. My lord, there is a point of view that largeness of size is a great disadvantage, but largeness of size means a larger number of men, and that would be an advantage. It all depends upon what point of view you look at the matter because a large number of men means larger resources, a larger amount of work, larger interests, and when it is said that for more efficient administration, smaller units are necessary, I do not think that I can agree with all my heart to such a proposal. I would think a small size is also a disadvantage. There is a claim for greater attention and that has reference only to the official classes. I know that the official classes are always hard-worked ; but, my lord, to put it in a slightly informal way—for which I may be pardoned—I have greater faith in an arrangement of groups under one able officer than to divide our resources and men into small parties under different commands. Larger resources mean greater work. We want a genius at the centre, and I feel and I know that that in the Civil Service officers like Mr. Hart and Mr. Rankin are capable of doing everything that they are wanted to do, provided of course that they have got resources and they are allowed to do what they want despite the conclusions of a Commission which may have been arrived at. Therefore, I want mature consideration—my contention is this—that the District Administration Committee worked under the disadvantage of not having a prescience or an idea of what the state of things was going to be in the near future. When they brought up this scheme, they wanted to provide for the state of things which then existed and also the conditions which existed at that time. They did not know that in the meantime two of the noblest of Englishmen, Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford, would draw up a scheme for constitutional reforms for the whole of India, some of which would completely revolutionize the ideal of government in certain matters. If they had any idea of this, their proposal might have taken a different turn. However, these are disadvantages so far as I can make out. The first is money, it will involve a considerable sum as initial expenditure and also as recurring expenditure. The second is the wrench to the associations and interests which exist in Dacca, and the third the disadvantages under which our friends in Dacca who are deeply interested in local self-government will be placed after the partition. On the side of advantages, we have the contention that the officers might be relieved of their work ; this, however, I am again constrained to say, is not very creditable to the officers themselves, because I know even now they devote their whole attention to their work, and it matters very little whether two or three officers are placed under one District Magistrate, and divide the work among themselves, or whether the District Magistrates divide the work among themselves and devote their attention separately. I am no believer in over-work ; but I believe in organization ; and if we were to compare great things with small—when General Foch is now leading so many millions of men—I do not see why our District Magistrates should not be able to manage one district like Dacca, provided, of course, he has got the men and resources at his disposal.

“ Under the circumstances, my lord, I believe that there is at least a case for postponing the partition of Dacca for some time, and as I have said, if we were to wait for five years after the adoption of the Montagu-Chelmsford schemes, they should have time enough to justify their existence as local bodies ; otherwise it would be a great injustice to them, because after all we shall be tried according to the results that we can show in our local bodies ; and with Dacca crippled in this way, I believe Dacca and the whole of Bengal will be at a greater disadvantage on this point.

“ With these few words, I appeal to Your Excellency and your Excellency's government to postpone this matter for some time.”

The Hon'ble MR. HELY HUTCHINSON said :—

“ My lord, I am sorry that I find myself unable to agree to the resolution. The objections to the partition scheme come from two points of view : firstly, that the partition of Dacca is not urgent, and, secondly, that if it is made, there will be difficulties in carrying it out.

“ Well, as to the question of urgency, the partition which was considered by the District Administration Committee and which has subsequently been” considered by the Bengal Government since the publication of the report on Constitutional Reform, has been decided by both these bodies as urgent. I think therefore, that the claim for urgency is established. Apart from that, there is no doubt from my own experience here that the Government officials have a great deal of work to do; and the establishment of subdivisions at Narsingdi and Joydebpur seems a very reasonable action, whatever is done about partitioning the district. When it comes to the question of difficulties which will have to be met, if the district is partitioned, I do not think that we can get a partition which will please all people. It is certain to please some people, while it will displease others. We have so far heard objections from people who would be displeased. Living as I do at Narayangaj, as far as I can make out, there is no difference of opinion there between the Europeans and Indians as regards the scheme; they are both strongly in favour of the change. At Narsingdi also I found opinion in favour of the change. The problem, it seems to me, is that the present scheme makes districts of the shape of a salamander: a partition into districts north and south of the Dhalassery would make a more normal territorial division and more in consonance with the habits of the people. There is however no site for a capital south of the Dhalassery. On the whole, my lord, it seems that the division suggested by the Government of Bengal is the best and that it had therefore to be carried on as soon as possible. I should certainly protest against any resolution involving postponement, which does not state to what time the partition should be postponed."

Resolutions.Mr. Kerr.

The Hon'ble MR. KERR said :—

"My lord, I think it will perhaps clear the air to some extent if I begin by explaining what exactly the position of the Dacca scheme is. As the Council is aware, this is the third of a series of partitions which were proposed by the District Administration Committee in 1913. The Committee put Mymensingh and Midnapur at the top of the list as the most urgent. The Mymensingh and Midnapore schemes have been completed and submitted for sanction, and we are awaiting final orders on them. Meanwhile, a good deal of work has been done in connection with the Dacca scheme. The sites proposed by the District Administration Committee have been surveyed and levels taken, and rough estimates of the cost have been prepared. The practicability of the Committee's scheme has been proved by thorough local enquiries, and certain modifications have already been made in their proposals. At this stage, following the usual practice in such cases, Government have put forward a definite scheme for examination and criticism; and we published a resolution on the 17th of July last, asking for opinions to be sent in by the 31st of October. When we get these opinions, Government will proceed to reconsider the whole matter in the light of the opinions received, and will make such modifications as may be necessary in the plans and estimates. Then we shall send up the Dacca scheme for the sanction of the Government of India and the Secretary of State. I have said enough to show that there is a good deal of work still to be done before we start putting the Dacca scheme into execution. There is no chance of any money being provided in the budget for the financial year, beginning on the 1st of April next, and, so far as we can see at present, there is no prospect of any work being begun for at least two years from now.

"The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar has asked for a postponement of the scheme. From what I have said, it will be seen that there is no chance of the scheme being proceeded with at once. But what the resolution asks us to do, is a very different matter. The first resolution asks us to postpone all steps which have been taken or are in contemplation in pursuance of the scheme and the next one recommends to the Governor in Council that the consideration of the proposal to partition the district of Dacca be postponed till after the war. I understand that the Hon'ble Members who have moved these resolutions would like us to drop thinking about the scheme altogether for the time being. We cannot agree to that for the reasons I shall now state.

"The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul Haq gave us two reasons for postponing the consideration of these schemes for the present. The first is, as I understand him, that the people of Dacca are busy thinking about the constitutional reforms and that they are unable at the same time to think about the partition of their own district. Well, I know Dacca pretty well. I have been here nearly every year, since 1912, and I think that this is a libel on the intelligence of the people of Dacca. I have people coming to see me every day. They talk to me about the reforms and the partition scheme, and they do not seem to me to muddle the two things up at all. I think that this theory that the Dacca people are incapable of entertaining more than one idea at a time, may be disregarded.

"The next reason which the Hon'ble Member has urged, is more important; he says that we should drop these partition schemes until we know what the effect of the constitutional reforms is going to be on the work of the District officers. I do not claim to know much about politics, but I do know something about administration, and I think that the Council may take it as certain that whatever other effect the scheme of constitutional reforms may have, it will certainly have the effect of increasing the work of the District officer to a very great extent. It will do so for two reasons. In the first place, the reforms will change the character of his work; and in the second place, they will add very greatly to the volume of his work. The authors of the report have explained very clearly how the first cause will operate. They say that the utility of the public official in India will gradually undergo a change; instead of continuing to the same degree as now to be the executive agency of Government he will stand aside from the work of carrying out orders and assume the position of skilled consultant technical adviser and an inspecting and reporting officer. And then they go on to say that the life of the Indian Civil Servant will be more difficult, because it is harder to convince than to direct; to prevail in consultation than to enforce an order. This opinion will be endorsed by everybody who has had any practical experience in the work of administration. Whether an officer is authorised to pass a decision himself, or whether he has to submit his recommendations to a higher authority, his work up to a certain point is the same. He has to get all the facts, to consider the probable effect of alternative courses of action, and then to select one of the different courses of action open. Then if the decision rests with him, he has merely to pass the order, and often it is sufficient if he signs his name. But if he has got to persuade somebody to agree with him, he has to begin all over again. He has got to think who the people are who are to be persuaded or advised, he has got to consider their point of view, and what their objections are likely to be, and he may have to get over prejudices or preconceived opinions: so that if a man advises or recommends, his work will often be double that which he would have to do if the decision rested with him. That is one way in which the reform scheme will very greatly increase the work of the District Officer. The other way is by actually increasing the number of things the District Officer will have to do.

"Some Hon'ble Members have referred to the question of village unions. They say that the village unions will lessen the work of the District Officers. I do not think there can be a greater fallacy than that and if any Hon'ble Member asks Mr. Hart for his opinion he will find it very different. These village unions are doing work which has hitherto not been done or imperfectly done, and this imposes a very considerable strain on the District officer in the matter of references and applications for funds and various other ways in which they ask for the District Officer's advice or help. It involves more touring on the District Officer's part to visit them and keep them up to the mark, and give them help and encouragement, and this alone means more inroads on valuable and scanty time. There are many other ways in which the District Officer's work will be increased in the near future. "Take, for instance, the question of electorates to which I have given some attention during the past few weeks. If electorates are going to be formed on a broad basis as proposed in the Scheme of Constitutional Reforms, the amount of work involved in preparing the electoral roll will be enormous. The work in connection with elections is very considerable, even at present where there are only small electorates of 100 or 200 persons. If you are going to form electorates composed of several thousands, the work which will have to be done will be very great. This work is not work which can be taken over by local bodies; it is work which in all countries is done by permanent officials of Government and it is on the permanent officials that the work will fall in India. So I say that the work of the District Officer, taken as a whole, will increase largely on the introduction of the Constitutional Reforms, and if reasonable efficiency in the public services is to be maintained, the necessity of partitioning these big districts, will be very much greater when the Reforms are introduced than it is at present.

Another point is that this resolution which asks us to drop all consideration of this problem comes rather too late. It might have been in time if this advice had been given to us before the 17th July. I think it would have been wrong even then, but before we published our resolution it would have been possible to ask us not to think about this partition scheme. Now that the resolution has been published, it is impossible to live in Dacca and not to think of partition schemes. The visitors who come to see me daily discuss the matter freely. Some object to any partition scheme at all; some of them, like the Hon'ble Member, agree that partition is desirable, but want some modification in the scheme described in the Government resolution. There is nothing to object to in that. They are of course all people interested in the matter, and their object is to find a scheme which will cause the least inconvenience to themselves, or will be of the most benefit to themselves. Am I to tell the visitors who come to see me, not to talk of partition schemes because some Hon'ble Members think that all consideration of partition must be dropped? Every morning the Dacca Herald is delivered to me. Am I to be deprived of the pleasure of reading that organ of public opinion because it contains criticisms on the partition scheme and suggestions for alternate schemes? The advice given to Government in these resolutions is not practicable. There is no intention, as I have already said, of pushing on with this scheme until everybody concerned has had the fullest opportunity of expressing his opinion and until Government has carefully considered these opinions. But we cannot agree to drop all consideration of the matter, and if this is what the resolutions ask us to do, we must oppose them."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I have listened very attentively to the reply of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr and I am sorry that I have to confess that I have not been convinced that the recommendation made in my resolution ought not to be accepted by Your Excellency's Government. To begin with, we have been told that a case has been made out of sufficient urgency for steps to be taken in pursuance of the scheme of partition of the district of Dacca. The Hon'ble Mr. Hely Hutchinson has said that, the Government officials are doing a large amount of work, and that secondly, the District Administration Committee had come to the conclusion that the case of the partition of Dacca was one of some urgency. Now, as regards the present district officials being over-worked, I think I may only point out to him that if they do a large amount of work their predecessors in office used to do so for about a century or more and I do not think that it is going to be suggested that the predecessors in office of the present-day officials were simply a race of lotus-eaters or at any rate they did not work as the present officials. As a matter of fact, even the district of Mymensingh, which is perhaps the largest administrative unit in India, has been run ever since the beginning of British rule or ever since the period when the province had been parcelled out into districts. If a single member of the service felt the weight of the work at Mymensingh, he never complained that it was work which could not be undertaken by one man and which was work of such a character from which he would fly away. The province of Bengal, for instance, was, for a long period of time, too heavy a burden for one Lieutenant-Governor; but every Lieutenant-Governor who took upon himself the task of administering Bengal, always faced the situation. If a thing like that could go on for 70 years I feel that we may reasonably expect this thing to go on for some years to come. I submit, therefore, my lord, that although the present officials in Dacca are over-worked, their predecessors in office were as hardworking as they are, and there is absolutely no reason to think that the present officials would be men of a weaker physique and that they would break down in consequence of the strain.

"As regards the conclusion of the District Administration Committee, I think that is no doubt entitled to weight. I do not at the present moment wish to say anything so far as the report is concerned because the consideration of that question whether Dacca ought to be partitioned or not is a matter on which there may be differences of opinion but what I am not convinced of is that the urgency, even if there is any, is not of such a character that the partition ought to be made in defiance of public opinion. After all, public opinion has got to be taken into consideration. For whom, my lord, are you going to partition districts if it be not for the efficiency of the administration and if it be not for the benefit of the people for whom you duplicate the work? I think, my lord, you ought to make the people feel that there is a responsible and sympathetic Government ever ready to take into consideration their needs. It may be that the people are not well advised in opposing this scheme; but they are at present convinced that this measure should not be taken. We are told that some work has already been done and that sites have been selected. I do not know whether something else has been done. My lord, after all this has been done, the question which occurs to me is why was this done without consulting public opinion. As regards taking up the question of the partition at once, I find that something is done and then we are told to keep quite and after a time elapses and something more is done we are told that so much has already been done and that Government cannot find any way out of it. It is really making us consent to the steps which have been taken by Government towards partition gradually and slowly; although, as a matter of fact, we have really been forced to take up the position. I therefore submit, my lord, that although something may have been done nothing serious has at least been done and things may be allowed to lie for the very simple reason that public opinion seems to be very much against the scheme. Then, my lord, there is the question of expense to be considered. I was only just a short while ago told that the requirements of economy have got to be considered and that we should always practise the utmost economy of expenditure owing to the present financial stringency. I would like to convince Your Excellency that the scheme for the partition of districts is bound to be the most expensive one. Then, why take up this expensive project in the face of this opposition from the public and in the face of the fact that money can better be utilised in other ways. We might be told that there is difference of opinion as to why money can be well spent on other schemes and since there is difference of opinion I submit that this matter ought not to be taken up at once.

Resolutions.Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur.

As regards my observation that the people of Dacca are now only too busy thinking about the constitutional reforms to consider the partition scheme, the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, said that it would be a libel on their intelligence if we suggested that their brain was not capable of taking up this question as well when they were considering the scheme of constitutional reform. But, my lord, it is no question of brain being capable of keeping one or two things at the same time; and certainly intelligent men can have half a dozen subjects in their brain and consider them all at the same time; but the point to be considered is whether at the present moment the question is of a really controversial character. Is it not reasonable to ask that, for a consideration of questions like the constitutional reforms, we really require a calm atmosphere and that public time and attention should not be disturbed by having to consider schemes which also vitally affect them and which have got to be simultaneously considered with the problems that will be raised in connection with the scheme of constitutional reforms. After all, my lord, the people of Dacca are human beings and they may be burdened if, with constitutional reforms before them, they are also asked to consider the scheme of partitioning their own district which vitally affects them and which is a thing which infringes with the problems of their daily life. They ought to be pardoned if, in view of the problems raised by the question of partition, they give secondary consideration to the question of constitutional reforms. It is for this reason, my lord, I submit that the question of constitutional reforms is already engaging the attention of the people of Dacca and that they should not be further distracted by throwing upon them the consideration of the question of partition which affects them vitally. I think, my lord, that even amongst the non-official members who have spoken on this resolution have spoken very strongly in respect of this proposal. I do not mean to suggest that the Dacca people are very wise in raising the protest against the scheme of partition. It may be that they are absolutely wrong, but that is a matter that has got to be decided later. But right or wrong, they have expressed their opinion in the particular way and in the most unmistakable terms. I, therefore, beg most respectfully to ask Your Excellency to consider whether, in the face of this volume of opinion; in view of the fact that the measure is sure to entail a large amount of expenditure at a time when we are urged to practise the utmost economy in view the fact that we have larger problems to consider; our attention should not be distracted by problems which even though of a partially important character is not of less importance. We simply ask that the proposals for the partition should be postponed just for a short time. I do not mean to say that the people should not be asked to consider it at the present moment; but I think a short postponement is absolutely necessary; and if this is done, I do not think that the present officials of the district will very much complain against that. I do not wish to take up the time of the Council by further observations; but I beg respectfully to press this resolution for Your Excellency's acceptance. After all, if not for anything else but out of deference to public opinion which has been most unmistakably expressed, I would ask Your Excellency to consider whether this matter should be further proceeded with."

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 24.

The following resolution, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur was held to be covered by the debate on the last resolution (Item No. 23) and was deemed to be withdrawn:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the consideration of the proposal to partition the district of Dacca be postponed till after the war.

*Resolutions:Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 25.

The Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that provision be made for the exemption of bona fide Ayurvedic medicines from the operation of the Bengal Excise Act.

He said :—

My lord, the grateful thanks of the Indian community in general and the Ayurvedic practitioners in particular are due to Your Excellency's Government for having withdrawn the prosecution. I take it my lord, that this act of grace on the part of Government is an indication that they are quite as much alive as the people are to the interest and welfare of an ancient healing art.

Prosecutions have from time to time been started at the instance of local Excise officers against Ayurvedic practitioners, on the ground that some drugs manufactured by them may be technically classed among Excisable articles. Most of them have proved unsuccessful, but the broad question as to whether these medicinal preparations should or should not enjoy a sort of immunity from the operation of the Excise law has remained unanswered.

The recent Dacca case has, I understand, been withdrawn at the instance of Government and not on account of any defect inherent in it. This may be taken almost as a declaration of the Excise policy of Government so far as Ayurvedic medicines are concerned. And my object in bringing forward this resolution is to discuss the desirability of a formal exemption being made in favour of Ayurvedic medicines generally which will settle a vexed question once for all.

My lord, I believe there is a provision in the present Bengal Excise Act which gives discretionary power to Government to exempt any Excisable article from the operation of the Act. If recourse is taken to this discretionary clause in the present instance, the action of Government will not, I am afraid, commend itself to the Ayurvedic practitioners and the people. For exemption under this clause will involve a declaration that the medicines exempted are as a matter of fact Excisable articles. And as the Ayurvedic system is practised mostly by high caste Hindus, such a declaration may be considered by them to be a slur upon their profession and to degrade them to the same level with the manufacturers of ordinary intoxicants belonging to a lower caste in society. Moreover, there are people among the orthodox Hindus and Muhammadans who would never think of using medicines which might by implication be classed among intoxicants. These may be matters of sentiment, but Government should respect the sentiments of the orthodox community.

I therefore, venture to suggest that specific exemption should be made by an amendment of the Act itself, and I think this suggestion of mine will receive serious consideration at the hands of the Government. In reply to some questions of mine at the last meeting of the Council, it was stated that the Indian Excise Committee of 1905, in their draft Excise Bill had a distinct clause exempting bona fide medicines from its purview. This clause even appears in the Bill as introduced in the Bengal Council in 1909. But the Select Committee, by a majority, omitted the clause. I find that the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler was one of the official members of that Select Committee, and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur was perhaps one of the minority who desired the retention of the clause. It is our good fortune to-day to have Sir Henry Wheeler as Member in charge of the Excise Department. And my earnest appeal is specially directed to him to re-insert the clause left out by the Select Committee in 1909, adding such safeguards to prevent any evasion of the law as may be necessary. There is a similar provision in the Bombay Abkari Act, which has been in force for the last 40 years. And if the Excise administration has been carried on smoothly in Bombay during this period in spite of such a provision, Government would be running no risk if they were to insert a similar section in the Bengal Excise Act.

My lord, I am aware that the exemption I am thinking of may embrace the entire system of medicine, and not the Ayurvedic system alone. If that be the effect of an amendment of the Excise Act, I for one will have no objection. But I do not claim to speak for any other system than the Ayurvedic. It is a system which has done great service to suffering humanity for centuries. Indeed, it is one of the most precious assets of Aryan culture which has been handed down to us. The late Surgeon-General Sir Pardey Lukis in one of his public utterances observes:— "The longer I remain in India and the more I see of the country and the people, the more convinced I am that many of the empirical methods of treatment adopted by the Vaidis and Hakims are of the greatest value; and there is no doubt whatever, that their ancestors knew, ages ago, many things which are nowadays being brought forward as new discoveries". My lord, this ancient and wonderful system of treatment craves protection at your hands, so that it may be left unfettered as in the past, to bring relief to the sick and stricken."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said:—

"My lord, the object of the resolution is to exempt bona fide Ayurvedic medicines from the operation of the Bengal Excise Act. Looking into the history of Excise legislation, I find that the Act of 1905 was amended in 1909 and that lastly a few sections of the Act of 1909 was modified and amended by Bengal Act VII of 1914. The previous Acts defined liquor as intoxicating liquor. But in the present Act liquor is defined as any liquor containing spirit or alcohol. This definition is very illegal. So far as the preparation of kaviraji medicines is concerned the system is based upon certain principles. Before the operation of the Act of 1914 it was thought that the definition of intoxicating liquor in the Act of 1909 was quite sufficient for the purpose of allowing the kavirajes to prepare their medicines, but under the present Act of 1914 I see that a kaviraj has been prosecuted for preparing his medicines. They have complained to Your Excellency and they have reasons for complaints. If you look at section 62 of the Bombay Abkari Act, you will find that the bona fide preparation of such medicines has been exempted. The Bombay Act has been in operation for a very long time. Section 90 of the Bengal Act exempts certain medicines under certain conditions. The Eastern Bengal Excise Act of 1910 also exempts certain medicines under certain conditions. If the Council considers that the definition of the word "liquor" as explained in the present Act of 1914 is a hardship, then I submit to Your Excellency that there should be a modification of that definition, for in that case every man might be subject to prosecution. That could not have been the intention of the legislature. This point also came up before the Courts in 1917. My lord, if the intention of the legislature was really to exempt bona fide kaviraji medicines, I submit that it is a case for the consideration of the Council whether the definition of the liquor in the existing Act should be modified or not. Hardly any notification is necessary now. The whole question is whether the definition of liquor should be amended. The kavirajes have to prepare their medicines according to certain formulæ laid down in the shastras and they will have to use alcohol and the definition would operate very harshly on them. I, therefore, submit that it is necessary to exempt bonafide kaviraji medicine from the operation of the Excise Act."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I do not quite understand whether the proposal is that the Act should be amended. From certain speeches I understand that there is also a proposal that the Act should be amended. I was in Council when the Act of 1909 was passed. I was also in the Select Committee. In the original Bill of 1908 a clause (clause 84) was inserted on the recommendation of the Indian Excise Committee that the Bill should not apply to medicated liquors in the hands of medical men except in so far as the Local Government might direct. Then in the Select Committee that clause was withdrawn and another clause was substituted, and that clause is now section 90 of the Bengal Excise Act. It lays down that the Local Government may, by notification, either wholly or partially, and subject to such conditions (if any) as it may think fit to prescribe, exempt any excisable article from all or any of the provisions of this Act, either throughout Bengal or in any specified local area, or for any specified period or occasion or as regards any specified class of persons."

I find that a notification was subsequently issued in 1915. Unfortunately I have not got it in my hands as the Gazettes are not available here. I find in the newspapers that there was an agitation among the kavirjes owing to the prosecution of a kaviraj at Dacca for stocking rohitastak, but I learn that Government have been pleased to direct the withdrawal of the prosecution. When the clause I have mentioned was withdrawn in the Select Committee and the present section 90 was inserted we were under the impression that a notification would be issued exempting indigenous medicinal preparations resembling alcohol from the operation of the Act. I find however that a prosecution was started against a kaviraj although the Government have been pleased to withdraw the prosecution. I do not know whether the existing notification exempts kaviraji medicines. If not, then Government will be pleased to take steps to issue a revised notification. As regards the amendment of the Act, I know that the Bombay Act exempts indigenous preparations of medicine and I agree that the Government of Bengal should have a similar provision inserted in the Bengal Act. When the existing Act was before the legislature some opposition was made against the proposal to delete that section, but the Hon'ble Mr. Macpherson assured us that the substitution of clause 85, which is now section 90, would meet the circumstances of the case and there would be no hardship. But unfortunately our experience has been quite otherwise. I hope something will be done to allay the apprehension which has been raised in the minds of the kaviraji community. With these words I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"Sir, it is not the intention or policy of Government to bring within the purview of the penal provisions of the Excise Act bona fide Ayurvedic preparations; to that extent, it may be said that I might forthwith accept this resolution, and, indeed, as it is verbally framed, I do, on the understanding that the word 'provision' is interpreted in the sense that we are already making provision, as I shall shortly explain to the Council. That sense does not, however, include an amendment of the Excise Act which some Members have adumbrated as desirable."

I should like to explain the provision which we propose to make and the circumstances of the case, inasmuch as a certain amount of misconception

Resolutions.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

has arisen about it, and a certain amount of feeling has been engendered in kaviraji circles.

There are four main points which I would like the Council to bear in mind.

The first is that it is the case that under the guise of medicinal preparations unscrupulous men have sold and do sell to others liquids which are, to all intents and purposes, alcoholic drinks. I make no insinuation against the vast body of kavirajes who, no doubt, according to their lights, are conducting an honourable profession in an honourable way. But that advantage is taken, as I say, to evade in this way the operations of the Excise Act admits of no possible doubt. I have looked into recent cases, and can offer a few examples. For instance, I find that a case was decided in the High Court in which it was actually discovered that owing to the sale of this kind of beverage, the transactions of the neighbouring licensed shops fell off, and the High Court said that it was absurd to call a preparation which contained such a high percentage of alcohol, a medical preparation. I find another case in which as much as two maunds of wash for distilling such a liquid were discovered ready, not, as we might expect, in anticipation of an epidemic, but in anticipation of the Durga Puja festival. In another case, I find that a kaviraj had been selling alcoholic drinks to confidential customers for over three years; while in another case a preparation, which contained as much as 82.5 per cent. of alcohol, was used by the public as an intoxicant. These, Sir, are typical examples.

Further, we have an authoritative pronouncement of the Excise Commission of 1905-06—the most weighty body which has looked into Excise matters in recent years—that legal action was required in view of the increasing use of medicated preparations as intoxicants. On the first point, then, that the law can be evaded in this way, I do not think that there can be any question.

Secondly, it is obvious that in the interests of the Excise revenue which we derive from the taxation of alcohol, we must check such abuses.

Thirdly, there is not the slightest doubt that, at any rate since 1909, such a check has been the intention of the law.

Fourthly, although kavaraies appear to think that they are labouring under a grievance, it is rather the case that exception has been made in their favour, in so far as alcohol contained in their preparations evades paying duty, while alcohol contained in imported drugs or drugs manufactured in this country is taxed; therefore, it is not the case that any special disability exists in connection with their medicines which does not apply to those of western origin.

These are the four cardinal points of the case; but I shall have to explain a little more in detail what the legal position is.

Under the old Excise Act of 1878, it was doubtful whether a successful prosecution against a so-called medicinal preparation would lie, and in 1896, a conviction was set aside in the High Court on that ground, although in 1899 the High Court made the eminently sane remark, which I have already quoted, that you could not claim exemption for an alcoholic drink merely by calling it a medicinal preparation. However, it may be said that the law was at any rate doubtful up to this point. But in 1905-06 the Excise Committee, to which I have already referred, definitely made a pronouncement as to the use as intoxicants of medicated articles, and, in their model Bill, recommended a provision which would prevent such a practice. Their method was to exempt the import, manufacture, possession, sale or supply of any bona fide medicated article for medicinal purposes, by medical practitioners, chemists, druggists or keepers of dispensaries, but to enable the Local Government, by notification, to prohibit throughout the province, or within any local area, the import, manufacture, possession, sale or supply of any such article, except under prescribed conditions. Some Hon'ble Members have to-night quoted this provision for a general exemption in favour of these medicines, but have omitted the very important proviso empowering the Local Government to notify prohibitions. The Committee fully recognised that malpractices might exist; it is true that they suggested a general exemption; but they proposed to guard against malpractices by notification.

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

When we came to the amendment of our own Excise Act in 1909, it is perfectly true that, first of all, a section on the lines of the Excise Committee's Bill was contemplated. But when the Bill went to Select Committee it was decided to adopt the contrary expedient, namely, to bring these preparations within the purview of the Excise Act, but in order to safeguard bonâ fide preparations, to give the local Government power by notification, and subject to conditions, to exempt excisable articles from the operation of the Act. Such a provision finally went through the Council without objection from anybody.

In 1910, the Eastern Bengal Government, which had then become a separate province, legislated, following the precedent of the Excise Committee, but my point is that in the essential intention of controlling these malpractices both Acts were at one. The only difference was in the method of so doing.

In 1912, it so happened that our Act was found defective in another particular, viz., the definition of 'liquor', and when they came to amalgamate the old Act with the Eastern Bengal Act, our predecessors again amended the Act to meet that difficulty, and at the same time once more emphasised the intention of the Legislature (again without objection on anybody's part) that medicinal preparations containing alcohol should be brought within the Act unless exempted as bonâ fide medicines. There is not the least doubt about that now being the law, as shown by a High Court ruling of 1917 which remarks: 'to say now that a preparation containing alcohol is not within the provisions of the Bengal Excise Act, simply because it is a medicinal preparation or may be used for medicinal purposes, would be to stultify the Court and ignore the plain purpose of the Legislature.'

I have given these details because I wish to disabuse the Council of the idea that anything has been done lately to change the law in any sense. What has happened is that the Excise authorities recently instituted a prosecution, of which details have been given in answer to a question in this Council, and they were perfectly within their rights in instituting that prosecution. However, it attracted a certain amount of notice in the press, and appeared to alarm the Ayurvedic practitioners. Consequently I gave an interview in Calcutta a little while ago to certain representative kabirajes, and after talking to them decided to withhold the prosecution until we discovered a way out of the difficulty.

We have since been discussing what the way should be, and there are one or two points which, I admit, are to be said in favour of the kabirajes. The first thing is that they do make up their own medicinal preparations, which negatives the idea of enforcing a centralised manufacture in bond of medicines containing alcohol. Secondly, they prepare their drugs from ancient formulæ to which they consider themselves bound to adhere. That is a fact which deserves to be taken into consideration. Thirdly, if they were to use rectified spirit in their preparations, I understand that it would be opposed to the prejudice of many of their patients who do not regard as obnoxious alcohol which is produced in the course of the manufacture of drugs.

themselves. These three points may influence us in making what is really an exception in favour of kavirajes, from the general law which renders liable to duty alcohol contained in western medicines. We have been discussing this matter with the kabirajes, and the Excise Commissioner, Mr. Moberly, has, I think, hit upon a line which shows us the way out, that is to say, it is possible to draw a distinction between what are called, I believe, aristas and other preparations in which the alcohol is arrived at by distillation. I understand aristas are preparations—I see the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, who is a scientific expert, has his eye on me, and I apologise for a very unscientific presentation of a technical matter—in which by the mixture of certain ingredients the alcohol is generated by fermentation and is not arrived at by distillation. As far as the Excise Commissioner has ascertained, we have never prosecuted in the case of these aristas, and we could make an exception in their favour. Another good reason for doing so is, I am told, that these aristas are far too unpalatable for use by anybody as a pleasant beverage.

What we propose to do is to proceed by way of executive instruction as to how the Act is to be interpreted. Of course, under the law as it stands, we could notify a long list of things which are not to be the subject of prosecution. But there are difficulties in doing this. In the first place, these formulæ do not exist in any standard book, and probably are not even known to any one individual; secondly, there are a very large number of such formulæ, and all would have to be tested and classified. Thirdly, we might not even then arrive at a complete list, and if we were to get out a list it might be susceptible of abuse by persons calling a thing by one name, while, in reality, it was something entirely different. We have, therefore, decided to discard the idea of trying to notify what is exempted. We prefer to proceed by executive instruction, and the general outline of the instruction, which we propose to issue is somewhat on the following lines:—

'The manufacture by kabirajes of the Ayurvedic medicinal preparations known as "asab" or "arista" should not be interfered with on the ground that the finished preparation contains alcohol (provided that the finished preparation is produced by the admixture of sugar, treacle or molasses, or honey with other ingredients and the fermentation of the whole, and that no process of distillation is used in its production), unless the Chemical Examiner for Customs and Excise reports that the preparation is not reasonably a medicinal preparation. The formula under which the preparation is said to be prepared and a reference to the work from which it was taken should, if possible, be forwarded to the Chemical Examiner along with the sample. Should the Chemical Examiner for Customs and Excise report that the preparation is not reasonably a medicinal preparation, or should it be found that any such preparation is being used as an intoxicating beverage, notwithstanding a report from the Chemical Examiner that it is reasonably a medicinal preparation, the facts should be reported to the Excise Commissioner. These instructions do not apply to the manufacture by distillation of Ayurvedic preparations (such as Mrita Sanjibani Sudha) or to the preparation of wash for the manufacture of such distilled preparations.'

Mr. Moberly has interviewed representative kavirajes in this city, and we are considering whether a working compromise can be arrived at on such a basis. Another point put forward by the kavirajes is that we should get representative men from among their number to act on a Board in an advisory capacity as to what is a legitimate medicine and what is not, and we shall try, to meet their wishes to some extent in that respect. Mr. Moberly will now see other representative kavirajes in Calcutta, and finally in the light of his discussions with them, we shall try to bring out an instruction on these lines. That is the provision we contemplate, and in this sense we have no objection in accepting this resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU BRAJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI said :—

"I beg, my lord, to thank the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler for the kind assurance he has given; and I am very grateful to your Lordship's Government for accepting this resolution."

The resolution was then put and carried.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 26.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate effect be given to the recommendations of the Public Services Commission that in the executive branches of the Provincial Civil Services "not more than 50 per cent. of the vacancies should be filled by promotion from the subordinate services.

He said :—

"My lord, my intention in moving this resolution is to remove partially an anomaly which is a source of dissatisfaction and discontent in an important section of our public service. The Sub-Deputy Collectors nowadays have to do the same work and discharge the same duties as the Deputy Collectors and in headquarters they are often seen to act in place of Deputy Collectors. In the sub-divisions the work of the Sub-Deputy Collector is still more onerous. Not only has he to try criminal cases but various departments including the Sub-Treasury are entrusted to him. The risky nature of treasury work is well known. Sub-Deputy Collectors are after being vested with first class powers and doing their work to the entire satisfaction of the Government. Still they are ill-paid, the pay they are entitled to, being even insufficient to enable them to maintain the dignity of their position. Hence the present anomalous position of the two services merely tends to create a discontented body of public servants.

The question of the two services was discussed in detail before the Royal Commission on the Public Services in India. In reply to a question about his experience of the officers selected by the different methods of recruitment for the Provincial Civil Service, Mr. H. L. Stephenson, then Financial Secretary to the Government of Bengal, said :—"The principal point is whether the recruitment shall be mainly direct or from the subordinate service. The principles adopted by the Public Services Commission of 1886 favour direct recruitment as the normal method; the advantages are that a better class of men can be obtained for a service where the initial pay is Rs. 250 than for one with an initial pay of Rs. 100 and that for the higher status and work of the Provincial Service it is desirable to directly recruit young men rather than to take men of a more advanced age who have spent part of their youth in a Subordinate Service." Then he said :—"The class of men who enters the Subordinate Service now differs very little from the Provincial Service recruit and he does work that does not vary much in kind from that of the higher service; and the prospect of promotion undoubtedly attracts a better class to the lower service." As a matter of fact the difference in qualifications between members of the two services has disappeared and the discrepancy in pay and prospects is a source of constant irritation. The Hon'ble Mr. Beaumont Bell advocated a radical remedy by proposing the amalgamation of the Subordinate Executive Service with the Provincial Civil

Resolutions.Mr. Kerr.

Service. I quote the following with approbation from his written answer submitted for the consideration of the Commission on the Public Services :—

'Taken as a body, there is very little difference between the two services in the matter of the qualification of the recruits. In fact those entering the Subordinate Executive Service are often superior to those entering the Provincial Civil Service. It is most galling to a man to see another man, whom he has surpassed at the University, placed at once in a position to which he himself can only attain after many years of drudgery. The two services should be amalgamated, the lowest grade being placed at Rs. 200 per mensem. The total annual vacancies would then be 22. I would fill up the vacancies as follows :—

Open competition among candidates nominated by District Officers	...	9
Promotions from other services (Settlement Kanungoes, etc.)	...	8
Governor's cadetships	5
Total	...	22

I give my whole-hearted support to the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell's recommendation about the amalgamation of the two services. And I am sure the proposal will be duly considered by the Government of India along with the recommendations of the Commission. But for the present—till those recommendations are given effect to, I would propose the adoption by the Government of Bengal of the proposal to fill up 50 per cent. of the vacancies in the Provincial Civil Services by recruiting from the Subordinate Service.

That candidates of equal or superior qualifications enter the Subordinate Service when they cannot enter the Provincial Service is admitted. And it is also admitted that they do so in the hope of being promoted to the Provincial Service.

The Commission asked Mr. Stephenson—'As to the qualifications of the Provincial and the Subordinate Services they are drawn from the same class; but in your experience is there a class of men who would take a post in the Provincial Service but who would refuse an offer of one in the Subordinate Service?'

His reply was emphatic—'Undoubtedly they are drawn from the same class to this extent that very much the same class of men will enter both, but the men who enter the Subordinate Service only do so with the hope of getting into the Provincial Service by promotion. They would none of them be content to enter the Subordinate Service as a career.'

Thus it is admitted that if the chances of promotion are remote discontent in the Subordinate Service which is now manned by men who are equally competent to enter the Provincial Service will ensue. And if 50 per cent. of the vacancies in the Provincial Service is filled up from the Subordinate Service some justice will be done to the members of the Subordinate Service and the arrangement will serve as an incentive to the able and educationally qualified men in the service to discharge their duties even more assiduously to qualify them for promotion.

With those words I beg to move the resolution for the consideration of the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. KERR said :—

"My lord, when I first saw the Hon'ble Member's resolution, I had some difficulty in making out what he was driving at, and my difficulty has not been removed by his speech. The facts of the case are briefly as follows : Our present Bengal rule which is a rule of at least six years' standing; and probably older, is that out of the number of appointments in the Provincial Service, ordinarily 35 per cent. are filled by the promotion of officers who are already in Government service. The Royal Commission on the Public Services found that other provinces were not so virtuous as Bengal in this respect and that in Madras, appointments, in the executive line, are made almost wholly by promotion, and mainly so in the Punjab, Burma, and the Central Provinces and Berar. The Commission said :—

Resolutions.

Babu Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

'We are impressed by the advantage which are secured for services recruited in India under the system of direct recruitment. We accordingly advise that in the executive line 50 per cent. be laid down as the maximum amount to which promotion from the lower ranks should be permitted to extend.'

Well, the Hon'ble Member has embodied the words of the Royal Commission in his resolution. But as I understand his speech his meaning is diametrically opposed to that of the Commission. What he means apparently is that at least 50 per cent. of appointments should be filled by promotion from the Subordinate Services. The Hon'ble Member will correct me if I am wrong, but I think this is the only inference that can be drawn from his speech. What the Royal Commission said and what the resolution says is that not more than 50 per cent. of appointments should be made by promotion, and by no possible construction of the English language can the resolution be made to bear the meaning put upon it by the Hon'ble Member. In these circumstances, it is no use discussing the points which the Hon'ble Member has raised regarding the recruitment of the Subordinate Services and so forth. All these questions are in the melting pot in connection with the reforms advocated by the Public Services Commission, and to a considerable extent in connection with the constitutional reforms. It is no use going into them at this time of night especially as they do not arise on the resolution. All that I have to say is that the resolution, as it stands, is already in force in Bengal, and on the understanding that this is what is meant, or rather because this is the only meaning which it can bear, Government are prepared to accept the resolution."

The resolution was then put and carried.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 27.

The Hon'ble RAJ MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that four days of the Durga Puja holidays, namely, Saptami, Maha-astami, Navami and Dasami, be observed as closed holidays in the different departments of the Bengal Secretariat and its attached offices in so far as the attendance of Hindu assistants is concerned.

He said :—

"My lord, it is not necessary for me to make a speech in support of this resolution. My intention is that these days which are observed as Hindu holidays should be observed as closed holidays. There is a sentiment amongst us that these days should be observed strictly as holidays. There are many hallowed associations around these days, and it is very difficult for those Hindu assistants, unless ordered by their masters, to absent themselves from office. In this view, I put the resolution before the Council."

Resolutions.

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Mr. Donald; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur; the President.

Now, there is one other matter which I ought not to lose sight of, and that is, that Government business cannot be stopped. Consequently it is necessary that arrangements should be made for the purpose of conducting business in the office. But, my lord, I was just enquiring whether there are any Muhammadan assistants available for the purpose. I have been told that there is a number of Muhammadan assistants, but whatever it may be, it is for the Hon'ble Member to consider the point. It must not be argued hereafter that this point was not mentioned. There is a considerable amount of discontent among the assistants if they are made to attend on these holidays. With these few words, I beg to commend the resolution to the Council."

The Hon'ble BABU KISORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said:—

"My lord, I support the proposal put forward by my Hon'ble friend. I do not wish to say anything more."

The Hon'ble MR. DONALD said:—

"My lord, the Hon'ble mover has moved the resolution that Government offices should be closed entirely on the four days of the Durga Puja, but he has himself admitted that some arrangement must be made for the conduct of urgent work. As regards these four days, I find that they are observed as closed holidays in every office except the several departments of the Civil Secretariat. In the Civil Secretariat, we have to arrange for some clerks to be present to look after urgent work, and the orders laid down by the Government of India many years ago are that, if possible, where assistants have to observe certain religious ceremonies, they should not be called upon to work at all on these days. Every step is taken to employ on these days for the conduct of urgent work as many clerks as possible of other religious persuasions—Muhammadans if available, or Christians or others.

It is quite possible that these holidays occur sometimes when the Government is in Darjeeling, and not many Muhammadans go to Darjeeling; but, as far as can be done, non-Hindus are employed on these occasions. After all, the days are observed practically as holidays, and those clerks who have to attend do so for only a portion of the day. That is the position and I hope it meets the Hon'ble Member's difficulty."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said:—

"My lord, I appreciate the difficulty which Government feel in this matter. On the assurance that the Hon'ble Mr. Donald has given that arrangements will be made for exempting Hindu assistants from attending on their holidays, I beg to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The PRESIDENT said:—

"Gentlemen, I have ascertained from the non-official members, who are present here to-day, that a special meeting for the purpose of discussing the Reform Scheme would be more convenient in November than during the first week in September. But, at the same time, a hope has been expressed that the official views of the Government of Bengal upon the Reform Scheme should not be communicated to the Government of India until after the discussion has taken place. The Government of India have asked the Bengal Government for their views by the 1st of November. I am not in a position, therefore, to give any assurance upon that point. All that I can do is to give an undertaking that a report of the discussion which takes place shall be forwarded to the Government of India, with the comments of the local Government upon it.

"Under these circumstances, and in view of the fact that there are a large number of non-official members who are not present here to-day, I am requesting the Secretary to the Legislative Council to communicate individually with every non-official member, explaining the position and asking for his views as to whether the special meeting should be held in the first week of September or postponed till November. I hope that the views of all the non-official members will be received by the end of this week, and if the majority desire to have the discussion in September, I will do my best to get a notice out to Hon'ble Members, in order that they may have as long a time as possible to draw up such motions as they may desire to move in connection with the scheme."

ADJOURNMENT.

"The Council was then adjourned sine die."

cultivators.

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the following details regarding the supply of seed potatoes by the Agricultural Department each year from 1912 to 1917?

(a) (i) How many foreign seed potatoes were purchased by the Agricultural Department;

(ii) what was the actual expenditure; and

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"The compilation of the figures asked for involves very considerable labour. Government have considered it sufficient to have information compiled only for the years 1916 and 1917 instead of for the 6 years for which figures have been asked.

(e) No contractor was employed. Tenders were invited in 1916 and one was accepted. The tenderer demanded an advance which was refused and he declined to supply. The difficulty in working with a contractor is due to the fact that Darjeeling potatoes are peculiarly liable to rot, and rigid selection is necessary."

 - (iii) the extent of pollution caused by effluents (from septic tank latrines) discharged into the Bhagirathi in the districts of Hooghly, Howrah and 24-Parganas which have not been bacteriologically purified by up to date scientific methods?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

Purchase of the Police Hospital in Amherst Street by the Marwari community.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the offer of the Marwari community has been accepted by Government regarding the purchase of the Police Hospital, Amherst Street, Calcutta?

(b) If not, are the Government considering the desirability of causing an inquiry to be held by the Surgeon-General to the Government of Bengal and the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, regarding the sanitary condition of the buildings in Amherst Street and the Dullunda House, with a view to reconsider the matter for the location of the Police Hospital, Calcutta?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

" (a) The offer has been accepted.

(b) The question does not arise. The Amherst Street hospital has been condemned by the Surgeon-General as entirely unsuitable for the purposes of a police hospital. The Dullunda buildings will only be used temporarily, pending the erection of a new hospital on a site at Bhowanipur, which has already been acquired."

Cases of pocket-picking in certain sections of the Calcutta Tramways Company.

(a) Are the Government aware that a large number of cases of pocket-picking takes place in the Kalighat, Chitpore and Harrison Road sections of the Calcutta Tramways Company?

(b) Are the Government aware that a large number of carriages of tram-cars have only one exit and no entrance?

(c) Is it a fact that female passengers who travel by the Kalighat section are caused much inconvenience owing to the overcrowding of passengers near the exit of such cars?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of causing an inquiry to be made by the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, into the matter with a view to introducing the Bombay system in regard to the exit from, and entrance into, the cars, as soon as possible?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

" (a) Cases occur in all sections and are not confined to the sections named. They are most numerous at the tramway termini.

(b) It is a fact that a large number of tramcars have only one exit, which is also used as an entrance.

Questions and Answers.

(c) Yes. All passengers suffer some inconvenience when the cars are overcrowded.

(d) The Commissioner of Police will be asked to communicate with the Tramways Company on the subject, but it would be impossible for them to alter the construction of their cars or to secure new cars at present owing to the war."

(b) If so, do the Government contemplate taking steps for the erection of a suitable rest-house for such accommodation?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

" (a) No representations have been made to Government or to the Eastern Bengal Railway or to the Inland Steamer Companies that passengers are put to great hardship for want of a suitable rest-house at Goalundo.

(b) Inasmuch as the railway terminus at Goalundo and the steamer ghat are not at any fixed site but may be at any point on the river bank within a stretch of 10 to 15 miles of the river, it is obvious that the construction of a rest-house, at any one particular site, would be of little or no use. (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if there is any possibility of a railway connection at an early date between Nator station on the Eastern Bengal Railway and Rampur-Boalia, the headquarters station of the Rajshahi district, for which repeated representations have been made to Government? Railway connection between Nator station and Rampur-Boalia.

(b) If not, are the Government considering the desirability of sanctioning the construction of a tramway line by the Rajshahi District Board either direct or under a guarantee system for the immediate relief of the people of Rajshahi?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

" (a) When proposals for railway development north of the Ganges were last under consideration by the Secretary of State, they included a railway connection between Nator on the Eastern Bengal Railway main line and Rampur-Boalia. As regards this particular connection, the Secretary of State decided that further examination in detail was required. A reconnaissance survey for a line of railway on a 2' 6" gauge from Rampur-Boalia to Nischindpur via Nator has since been sanctioned, to be carried out by the agency of the Eastern Bengal Railway; but the Government of Bengal are not aware of the result of that reconnaissance. In the circumstances, there does not appear to be any likelihood of the construction in the immediate future of a railway between Nator and Rampur-Boalia.

Will the Government be pleased to state the exact number of civil and criminal cases instituted every year by the Nawab of Dacca's estate against one Jaharuddin, tenant of Burirchar in Amtali thana in Bakarganj district, since Mr. Meyer's incumbency as Agent at Barisal and the exact amount spent yearly and the cost decreed against and realised from Jaharuddin in such suits?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

" Litigation with Jaharuddin's father commenced in 1894 or more than ten years before Mr. Meyer took charge. Jaharuddin or his sons were convicted and sentenced to terms of imprisonment in four criminal cases before Mr. Meyer's incumbency. Since then Jaharuddin has been convicted and sentenced to terms of imprisonment in five criminal cases. These criminal prosecutions were instituted in consequence of Jaharuddin and his relatives obstructing the authorities or committing other criminal acts in open defiance of legal orders of courts. Jaharuddin is said to be undergoing at present a term of three years' imprisonment in a case not directly connected with the estate. Many civil suits were filed against Jaharuddin by the estate, but the particulars asked for cannot be furnished as the accounts of the Ailah cutcherry for 12 years have been deposited in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Dacca; nor, in the opinion of Government, will it serve any public purpose to furnish more details of Jaharuddin's career of lawlessness and defiance of authority."

(f) (i) Are the Government considering the desirability of opening the second year survey class at Dacca from the next session?

(f) (ii) What net additional cost would this entail?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

" (a) The class was re-opened in July 1917. There were 24 students on the rolls in July 1918.

(b) The number in the first year class is 17 and in the second year class 9.

(c) On the completion of the course at Dacca, students are eligible for admission to the second year class of the Survey School at Mainamati, provided they satisfy a test as to their qualifications in English. This arrangement is considered suitable.

With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XXXVI of the 4th September, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state in how many instances during the last twelve months, sheds and waiting-rooms at the steamer stations in Eastern Bengal and screened accommodation for 3rd class female passengers and latrine arrangements for inter-class female passengers on board steam-vessels have been provided? Accommodation for female passengers on steamers.

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. COWLEY :—

"Owing to the scarcity of materials and the abnormal rise in prices, the Inland Steamer Companies have not been able to take up any programme for the construction of sheds or waiting rooms at steamer stations in Eastern Bengal. Screened accommodation for 3rd class female passengers has been provided for the 10 steamers employed on the Khulna-Narayanganj Mail Service and the Khulna Express Service, and it is hoped that further progress in this direction will be made shortly.

The Companies report to Government that they do not consider it feasible to arrange latrine accommodation for females in the space allotted to inter-class passengers. The present latrine accommodation is, however, clean and sanitary. As stated in answer to the Hon'ble Member's question No. XXXVI on the 4th September, 1917, latrines for inter-class female passengers have been provided in the designs for new steamers."

(b) Is it a fact that Sanitary Inspectors are recruited from Overseer classes? If so, for what reason?

(c) What are the requisite qualifications for Sanitary Inspectorships? What special training do the Sanitary Inspectors receive?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) Yes. The reason is the paucity of candidates who passed the sanitary engineering portion of the examination after the session of 1916. It was accordingly decided that only passed sub-overseers would be admitted to the class as men without their training appeared to be unable to reach the standard required.

Medical Schools.

(b) If so, what progress has been made in this direction?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

(a) and (b) The specific case of these two schools has not been the subject of any particular proposal. In 1916-1917 there was a general discussion of the question of vernacular education, arising out of a resolution moved in the Imperial Legislative Council by Dr. M. N. Banerjee. The local Government was consulted by the Government of India, and a reply was submitted on the 2nd June 1917. I AM directed to address you on the subject of the points to be noticed in inspection notes on High English Schools for the purposes of recognition by the University of Calcutta.

2. It appears that in many inspection reports some of the important points are not at all touched upon or not dealt with properly. It will facilitate matters if the reports are drawn up strictly in accordance with the heads of information indicated in the University Regulations. It is also desirable that the inspecting officers should devote special attention to the points noted below, several of which are frequently overlooked altogether :—

(1) The managing committee should consist of not more than 10 members, be representative of various communities, meet regularly, have a set of rules approved by the Divisional Inspector of Schools for guidance and have control over the school property, i.e., the property of the school must be vested in the committee by a deed of gift.

(2) Staff.—The number of teachers should be sufficient to allow each teacher one free period per day while the Headmaster should not teach for more than 20, preferably 18, periods per week.

There should be arrangements for translation from Sanskrit and Persian or Arabic into English.

The list of staff should invariably show the length of service (a) as a teacher and (b) in the school.

Questions and Answers.

For a school comprising classes III to XX (with no extra section) the following should be the minimum scale of staff :—

			Ra.
(a)	Headmaster, B.A. (Honours)	...	75—5—100
(b)	Assistant Headmaster, B.A.	...	65—3—80
(c)	Assistant Master, F.A.	...	45
(d)	Ditto	...	40
(e)	Ditto	...	35
(f)	Ditto	...	30
(g)	Assistant Master, F.A. or Matriculate with at least 5 years' experience	...	25
(h)	Assistant Master, Matriculate, with at least 5 years' experience	...	20
(i)	Head Pandit, Sanskrit Title	...	25
(j)	2nd Pandit, Normal Final passed	...	20
(k)	Maulvi, Final Madrassa passed	...	25
			405—445

Note—

- (i) One of the B.A.'s must have taken Honours in English.
- (ii) One of the English teachers should be a B.Sc. or I.Sc.
- (iii) Wherever possible and necessary one of the F.A.'s should be a Muhammadan capable of taking translation from Arabic or Persian into English.
- (iv) In no High English School should there be more than 2 matriculates on the staff.
- (v) On no consideration should the pay of a teacher in the High English School fall below Rs. 20 per month.

(3) Buildings must have pucca plinth, be well lighted and ventilated. The surroundings must be unobjectionable and equipment adequate.

Note—

Lighting and ventilations should proceed from the longer side of the room, if possible ; boys should on no account sit facing the light.

(4) Furniture.—Desks must be provided in all classes at 1 foot 8 inches per boy.

(5) Accommodation should be provided at the minimum rate of 10 sq. ft. per boy in every class room. The area in sq. ft. and the number of boys accommodated in each class room should invariably be shown.

(6) Sanitary arrangements.—The standard to be aimed at should be :—

	Per 100 boys.	Staff.
(i) Latrines	1	1
(ii) Urinals	2	1

(7) There should be a regular monthly allotment of Rs. 5 for library. Up to 250 boys the scale should be Rs. 5 per month with Re. 1 extra for each 50 boys.

(8) Games should be properly organised and drill taught in all classes according to the curriculum.

(9) The residences of boys living with unrelated guardians should be regularly supervised at least once a quarter by members of the staff and reports submitted to the Headmaster.

Hostels and messes should provide accommodation at the minimum rate of 60 sq. ft. per boy, must be well ventilated and lighted and have a resident superintendent in each.

(10) Finances.—Where the fee income is inadequate to maintain an efficient scale of establishment, subscriptions must be definitely guaranteed : an endowment or reserve fund of at least Rs. 5,000 is desirable : the amount of surplus balance should be invariably stated and it should be deposited in a reliable Bank—preferably in the Postal Savings Bank.

8. Finally I am to request that your recommendations under each of the above heads should be definite and clear.

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking steps to provide for the teaching of Urdu in the lower classes of the Hare School?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) Yes.

(b) and (c) It is not the policy of the Education Department to allow Hindi or Urdu to be used as a medium of instruction in Government high schools other than specifically Muhammadan high schools in Bengal, and instructions were accordingly issued to the authorities of the Hare School by the Director of Public Instruction in 1915 to discourage the admission into class 5 and the classes below it of boys whose vernacular is Hindi or Urdu. “ Not far away the wayfarer descries an Arab with clear-cut features and a world of mysticism in his eyes gazing down into a gutter as reverently as if it were his Prophet's tomb ”?

(b) Are the Government aware that the comparison suggested is regarded by Muhammadans as extremely blasphemous?

(c) Are the Government aware that the passage in question has seriously wounded the religious feelings of the Musalman community?

(d) Are the Government aware that the matter is attracting attention all over India and creating widespread excitement?

Questions and Answers.

(e) Are the Government aware that a public meeting under the auspices of the Bengal Moslem League was held at the office of the Indian Association on Sunday, the 11th instant, at which the people present gave vent to the feelings of resentment against the paper?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Press Censor brought the matter to the notice of Government? If so, on what date?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any action has been taken against the paper under the Press Act? If not, why not?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“(a) Yes.

“(b), (c) and (d) Government have received representations from various Muhammadan associations complaining that the feelings of the Muhammadan community have been wounded by the paragraph.

(e) Yes.

(f) The Press Censor first brought the matter to the notice of Government on the 14th August in connection with some articles which had appeared in certain Muhammadan newspapers, but the paragraph in the Indian Daily News had attracted the attention of Government before that date.

(g) Government have carefully considered the paragraph together with the explanation which was published in the Indian Daily News of the 22nd August, and are satisfied that the passage in question was not intended to hurt the religious feelings of the Muhammadan community. It was copied in all good faith from another journal, and cannot under any ordinary construction of the English language be regarded as intentionally offensive. It was part of an article, apparently meant to be complimentary, describing, in somewhat journalistic phraseology, the presence in Paris of certain Muhammadans from Africa. Whatever criticisms it is open to as regards its wording, the local Government accept as bona fide the explicit disclaimer by the journal of any intention of wounding the religious susceptibilities of any one. While Government have every wish to safeguard from unwarrantable attack the religious sentiments of the Muhammadan, or any other community, they can only conclude that much of the resentment aroused by this incident is based on a misunderstanding, and they are advised that the passage complained of does not infringe the Press Act and that no case for action under that Act would lie.”

and elsewhere.

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the statement contained in the statistics taken by Government in July last regarding the stock of dhotis and saris (for use for females only) in the various firms and shops in Calcutta and elsewhere?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"The recent census of piece-goods was undertaken at the request of the Government of India, to whom the result was duly communicated, and the publication of the detailed figures rests primarily with them. It is believed that the returns received were not altogether complete, as some owners were in ignorance of the requirements of the order and others, possibly, deliberately evaded it. The actual stocks in hand were probably, therefore, somewhat larger than those returned, but allowing for the reduced rate of consumption now prevalent under the influence of high prices, it is estimated that there were in hand, and to arrive within the next few months, dhotis and saris sufficient for 12, and grey goods sufficient for 6, months. The estimate which has been hazarded in some sections of the press that stocks for two, or even three, years are available is certainly an exaggeration. However, since the census, it is understood that a considerable amount of forward business has gone through and to that extent the position has changed for the better."

- (c) if as a result of such investigation, works in connection with the proposed improvements of that and the other waterways will be taken in hand in the winter?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given in this Council on the 3rd of July, 1918, to unstarred question No. XXXIV (iii).

(b) Mr. Addams-Williams has not yet been able to inspect the Rohra khal, but he will inspect it when he has an opportunity to do so.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the "dangerously contaminated" condition of the water of the Bhagirathi as disclosed by chemical and bacteriological examinations held in the laboratory of the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal? Pollution of the Bhagirathi water.

(b) Is it a fact that such contamination is due mainly, if not solely to the discharge from the septic installations in the several Jute Mills on both banks of the river?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of inquiring into the matter in the interests of the public health?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to starred question No. 6 at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on 19th August, 1918.

(b) Government are advised that it is not a fact.

(c) As stated in the reply given to starred question No. 6 on 19th August, 1918, Government will consider what measures can be taken to prevent pollution of the river water."

In view of the approaching expiration of the contract with the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway Company, are the Government considering the desirability of directing that the work of eliminating the 147 dangerous crossings on the public cart road be taken in hand immediately and of refusing to renew the contract until this work has been completed? Renewal of contract with the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

"It is understood that the Government of India have decided not to exercise their option to purchase the railway and as a result the contract between the Railway Company and the Secretary of State continues in force for a further period. In these circumstances the question of making the improvement of level crossings a condition for the renewal of the contract does not arise."

SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION.

The Hon'ble Mr. IRWIN asked the following supplementary question :—

"Are the Government aware that these crossings constitute a very serious menace to the lives of pedestrians and others crossing the lines?"

Questions and Answers.

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"The matter of the improvement of the level crossings on these lines has been and is under the consideration of Government, and it is hoped that in no distant future some improvement will be made ; but a complete improvement is still hardly practicable."

(a) With reference to the European man power question, are the Government considering the desirability of appointing small local committees in each district to inquire and advise what individuals can be spared for service?

(b) Are the Government aware that there are a certain number of married men and others who would volunteer, for I.A.R.O. service, if a scheme of adequate provision for those dependent on them were announced?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

"(a) Inquiries are being made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Tea Association, the Calcutta Trades Association, and the Indian Mining Association and other bodies have been asked to co-operate. The question of additional local committee will rather arise when it is known what cases have not been covered by the inquiries already instituted.

(b) Statements to this effect have appeared in the newspapers, but Government have no precise information regarding the number of men who would be obtained by the adoption of this expedient. The inquiries now in progress should throw some light on the point."

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state if an inquiry has been made in the matter, and if so, by whom and with what result, and whether the applicants were given an opportunity to prove their allegations?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

A public footpath is not easy to define. Government understand that certain Union Committees have taken action with a view to asserting rights of easement over paths not recorded as public, and that the Dacca District Board has taken action for the demarcation of public footpaths in Munshiganj subdivision in order to prevent encroachment. (a) Are the Government aware that the District Board of Dacca issued a circular to all Union Committees authorising them to levy taxes under section 118 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885 for works connected with sanitation drainage and water-supply only?

(b) Is it a fact that some Union Committees spent the sum or a part of the sum thus levied by taxation for the construction and repairs of roads? (b) In 1916-17, previous to the issue of that circular, 13 Union Committees spent Rs. 2,983. realised by local taxation, on reclaiming and improving village paths. In 1917-18, the sum spent on village paths from funds realised by local taxation amounted to Rs. 469; and only 4 Union Committees acted contrary to the instructions contained in the circular. It is reported that steps have been taken to prevent the recurrence of such an irregularity."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.THE CALCUTTA HACKNEY-CARRIAGE BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble SIR BIJAY CHAND MAHTAB, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, presented the report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918.

He said :—

"My lord, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Bill, 1918.

The Committee, though unable to present a unanimous report, have been able to meet most of the criticisms which the circulation of the Bill elicited.

The Committee, by a majority, considered that the control of hackney carriages should be transferred from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police in Calcutta, and alterations have been made in the Bill with a view to give effect to this transfer.

In this connection, I would like to refer to the statement made by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur in his Note of Dissent. He said that, as stated by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, the Fire Brigade would not be made over in exchange to the Corporation, and I may point out that this is a misapprehension. What I did actually say when I moved for the appointment of the Select Committee was as follows : 'I may, however, point out to the representatives of the Corporation in this House that Government cannot entertain their proposal of transferring the power from the Commissioner of Police to the Corporation as regards the Calcutta Fire Brigade. This question does not arise as it is beyond the scope of the Bill.'

The Calcutta Hackney-carriage Bill, 1918; the Bengal Prevention of Adulteration Bill, 1918.

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

What I meant by 'being beyond the scope of the Bill' was that Government could not consider the question of the transfer of the Fire Brigade in connection with the question of the present Bill which deals with an entirely different matter. Other municipalities will have to be consulted about the proposal to transfer the Fire Brigade; and Government cannot, therefore, at present say anything on the question. We are prepared to consider it on its merits and apart from the present Bill.

Turning now to the provisions of this Bill, I may say that provision has been made in the Bill to meet a distinct difficulty of hackney carriages plying for hire in small and contiguous municipalities. Clause 2(b), as revised in the Select Committee, read with 82A will enable hackney carriage registered in one town to ply in adjacent towns without being registered in those towns.

With a view to stop the growing evil of the use of hackney carriages for immoral purposes, we have inserted a new sub-clause (r) in clause 51, making the use of a carriage an offence punishable under the Act.

In order to ensure the better treatment of horses we have inserted a provision in clause 71 regulating the use of horses in hackney carriages.

For reasons of public safety, a new clause 79 (a) has been inserted in the Bill requiring disinfection of a hackney carriage or palanquin used in conveying persons suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder or a corpse.

To prevent harassment of passengers, particularly pardahnashin ladies, a new clause 79B has been inserted prohibiting the arrest of a driver of a hackney carriage or the bearer of a palanquin or the seizure of the carriage or palanquin when it is actually used for the conveyance of the passenger, until some arrangement is made for the passenger to proceed to his destination.

The other alterations made by the Select Committee do not call for any special comment.

With these remarks, my Lord, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.

THE BENGAL PREVENTION OF ADULTERATION BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble SIR BIJAY CHAND MAHTAB, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, moved for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for the prevention of adulteration of food in Bengal.

He said :—

"My Lord, I beg leave to move to introduce a Bill to make provision for the prevention of the adulteration of food.

When Sir S. P. Sinha introduced the Bill to prevent the adulteration of ghes within the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Corporation, he stated that it was at the time impossible for us to introduce a measure which would include not only Calcutta but also the mufassal, and if we were to wait for such a Bill to go up to the Government of India we certainly could not expect to introduce that Bill and much less to pass it until at any rate the ensuing cold weather. It is the very Bill, to which Sir S. P. Sinha made a reference in his speech, that I have the honour to introduce to-day. The necessity for the Bill has arisen from the fact that the adulteration of food, particularly of articles of common consumption, such as milk, ghee, mustard oil, etc., is prevalent in Bengal and that the existing law has entirely failed to check the evil. The only provisions of the law that are of general application in regard to the adulteration of food are those contained in sections 272 and 273 of the Indian Penal Code. These sections penalise the adulteration of any article of food or drink so as to make such articles noxious as food or drink, and the sale of such noxious article. The use of these sections is the only preventive for adulteration of food outside municipalities, and they can only be put into force where the adulteration has the effect of making the food noxious. In municipalities, section 251 of the Bengal Municipal Act penalises the sale to the prejudice of the purchaser of any article of food which is not of the nature, substance or quality of the article demanded by such purchaser. Section 251D provides for the compulsory purchase of any article of food for the purpose of analysis. But section 251 is the only provision for dealing with the vendor if the analysis proves that the article is adulterated. As explained by Sir S. P. Sinha in introducing the Calcutta Amendment Bill for the prevention of the adulteration of ghee in Calcutta, the section last named is directed more to the punishment of fraud than to the prevention of adulteration, because under the section if a man says 'What I am selling to you is not a pure article,' there is no question of his committing any breach of the law; but if he perpetrates a fraud by giving an impure article when he is asked for a pure article, then and then only does he become amenable to the provisions of the law. The question of taking legislative action to supplement these provisions of the law has been long debated. As long ago as 1886, the Government of India consulted the local Governments as to the desirability of special legislation to prevent the sale of adulterated articles of food. The replies of local Governments indicated a general belief that the existing provisions against adulteration in the local Municipal Acts were not insufficient and that in any case no immediate legislation was required. The Government of India concurred in these conclusions, and there the matter rested for about a quarter of a century. Times have altered, and there is now, I think, a general consensus of opinion that the existing law is not sufficient to cope with the evil. In 1911, the All-India Sanitary Conference expressed the opinion that the existing powers under the various Municipal Acts for the prevention of the adulteration of food and drugs were inadequate, that the adulteration of food was extensive, and that action should be taken to prevent it. This Government examined the question so far as Bengal is concerned, and as the result of their enquiry, it was found that the provisions of the existing law were inadequate, and that the adulteration of articles of food, such as milk, ghee and oil, has assumed such proportions as to be a menace to the health of the people. This Government, therefore, urged that legislation should be taken. The Government of India agreed to legislation being introduced in the local legislature in respect of the adulteration of food, but deprecated special legislation for drugs which they considered could be left to the operation of the Indian Penal Code.

Since then Bengal Act I of 1917 has been passed as an emergency measure for the prevention of adulteration of ghee in Calcutta. The Bill I now have the honour to introduce goes further, for it is a measure dealing not only with the prevention of adulteration of ghee, but also of articles of food and drink generally. Its object in brief is to ensure the purity of staple articles of food most liable to adulteration, and in accordance with the decision of the Government of India drugs have been excluded from its scope.

I would first explain that Calcutta does not come under its operation, as the Calcutta Municipal Bill which was introduced in the Council on the 20th November last contained special provisions dealing with the same subject. These provisions, so far as they relate to the adulteration of ghee, were moreover included in the Statute Book by Bengal Act I of 1917. The Bill is applicable then to Bengal outside Calcutta, and it is intended that it should apply, in the first place, to municipal areas where there are health officers or sanitary officers. These have been appointed for all municipalities of any considerable size. If found necessary, it may be extended later to large hâts, bazars and other trading centres. Accordingly, the power of extension of the Act has been made as general as possible.

Turning to the specific provisions of the Bill, the term 'adulterated' has been defined, the definition being similar to that in Bengal Act I of 1917. Under clause 4, power is taken to the local Government to define the normal constituents of food, and to declare what deficiency in any of these constituents and what addition of extraneous matter or proportion of water in any article shall raise the presumption that the quality of the article has been reduced, lowered or injuriously affected thereby. By this means effect can be given to the results of scientific research in the future without recourse to additional legislation. As in the case of Bengal Act I of 1917, the main principle of the Bill is that a person who sells food or manufactures food for sale must himself take the responsibility that such food is not adulterated. This means that the vendor must satisfy himself before he buys an article of food that it is pure. Under clause 5, however, which prohibits the sale of food which is not of the proper nature, substance or quality, the vendor is safeguarded if he sells an article which he purchased with a written warranty to the effect that it was the same in nature, substance and quality as that demanded by the purchaser, or if he sells it in the same state as he purchased it, or if he sells a food which is the subject of a patent in force in the state required by the specification of the patent. Again, in recognition of the difficulties which retail dealers in the mufassal may have in getting food analysed, clause 6, which refers to the sale of food which is not of the prescribed standard of purity, provides that the vendor may plead a warranty in defence. This provision, without jeopardising the purity of the article, shifts the responsibility from the small to the large dealer or manufacturer who has facilities for obtaining analysis.

The Bill also prohibits the storing of adulterants in any factory where ghee, mustard oil, etc., are manufactured; and powers have been taken for the appointment of public analysts whose certificates will be taken as sufficient evidence of the results of analysis in a court of law. It is believed that, in practice, it will be possible to make use of the services of duly qualified officers under the Sanitary Commissioner for this purpose. Clause 10 of the Bill empowers properly authorised persons compulsorily to purchase food required for submission to a public analyst, while clause 11 authorizes, with certain safeguards, a private purchaser to submit for analysis food purchased by him. Persons duly authorized are also empowered to take samples of food or its components during the process of manufacture or while in transit, or when stored or exposed for sale. The division of samples into three parts has been made compulsory on the analogy of the English law.

In view of the harmful results of the use of skimmed milk for feeding infants and of the fact that enquiry has shown that skimmed milk is used for this purpose in Bengal, provision has been made that tins or other receptacles containing skimmed milk shall bear labels indicating both in English and Bengali that the milk has been skimmed and is not suitable for infants' food. Specific provision has also been made for the regulation of butter which, it is believed, is also adulterated to a large extent. In order to give local authorities an interest in the working of the Act, it has been provided that all fines to be realised under it and all other sums which may be utilised for the purposes of the Act shall be credited to local funds."

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.THE BENGAL JUVENILE SMOKING BILL, 1917.

The Hon'ble DR. ABDULLA-AL-MAMUN SUHRAWARDY moved that the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill, 1917, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, the Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood, the Hon'ble Major-General Robinson, I.M.S., the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukharji Bahadur and the mover, with instructions to submit their report after two months.

He said :—

"My Lord, when introducing the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill last year, I had ventured to express the hope that it would receive the full support of public opinion. I was not disappointed. I had the satisfaction of finding that the Bill had the sympathy of the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha and the cordial support of veteran Members of the Council like the Hon'ble Babu Debender Chunder Ghose, the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Majumdar, the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur and the Hon'ble Dr. Sarbadhikari. I have now before me the collection of opinions on the Bill, and I note with satisfaction that it has the support of general public opinion behind it. In addition to that, I have received many letters from gentlemen of position and influence who are in full sympathy with the principles of the Bill. Of these I need only refer to that from Mr. J. D. Biswas, the Honorary Secretary of the Anti-Smoking Society, Bengal. He informs me that the Society has submitted to Government a memorial in support of the Bill consisting of 107 sheets supported by about 50 schools and colleges of Bengal, and containing about 2,000 signatures of well-known medical men, lawyers, missionaries and men in other professions interested in the welfare of the juveniles and representing various grades of society and Districts of Bengal."

This being the case, I am confident that the Hon'ble Members will have no hesitation in allowing the Bill to proceed to the Select Committee.

Opinions on the Bill were invited by Government from the Chairman, Calcutta Corporation; the Commissioners, Presidency, Burdwan, Rajshahi, Dacca and Chittagong Divisions; the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, and a number of Associations and public bodies.

Of the six Government officials—the Commissioners of the five divisions and the Director of Public Instruction—all are more or less opposed to the Bill. But a little examination will show that their opinions are merely personal and individual and entirely opposed to the views of representative men and local bodies consulted by them. For instance, the Director of Public Instruction records his dissent from the opinion of the majority of the officers consulted by him who consider legislation necessary and desirable. The Commissioner of the Presidency Division has no doubt that legislation of the kind is quite unsuited to India. But his view again is opposed to that of the majority of persons and local bodies consulted by him. The Commissioners of other divisions also more or less oppose though the majority of persons and local bodies consulted by them cordially support the principle of the Bill. It seems all Commissioners, like poets and mystics, think alike and invite public opinion only to express their dissent from it.

Turning now to the Calcutta Corporation, I must confess that its attitude towards the Bill is not quite clear to me. The Estates and General Purposes Special Committee (consisting of the Chairman, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, Mr. Phelps, Babu Ramtaran Bannerjee and others) at their meeting held on the 8th January 1918, declared themselves in favour of the Bill generally. But, at the meeting of the Corporation held on the 23rd January 1918, an amendment was moved to the effect that in the opinion of the Corporation the proposed legislation to discourage smoking amongst juveniles was unnecessary and undesirable. But after much heated and irrelevant talk the mover of the amendment accepted the suggestion of the Chairman (who agreed with Mr. Jones that the amendment moved was too drastic and that it was scarcely becoming of that meeting to undertake the defence of tobacco), that if the Corporation did not wish to approve the Bill they could say that the proposed legislation will not work satisfactorily in practice and will not attain the object aimed at. Now, from the extract from the proceedings of the Minutes of the Corporation meeting held on the 23rd June 1918, it is perfectly clear that the saner and soberer members of the Corporation are in favour of the Bill. Personally, I would not attach any importance to the opinion of a dealer in cigarettes who confesses that as a business man it would be to his interest to oppose any restriction that may tend to check the progress of the tobacco trade in general, or to the utterances of that champion of tobacco who after 52 years of hard smoking congratulates himself on his good health in his 73rd year. I do not know whether smoking has something to do with the confusion of ideas which distinguish his speech. On his own confession he started smoking in his 21st year and he need not have apprehended that the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Act was intended to apply to him in his second childhood.

Nor do I think anyone who knows him will take seriously that other defender of tobacco—the stormy petrel of the Corporation—who, for want of better occupation has discovered in the Corporation the forum for the exhibition of his oratorical powers.

Of the associations and public bodies six emphatically support the principle of the Bill and consider legislation of the kind actually necessary and desirable. Three oppose the Bill and the attitude of the remaining may be described as that of benevolent neutrality.

The associations which are clearly opposed to the Bill dismiss the whole subject in one sentence without assigning any reasons. 'They do not consider any such legislation necessary or desirable.' Now as these associations have not said much, I have not much to say about their views, but I must confess I am curious to know the reasons for their admirable brevity of expression. Absorbed in commercial pursuits, have the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the European Association discovered in brevity of expression and summary rejection of the Bill, the safest and surest way of saving time? Or is this an instance of that habitual indifference to all questions affecting the welfare of the Indian people with which the non-official European community is generally charged?

My Lord, I believe I have made out a strong case for the reference of the Bill to the Select Committee. I hope I have made it abundantly clear that the preponderance of Indian public opinion is in favour of the Bill. The measure before the House is primarily one for the Indian opinion. I earnestly trust that the European Members of the Council, official and non-official, will not stand in the way of a measure in whose favour Indian public opinion has clearly declared itself and thus frustrate Indian efforts at social reform.

It is well known, my Lord, that the United Kingdom, Japan, many of the British Colonies and American States have passed similar measures for the protection of children. I remind the Council that even with regard to India I cannot claim any kind of priority or originality for the introduction of the Bill. Indeed, some of the Indian States like Baroda, Patiala, Nabha, Mysore, Faridkote, Maler Kotla and Hyderabad have already forestalled me. Since the introduction of my Bill in the Council, the Punjab Juvenile Smoking Bill has passed into law.

Before I conclude, my Lord, I take the liberty of quoting a passage from the speech of a member of the House of Representatives in Tokio during discussion on the Japanese Juvenile Smoking Bill in December 1899 : —

‘If we expect to make this nation superior to the nations of Europe and America, we must not allow our youths in the common schools (who are to become the fathers and mothers of our country in the near future) to smoke. If we desire to cause the light of the nation to shine forth over the world, we ought not to follow the example of China and India.’

My Lord, I need not take up the time of the Council any further. I know I have got many powerful allies here, chief amongst whom is that militant knight, Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, President of the Anti-Smoking Society. I commend my Bill to their care.”

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

“My Lord, it is my duty to explain to the Council the attitude of Government towards this motion. It is one of strict neutrality. Government will neither support nor oppose it. They wish that there should be frank and free discussion, and official members of the Legislative Council will, therefore, be at liberty to speak as they like on the motion. They are, however, asked to abstain from voting, as Government desire the decision to rest entirely with the non-official representatives. If the motion is carried, Government will press for certain amendments in the Select Committee, and, if necessary, at subsequent stages of the Bill. The modifications which Government consider essential if the motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee is carried are—

- (1) The age limit of 21 is prima facie too high and should be reduced to 16.
- (2) Provisions similar to those contained in sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 43 of the English Children Act, 1908, should be inserted in the Bill. In other words, Government consider that the provisions of the Bill about cigarettes should also apply to tobacco and smoking mixtures, with the exception recognised in England that a person shall not be guilty of an offence for selling them to a person apparently under the age of 16 years, if he does not know and has no reason to believe that it is for his personal use. The Bill, as it stands, guards against the sale of cigars, cigarettes, biris, pipes or cigarette papers, but not against the sale of tobacco other than cigarettes. There is a similar omission as regards the power of seizure. Government are of opinion that in this matter the English law should be followed if the Council decides that legislation is necessary.

The Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill, 1917.

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Mr. Kerr.

- (3) The power to seize cigars, etc., referred to in clause 6 should be expressly confined to police officers (including constables) in uniform. Power should, at the same time, be taken to authorize any other person to exercise the right of seizure. The object of this latter provision is to leave Government free to decide as to the class of officers or persons on whom this duty may be suitably imposed, and, lastly, there should be a clear provision as to the person who should have the power of initiating proceedings.

These are all the remarks, on behalf of Government, that I have to make at this stage. As I have already said, that while official members are to abstain from voting, any member of the Government desiring to express their own opinion on the merits or otherwise of the Bill are welcome to do so along with their non-official colleagues."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I give my cordial support to the Bill. I entered the Council when the Hon'ble Member had delivered a portion of his speech and I could catch only one or two of his observations which had reference to the Calcutta Corporation. He said that the sober portion of the Corporation supported the Bill. I do not think there exists any such division as a sober and unsober portion in the Corporation. They are all sober and they have given their sober support to the Bill.

The Bill, I find, is to apply to Calcutta in the first instance. And I also find that my Hon'ble friend, the mover, in constituting the Select Committee has perhaps overlooked that the Calcutta Corporation has got a claim to be represented on the Committee. There are two members of the Corporation in the Committee—one is Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari who, I take it, has been selected because he is the President of the Anti-Smoking Society and the other is Mr. Arden-Wood as the representative of educational interest and not as a member of the Corporation. Barring these two gentlemen, there are no other members of the Corporation on the Committee. I therefore beg leave to suggest a name which I think will be quite acceptable to the Council—a gentleman who took a very straight and frank course in the discussion of this Bill in the Corporation—I mean Mr. Payne, the Chairman. I followed the discussion in the Corporation with great interest, and I may say without hesitation that he is a worthy person to be included in the Select Committee and that he would be of considerable help to my Hon'ble friend. I, therefore, would move an amendment that Mr. Payne's name be added to the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble MR. KERR said :—

"My Lord, I should like to take advantage of the permission granted by Your Excellency's Government to make a few observations on this Bill, not as a hide-bound bureaucrat, but in my much more important capacity as the father of a family. As such, the Bill interests me very greatly and there is a good deal that I could say about it. I shall, however, confine myself to two points : first, the scope of the Bill, and, secondly, the machinery which is provided for carrying out its provisions.

As to the scope of the Bill, I think it must have struck every father of a family, as it has struck me, that it is extremely narrow. The Bill deals with what is called juvenile smoking, which is nowhere defined though it talks of cigarettes, cigars, pipes and biris. As the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan has stated, the Bill does not mention tobacco at all. Now, surely, this so-called juvenile smoking is not the most serious or the most frequent form of juvenile sin known to those who have experience of children. There is the well-known practice of children putting their thumbs into the inkpot and then sucking them—a practice which, I am told by the highest medical authority, is very much more deleterious to the internal organs than any amount of juvenile smoking. Then, there is the well-known practice of little boys playing about with cricket balls in the neighbourhood of expensive panes of glass, a practice which is dangerous, not so much to the small boys themselves, as to the people in the neighbourhood, and is also very expensive for those who have to pay for replacing the panes of glass. I need not give further instances. Any member of this Council, who is the father of a family, can add to the list for himself. I would suggest to this Council that before embarking on legislation of this kind, it would be well to appoint a large and representative Committee to consider the whole question of juvenile sin and to suggest remedies.

I now turn to the question of machinery, which is dealt with in clause 4 of the Bill. The machinery there provided consists of police officers, members of the Preventive Service, members of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and teachers in educational institutions. And I say that this machinery, like the scope of the Bill, shows a very narrow outlook. I must admit that the Hon'ble Member has done pretty well in roping in the whole of the police force; that gives him about 25,000 men from the Inspector-General and the Commissioner of Police down to the last joined recruit and includes the officers of the Intelligence Branch and the Criminal Investigation Department whose detective abilities and special training would be usefully employed in work of this kind. But after we have disposed of the police, the rest of the machinery shows a sad falling off. Members of the Preventive Service and members of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals do not number more than a few hundreds; and I do not quite see why they should be considered to have special qualifications for work of this kind. But what are 25,000 men against the whole of the juvenile population of Bengal? There are plenty of people who have nothing to do and are quite ready to interfere with the bringing up of other people's families and who would be only too pleased if they were asked to undertake functions under this Bill. It seems to me, too, that the Bill should make more use of official agency. It will be seen that the function of the officers who are employed under the Bill is to seize cigarettes and such things and make them over to their immediate superiors for disposal. The immediate superior will presumably in most cases finish smoking the cigarette himself. Anyhow, the point is that an official always has an immediate superior in his near neighbourhood, and consequently the official class seems better suited than any other class to undertake functions under this Bill. I thought only this morning of one manner in which the official population might be usefully employed in regard to a measure of this kind. The popular impression is that the officers who accompany Your Excellency to Darjeeling have nothing to do when they get there, and perhaps if we undertook some important public service of a striking character, the opposition to the Darjeeling exodus might be overcome and even the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq might be reconciled to it. I suggest that Secretaries and their Hon'ble Members might go out in pairs and patrol the Darjeeling streets, where there is plenty of juvenile smoking. The Secretary would seize the cigarette and make it over to his Hon'ble Member. I might go out with Sir Henry Wheeler and Mr. O'Malley would go out with the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; in this way, we should provide free smokes for our Hon'ble Members, besides performing a useful public service. I only put this by way of suggestion. I say that the machinery proposed in the Bill is very narrow and requires further consideration before this Council can safely legislate on the subject.

Resolutions.

The President ; Mr. Payne ; Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy ; Mr. M. Asraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri.

My main objection to the Bill, however, is one of principle. The children in whom the Hon'ble Member is interested are apparently addicted to this habit of juvenile smoking. The children in whom I am interested are not in the least addicted to juvenile smoking, but they are addicted to those other practices which I have mentioned, and to other practices which I have not mentioned. Now, the effect of this Bill will be to give the Hon'ble Member the services of the whole of the police force in bringing up his family, whereas I shall get no assistance from the Bill at all. I am a taxpayer just the same as the Hon'ble Member, and I ask the Council whether it is reasonable that there should be this enormous differentiation in favour of the Hon'ble Member. If these public functionaries are to be employed in assisting parents to bring up their families, surely their services must be distributed in a fair and reasonable manner; otherwise there will be great heartburning and jealousy. As I understand the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur, I have no vote on this Bill. I do not quite know why I have no vote. As I have said before, I am both a taxpayer and a father of a family. However, there are plenty of people who have no votes in this world, so I do not complain about this. All I say is that if I had a vote, I should vote against the Bill."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I think it would be an advantage to the Council if they had the views of the Hon'ble Member who is in charge of the Bill upon the amendment which has been moved and also the views of the Hon'ble Member who is the subject of the amendment. I do not know whether the Hon'ble Member has ascertained from the Hon'ble Mr. Payne whether he would be willing to serve on the Committee. But perhaps the Hon'ble Mr. Payne himself will say whether he is willing to serve."

The Hon'ble MR. PAYNE said :—

"My lord, I should be willing to serve if I am elected."

The Hon'ble DR. ABDULLA-AL-MAMUN SUHRAWARDY said :—

"I shall be very glad to have the Hon'ble Mr. Payne in the Committee.

About a certain remark made by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, I must say that I know the members of the Corporation are all sober men."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The amendment before the Council is that the Hon'ble Mr. Payne's name should be included in the list of members of the Select Committee."

The motion was then put in the following modified form and agreed to :—

That the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill, 1917, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, the Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood, the Hon'ble Major-General Robinson, I.M.S., the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukharji Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne and the mover, with instructions to submit their report after two months.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

Resolutions

(under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest).

The Hon'ble MR. M. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in future, wherever practicable, suitable Muhammadan officers be appointed to be managers of the Muhammadan estates under the Court of Wards.

Resolutions.Mr. Cumming.

He said :—

“ My lord, at first sight this seems to be a racial question. Some Hindu friends of mine have pointed it out to me, and I thought I had better explain it. It has got nothing to do with racial question at all. I have raised this point only because in my opinion Muhammadans are best suited for this particular purpose in these particular estates. The original idea of taking the estates under the Court of Wards was—I speak subject to correction—this : that Government would be sure to get their revenue and would be able to see that the estates do not go to rack and ruin. These are unlike the estates in the hands of the receivers who do not care about the co-sharers or heirs of the estates. But in the case of the Court of Wards they look into the affairs of the estates and they look into the education and upbringing of the minors, that is, how they should be brought according to the manners and customs of Muhammadans in case of a Muhammadan family. In the management of smaller estates the Court of Wards managers stand in the place of pater familias—that is they have got to see what tradition the particular families in their charge should keep up to, what sort of society the minor should have, who should be allowed to come near the minor and who not. These things are very difficult for a Hindu manager to find out. There may be many relations, and the manager may not know whom to exclude from the society of the minors. There may be relations who have got some ulterior motives to become the minors’ friends. Now all these things a Muhammadan manager will be able to find out more easily than a Hindu manager. Then about the education of boys. A Muhammadan manager will be able to spot out a suitable Muhammadan teacher for the boy, while a Hindu manager will have to go by only the educational qualification of the teacher. The character of the boys must be formed from the very beginning so that they may be good citizens afterwards. One gets more education in society than in schools. Then about the question of marriage. When the wards attain the marriageable age they must be married. A suitable match should be found; a suitable family with which alliance can be made. In these matters ladies play an important part. A Hindu manager may not know which family is suitable and which not, or he might not be able to convince the ladies about the suitability of a family. All these can be performed if a suitable Muhammadan is appointed as the manager. There is another thing—it is the dealing with the ladies. When the boys are to be sent to schools the first opposition will come from the ladies. They will say if his father and grandfather had done well without going to school, why should the boy be sent. If a suitable Muhammadan is appointed, he will be able to convince the ladies. I have found all this from personal experience. The ladies may talk to a Muhammadan from behind the purdah. That may not be the case if a Hindu officer is appointed. Therefore this is not a racial question. This resolution has only been proposed for the benefit of the Muhammadan wards and I commend this to the attention of the Council.”

The Hon’ble MR. CUMMING said :—

“ My lord, I can understand the point of view of the Hon’ble Member who has put forward this resolution ; but, at the same time, I personally deplore the tendency to denominationalism which it indicates. I may say at once that Government are not prepared to accept the resolution in the form in which it stands at present ; but, as I shall explain, Government are prepared to go a considerable way to meet the Hon’ble Member.

What are the facts ? In the first place, it should not be overlooked that although the Court of Wards may, under the Act which constitutes it, receive orders and instructions from Government, yet the Court of Wards Act of 1879 gives full statutory powers to the Court of Wards,—not to Government,—to entertain such establishment as may be considered requisite for the management of an estate. The Hon’ble Member has referred to some particular matters affecting Muhammadan wards, their education, their upbringing and their marriage, and he spoke as if the Manager were in all cases the guardian of Muhammadan minors; but I can assure him that this is not so. I can certainly assure the Hon'ble mover that both the Court of Wards and the Collector do endeavour to obtain the advice of Muhammadans in all matters which affect the personal concern of Muhammadan minors.

In the second place, how many cases are affected by this resolution? The total number of estates belonging to Muhammadans which are at present under the Court of Wards is only nine. One of these is managed by a Muhammadan, five by Hindus and two by Europeans, and in one the Manager has not yet been appointed. Out of the seven estates which are managed by non-Muhammadans, four again are small estates which, for reasons of economy, are managed jointly with Hindu estates. It is evident, therefore, that there are only three Muhammadan estates which can reasonably be covered by the Hon'ble Member's resolution.

In the third place, the Court of Wards as a trustee is bound to appoint the most suitable candidate available, and in doing so, the Court has, in the past, given full and sympathetic consideration to the wishes of proprietors. To aid in the selection of candidates, the Court maintains a register of applicants for managerships. I find that out of the 83 names which are now on the register, there are only three Muhammadans. It is, therefore, a fair inference that the number of Muhammadans who offer themselves is extremely small. It may be said at once that the Court of Wards is in sympathy with the object which the Hon'ble mover has in view, and that in accordance with its usual practice it does pay special attention to the claims of Muhammadan candidates as Managers of Muhammadan estates; but it cannot bind itself to appoint a Muhammadan in all cases, or as the resolution reads, wherever practicable, as this may not be expedient or indeed may be opposed to the wishes of the ward, even if a suitable Muhammadan can be found.

I may state, on behalf of the Court of Wards, however, in connection with the three estates, to which I have already referred, that if in the future the management of any of them becomes vacant, the Court of Wards will be quite willing to give preference to a Muhammadan applicant over a Hindu with equal qualifications.

In view of this statement of facts, perhaps, the Hon'ble Mover might see his way not to press the resolution; or, in the alternative, if he were prepared to add the words 'and desirable' after the words 'wherever practicable', Government would be prepared to accept the resolution in its amended form. The resolution would then run as follows:—

'This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in future, wherever practicable and desirable, suitable Muhammadan officers be appointed to be managers of the Muhammadan estates under the Court of Wards.'

I suggest these two alternatives to the Hon'ble Member."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI SAID :—

"I accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR SAID :—

"I submit, my Lord, that due notice has not been given of this amendment to the Council according to the rules.

Resolutions.The President : Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The rule is as follows. Any Hon'ble member can object to an amendment being moved unless due notice has been given. But the President has got power, if he thinks it desirable, to suspend that rule. It is not clear whether the Hon'ble Member objects to the amendment being moved."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"I think due notice of that amendment should be given and therefore according to the rules, I object to the amendment being moved at this stage. I want to speak something on this amendment if your Lordship will permit me before the question as a whole is taken up."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Member is now making an objection to the amendment being put and if he wishes to say anything on that point he may do so. But he must confine his remarks to his reasons for my not putting the amendment to the Council."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"As the notice of the amendment now proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming was not given to us, we are not in a position now to state our objections very fully. On that ground I oppose the amendment at present."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"In view of the fact that the mover of the resolution is prepared to accept the amendment, I do not consider that the Hon'ble Member's objection should prevail. Therefore, in exercise of my power, I suspend the rules and allow the amendment to be put before the Council. The amendment is now before the Council."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"I oppose the original resolution as well as the amendment. I may say that no case has been made out for moving that resolution. In the first place, the speech of my Hon'ble friend does not disclose any ground for the acceptance of the resolution. In the motion the Government are requested to make a sort of ruling that in future whenever practicable and desirable, suitable Muhammadan officers should be appointed to certain posts. I do not at all object to Muhammadan officers being appointed to any post, but I object to a resolution being framed in a sectarian spirit. We are not of course willing to hamper the wishes or the advancement of the Muhammadan community in any way. But it is against the declared policy of Government to decide such matters in a sectarian spirit. It has been stated my lord, that there are nine Muhammadan estates under the Court of Wards, two or three of which are managed by Muhammadan Managers, five by Hindu Managers and for the remaining estate, the manager has not yet been appointed. The appointments are in the hands of Government who are not unfriendly to Muhammadan interests and the appointments are filled up, I have no doubt, having due regard to the claims of Muhammadans. I therefore fail to see any urgent reason for moving this resolution. Another reason has been put forward and it is this : that the education of the wards would be better conducted by Muhammadan officers who could also act as their guardian tutors. There are big estates, my lord, belonging to both Hindu and Muhammadan zamindars which are administered by European officers and I do not think that as yet any difficulty has arisen with regard to the education of the wards or the social prestige of the family in these estates. In cases affecting social or educational matters, the Manager always consults the wishes of the family or seeks the advice of a representative member of the community connected with the family and acts accordingly and there has been no difficulty in this connection. I do not think any case has been made out for passing this resolution and I oppose it, not for the purpose of opposing Muhammadan interests but because we as a Council, should not pass a resolution on sectarian lines.

Resolutions.

Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri ; The President ; Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The Hon'ble Mr. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

“My lord, I can assure the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that I am not going to mix the two functions of guardian-tutor and manager into one. My Hon'ble friend says he has no objection if in the interest of the estate a Muhammadan officer is appointed. He was not opposed to Muhammadan interest. In small estates they cannot afford to keep a manager and again a guardian-tutor. If they have to appoint a guardian-tutor they would get an ordinary man on Rs. 50 or Rs. 100, but if there is a Muhammadan manager he can at the same time do or help in the work of the guardian-tutor of the ward. Therefore, it is in the interest of the minor and the estate that a Muhammadan Manager should be appointed. A Hindu officer is not expected to know the idiosyncracies, the manners and customs, which play an important part in the upbringing of a Muhammadan boy and make a good citizen of him. There are nine estates in Bengal of which two are managed by Europeans, five by Hindus and one by a Muhammadan. There may be cases where it is desirable and practicable to get the services of an Indian Civil Service man. I have no objection to that—those estates may be very big—that is not the point. There is no knowing that in future there will not be more Muhammadan Estates under the Court of Wards. My resolution, as amended by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, does not say that there should be a hard and fast rule for appointing Muhammadans. All I want is that where the Muhammadans are required they should be there. It was said that no complaints are made. From the very beginning the Hindus were there. Some of the wards are educated and some not. Those who are educated have perhaps got nothing to complain of and those who are not educated cannot complain owing to their ignorance. I think I have made out a very strong case and I would press it to the Council.”

The PRESIDENT said :—

“To the original motion an amendment has been made that the words ‘and desirable’ be inserted after the words ‘wherever practicable.’

The question that I have to put to the Council now is that the amendment be made.”

The motion was then put in the following modified form and agreed to :—

“This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in future, wherever practicable and desirable, suitable Muhammadan officers be appointed to be Managers of the Muhammadan estates under the Court of Wards.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Local Government may be pleased to recognise the Calcutta Medical School and College of Physicians and Surgeons, Bengal, for the purposes of the Schedule.

to Bengal Act VI of 1914, in order that the holders of certificates granted by the said school may be entitled to have their names entered in the register of registered practitioners.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the Bengal Medical Act which is known as Bengal Act VI of 1914 was passed by your Lordship's Government in 1914. It was an Act to provide for the registration of Medical practitioners in Bengal. In the Schedule to the Act we find the persons who are entitled to have their names entered in the Register and among others we find—

Every person who has been trained in a Government Medical College or School in India or in a Medical School in India not maintained but recognised by the Local Government, for the purposes of this schedule, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, and holds a diploma or certificate, granted by the Government, or granted by a Medical School not maintained by Government but recognised as aforesaid, declaring him to be qualified—

(a) to practise medicine, surgery and midwifery, or

(b) to perform the duties of military Assistant Surgeon, Hospital Assistant or Sub-Assistant Surgeon.

In 1916, an Act was passed by the Imperial Legislative Council being Act VII of 1916, to regulate the grant of titles implying qualifications in Western medical science, and the right to confer degrees was specified in the Schedule to that Act as well as by such other authority as the Governor-General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India authorize in this behalf; and in the Gazette of India of the 12th January 1918, we find the following notification:—

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 3 of the Indian Medical Degrees Act, 1916 (Act VII of 1916) the Governor-General in Council is pleased to authorize the institution now known as the Calcutta Medical School and College of Physicians and Surgeons of Bengal, situated in Belgachia (Calcutta) to grant certificates of attendance and proficiency to such students as shall have passed the fourth year examination of the said institution prior to the 16th March 1918, subject to the following conditions, viz.:—

- (1) that such students shall have completed their second year's tuition prior to the 16th March 1916, and shall have passed the second year examination of the said institution held in March 1916;
- (2) that such students shall have passed the third year examination of the said institution prior to the 16th March 1917; and
- (3) that the said institution shall, prior to the 16th June 1918, furnish to the satisfaction of the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal, evidence that such students have passed the fourth year examination of the said institution.

It will be seen that under the notification of the Gazette of India, the Calcutta Medical School and College of Physicians and Surgeons of Bengal situated at Belgachia has been recognised by the Government of India as a College authorised to grant certificates of attendance and proficiency to certain students of the College. Under the rule as it now stands the students of the said Belgachia College are not authorised to have their names entered in the Register of Registered Practitioners because the said College has not been notified in the Calcutta Gazette as one recognised by Government. This is no doubt very anomalous, but still the anomaly exists. As under the Bengal Medical Act of 1914, medical practitioners who have not got their names entered in the Register of registered practitioners are deprived of certain valued privileges and as the Belgachia College has now been recognised by the Government of India as a College competent to grant certificates of proficiency to certain of its students, I hope your Lordship's Government will also recognise the said College by notifying the said fact in the Calcutta Gazette.

Resolutions.

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The Belgachia Medical College before its affiliation to the Calcutta University in 1916, consisted of a non-affiliated school department and a non-affiliated College Department. It was in 1914 that the school department was closed and the old College Department was replaced by a first grade University College and this after a series of negotiations with the Government. Fresh admissions both in the old school department and College Department were stopped, but it was understood that all existing students would be given legitimate facilities to qualify themselves. I ought to mention here that in the case of students of the College Department with a five years' curriculum, the last batch of students were admitted in 1912 and in the school department with a four year's curriculum, the last batch were admitted in 1913. These students at the time of their admission either in the College or in the school department, never thought of the passing of the Bengal Medical Act of 1914 nor did they ever think that an Institution known as the Bengal Medical Faculty would be created, to add to their difficulties. The Medical Degrees Act was passed in 1916 by the Government of India. The effect of the passing of this Act was to deprive all privately managed medical institutions such as the Belgachia Institution of the power of granting diplomas or a registrable certificate. The Government of India have, as I have already stated, by a notification in the Gazette of India authorised the Belgachia College to grant certificates of attendance and proficiency to certain students of the College who have got their admissions before 1914. I move that the said school may be recognised by your Lordship's Government by a notification in the Calcutta Gazette so as to bring the institution under the provisions of the Bengal Medical Act of 1914 and thus enable certain qualified students to register their names under the said Act.

When the Medical Act was passed in England in 1858 all the so called medical practitioners, whether properly or irregularly qualified, were declared entitled to be registered by Section XVII and Schedule B of the Act and by Section XLVI of the same Act the general Council were empowered to dispense with any provisions of the Act in favour of, among others, such medical students as had commenced their professional studies before the passing of the Act.

The Bengal Medical Act of 1914, stands in the way of a number of students who got admission as students of the Belgachia School and College before the passing of the Act, even if they passed the necessary examination of the school and college and obtained certificates of proficiency under the Indian Medical Degrees Act of 1916 of having their names entered in the register of Registered Practitioners. But if the said School and College be recognised by Your Lordship's Government by a notification in the Calcutta Gazette, the bar now standing in their way will be removed.

My resolution only aims at recognizing the certificates of proficiency of those who have passed from the Belgachia School and College after 1914, i.e., after the passing of the Bengal Medical Act, and not those who have done so before the passing of the Act.

Resolutions.

Sir Nilratan Sarkar; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

I know, as a matter of fact that some of the diploma-holders of the Institution are working with credit to themselves and satisfaction to the College authorities as House Surgeons in the Albert Victor Hospital attached to the Belgachia Medical College, but they will be placed at a great disadvantage in competition with their fellow practitioners who have the privilege of having their names entered in the register of Registered Practitioners. The concession I ask for is one that in justice and in all fairness ought to be conceded. I hope Your Lordships' Government will see their way to accept my resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My lord, I think it my duty to support this resolution. The case of these poor students is very hard indeed. They took their admission into the Calcutta Medical School and College of Physicians and Surgeons, Bengal, with the idea that they would eventually be permitted to go up for the State Faculty Examination; but before they were there for two or three years they learnt to their great disappointment that it would not be possible further to go up for these examinations. Some concession was granted for two years, but that concession did not apply to the case of these students. The Resolution of this Council of January last might have given them an opportunity if that Resolution had been given effect to wholly. But only one portion of it was given effect to. Their number is not large, in fact only about thirty. The College of Physicians and the Calcutta Medical School have now been merged into one College which is affiliated to the Calcutta University. So, there is no possibility of the multiplication of this class of students. I pray that the concession asked for in this resolution may be granted to the poor students."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I beg to support the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. There can be no doubt that these poor students have been stranded in a difficult situation. They have been receiving their education in a school and they are now told, on account of the passing of the Act of 1918, they are not entitled to get registration. Now if the Council recommends that their names be registered, that may be another step. The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has referred to certain precedents, namely, the procedure that was observed in England on account of the passing of a certain Act. All these matters demand the consideration of the Council and also whether any effective step can be taken for the purposes of having them registered. I solicit the Council to consider that if there be any legal difficulty, I submit, it can be obviated by the extraordinary power which your Excellency possesses and this Council possess and have these students registered as practitioners. The final school test may be considered as the standard of qualification and there is no necessity of making them pass other examinations in order to see whether they are fit and competent to be registered as practitioners. These are my views, my Lord, as regards this motion".

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My lord, I fully support the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend. The demand is a very modest one. Only a limited number of students have been put to great difficulty through no fault of theirs. I fully sympathise with them. It is not necessary to repeat the arguments that have already been submitted before the Council. I support these arguments, and I hope the concession will be granted."

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My lord, this is one of the troublesome Resolutions connected with the administration of the two Medical Acts, and is in a way an echo of the Resolution that was moved in this Council last January. When I say 'troublesome Resolutions', I mean that it is difficult briefly to explain what is a somewhat technical subject and it is not easy for persons—non-technical persons—not fully acquainted with all the aspects of the case, to appreciate technical details and difficulties. I am afraid, therefore, I shall have to recapitulate to some extent the old history of these Medical Acts, as passed both by the Bengal Legislative Council and that of the Government of India, although it must be already known to some Hon'ble Members, and although, in fact, some actually took part in the local legislation.

In the old days there was no special legislation dealing with medical degrees at all, neither did the necessity of having such legislation attract the attention of Government till about the years 1905-07 when the matter came to a head in Calcutta in this way. In the early eighties there had been one non-official medical school in Calcutta, but between 1905-07, owing to disagreement between the promoters of that school, certain of them on various occasions split off and founded other institutions, with the result that towards the end of that period, Government found itself confronted in Calcutta with three more non-official schools competing with one another and giving a so-called medical education which was not of any recognised satisfactory type. I do not wish to revive old animosities or bitterness by repeating the criticisms advanced against these schools. Some of them were commonly styled "diploma-shops," that is to say, so-called schools where, by the payment of certain fees, students could, at the end of a certain period, obtain a so-called medical diploma, though it in no sense connoted a degree of training possessed by men fully qualified in Western medical science. Government, finding itself, therefore, faced with this situation, proposed legislation as far back as 1908; and I lay stress upon this date in order to refute the statement that is sometimes made that all this legislation came upon the unhappy boys studying in those schools as a bolt from the blue. It was nothing of the kind; the question of this legislation regarding medical registration was in the air for years. As I have said, the Local Government actually proposed legislation in 1908. It went up to the Government of India, who at that time said that if we wanted to legislate it might excite a certain amount of opposition. They advised us to try and get all these medical bodies to come together and found a first class non-official medical school which could secure a proper recognition. For about three or four years the local Government strove in negotiation with the promoters of these schools to come to such an arrangement. I was Medical Secretary at that time and actually took part in those negotiations, which, however, failed, as the people who were interested in individual institutions could not agree as to which was practically to absorb the others. Therefore, all that time the matter remained undecided, until we came to 1913, when the local Government again proposed the legislation which ultimately became the Bengal Medical Act. It was introduced in December 1913 and passed in 1914. I again call the attention of the Council to the dates. Shortly afterwards the Government of India, in September 1915, introduced the Indian Medical Degrees Bill, and that was passed into law in March 1916. Therefore, the medical legislation in this country of the particular kind with which we are now concerned, consists of two Acts—one is the Bengal Medical Act of 1914 and the other is the All-India Act of 1916.

I will now explain what these two Acts purport to do. Our Act of 1914 created a Medical Council, consisting of professional men, to regulate the efficient conduct and practise of that section of the medical profession which follows Western methods. The Medical Council was entrusted with the framing of a register of medical men who were recognised as holding satisfactory qualifications, after scrutiny of the applicants for registration. The fact of ultimately being put on the register gave an enhanced status to the registered practitioner as compared with the non-registered. That is what the Act of 1914 did, and the degrees recognised were either those which are recognised as registrable under the English law or which are conferred by the Universities, etc., of this country. Such degrees were specified in a schedule appended to the Act. Later, the Act of 1916, which applied to all India, enacted that no person who is not authorised, and no institution which is not recognised, should grant degrees purporting to say that the holder is qualified to practise Western medical science; and that anybody who uses a colourable imitation of the well-known degrees, such as M.D., L.R.C.P., etc., shall be liable to prosecution, the intent being that such degrees should connote a definite standard of efficient medical education, and that people should not be allowed to deceive the public by using somewhat similar letters, usually accompanied by qualifying words which might not ordinarily catch the eye, which might lead the ordinary layman to take them as degrees of the established Universities. These, then, are the two existing Acts, and I would emphasise one matter in regard to them, that neither of these two Acts prevents a person from practising medicine. That is a point which is often overlooked when we hear about these poor students: they can practise to-morrow; only unless they can satisfy the standard of the Acts, they cannot represent to the public that they are what they are not.

Now, this being the law, we come to the particular recommendation of the Resolution, which asks us to recognise this Calcutta Medical School, commonly known as the Belgachia Institution, for the purpose of the schedule of the Act of 1914; that is to say, we are to recognise it as an institution which is entitled to grant a degree, or a title, or a certificate of qualification, of a standard equal to the others which are included in the schedule to that Act; and the section which has a particular bearing on the action which we are asked to take is section 18. When we started, we put into our schedule the existing efficient institutions, but obviously other new institutions of a perfectly efficient type might subsequently come into being. Therefore, the Act took power to put them in the schedule, and the section says that if the Medical Council are satisfied that such an institution is of an efficient type, they can recommend its inclusion to the Local Government. It is under that section that we are asked, as a Local Government, to include this Belgachia Institution in the schedule.

Now, as to the procedure proposed. The procedure of the Act is one dealing with a professional subject. It rightly puts the judgment on a professional subject into the hands of professional men; they examine the qualifications of each institution, and certify to the Local Government, whereupon the Local Government acts. I submit that this is the wise method of coming to a decision on a subject involving professional qualifications. But, departing from that wise procedure of the Act, Government is now asked to intervene in the interests of a particular institution, sweeping aside this recognised body of the Medical Council which is its accredited adviser in these matters. I put it to the Council that that is a political departure of a bad type, merely as a matter of procedure.

There are, however, other objections on the merits. As I have already said, what we are asked to do is to say that the Belgachia School is an institution which can give a registrable degree. Now, at no time has the Belgachia Institution ever granted a title or a certificate of qualifications which has been accepted as a sufficient guarantee of an efficient medical education; neither has it done so even since the days of its affiliation. It is not, an examining body even now. Its students have never gone up for any, recognised degree examinations of its own, and this institution has never given a title or certificate which would enable us, even if we wanted to do so, to put it in the schedule. What Belgachia used to grant before the days of the Medical Degrees Act of 1916, were those degrees to which I have referred as colourable imitations of the better known degrees. That was, of course, stopped by the Act of 1916, and it is a very relevant point that when our Act of 1914 was before the Council, amendments were actually moved, suggesting that the Belgachia diplomas should be made registrable, but they were negatived. That is to say, the matter was considered at the time and decided against Belgachia. However, as I have explained, before the Act of 1916 they gave diplomas of a kind, and the Hon'ble Member who, moved this Resolution does not seem to appreciate that if we give effect to it all these diplomas will at once become registrable. Therefore, we should be in the ridiculous position of having enacted legislation especially to prejudice these diplomas which are regarded as of an undesirable type, and then having got that legislation through Council, and in spite of it, of saying that these diplomas shall be registrable. That position is surely absurd, and if that is so as regards these old diplomas, it is more so as regards the new certificates, and the argument really disposes of the second part of the resolution, which turns on the use of the word 'certificate,' because a diploma connotes something higher than a certificate. It follows as a matter of course that if you cannot properly register a diploma, you cannot properly register a certificate. But as this word 'certificate' has been introduced, and may lead to misunderstanding, I must take up the time of the Council in explaining further details.

After the Act of 1914 was passed, the State Medical Faculty instituted an examination of its own carrying a registrable qualification. When that Act was under discussion in this Council, it was urged that it would be very hard luck if persons who were already in practice were not allowed to appear at that examination. It was said that we were going to take away the means of livelihood from these men through no fault of their own, and in order to meet their case, a "transitory clause" was enacted, which, for a period of two years, allowed people to go up for the Faculty Examination on a certificate that they had undergone a full course of training in any medical college or school. That is the kind of certificates which were granted, but although the transitory clause was meant primarily for existing practitioners, the Government of our predecessors allowed those persons to benefit by it who were not actually in practice in 1914, but who between the years 1914-16, passed out of the Belgachia Institution. However that does not affect the fact that the certificates which were then given were certificates, for the purpose of the transitory clause, of having undergone a full course of training. It is inaccurate to describe those certificates, as they have been described to-day, as having been recognised by the Government of India as efficient qualifications. I find that the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said in January last, when this subject was debated, 'that this' (the notification of 1918) 'shows that the Government of India are also satisfied that students passed out of the Belgachia Medical College are fit to practise Western Medical Science under the Indian Medical Act of 1916.' I submit that it shows nothing of the kind, and that such a statement is entirely contrary to facts. These certificates that were first given by the Belgachia Medical School were given, I repeat, in order merely that those who held them could go up for the Faculty examination.

But, Sir, there was another kind of certificate that came in through another channel, and I would like to explain that also. When the Government of India legislated in 1916, we had the same arguments advanced that it was very hard on the boys who were then in these unrecognised schools, if we passed this Act, that they would not even be able to get the so-called diplomas to which they looked forward. The Act was passed by the Government of India. I was then on the Imperial Council, and the Government of India recognising that these were cases somewhat analogous to those which the Local Government had previously recognised here, and that men who were at that time in the third and fourth year classes could not very well start afresh, gave an assurance in Council that, although they could not admit such documents as registrable, they would allow efficient schools to give for a period of two years, certificates to boys in the third and fourth year classes. That concession, therefore, introduced certificates of a somewhat different kind to those which we gave in connection with the Faculty examination, although the form was the same, and the reason for confining it to the third and fourth year students was that it was a concession which it was desirable to keep within as narrow limits as possible, while men who were then in the first and second year classes could go and get an efficient medical education elsewhere. This procedure of certificate was recognised by the notification of the Government of India issued in January, 1918, authorising the institution, now known as the Calcutta Medical School, and College of Physicians and Surgeons of Bengal, to grant certificates of attendance and proficiency to students who had passed the fourth year examination of that institution during a period extending up to the 16th March 1918, subject to certain conditions. It may be said 'Why did this notification only come out in 1918, while the Act was passed in 1916?' I have already told the Council how, on somewhat similar lines, Bengal had been issuing certificates for the purposes of the Faculty examination. In 1917 the Government of India wrote and asked whether Belgachia wanted to issue the certificates conceded in connection with the Medical Degrees Act; we said that they were already issuing certificates, and that these would suffice. The Government of India thereupon called for the form of certificate in use, and held that without a validating notification it infringed the provisions of section 3 of the Act of 1916. That is how the notification came to be issued only in January 1918, although it referred to a previously existing state of things. The important point is that such a certificate of the school is not a title or a qualification at all. It could not be so, because no body can grant such a qualification unless it is included in the schedule of the Act of 1916, which Belgachia admittedly is not. I hold in my hand a specimen of these certificates, and it merely certifies that the holder of it has undergone a proper training and has passed an examination. This does not indicate a recognised qualification. I have endeavoured to explain to the Council that these certificates are not certificates of the kind which would enable us to put Belgachia into the schedule. It is quite inaccurate to say that they have ever been recognised by the Government of India as such, and they are intended for an absolutely different object.

That, Sir, being the position, I hope that I have made it clear that we could not act under this Resolution, while even if we could, we are being approached through a wrong channel, and we are asked to do a thing which will stultify the whole of the legislation we have undertaken since 1914. The arguments of January 1918 have again been used. It is said 'It is a small concession, why not grant it for the benefit of a few students?', apparently intending that in a moment of weak good nature we should allow them to have it. But I have explained the objections of principle and the impossibilities which are involved. As regards the allegation of hardship, I have already explained that these students can go out and practise in the bazaar to-morrow; the only thing they may not do is to represent themselves as being what they are not. A concession was made to them in order to allow them an opportunity of going up for the Faculty examination. As a result of the debate in January last, we extended that concession and practically they were given two more chances. If they went to a school, knowing full well that these restrictions on medical degrees were in the air as far back as 1908, they have no right to come before us now and say that they have been badly treated because, in the face of what they knew, they chose to stay in an institution which could not give them a registrable degree; they have to suffer from the consequences of what they themselves chose to do.

When the Resolution in January last was discussed, I was not present in Council, and if I had been present, I would certainly have spoken against it. That Resolution, however, merely asked us to allow these students to go up for the Faculty examination; the present Resolution asks us to put them forthwith in the register, although they possess no qualification which we have ever recognised as connoting a qualification which entitles the holder to registration. To that extent the proposal is even more open to objection than its predecessor, and I am sorry that I cannot advise this Council to approve of it."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My lord, I feel some diffidence to take any part in the discussion of this resolution because as a layman I think I am hardly competent to take part in it. But emboldened by the example of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I venture to take part in the discussion. Sir Henry Wheeler although a layman has to take part in the discussion in discharge of his duty as the member in charge of the department concerned. I have also a duty to perform, namely, I have to vote on the Resolution according to my judgment and I therefore, feel that I ought to point out the difficulties in the working of the Act which occur to me so that any other official member who takes part in the discussion may explain those difficulties to us. In the first place the difficulty that I feel is this : This Act was passed by the Bengal Council in 1914 and if this Act had laid down that future students would come within the operation of this Act no difficulty would have arisen. It is said that the Act was in the air from the year 1908. But that is hardly a sufficient reason for we often have legislative proposals which are dropped. If students who had entered the Belgachia Medical School and had paid their fees and had some sort of medical education—if they were allowed to appear at the examinations then why not students who entered the school one year afterwards but before the Act was passed ? One reason why we are compelled to deal with this question now is because this anomaly did not occur to our predecessors, the members of the late Council who passed the Act of 1914. Ordinarily in passing Acts legislators take good care not to interfere with any vested interest and I find that in the English Act provisions were introduced which safeguarded against complaints of this nature. That being so, a diploma of a Medical School was either good enough or not good enough. How is it that other students can have their names registered ?"

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"They could not get their names registered—not unless they passed the Faculty examination."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"I meant students who passed before the Act was passed. But if I am wrong that argument falls. The main point is that when these students entered the Belgachia School the Act was not in force and for that reason find some difficulty in accepting the reasons of my Hon'ble friend."

Resolutions.Babu S. N. Ray ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My Lord, Sir Henry Wheeler is right in saying that this is an echo of a resolution which was passed in this Council in January last. The resolution which was passed was this :

'This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the last batch of students of the Belgachia Medical School admitted in the year 1913, and those who failed for the first time in one or two subjects in the Faculty Examination held in November 1916, be granted an opportunity to appear at the Licentiate Examination of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal as has been previously allowed in the case of other students.'

So this resolution resolves itself into two parts ; (1), that the last batch of students who got their admission in the Medical School before 1913 be allowed to appear ; and (2), that the plucked students be allowed to appear. Government allowed the plucked students to appear at the examination, but did not allow students who were admitted to the school in 1913 to appear. Now I hear that the boys ought to apply, instead of coming to the Council, to the State Medical Faculty. Why, the resolution was passed by this Council to admit both the students of the Belgachia Medical School who had got admission before 1913, as well as the plucked students to appear in the examination, but only a portion of it was accepted by Your Lordship's Government. The boys are willing to subject themselves to the prescribed examination even now if Your Lordship pleases to grant them that privilege ; but as Your Excellency's Government are unwilling to allow them to appear in that examination, they will try to get this privilege by some other way. Now it appears that the Government of India by its notification, dated 12th January 1918, recognised the Belgachia Institution as one of the medical schools competent to grant certificates of proficiency. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said that a squabble had been going on between three rival medical schools since 1908 ; that might be true, but the Government of India having recognised only the Belgachia School as the school which is competent to grant certificates of proficiency by this notification, viz.,—

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER :—

As a statement of facts that is inaccurate ; they have also recognised the Medical School.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY continuing :—

I have already placed the notification. This notification must be read along with section 3 of the Act of 1914. This section was passed by the Government of India and it runs as follows :—

'The right of conferring, granting, or issuing in British India degrees, diplomas, licenses, certificates or other documents stating or implying the holder, grantee or recipient thereof is qualified to practise Western medical science, shall be exercisable only by the authorities specified in the schedule, and by such other authority as the Governor-General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, and subject to such conditions and restrictions as he thinks fit to impose, authorize in this behalf.'

Then, in the Gazette of India of the 12th January 1918, it was notified that in exercise of the powers conferred by section 3 of the Indian Medical Degrees Act of 1916, the Governor-General in Council was pleased to authorize the Institution now known as the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Bengal situated in Belgachia, Calcutta, to grant certificates of attendance and proficiency to such students as shall have passed the fourth year examination of the said Institution prior to the 16th March 1916, subject to certain conditions mentioned in that notification. Now, if any certificates have been granted to these students they are certainly certificates of proficiency, and according to section 3 of the Act of 1916, the holders of such certificates are qualified to practise Western medical science. So, these students of the Belgachia School have got certificates which show that they are qualified to practise Western medical science and having got these certificates they come before Your Excellency's Government to have their names registered under the provisions of the Schedule to the Bengal Medical Act. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said that these students can go and practise medicine in the bazaars, and that there is nothing to prevent them from practising, only that they are not allowed to put on degrees such as L. R. C. P. S., etc. But as a matter of fact they are not allowed to practise like those who have got these registered qualifications. I know from personal experience, and I am in a position to state this. About three years ago I had been to one of the Mills at Titaghur and the Mill Manager of Messrs. Bird & Co. told me, that he had a doctor there who had been serving with satisfaction for the last 10 years under him. Under the Medical Act which had been recently passed, he would not be able to keep him any longer in his service, as under the Government rules the Civil Surgeon attend the Mills once a month or once in three months, and all the labourers there have to show certificates from a recognised Doctor. The old doctor was a recognised doctor all along, but after the passing of the Medical Bill his certificate has been found to be insufficient, and they have to get rid of this man and get another man who had the qualifications required by this new Act. So that it is not a fact that doctors who have got certificates of proficiency from the Belgachia school will be entitled to practise in the same way as other doctors who have got registrable qualifications. These students want to appear at this examination, but Your Lordship's Government will not allow them to appear. What are they to do? Nobody knows why, my Lord, the first part of that resolution was not accepted. This is all that I have to say, in reply to the remarks of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, I have no wish to retrace the arguments which I have already adduced. If I have not been able to convince Hon'ble Members by what I have said, nothing more that I can say will do so. But I must again point out that the final arguments of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray are fallacious, while, if they were correct, an unfortunate consequence is hanging over the members of the Managing Committee at Belgachia. If, despite my explanation, the Hon'ble Member still maintains that these students hold certificates that they are qualified to practice Western medical science, and if that contention is valid, then in so far as Belgachia is not legally empowered to give any such qualification, I feel it my duty to warn the members of its Committee that they are individually liable to a fine of Rs. 500."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"Before the division is taken, my Lord, I should like to say a few words."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"You cannot address the Council after the question has been put."

Resolutions.Babu S. N. Ray; The President.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"I do not wish to speak upon the question, my Lord, but upon the right of voting by official and non-official members."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"If the Hon'ble Member wishes to put a point of order he may."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"It is this, my Lord. On the last occasion when a similar resolution was moved by my friend the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan voted with us, and the Government was defeated. I ask your Lordship to allow the members to vote as they like. I can cite a precedent for it. Only a few months ago in the Imperial Council, His Excellency the Viceroy allowed the official members to vote as they liked on the Income Tax Bill. Why should not a similar indulgence be shown to us now?"

The PRESIDENT said :—

"So far as the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan is concerned, he can exercise his own discretion as he likes. I do not wish to restrict his discretion."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The Hon'ble MR. H. R. A. IRWIN moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government be pleased to appoint a small expert Committee with as little delay as possible to inquire into the abuses and difficulties in connection with the circulation of the one-rupee notes in Bengal, or to take such other steps as may be deemed advisable to minimize the hardship and loss incurred by the poorer classes in Bengal in using the notes who have no means of getting their just grievances remedied.

He said :—

" With the object of obtaining the assistance of Government in the endeavour to remedy a grievance which is causing very considerable hardship among the poorer classes whilst at the same time not taking up the valuable time of the Council by unnecessary discussion, I brought the matter of the illegitimate hindrance to the free circulation of the new one-rupee notes before Your Excellency's Government at the Council Meeting of July, last in the form of a question rather than by resolution, which occupies time. I respectfully requested Government to consider the desirability of taking such steps as might be deemed advisable in putting a stop to the illegal practice of demanding discount from ignorant people on Government Currency notes. The reply I received is as follows :—'The custom of charging a small discount for changing notes for larger amounts or silver rupees unfortunately prevails in regard to notes generally, although doubtless in respect of notes of so small a denomination as one rupee, it especially hits the poorer classes. There have been also reports as to the unpopularity of recent issues of small denominations and possibly they are not yet circulating freely. It is hoped that matters may improve when the novelty of those issues wears off and the practice of charging discount, which is much to be reprehended will be discouraged as far as possible.' I cannot help characterising this reply, my Lord, as unsatisfactory, and as during the last two months matters have grown worse rather than better, I have been urged to bring the subject up again and this I now do in the resolution I have read. I fully appreciate the great difficulty Government must be experiencing in the matter of currency at the present time but surely we may expect some assistance in putting a stop to illegal extortion, more especially when it seriously obstructs the object Government is endeavouring to promote, namely, the free circulation of these new notes. It is in mufassal districts, especially, that the hardship complained of is most acute. The more out of the way the locality and the more ignorant the individual, the greater imposition and I do not think those residents in Calcutta or large cities are in a position to know the extent to which the very poor classes are victimized. The answer to my question which I quoted before says :—‘There have also been reports as to the unpopularity of recent issues of small denominations and possibly they are not yet circulating freely.’ As regards the latter supposition, I may give one very recent instance from my personal experience. On Saturday last, for my ordinary weekly payment to coolies, I drew Rs. 3,010-6-6 from my local banker and this amount was received and paid out in the following currency :—Five-rupee G. C. notes Rs. 500 ; one-rupee G. C. notes, Rs. 2,348 ; silver rupees Rs. 6 ; small silver coins Rs. 125 ; copper coins Rs. 31-6-6. I obtained this sum in exchange for a Calcutta draft on which I myself paid Rs. 11-4 discount. Now, allowing that a discount of one pice per note was charged to the possessors on only half the number of notes, it represents an aggregate loss of Rs. 19-12 defrauded from these coolies on one estate only and in one week only ! Is it any wonder that there are ‘reports as to the unpopularity of recent issues of small denominations ?’ The difficulty I complain of does not consist, however, of the matter of discount only. In the course of circulation from hand to hand it is naturally quite unavoidable that these flimsy bits of paper should become very much soiled and in this state, even though not defaced or mutilated, they are frequently refused by shopkeepers and others when tendered for payment. There is, and must be, a certain amount of quite unavoidable loss in connection with these small notes. A coolie receives a one-rupee note and tucks it into his or her waistband and goes on with the work in hand. It comes on to rain and in a short time the note gets soaked and reduced to a state of unrecognizable pulp. The possessor, of course, has to bear the loss but, as I have said, I think every endeavour should be made to minimise it as far as possible. I want to quote from the paper in which I read it that ‘The Government of Bengal has issued a warning against people who refuse to accept currency notes except at a discount.’ I accept this as a fact but I have not seen any warning or notification myself and how it has been promulgated I do not know ; possibly it has been affixed to notice boards at kacharis or police-stations. But if one in my position has no knowledge of it, how can it be expected that ignorant villagers in out-of-the-way rural places can be aware of it ? Such a notification, to serve a useful purpose, should be made public by beat of drum in every bazar and hât, and the rural police should post up notices, printed in the vernacular, in every village in the province. I am quite aware, my Lord, that there is another side to the question, namely, that of the small shopkeeper. A coolie receives, say, five one-rupee notes for work done, and he goes to five small shops in succession buying a few pice worth of articles at each, tendering a one-rupee note and expecting to get fourteen or fifteen annas as the case may be at each. If everyone acted in a similar manner it would be impossible for the shopkeeper to carry on, as he could not possibly provide sufficient change, but this difficulty would wear off if the present suspicion as to the full value of the note, the solvency of Government, and the legality of charging discount, could be dissipated. I think, too, that much larger quantities of small coin, the one or two-anna nickel pieces, should, if possible, be coined and put in circulation. I have heard it stated by a Government officer that fewer eight-anna pieces might be coined as they are not wanted, but this is not my experience. I think that if larger quantities were available they would be more freely used and bound to relieve pressure. But, my Lord, I had no intention of suggesting a remedy for the difficulty I complain of. I am not an expert in such matters but surely amongst the many financial experts at the command of Government, some means can be suggested whereby the poorer classes may be protected from illegal extortion. There is one difficulty to overcome and that is to get sufferers to give specific instances of cases in which they have been mulcted of discount. They will complain generally but when asked to mention names will evade it and put up with the loss rather than incur the animosity of the shopkeepers. Personally, I think that the loyal manner in which the small notes have been accepted with scarcely a murmur is very creditable to the people, and I respectfully urge that Your Excellency's Government will take every step possible to reduce friction and minimise loss to the public."

The Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY said :—

"My Lord, the thanks of the Indian community are due to the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin for having brought up the present question for discussion to-day. The grievances of the poorer classes in the interior with regard to the new rupee-notes have been ventilated in the press for some time, and the attention of Government has often been drawn to them. But we do not seem to be anywhere near the remedy as yet. It must be admitted that the problem is a difficult one ; but it has got to be solved all the same. The Hon'ble Mover has suggested the appointment of an expert Committee to go into the whole question. I hope it will count among its members representatives of the Indian community, for they are expected to know where the shoe pinches.

Connected with the question of the rupee-notes, there is another matter, my Lord, to which I take this opportunity to draw the attention of Government. It is the shortage of small coins in many of the District towns and in the interior.

I have received reports from the mufassal that the distress in this connection is becoming quite acute. It appears that in some places change cannot be obtained for paper money and the rupee, except at a premium. Tradesmen have sometimes to turn away customers owing to shortage of change. Even the Government District Treasuries find it difficult to cope with the demand for the coins of smaller value. Business is suffering greatly on this account and the people are being put to serious inconvenience. My Lord, something should be done immediately in the matter, and the assistance of the mufassal post-offices may be of great value in keeping up a uniform supply of small change.

I do not know, my Lord, whether the present position in Bengal is to be attributed to any disturbance in the general condition of currency and exchange in India. But it has given rise to much silly speculation, particularly among the ignorant classes in the interior. Your Lordship's Government should, for all these reasons, take prompt steps to ease the situation and dispel public anxiety."

The Hon'ble MR. HELY HUTCHINSON said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Mover has dealt with the question, I think, very largely from the point of view of the tea districts. The community I represent deals chiefly in jute, and I wish to assure Your Excellency's Government that the European dealers in jute are doing, and will continue to do, everything they can, to assist Government in dealing with the present currency difficulty.

I find, however, that in considering this matter it is very difficult for me to confine myself to matters which affect Bengal only and do not affect the currency question as a whole, which is an Imperial concern. I hope Your Excellency will excuse me if, in attempting to deal with this question, I touch on matters which are Imperial rather than Provincial and with which this Council is not concerned.

The difficulties, I think, must be painfully obvious to the Controller of Currency and those who have to deal with it. For one reason or another, there is a shortage of silver, of one-rupee notes and small coins ; and you are compelled by force of circumstances to try and popularise a paper currency among a people who are essentially hoarders and do not normally use banks and have no pockets. This is a wet country and a hot country; and if you give a note to a man who has to go out into the rains or who lives, as the raiyat does, in a great deal of water in the jute districts, it is very difficult for him to keep the note in good condition. It is not therefore surprising that the raiyat does not wish to keep it on his person. When it comes to hoarding it you are up against white ants, fire and water which affect notes much more than rupees. In addition to that, as far as the jute districts are concerned, we have the high price of jute, and that must to a certain extent, I think, upset the calculations which have been made as to the amount of currency, whether paper or silver, which will be required to finance the jute crop, and maintain a constant flow of jute into the Calcutta market.

When it comes to abuse, I find myself in great difficulty to say what is an abuse. In a previous announcement of Government it was said that money-changing was a custom of the country. The average rate for money-changing was, I think, one pice in the rupee. Can you, therefore, say that money changing is an abuse when money is changed at a rate of one anna or even two annas in the rupee? When you come to the question of a man charging discount if he is paid in notes rather than in rupees, can you blame the shop-keeper for wishing to be paid in rupees rather than in notes, and at the same time not blame the raiyats for wishing to be paid in rupees rather than in notes?

I think a mistake was made, and a serious mistake too, in trying to introduce these notes into the jute districts without any previous publicity. I know that in a great many cases, the first time that the raiyat knew of the notes was when it was offered to him in payment of jute, and he said, 'what is this; why should I be paid in paper?' At first he refused and after a good deal of moral persuasion that this note was worth 16 annas and after a good deal of grumbling, he took it; and when he went to the bazar, he found that it was not worth 16 annas and only 15 annas. I think, therefore, that a good deal of trouble might have been avoided, if, before the notes were introduced, something had been done by beat of drum in the villages or some such steps, to give the raiyats some warning and to popularise the notes in that way. It is very difficult to draw a general conclusion as to what is going on. The circumstances in the different districts vary tremendously; in some districts the discount rate is 12 per cent., in some it is 6; but my own belief is that the present position is not very encouraging. I do not believe that anybody takes a note except with the intention of getting rid of it as quickly as possible. I think that the shortage of small change is an evidence of that belief. I further believe that the raiyats will take notes when they have the prospect of the immediate payment of rents, as they have at the present time; but when the Pujas are over and when they have no longer any kists to pay, they will not be so ready to take notes with the prospect of hoarding them until the next kist falls due, or in cases where they have made a large profit on their jute, of hoarding them for an indefinite period.

As to the remedies, I believe myself that publicity through the agency of the Collectors or through the Village Union's and Panchayats and possibly through the thanas will do a lot of good. Then Government will have to consider whether they should try and introduce any co-ordination in the action of the various Collectors. The reports we have had from our jute districts show a tremendous variation. In the Dacca district some attempt was made to obtain publicity by beat of drum and some attempt has been made to change notes through the post-offices to the extent of five rupees per person per day. In Serajganj, I had a report that Government was financing discount shops at some jute centres at the rate of 2 pice in the rupee ; I cannot vouch for the truth of that ; and I believe Government have got the information whether this was done or not. I think that Government ought to take some kind of action, though what it ought to be is somewhat difficult to say, against the people who are deliberately depreciating the value of the notes in the mufassal by charging discount, and who are thus pandering to the feeling that the notes are less valuable than the rupees. This has been done not only by the discount profiteers who rush out to the mufassal with twenty or thirty thousand rupees from Calcutta or elsewhere, but also by a certain number of jute merchants who have brought up rupees in their luggage from Calcutta and introduce them for the same purpose. It is doubtful whether Government should take action against the hoarding of small change. In some cases there is deliberate hoarding. I have also heard of cases where a cooly who gets five one-rupee notes changes them at different shops and comes back home with a pile of small change. These cases make the small change question complicated but it is difficult for Government to take action.

I would, however, lay stress on two points, viz., publicity and co-ordination. I doubt myself whether a Committee will do much good. In order to get information, it will have to spend a great deal of time in going round to all the various districts, and I believe that Government have the machinery for getting all the information that is required ; I believe further that they can get information quicker than any Committee. But I do think that unless Government definitely say how they propose to take action—and action not of the laissez faire or wait-and-see type—this resolution should be pressed to a division."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I fully agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin that an expert Committee should be appointed. In the mufassal I know great difficulties are being felt in changing one-rupee notes and somehow or other they have become very unpopular ; shopkeepers are not willing to accept them even in part payment of price of articles and sometimes these notes are to be changed from the poddars and other big shopkeepers who charge a discount of half an anna in the rupee. In Rajshahi I know that there is a great difficulty in changing notes. I do not think that there is any scarcity of copper coins, but that there are no proper arrangements or no proper facilities for the ordinary people to change these notes. We believe that such facilities could be afforded in the post-offices by deputing one or two persons and granting them some commission for changing these notes. In the sadar towns whenever necessary they can take the copper coins or small silver coins from the treasury and afford facilities to the ordinary people in changing it. The inclination to avoid the note comes from the fact that one is obliged to pay half an anna in the rupee whenever he wants to change it and poor people feel a great difficulty in paying this discount. The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray tells me that in the mufassal a discount of one anna is being paid. It is for this reason that the one-rupee notes have become so unpopular. I do not agree with the previous speaker that a Government enquiry will do no good. My idea is that the reasons ought to be ascertained and it should be seen what facilities could be afforded for changing these notes. If there is no difficulty in the head-quarters, I believe there will be no difficulty in the mufassal towns. At least in hats and big markets there may be big shopkeepers who have plenty of copper coins or silver coins, so that when one is under the necessity of changing one-rupee notes he should not pay any discount. Ordinarily in changing notes of higher value it is not at a discount but sometimes at a premium, that is the ordinary law of supply and demand. When one is under the necessity of procuring a note of higher value and such notes are not available, he has to pay some discount. But in the case of one-rupee notes it is different; there is no inclination on the part of the shopkeepers and ordinary suppliers to take these notes simply because they are not in a position to change them without difficulty. Consequently the poor people suffer a good deal when they have to pay a discount of half an anna or one anna in the rupee. I therefore think that an enquiry should be made into this matter, and I heartily support this resolution."

Resolutions.Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, this is a matter about which there is very little difference of opinion between any of us as to the facts. We are all painfully conscious of what the facts are, and are fully aware of them; they are one of the unfortunate results that have arisen out of the war, and in dealing with these inconveniences of the war, I would ask the Council to remember that Government is not callously indifferent, but that nothing that any Government can do will entirely eliminate these hardships. The whole world is suffering, and I would remind the Council that the opinion is prevalent in many parts of the world, that India is suffering these hardships less than other countries. That, however, does not carry us much further by way of consolation, even although the cause of the hardship is self-evident. As has been admitted this afternoon, the discounting of notes is no new thing. It has always gone on to a certain extent, but it is probably more common than usual recently, owing to the shortage of silver, while it now touches the poorer classes owing to the issue of smaller denomination notes; that is to say, whereas richer people might perhaps pay a small discount on a Rs. 50 note without great demur, the poorer man is harder hit in paying discount on a note of one rupee. The only real remedy is to increase our outturn of silver coin; the shortage of silver is the cause of all this trouble, and until the facilities for the encashment of notes can be increased, I do not see how we can get rid of these hardships of discounting.

I think some of the speakers this afternoon have rather spoken as if Government had done absolutely nothing in the matter. This is scarcely correct. Turning to the root cause, the shortage of silver, this is an Imperial matter, and I think that any one telling Finance Department of the Government of India that they have done nothing towards meeting the difficulty of the shortage of silver, would be greeted with a sad smile. The Government of India have naturally been unable to publish on the housetops all the daily fluctuations of their currency difficulties; but they have issued communiqués, and they have made known what they have done to increase the stock of silver, culminating, as we know, in the recent negotiations with the American Government which have resulted in placing at their disposal very much larger stocks of silver. Therefore, in this and in other ways, they have been endeavouring to meet the main difficulty. We also have been trying to do our best. Here again, the movements of currency within the province are not exactly a provincial affair; they are controlled by the Accountant-General and the Controller of Currency. These two officers have had constantly before them in recent times the problem of how to finance the different district treasuries with silver for the encashment of notes. Mr. Gubbay, Controller of Currency, tells me that during the last few months he has sent no less than 50 lakhs of rupees to different treasuries for this purpose. He is fully conscious of the difficulties and is trying to meet them. Apart from that, Collectors have been issuing a number of notices thus seeking to meet the point, mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Hely Hutchinson, of publicly explaining the facts. We too sent out a general warning at the beginning of August, in the hope of minimizing these evils by the publication of a Government announcement on the subject. I have here a vernacular notice which one Collector has issued regarding facilities for the encashment of dirty notes, and we know that in many districts a great deal has been done to endeavour to bring home to the people what the position is. I do not deny, as Mr. Hely Hutchison has pointed out, that we may be able to do more, and this is a point to which I will certainly be only too glad to pay more attention. In another district—Dacca—the District Officer has been trying to put more cash at the disposal of the post-offices in order to help people in a small way to cash notes and get rupees, and I have reports from other officers of Government who have been working on similar lines.

As regards what the Hon'ble Mr. Hely Hutchison mentioned as to the difference of practice in different districts, I think that his remarks are deserving of further enquiry. I know there has been a certain amount of difference of practice; for instance, in reports which I asked for in connection with this Resolution, one point is raised in which there seems to be a difference of opinion, as to whether, when the amount of cash available is limited, it is better to get it into circulation by giving it to the large employers of labour or purchasers of raw produce such as jute, or whether it is better to give it out in small amounts to the post-offices, just as the Collector of Dacca has been trying to do. The present Accountant-General holds that the latter is the better suggestion; the Collector of Mymensingh has been trying to give rupees to the bigger men to pass into circulation. Something may usefully be done to clear up differences of practice of this kind, by systematizing action more than is the case at present, and I will look into the point. But on receipt of this resolution I received reports from Mr. Gubbay and Mr. Tomkins, and I do not think the position is quite as bad as might have been gathered from some of the speeches this afternoon. Out of 26 districts it is said that notes are in circulation at par in 17. I do not pretend that in every bazar of these 17 districts everybody is getting full value for his notes and that no one is getting less than 16 annas, but I read the report as meaning that the difficulty is not acute in the majority of districts, and that is also borne out by other reports from Collectors, which show that the problem at the present moment is most difficult in the jute districts. I take it from the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin that the trouble is also acute in the tea districts. Collectors, however, say that the situation is improving, and we have direct evidence that if we can push out more silver it will improve much more. The real problem is how to get more silver. That being so, Sir, with every desire to find a remedy, I am doubtful whether the specific recommendation contained in the Resolution to appoint a small Committee of experts would serve any useful purpose. We know the facts; we know that discount is being charged on notes at rates much higher than before; we know that the ryots in many places do not like these small notes, and we know that there are certain features peculiar to this country which make the small paper note a somewhat unpopular medium of circulation; we know all this, but the question is how can we offer a remedy without going into the silver question which is outside our control. The currency problem is an Imperial concern, and if we go up to the Government of India, they will only say that we must take our share with the rest of the country. We know that special remedies have been adopted in special parts of the country; for instance, gold mohurs are in circulation in the Punjab, very few of which, as far as I know, have come down here, but the whole matter is an Imperial one to be regulated in the interests of the country as a whole. Therefore, Sir, I do not think we shall gain much by a Committee thought I am perfectly willing to have a Committee if the Council wishes it. It may be helpful in focussing the facts before those who control the currency problem, in the hope that they may see some way of giving us greater facilities than they do at present; but I fear that they will tell us that, in the main, the silver question is the root of the difficulty. and that while they are tackling that to the best of their ability and with regard to the whole of India they cannot promise to tackle it for us specially to an extent which will entirely remedy the difficulties from which we suffer. I, therefore, put it to the Council that the appointment of a Committee of enquiry will not add very much to the information which we now possess."

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My Lord, I do not know what course the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin will adopt after Sir Henry Wheeler's statement and whether a Committee of experts will be appointed or Government will move of its own motion. But I desire to draw the attention of the Council to the fact that it is not the one-rupee note alone that suffers in this way. The new two-and-a-half-rupee note stands in exactly the same position and sometimes gives rise to greater difficulties, for the loss involved is greater. Although there is a slight difference in the appearance and the size, mistakes are often made by the poorer people who suffer more than the educated people. Therefore, whatever steps are taken with regard to the one-rupee notes, should also be taken in respect of the two-and-a-half rupee notes. We do not bring in the question of five and ten-rupee notes because they have been in use for a long time and people like the long suffering eel have got used to paying discount on them."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I desire to thank the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin for bringing up this matter before this Council. I may say this, that he has done a great service by bringing up this resolution which concerns a large mass of the poorer sections of the people, whose grievances have, from time to time, been expressed in the columns of newspapers and also in this Council. My Lord, I am not an expert and do not wish to traverse the grounds that have already been urged by other speakers, but there are one or two points which I wish to submit for the consideration of the Council. If an expert Committee be appointed, will the Government kindly consider the desirability of changing the character of the one-rupee note, of which the paper is so very thin that it wears out after changing half-a-dozen hands? What my friend Sir Sarbadhikari has said is that the poorer people cannot make out the difference between the one and two and-a-half-rupee notes, because the size is practically the same. There is not the same difficulty with regard to the five and ten-rupee notes, as the size is different. Furthermore, the poorer people do not often deal with larger sums than Rs. 10. It may be urged that the size of 50, 20 and 100 rupee notes is the same; but the poorer people seldom handle these notes. The two-and-half and one-rupee notes are handled by them every day, and the size being the same the illiterate people are misled and further as these notes are not of good paper they are easily damaged and no one will take them. May I enquire, my Lord, whether some other coin, say, nickel coins, like the one-anna and two-anna pieces could not be substituted for the rupee note? We are now getting some nice brilliant two-anna nickel pieces which are not damaged or easily soiled. I submit that an expert Committee, although it may be precluded from taking up the larger question of currency, may perhaps go into this particular question and thus minimize the hardship which is felt by the poorer classes. This hardship is not only felt in the mufassal, but also in Calcutta."

Having regard to these facts, I think perhaps an expert Committee might help us in finding out some solution and in recommending some substantial quality of paper, if not the substitution of some suitable metal coin."

Resolutions.Mr. Irwin ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble MR. IRWIN said : —

"My Lord, I do not quite gather from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler's speech whether he proposes to accept the resolution or not. I have no wish to press it upon the Government inasmuch as I have given them a loophole. I have recommended the appointment of a small expert Committee, or that Government should take such other steps as they think fit in order to minimize the hardship on the poorer classes. If the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler can give us an assurance that Government will take such other steps that they may deem advisable, I am quite prepared to withdraw the resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, the attitude of Government in this matter is that we do not think ourselves that much good will result from enquiries by a special Committee, but if it is the general desire of the Council that a Committee should be appointed, we certainly do not wish to oppose it. Its members can certainly meet and discuss the matter, even though we are not sanguine of the results. As regards the facts, there is not very much difference of opinion, and if the Council wants a Committee, then so far as Government is concerned, it can have it. Apart from that, the only other measures that we can take is to press on District Officers the necessity for greater activity in popularising the circulation of notes and explaining the facts. We can suggest greater co-ordination in the practice of different districts, and we can go up to the Government of India and say : 'These are our difficulties ; can you give us any more silver, and can you tackle the currency problem in such a way as to afford further relief?' But I am perfectly willing to consider any other suggestions that can be made ; and if anyone can put forward any remedies, I will be glad to examine them."

The Hon'ble MR. IRWIN said :—

"My Lord, under the circumstances, after hearing what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said I would suggest that a small Committee may be appointed. It will have the effect of giving more publicity to the matter from which some benefit might accrue."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Head Masters of Government schools in class VII and class VIII of the Provincial Educational Service be admitted to the benefit of a local allowance of Rs. 50 per month at an early date.

He said :—

"The resolution is meant to benefit Head Masters of Government High Schools in Provincial Educational Service and not the Head Masters of Training schools.

Evidently in view of the very heavy responsibility attached to the office of the Head Masters of High schools, Government in January 1915 sanctioned to them a 'duty allowance' of Rs. 50 a month ; but, for reason best known to the authorities, Head Masters in Provincial Educational Service have not been admitted to the benefit of the Government order.

Resolutions.Mr. Wordsworth.

They are admittedly the ablest Head Masters in the Province, and for their proved efficiency they have been placed in charge of the biggest and most important schools in their respective divisions; they have been taken into the superior service and thus the maximum limit of their monthly salary has been raised from Rs. 150 to Rs. 700, but most of these officers having been promoted to Provincial Educational Service in the evening of their career they can hardly expect to rise above its 7th grade, before their retirement.

In respect of pay, class I of Subordinate Educational Service correspond to class VII of the Provincial Educational Service and class II of the former to class VIII of the latter; but in respect of promotion, the higher classes of Subordinate Educational Service consisting as they do of old officers, offer much greater advantages than the lower classes of Provincial Educational Service in which the officers are mostly very young. Thus a Provincial Educational Service officer placed at the bottom of class VIII will take much longer time to get promotion to class VII than one in Subordinate Educational Service from class II to I. Added to this is the 'duty allowance' which is also counted towards the pension. So that the Head Master who is taken into the Provincial Educational Service in his old age is a great loser in his retirement as much as in the last days of his service.

With a view to remove the injustice it is now recommended that all Head Masters of Government High schools in classes VII and VIII of the Provincial Educational Service be admitted at an early date to the benefit of the duty allowance of Rs. 50 a month like those in Subordinate Educational Service with effect either from the 1st January 1915 or from the date of their appointment to the Head Mastership, whichever is more just. I may add here that this does not refer to the Head Masters of Training schools who, as general Superintendents of the hostels attached to the institutions under their charge, gets a monthly allowance and free quarters; their exclusion from Government order granting a 'duty allowance' of Rs. 50 a month to each of the Head Masters of Government schools in Subordinate Educational Service does not, therefore, constitute any grievance; moreover at the time of their appointment to the Provincial Educational Service, they were allowed to supersede many officers.

With these words, I beg to move this Resolution for the consideration of Your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My lord, the resolution and the Hon'ble Member's speech have drawn attention to an anomaly to which we have been fully alive and which we have been long endeavouring to remove. The Hon'ble Member has, however, disguised the main question by emphasising an incidental, and we hope temporary, feature of the case. If we have, in the same work two services, one higher and one lower, so adjusted that the maximum pay of the lower exceeds the minimum pay of the higher, if our policy is to choose from the lower for promotion to the higher men of experience and ability, and if the higher service offers steady opposition to recruitment to it elsewhere than in the lowest grade, then it is inevitable that there should occur from time to time anomalies. These anomalies are in the situation and they are quite independent of the allowances to which the Hon'ble Member has referred and for the grant of which to certain officers in the higher service he has pleaded. It may make the case clearer if I put my general statement into concrete facts. We have two classes of Government High schools—those attached to colleges and those independent schools at district headquarters. We have two services—the Provincial Service which for this case relates only to Head Masters in grades between Rs. 200—500 and the Subordinate Service in which the pay is Rs. 50—250. And it is the fact that schools attached to colleges have been regarded as more important and are supposed to confer a greater degree of prestige on their Head Masters than those independent Zilla Schools at district headquarters. That has been recognised in our organisation. Head Masters of Collegiate schools are placed in the Provincial Service. Head Masters of other Government High schools are placed in the Subordinate Service and therefore it has happened, not frequently, but occasionally, that a Zilla school Head Master who may perhaps be drawing the full pay of his grade, that is Rs. 250 has been appointed to the post of Head Master of a Collegiate school, and has had to commence in the last grade of Rs. 200. That is the situation which we have long deplored and we have long deplored the difference of esteem in which the Head Masters of these two classes of schools have been held. For more than ten years it has been the steady view of the Educational Department that this distinction in prestige should be removed by placing all Head Masters of Government High schools in the Provincial Educational Service. Steps to this end have been taken as part of the larger scheme for the betterment of the whole of secondary school education in this province and this scheme has been put forward and we have made some advance. Only recently we have received despatches from the Government of India and the Secretary of State which show that the case is receiving attention, although I cannot say that the end is in sight. Therefore three years ago when an opportunity was given us by an unexpected windfall from the Government of India, we decided to do something to show our appreciation of the work of the Zilla school Head Masters, as a temporary measure, by giving them a duty allowance. I should mention that promotion in the Subordinate Service is very largely governed by seniority, whereas selection for the post of Head Masters is governed by seniority as also other considerations. So it may happen and so it does happen that the Head Master of a Zilla school finds himself inferior in pay to some Assistant Masters. Pending an opportunity of recognising their superior position by a grant of superior status we secured the consent of the Government of India to a special duty allowance of Rs. 50 a month for Zilla School Head Masters. This allowance was granted in 1915 and is not only a recognition of the arduous duties of Head Masters, but it is also a compensation for the absence of higher status which we think should attach to the post of Zilla school Head Masters and which will so attach in the near future. We have secured this allowance for Zilla School Head Masters as a compensation for not being in the Provincial Service. There are hardly any difficulties and the present Resolution is scarcely one which the Government can accept in its present form. Difficulties have been rare. There have one or two occasions in which Head Masters found themselves in an awkward position. But I am proud to say that when an offer had been made to a master so situated of the alternative of higher status without an increase of pay or perhaps even on less pay in the Provincial Service or lower status with perhaps higher pay in the Subordinate Service, the choice was for the higher status. I am proud that this has been the case and I am proud to believe that this would be the case with the majority of men who are now serving us in the Zilla schools.

"I will ask the Hon'ble mover, on behalf of the Education Department, to accept the assurance that, although their special duty allowances are granted on the understanding that the Head Masters shall not put them forward as obstacles to transfer, deputation or other administrative conveniences, the Educational Department is not likely at any time to transfer a master to a post of greater prestige and equal or less pay except with his own consent. I can assure the Hon'ble mover also that if the offer is made, we shall certainly find that the Zilla school Head Masters concerned will gladly accept the higher responsibility and higher prestige. I trust, therefore, that the Hon'ble Member will not press his resolution to a division."

Resolutions.Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I have listened to the statement made by the Hon'ble Member. The point which I have raised before the Members of the Council is a very simple one. True it is that they have got a higher status ; but, as I put it, they are now in the evening of their lives, and therefore, although we are thankful to the Education Department for promoting them to the higher status, still it is a matter for Government to consider whether under the circumstances a few officers who are now old, and who have got promotion, cannot claim the consideration of Government for a duty allowance of Rs. 50 a month. Now, this is a simple issue which I have put before your Lordship's Council. The question is that they are very glad that they have got promotion from Rs. 250 to Rs. 700 ; they are old officers, they cannot enjoy a higher pay in life, and consequently it is a matter of deep consideration for Government to consider whether these few officers, seven or eight in number, are not entitled to claim for an increase even in the shape of a duty allowance or so of Rs. 50 a month.

I am, therefore, obliged to trouble the Members of the Council with the simple point which I have raised, and I trust the Council will consider the point."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that, with a view to the proper working of the septic tank latrine installations, the Government do take into consideration the revision of "the Bengal Factories Rules, 1912," now in force in Bengal, in the following manner :—

(1) add to clause (viii) of rule 19(1) the following sub-clause—

"(c) it has been certified by the Inspector of Septic Tank Latrine Installations that the requirements referred to in sub-clauses (a) and (b) have been duly complied with"; and

(2) in rule 19(2), for the word "may", in the two places where it occurs, substitute the word "shall".

He said :—

"My Lord, according to the recent circular letter issued by the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, to the Chairman of all Riparian Municipalities, I understand that the water of the Bhagirathi now contains a very large amount of pollution derived from human excreta and it has now been rendered dangerous to use it for drinking purposes and also for cleansing dishes and plates or other vessels used for food, unless the water has first been filtered or boiled. Neglect of these precautions will expose persons to the risk of contracting cholera, typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhoea and other water-borne diseases.

It is very painful for me to recollect the sad incident which took place in our town some years prior to the introduction of the filtered water-supply within the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality. Let me bring to Your Excellency's notice that Mr. Bernard, I.C.S., our beloved Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, his amiable wife and sister-in-law, all suddenly died of cholera on account of the fact that the plates and dishes on which they took their meals were washed with the water of the Hooghly, contaminated with the poisonous bacilli!

Before entering at some length upon the subject-matter of my resolution, I would like to give you a very brief account of the circumstances under which a special Committee was appointed by the Government of Bengal in April, 1904, to examine the working of the septic tank installations in this province.

This was rendered necessary on account of the rapidly increasing number of septic tank latrines which have been erected, specially in connection with the jute mills on the Hooghly river, complaint having been made of the pollution of the river by the discharge of effluents from these tanks.

Resolutions.Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

Report of the Committee was published in December, 1904, wherein it is written in page 2 under paragraph 4 that "The Committee are not in a position to give a complete and final report."

A number of conclusions were put forward, some admittedly of a provisional character.

Speaking generally, it was believed that means could be found for improving the chemical composition of the effluent, but the danger arising from bacterial pollution would still remain. Suggestions were made that effluents should be used as feed-water for boilers, or carried well out into the mid-stream away from the banks, by suitable pipes.

On the requisition of Government, Dr. G. F. Fowler, D.Sc., F.I.C., Consulting Chemist to the Manchester Corporation Rivers Committee, arrived in Calcutta on the 14th January, 1906, and he submitted a report on the septic tanks in Bengal and the purification of sewage, which was published in 1907. I quote the following lines from this printed report for the information of Your Excellency's Council :—

'Now, of all the pollutions that rivers are subjected to, by far the most serious is the addition of sewage, specially in a country like India, where unfiltered river water, taken very near the edge, is the drinking supply of thousands.

'The purest water in the Hooghly in every sense of the term is to be found in the middle of the stream; this water is very pure and shows very little contamination of a dangerous character.

'There is a zone of pollution extending along both banks due to matter put into the river.

'This pollution is largely represented by great increase in the group of bacilli that may be called faecal in origin, and therefore it is a serious contamination.

'The septic tank effluent is largely responsible for this pollution.

'As the number of septic tanks are on the increase, the amount of pollution will also increase.'

Let me quote the following lines from the valuable book, 'A Manual of the Principles of Sewage Treatment' by Professor Dunbar, Director of the Institute of State Hygiene, Hamburg, which has been translated into English by Dr. H. T. Calvert, M.Sc., Ph. D., F.I.C., Chief Chemical Assistant, West Riding of Yorkshire :—

'The tank effluents are always putrescent and give rise to foul smells by the escape of gases when they are agitated.'

Again, 'the biological treatment is usually more difficult with septic tank effluent than with fresh sewage.'

'At Hamburg contact beds would be filled six times a day with fresh sewage without yielding an unsatisfactory effluent, whereas they would only take septic sewage twice a day.'

Mr. G. B. Kershaw, who was for more than twelve years Engineer to the Royal Commission on sewage disposal, in his famous work on 'Modern methods of sewage purification' has stated that 'the recent typhoid epidemic at Lincoln arising from a polluted water-supply shows that, even in case of large towns, one weak spot in an apparently satisfactory system may be the direct cause of considerable loss of life and great expense. It is unfortunately the case that the incidence of disease is most marked in the poorer districts of a community, where the inhabitants are least able to resist it.'

Resolutions.Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji.

'Life' is called in Bengali language 'Jibon' and 'Jibon' also means 'Water.' In a tropical province like Bengal, pure water is a most valuable asset to one's life and Your Excellency is aware of this lamentable fact that many millions of the people on both sides of the Hooghly river are without a filtered water-supply and consequently they are obliged to draw their supply of drinking water from the sacred Bhagirathi.

It is laid down under the Bengal Factories Rules of 1912 that 'the effluent from a septic tank latrine installations shall not be discharged into any river unless—

(a) it is clear, free from faecal odour and non-putrescible, and nitrification has definitely commenced, and

(b) it has been sterilized by the addition to each gallon of five grains of fresh chlorinated lime.'

It does not require additional arguments to adduce that some sort of precaution has become urgently necessary, having regard to the present dangerously contaminated condition of the water of the Hooghly, whether, as a matter of practice, the requirements under the Factories Rules referred to above are strictly observed. Therefore I move this Resolution for the kind consideration of Your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble BABU SIV NARAYAN MUKHARJI said :—

"My Lord, I hold in my hand two copies of the results of chemical and bacteriological examination of unfiltered water of the Ganges recently supplied to the various Municipalities. Bearing, as they do, the signature of the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal, these reports assume a character the correctness of which it is impossible to call in question. What we find in them is that the water tested was found to contain countless bacteria in '1 c.c., and showed non-resistant type faecal bacilli in '01 c.c., indicating that it contained such a large amount of faecal pollution, probably derived from human excreta, as to render it dangerous to use it for drinking purposes, unless it has first been filtered or boiled.' 'Neglect of these precautions,' continues the report, 'will expose persons to the risk of contracting cholera, typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhoea and other water-borne diseases.' and conclude with the following warning: 'In every case the attention of the whole population should be called, if necessary by beat of drum, to the present dangerously contaminated condition of the river water.'

It would, I feel sure, be no revelation to the Hon'ble Members if, with Your Lordship's permission, I were to make the assertion that the Ganges adds to its character of usefulness a degree of sanctity in the estimation of the Hindus not unlike that of the Tiber and of the Nile in the pristine days of Rome and Egypt. It supplies drinking water to the inhabitants of all riparian towns and villages. For all culinary and other household purposes its water is generally used not only by people living on its banks, but by men from the interior, who, after immersion in it on auspicious days and festive occasions, carry its water home for purposes of worshipping their household deities. The feeling of gratefulness in the Hindus has at all times found expression in their readiness to deify propitious and ministrant forces of Nature. It is to this spirit that the apotheosis of the Ganges is to be attributed. 'To the simple,' writes Sister Nivedita, 'the Ganges is completely mother! Does she not give life and food? To the pious she is the bestower of purity and as each bather steps into her flood he stoops tenderly to place a little of the water on his head, craving pardon with words of salutation for the touch of his foot.' 'The incomparable Ganges!' exclaims Oscar Browning, 'worthy of all the worship which has been paid to it'. In a truly poetic vein he adds: He who has once been conquered by the fascination of its waters will not cease to yearn for them so long as he lives.' I am afraid I shall be repeating a truism when I say that the old law-givers of India were not blind to the part played by water in the human economy, nor to the necessity of preserving its purity. We find in the Institutes of Vishnu the broad general injunction: 'A man must not throw any impure substance into water.'

'Rivers,' according to Dr. Parke, 'are capable of a certain amount of self-purification by natural means.' 'River waters,' writes Sir Pardey Lukis, 'are constantly liable to pollution by men and animals. If it were not for the beneficent purifying work of oxygen, rivers in this country would soon become little more than open sewers.' But a vast sewer the river has become by the discharge into it of the effluents from the septic tanks of about 40 mills in this part of Bengal alone, each mill employing three to four thousand workmen and coolies. We can never believe that the pollution of this sacred river can ever be regarded with equanimity by any Indian, far less by any Hindu gentleman, even if expert opinion had gone to show that the septic tank effluents were chemically pure and bacteriologically innocuous.

Looking back to the genesis of the septic tank movement in this Province we find that at the instance of the Sanitary Board a Committee was appointed in April, 1904, to report on the working of the then existing septic tank installations in the Bengal mills, and on the means which should be adopted to render the system efficient and free from objection.' The resolution further directed: 'If discharges into the river is permitted the Committee should report the conditions which they consider necessary in order that this may be done without detriment to the public health.' Now, Sir, the discharge into the river was permitted with the result that, in spite of widespread opposition at the time, mostly on religious, yclept sentimental grounds, and in spite of the apprehension entertained about the effluents from septic tanks proving dangerous for want of proper precautionary measures and sufficient safeguards, the abuse has been allowed to continue for nearly a decade and half till it has reached alarming proportions. I fully understand that this is a strong indictment against septic tank installations; but it is for this Council to determine whether it is well-merited or not. I do not know which of the three systems of septic tank installation mentioned in Messrs. Notter and Firth's excellent treatise on Hygiene is in vogue in the several mills in this Province, but the fact remains that the filtrates or effluents from the several tanks have become highly objectionable from a hygienic and sanitary point of view. In England the Rivers Pollution Acts of 1876 and 1890 prohibit the pollution of any stream or river by allowing crude sewage to flow into it. Here in India, though the system of septic installations has been introduced to prevent pollution, doubts are entertained as to whether complete care is taken to go the whole hog so far as the processes connected with the chemical treatment of sewage are concerned. I have under the circumstances no hesitation in appealing to the benevolent sympathy of Your Lordship's Government, and trust that the revision of the Bengal Factories Rules, 1912, as recommended, will be effected. I have under the circumstances great pleasure in supporting the motion of the Hon'ble Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur."

The Hon'ble SIR NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My Lord, the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend involves two important questions of sanitation: first, the question of the disposal of the sewage, and second, the question of river pollution.

As regards the question of the disposal of sewage by what is called the anaerobic method, most of the authorities are agreed that if that method is followed with proper precautions, sewage might be considerably purified.

Resolutions.Sir Nilratan Sarkar.

But the method consists of a series of chemical, mechanical and biological processes, each of which requires the constant attention of some competent assistants. Dr. Fowler, who, as we all know, is an expert in these matters, in a paper which he read before the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography in Berlin in 1909, insisted upon three important conditions, amongst others, for the attainment of successful results: first, a particular temperature; second, a particular quantity of water; and third, an efficient condition of the mechanical arrangements. He said also, in connection with temperature, that whereas in the tropics there are in the temperature certain favourable conditions for the early purification of the offensive substances, there is also some source of danger in the high temperature prevailing there; and as regards water, he insisted upon a minimum quantity of five gallons per head of the users. Then, as regards the effluent, he advocated, as he indicated by experiments, subsequent percolation and filtration; and he said that after four repetitions of the filtration process of the same liquid, he could reduce the objectionable bacilli from one million to 449 colonies. This shows that even after very careful filtration, they are not altogether removed from the effluent. Then he had to fall back upon chemical antiseptics and he advocated hypochlorites. At that time, he was not whole-hearted in his support as regards the addition of these chemicals for this particular object; he suggested in fact that every effort should be made to produce an effluent by ordinary filtration processes of the highest possible purity. It would be unsafe to assume in the absence of the exact knowledge that the complex effluent imperfectly oxidised by natural agencies could be rendered harmless by the action of hypochlorites. Then he says that the admission of hypochlorite of lime might also have injurious effects on the microscopic or plankton life of the river, the results of which are not easy to foresee.

He insists upon the effluents being produced in properly constructed and properly managed installations, and further their being treated for a period of two hours in an isolation tank before admission to a stream.

His conclusion was:—"Where there is danger of bacterial pollution at the outfall, it is advisable where possible to utilise the effluent for flushing latrines. When the procedure is impossible sterilisation by hypochlorites can be accomplished and if certain precautions are taken no difficulties need arise at the outfall on this account.

It will be admitted that a complicated plant like what is described by Dr. Fowler is likely to go wrong at least in some parts in the course of time; and it requires constant care and attention to keep it in efficient order. Further, nothing like the laborator precision observed by Dr. Fowler could be expected in a big plant installed anywhere.

Now, as regards my second point, viz., that of river pollution, I may be permitted to state that after careful observations I found that the river water is highly polluted particularly in the portion of the river lying between Hooghly and Barrackpur, from which different samples of water were taken and examined bacteriologically during the last fortnight. The examinations showed a very bad state of pollution. In some samples, we could find five hundred colonies of bacilli growing in the course of the 24 hours. There were two of the worst kinds that produce disease. The observations were confined to the particular area, I mean the area extending from Hooghly on one side to Palta on the other. I am perfectly convinced that the water there is unsuitable for drinking purposes, in fact it is dangerous.

As regards the sources of this pollution, there must be many. There was an enquiry held regarding the matter in 1909. I have carefully read Major (now Lieutenant-Colonel) Clemesha's report. I quite agree with him when he attaches the blame to some of the khals and creeks carrying sullage from the interior into the river. I agree also as regards the pollution caused by the boatmen and the brickfield coolies. I do not, however, see how he forgot to say anything, good, bad or indifferent, as regards about eighty septic installations on both sides of the river at that time. Be that as it may, I do not myself say that the septic tanks in the mills are solely responsible for the miserable state of the river at the present time, as there are many other sources of infection. But, at the same time, I believe that it is time that a thorough enquiry should be held into the state of things in this country; and in the meantime, to be on the safe side, where the margin of safety is so slender, I should certainly pray that the effluents of the septic tanks in the mills should be deviated away from the river and used for other purposes. There are various purposes for which this effluent could be utilised. I might mention some of them; at least when the water looks quite pure, it may be safely used for feeding the boilers. I know, of course, the coolies in the mills would object to this; but if the effluent be first allowed to flow into something like a big basin or tank and then it is pumped from the other side of the tank, I think the objection would disappear. Then, it may also be used for irrigation; I admit, however, that this is only possible for eight months in the year. Then again when sufficiently oxidised the effluent need not be very offensive and if it is collected in big tanks, it may form a very good pond for fish culture. That is the biological method adopted in many parts of the world for the disposal of sewage. On a small scale it prevailed in old towns like Dacca, where there were cess-pools in which there were always some big fish growing.

Then drainage of the riparian area is one of the most important questions that will confront us within a short time.

As regards the tank scheme, it may appear rather strange, but it has been carefully calculated that a tank one acre in area would be sufficient for the sewage of a population of six hundred persons; and if such sewage has been previously subjected to a liquifying process in anaerobic tanks, one such tank should suffice for the sewage of ten times this population. However, these are questions which are to be decided by experts and I can only suggest. The question of river pollution is becoming a very urgent question, and it is my prayer that a Commission be appointed to investigate into the whole thing. I am as much interested in the industrial development of the land as in the public health of the Province; I believe that industrial development and public health must co-operate with one another for the good of the Province, and ultimately for the good of humanity. None of these can be neglected; factories will multiply in the near future. It will not do to say that we do not want to accommodate the factories in the interests of the public health; on the other hand difficult problems of sanitation in connection with factories must be solved, without neglecting important sanitary questions."

[At this stage the Hon'ble Member had to conclude his remarks, he having reached the time-limit.]

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, at this hour of the day, it is not my intention to detain the Council for very long. But I shall make some general observations on some of the points raised by the speakers at the end of my speech. I should, however, at the very outset say that Government are ready to accept the second amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Member. It is already the duty of the Septic Tank Inspector to inspect septic tanks and latrine installations, and there can be no objection whatever in changing the rule so as to make it clear that this is one of his prescribed duties."

Resolutions.Muharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

As regards the first amendment, I am inclined to think that the Hon'ble Mover has perhaps not fully understood the object and scope of the rule, which he has just read out. This rule simply lays down the condition which must be fulfilled and the breach of which renders the occupier and manager of the mill liable to prosecution and punishment. There is no need whatever for the certificate that those conditions are being fulfilled. If the Inspector finds at the time of his inspection that the rule is being observed and that the effluent is clear, odourless and properly sterilized, there is no need for further action. If, on the other hand, he finds that the rule is not being observed, he makes a report and administrative action is then taken. For instance, notices are issued to the mills ordering them to make proper arrangements for the purity of effluent, or the Magistrate is directed to give a warning, or if the mill authorities do not take that warning, a prosecution may be instituted. It will make no difference if the Inspector is required to give a certificate to the effect that the effluent is clear, free from odour and sterilised by chlorination. Such a certificate would not only be superfluous, but might even be positively mischievous, for the mill manager having his certificate might become careless and not see that the effluent is regularly purified. Again, such a certificate might not have a continuing effect. It would only refer to the state of things as the Inspector found them at the time of his visit. It would be no guarantee that the effluent was properly sterilised after his visit. Government, therefore, while sympathising with the object of the Hon'ble Mover, which is to secure the purification of effluent, do not consider the amendment necessary. Government are anxious that there should be no pollution from septic tanks, and while the matter is receiving the close attention of Government they fail to see how the amendment proposed can serve any useful purpose, and on this account they are unable to accept this part of the motion.

Now I wish to turn to certain points raised by the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution as well as subsequent speakers. The Hon'ble Mover very justly points out the present state of the river Bhagirathi near the place where he hails from. On the other hand, in moving this resolution, he has laid more stress on the fact that the present condition of the river water is largely, if not mainly, due to the pollution caused by the septic tanks. Now, my lord, that is not the fact. In reply to an unstarred question by the Hon'ble Sir Narayan Mukharji at this very meeting in which he asked whether such contamination is due mainly, if not largely, to the discharge from the septic installations in the several jute mills on both banks of the river, Government has replied that so far as they are aware they are advised that this is not so. We all know that all along the river banks from Hooghly down to Serampore, there are unfortunately epidemics of cholera. But I would have been a little more cautious if I had been the Chairman of the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality in making this accusation, in view of the fact that it has already been brought to the notice of the Government that the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality, possessing, as it does, a water-works, was unable to work it or worked it in such a way that for the neglect of that alone there was an epidemic of cholera in Hooghly-Chinsura.

My lord, the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar has pointed out in his able speech—to which I shall make some reference later on—that the river water is unsuitable for various reasons. The sources of pollution are many—sullage coming through *khal*s and creeks; due to boatmen, due to coolies working on the brickfields—and all these combine to make the present state of the water of the Bhagirathi undesirable as it is to be found between Barrackpore and Hooghly.

Another thing, Sir, has been mentioned by the Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji. I am sorry, however, my Lord, that I could not follow his speech thoroughly. Evidently the circular which was recently issued by the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal, warning the people living on the banks of the Resolutions.Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Bhagirathi, not to use this dangerously contaminated water, has led to a certain amount of misunderstanding and misapprehension. As I have already said, Government as at present advised do not think that any serious, or, in fact, any contamination is due, to any extent, to the discharge from the septic tanks. That being so, I think the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal was perfectly justified in issuing a circular to these rural municipalities, especially those near the riverside, to warn people against the dangerous condition of the water. It is possible that the language used by him might have been misunderstood by some people, and that the condition of the river having been notified to the people by beat of drums might have caused some unnecessary excitement. Be that, however, as it may, the main point is that while I have already agreed, on behalf of Government, to accept the second part of this motion, I have explained why Government are unable to accept the first part of the motion, and I think it my duty to disabuse the minds of those Hon'ble Members who have spoken on the subject as well as the other members of Your Excellency's Council of the fact that the contamination of the Bhagirathi, although it does exist, is due to other reasons than the septic tanks. We are in a position to say that in certain cases there may have been leakages owing to certain septic tanks not having been properly worked; but it is no doubt that the present condition of the river is due to several causes combined, and not to the septic tanks, as is the general idea that some of the members have got in their minds.

I shall now turn to some of the points raised by the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar. I do not propose to discuss at any length the question he has raised about the Commission or Committee; on the suggestion he has made of utilising the effluent for feeding boilers or for purposes of irrigation or for making fish culture out of the septic effluent. This is a matter which will no doubt receive the attention of Government in due time; but as it is beyond the scope of this resolution, I shall dismiss it for the moment. There is no doubt that the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar can do a great deal with effluents; but at present we have got to keep the septic tanks that we have in proper order; and I may assure the Council that the matter is receiving the closest attention of Government. I hope, therefore, that the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution will accept the proposal made by the Government on the subject."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I have listened with great interest to the instructive speech of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar. I find that he has discoursed at length on the subject of river pollution and I believe that my friend—I may be permitted to suggest—will some day bring up a resolution particularly with reference to this matter so that we might press the necessity for the appointment of a Committee.

With reference to this resolution itself, what I find is this, that the Hon'ble Member in charge seems to be disinclined to accept the first part of the resolution. When I came to this Council, I had not a copy of the Factory Rules with me, but I have now got a copy, and I do not know what possible objection there can be to accepting the first part of this resolution. There is a rule, viz., 19 (3) which enjoins that the effluent from a septic tank or latrine shall not be discharged into the river unless certain processes which are given there are gone through. My Hon'ble friend has suggested that there should be an Inspector who shall personally see that it is properly treated before it is discharged into the river. It may be suggested that the mill authorities will look to that, but with regard to that, my lord, I may state that we have got municipal rules in Calcutta which require the owners or occupiers of houses to do certain things and the authorities do not always rely on the assurance of the owners or occupiers on the present case, also I do not think that we should rest content with mill owners' assurances."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.*

The MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN (interrupting) said :—

"My lord, there are Inspectors who inspect septic tanks."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I know that there are Inspectors, but the object of this amendment is that on every occasion before the contents are discharged into the river, the Inspector should see that they have been properly treated. My lord, it may entail some additional cost, but it will not press very heavily on the rich jute mill owners on both sides of the river. I do not see, therefore, what is the harm in adopting this suggestion. When Government has framed its rule, all we want, on behalf of our community, is that it this process is regularly gone through before the effluent is discharged into the river. Government should not leave it entirely to the mill assistants with casual inspections by the Inspector. Your Lordship is perhaps well aware that there is a large volume of public feeling against the installation of septic tanks and the discharge of their effluent to the river. It is an old old cry; and there is a strong public feeling that many of the diseases, specially the epidemics such as cholera, dysentery, etc., and other waterborne diseases, are due, I do not say mainly but to a large extent, to the discharge from the septic tanks. I know, my lord, that one of the ex-Members of the Executive Council of this Presidency, viz., Raja Kisorilal Gossain, from his place in the British Indian Association urged upon the attention of Government the necessity of closer attention to this matter, if not the closing or at least the diversion of the contents of septic tanks to the fields. The grievances of the people have been pressed on many occasions on the attention of Government. I hope at least the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, who, although now annexed to the Government, belongs primarily to us, will take the matter into his consideration and will induce the Government to remove this danger to the people by instituting proper control over the septic tank installation until some measure is devised to divert the contents as suggested by the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, in moving this resolution I have come forward to represent the grievances of those people who live on the two sides of the river. These are not imaginary grievances which I have put before the Council. Every morning or every evening when people go to bathe in the river they feel this difficulty. These considerations led me to come to Your Excellency's Council and to represent the grievances of the people by submitting a resolution. The resolution is, as I have said, a very modest one. You have Inspectors of Septic Tank Installations. The Inspector is required under the rules to submit a certificate, but then his certificate is simply to the effect—I recently inspected the factory noted above. He goes occasionally, inspects the factories and mills, and submits a report. I wish, my lord, that that certificate should be given before the actual nuisance is committed. I expected that the Government Member in charge, the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, would sympathise with me and allow this, a very modest resolution, to be passed.

Now, so far as the merits of the resolution go, it appears that the resolution only says that an Inspector should carefully see that the requirements of that section, viz., section 19, are complied with and nothing more. It is the duty of the Inspector to do it, and I press upon the consideration of the Government Member in charge, the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, to consider whether these duties should not be performed in the way suggested in my resolution. It is for these reasons that I moved this resolution. There you have the Inspector and you require him to submit a report. Why not do it in such a way that there will be greater control over the working of the septic tanks? Of course, we understand,

Resolutions.

The President; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

my lord, that the Mill Manager or Superintendent inspects the work ; but my view was—and I still retain it—that the Government Inspector should actually see that the work was properly done. According to the suggestions made in my resolution, there will be some control over the pollution of the river water. Larger questions have been discussed in the Council, and I am sorry to find that the Chairman of the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality has been rebuked for the neglect of his work. I do admit, my lord, that there has been neglect on the part of the Chairman of the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality ; but in moving this resolution I never expected a review of the work of the Chairman from the Hon'ble Member in charge, because before the water-works were introduced in Hooghly there was an outbreak of cholera. Since the introduction of water-works, I submit, there have been no such epidemics. ”

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN (interrupting) said :—

“ That is not a fact. What I said was that even after the introduction of the water-works, owing to the stoppage of water-supply due to some defects in the water-works, cholera broke out. ”

The PRESIDENT said :—

“ The Hon'ble Member will have an opportunity of replying later on. ”

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR (continuing) said :—

“ My lord, I will not deal with this question. The Hon'ble Member will perhaps excuse me for referring to the observations which he made. But whatever it may be, that is the resolution I have submitted before the Council. ”

As regards the second part of the resolution, I am thankful, my lord, to the Hon'ble Member in charge for his kindly allowing this part to be accepted because it will be of some help. The resolution suggests that the inspection should be made as a matter of course and not as a matter of option. I do not like to waste the time of the Council by discussing further on the merits or to go back upon the remarks which have been made by the Hon'ble Member in charge, and I only pray that this Council will consider the first part of my resolution. ”

The Hon'ble MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

My lord, I am not quite clear whether the Hon'ble Member wishes to press his resolution. As I have stated, the Government are quite willing to accept the second portion of his resolution, but I should like to make a few observations. I have already said that the attention of Government has been drawn to these septic-tank installations ; that the Government are going to give their closest attention to this matter, and that the reason why Government do not wish to accept the first portion is because they think it to be superfluous and that by the acceptance of the wording it might easily be possible for some of the mill-owners to evade the very thing which the Hon'ble Member wished to be rectified.

Now, as regards the rebuke that I am guilty of having given to the Hon'ble Mover, I think that I was justified for the simple reason that the Hon'ble Mover was not only trying to point out to this Council that cholera and other epidemics which unfortunately prevailed in Hooghly and the adjoining places were mainly and solely due to the construction of the septic tanks, but what is more, he wanted to prove that cholera broke out in Hooghly before the water-works came to be installed there ; whereas, as a matter of fact, Government have got authoritative opinion that for the water-works not having been properly worked by the Municipality, of which the Hon'ble Member happens to be the Chairman, the Municipality was really responsible for an outbreak of cholera. I think, therefore, that I was perfectly justified, on behalf of Government, in mentioning that matter to the Hon'ble

Resolutions.The President.

Mover in my speech. Government are quite willing to accept the second portion, as I have already stated."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan has explained that Government are quite prepared to act upon the second of the two amendments proposed in his resolution. They are not, however, prepared to act upon the first of the two amendments. Two courses are, therefore, open to the Hon'ble Mover—either to withdraw his resolution or else to press his resolution to a division."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"May I be allowed to put the two parts of the resolution separately? If the Government does not accept the second portion, because I press for the first portion, I shall have no other alternative but to withdraw the resolution."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"As I have already mentioned the Government are prepared to act upon the second part and that has been clearly stated. With regard to the first part of the resolution, Government are not prepared to act upon it and I understand that the Hon'ble Mover desires a division to be taken upon it.

I would put it more clearly. If the Hon'ble Mover wishes to take a vote upon the first portion, it will not alter the decision of Government. The Government are prepared to act upon the second part. The only effect, so far as the Government are concerned, of the division will be to decide whether the Council as a whole or a majority of the Council are in favour of acting upon the first portion."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

APPENDIX A.

(Referred to in the Answer to Question No. XXXIX.)

Conference of Presidents of Panchayats and Chairmen of Union Committees.*Dacca, 28th July, 1917.REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS.

The Conference was convened at the request of many Presidents of Panchayats and Chairmen of Union Committees with the object of discussing various important matters relating to their work. All the Presidents and Chairmen of Dacca District were invited and also such members of Panchayats and Union Committees as expressed a special wish to attend. The Government officers present included the Subdivisional officers and Circle officers of the district, the Director and other officers of the Agricultural Department, and the Deputy Inspector-General and several other Police officers. His Excellency the Governor of Bengal, the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell and Sir Henry Wheeler, Members of the Executive Council, Mr. L. Birley, C.I.E., and Mr. L. S. S. O'Malley, I.C.S., were also present during a part of the proceedings. The total number of persons present is estimated at over 800.

The proceedings were held in a large open godown at the farm-steading of the Government Farm at Manipur, Dacca. Before the ordinary business commenced the Panchayats had been met outside the Farm by the Director and other officers of the Agricultural Department, who conducted them round the Farm explaining the nature and objects of the work in progress.

The Conference opened with a brief speech by the Chairman welcoming the Presidents and thanking them for their invaluable help in the administration of the district. The Chairman also pointed out that time was limited and requested the speakers to be brief, to keep strictly to the point and to base their remarks on their own actual experience.

1. The first resolution was proposed by Babu Lal Mohan Bhattacharjya, President Panchayat and Chairman, Masara Union, and run thus:—

"It should be permissible for a Union Committee to grant, once a year, a bonus to a dafadar or chaukidar who has rendered specially useful service in connection with Union Committee work. The amount of such bonus should be not less than Rs. 12 and not more than Rs. 30."

The mover said that from his experience of last year's work he found the help of the chaukidars very useful for the supervision of the Union Committee roads and reserved tanks, for the service of notices of meetings and notices of sales of pounds and in many other ways. The formation of Union Committees has increased the work of the chaukidars without giving a corresponding increase in their pay. Chaukidars should therefore get an increment of pay; but this cannot be given from Chaukidari funds. It would, therefore, be a stimulus to Union Committees if they were authorised to grant a bonus to chaukidars who have done useful work for the Committees.

Babu Hara Lal Saha, President Panchayat of Amta Union, supported the resolution but suggested that the fines realised from chaukidars should be utilised for the purpose of rewarding them for their service to Union Committees.

Babu Aswini Kumar Chaudhury, President Panchayat of Harirampur Union, and Rai Saheb Pramatha Nath Ghose, President Panchayat of Jaslong Union, agreed with the President Panchayat of Amta.

Mr. D. M. Sen pointed out that there was some misapprehension in the amendment proposed by the President Panchayat of Amta. He remarked that the Union Committee fund was quite separate from the Chaukidari Reward Fund, which is maintained from the fines of chaukidars.

The general feeling was in favour of the resolution as drafted.

2. The second resolution was proposed by Babu Debendra Kumar Bose, President Panchayat and Chairman of Union Committee at Dhipur, and was as follows:—

"That when necessary a clerk should be appointed to assist the Chairman in the work of the Union Committee and the President in the work of the Panchayat; that the pay of the clerk should not exceed Rs. 10 per month and should be met from (1) any grant given by Government for that purpose, (2) the funds of the Union Committee."

The mover began by saying that the double functions of Chairman and President have increased the clerical work in a Union. The Chairman is required to correspond frequently with the District Board, to regulate the office work of the Union Committee according to the Circulars and orders received from the D. B., to check accounts, etc., while as President he has to regularly keep notes of processes served, to report the result of local enquiries under section 202, Criminal Procedure Code, to compile jute forecasts, etc. All this work certainly makes a clerk necessary. He proposed that in all Unions where Union Committees have been established one-third of the clerk's pay should be met from Union Committee funds and the balance should be provided by Government and that in those Unions where there are no Union Committees the whole may be met by Government. The resolution was supported by Babu Prakash Chandra Gupta, Member of the Jinardi Union Committee.

Rai P. M. Basu Bahadur, President Panchayat and Chairman of Betka Union, suggested that the pay of the clerk should be at least Rs. 20, which would enable a really good man to be engaged and his services should be utilised as Tehsil Panchayat. He added that a bad or inferior man would be only a source of trouble to the Chairman.

Rai Sahib Pramatha Nath Ghose suggested Rs. 15 as the pay of the post and objected to the transfer of the work to the Tehsil Panchayat and to the abolition of the post of Tehsil Panchayat.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Sen supported Rai P. M. Basu Bahadur's proposal but suggested Rs. 15 as the pay of the post.

Babu Man Mohan Chakravarty, President Panchayat of Bahar, objected to the Tehsil Panchayat being paid a fixed salary instead of commission.

Babu Nishi Kanta Mukherji remarked that Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 ought to be sufficient as men are available in villages on this pay, e.g., Postmasters. He added that the clerk should be altogether separate from the Tehsil Panchayat.

Mr. S. G. Hart, Chairman of the Conference, said that after consulting the opinion of the various Committees as to local conditions the most fitting arrangements could be made. There would be no need for hard-and-fast rules.

3. The third resolution was proposed by Babu Lal Mohan Bose, President and Chairman of the Union Committee, Rajanagar, viz. :—

"That section 22 of the Chaukidari Act should be amended by inserting after the words 'ten per cent.,' the words 'or with the sanction of the District Magistrate not exceeding 12½ per cent.'"

The mover said that in realising Chaukidari tax the Tehsil Panchayat has to visit every rate-payer's house and has to devote almost his whole time and attention to the work. It is the practice in villages that rate-payers never go to the Tehsil Panchayat's house to pay their taxes. But indiscriminate issue of distress warrants in every case of default would cause great hardship to poor people who are generally ignorant of law and procedure. Ten per cent. on the collections is rather low remuneration for the whole time services of a Tehsil Panchayat. He proposed that the present legal maximum should be raised to 122 per cent. with a reservation that this extra 22 per cent. may be granted in Unions where the collection is over 97 per cent. of the assessment.

Rai Sahib P. M. Ghose, President Panchayat of Jaslong Union supported the resolution.

The feeling of the meeting was strongly in favour of increasing the remuneration of the Tehsil Panchayat.

4. The fourth resolution was proposed by Babu Kali Kumar Banerjee, President Panchayat and Chairman of Union Committee at Baherak :—

"Panchayats should uniformly adopt the principle of first making a list of all persons in the Union who can afford Re. 1 a month and levying the balance from the remaining assesses proportionately to their income and property within the Union."

The mover remarked that in order to make a fair assessment, it is desirable to have an accurate account of the circumstances and property to be protected of all persons in the Union and in order that the wealthier people may be assessed according to their circumstances and that the poorer people may get equitable relief, the principle should be followed of first ascertaining the people who are most well-to-do or who pay income-tax and then assessing the remaining residents according to their circumstances.

Rai Sahib P. M. Ghose proposed an amendment that as the law provides that every one who is able to pay half an anna per month should be taxed, the assessment list should be prepared by first ascertaining who can pay half an anna per month and then proceeding upwards ending with the wealthiest persons.

Mr. D. M. Sen, Subdivisional Officer, North Sadar, pointed out that under the Local Self-Government Act the Committee can impose assessment up to Rs. 60 per annum and that there is a likelihood of the maximum assessment under the Chaukidari Act also being enhanced.

Appendix.

5. The fifth resolution ran thus:—

"That cordial co-operation between the Police and the Panchayats being essential to good district administration, it should be ordered that, though the Panchayats should be the eyes and ears of the Police, they are not to be treated as subordinates but as fellow-workers for the common good and the Thana officer should be their friend and guide."

The resolution was proposed by Babu Nripati Ranjan Ray, Chairman of Subhadya Union Committee, who said that the Police are necessary for preserving peace in the country but the proportion of Police officers to the population in Bengal is only 1 per 2,000. Unless the Panchayats, as representatives of the people, co-operate with the Police, it is impossible for the Police to detect criminals and to preserve the peace. If the Panchayats work as the eyes and ears of the Police then only can the Police preserve peace in the country. He added that Police officers are brothers, friends and kinsmen and there will be no real co-operation if the Panchayats keep aloof from the Police. He also said that co-operation did not mean subordination. Police officers are public servants and are bound to serve the public. They, on their part, ought to be grateful for the great help they receive from the Panchayats.

Maulvi S. Siddiq, President Panchayat of Atabo, supported the resolution saying that the common object both of the Police and of the Panchayat is the same and as it is impossible for a Sub-Inspector to have full information concerning everything in his vast elaka it is incumbent on the Panchayat to co-operate with the Police.

Rai Saheb P. N. Ghose supported the resolution. Babu Hara Lal Saha, President Panchayat of Amta, objected to the word "guide" in the resolution as being inconsistent with the first part of the resolution which says that the Police are to co-operate with the Panchayats.

Mr. S. G. Hart, as Chairman of the Conference, remarked that Panchayats have not the same experience and are laymen in the work in which Police officers should be considered as experts as they devote to that work the whole of their time and thought. It is therefore right that Panchayats should look to the local Police officers for guidance.

6. The President Panchayat and Chairman of Tetuljhora Union proposed the sixth resolution, viz.:—

"That the functions of the Panchayat and of the Union Committee should be combined in a single body of which the majority of the members should be elected."

The mover remarked that with the amalgamation the collection work would be combined in the same person which will accelerate the collection both of Chaukidari and of Union Committee taxes. It would also enable the Committee to allot to such member a separate area, like a Headman's area, in which he would be responsible for all work connected with roads, wells, etc. The work of the Union Committee would thus be divided among the members instead of it being all done by one or two men. Panchayats have not been elected heretofore, and one advantage of amalgamation would be that the majority of the Panchayats would be elected by the people. Another effect would be that the chaukidar would work under one person only, which is impossible where the President Panchayat and Chairman are two separate persons.

Babu T. C. Chakravarty of Satoria in supporting the resolution remarked that amalgamation would obviate the friction which will be inevitable with two separate bodies in the same Union.

The resolution was unanimously accepted.

7. Rai Saheb Pramatha Nath Ghose, President Panchayat of Jaslon Union, proposed the seventh resolution, viz.:—

"That Panchayats should be invested with power to try petty civil and criminal cases, provided that such powers should not be exercised unless a quorum of at least three members is present."

The mover advocated the system of Village Courts and said that unless more power is given to Panchayats they are practically useless."

Babu A. K. Chaudhury, President Panchayat of Harinarayanpur, supporting the resolution said that by local trial of cases expenses will be reduced and touts will be deprived of opportunities of mischievous interference. The Panchayats will be well acquainted with the parties and with the touts; so it will be easy for them to find out the truth. The mover also suggested the conferment of powers on Panchayats to try civil suits up to the value of Rs. 50.

Babu Debendra Kumar Bose supported the resolution.

Babu Jogendra Nath Banerjee, President Panchayat of Aralia Union, supported the resolution and suggested that no Pleaders or Muktears should be allowed to appear in Village Courts.

Appendix.

Rai Sahab Pramatha Nath Ghose remarked that Pleaders and Muktears must be allowed to appear as all accused persons should be given an opportunity of defending themselves.

The feeling of the meeting was strongly in favour of the establishment of Village Courts.

8. Rai Sahab Behari Lal Dhar, President of Matuail Union, proposed the eighth resolution:—

“That Panchayats should be empowered to order persons to remove water-hyacinth from waterways passing through or by the side of their land; on their failure, to have the work done, and realise the cost from the defaulters.”

The Rai Sahab described vividly the troubles caused by these aquatic weeds and the damage done to the crops and to the fish. He advocated legislation on the above lines which he thought should be widened by inserting after the word “land”, the words “or from beels in their possession”, and the words “or from the person in possession or any one or more of the co-sharers in joint possession of the beel” after the word “defaulters.”

The resolution was supported by Babu Nishi Kanta Mukherjee, President Panchayat and Chairman Autshahi Union. He deprecated the present dilatory methods of law courts in combating the nuisance and urged legislation empowering Panchayats to get the nuisance removed by the owners themselves.

Rai R. C. Guha Bahadur proposed an amendment to the effect that the khals by the sides of District Board and Local Board roads should be cleared by the District Board or Local Board.

Rai Sahab P. N. Ghose, while supporting the resolution, remarked that all Kachuri (water-hyacinth) throughout the district should be cleared on one particular day, just as the census is taken, otherwise if any village is cleared one day, the next day it will be choked with Kachuri brought in from neighbouring villages.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Sen remarked that the work might very well be done by volunteers.

Mr. S. G. Hart, Chairman of the Conference, agreed with Rai Sahab P. N. Ghose and said he looked forward to a time when there would be a day set apart for clearing Kachuri which would be called the Kachuri Day, like May Day, Arbor Day and other annual festivals, and on that day school-boys, officers, and every one would take a holiday from their ordinary pursuits and all join together in clearing away every particle of water-hyacinth from the pools and streams.

9. Resolution:—

“That one model Lower Primary school for boys and another for girls should be established in every Union in the district.”

This was proposed by Munshi Abdul Rahman Bhuyan, who remarked that as the majority of the cultivating class are illiterate some provision for education should be made in every Union on the lines of this resolution.

Babu Girija Kanta Mazumdar, President Panchayat of Kolia Union, supported the resolution.

10. Munshi Ahmed Ali, President Panchayat, Kalagachia, proposed—“That in consideration of the large amount of time involved in compiling statistics for jute forecasts, Government should be moved to sanction an annual grant of Rs. 5 to each Union in jute-growing areas.”

In moving the resolution Munshi Ahmed Ali stated that the compilation of the jute forecast involves at least ten days' hard labour on the part of the Panchayats and they should be given some pecuniary consideration for this serious loss of time.

11. Resolution:—

“That where a public thoroughfare has, by omission, not been entered as such in the Settlement Record, it is advisable that the Union Committee should record a resolution declaring the pathway to be, by established user, a public thoroughfare and should then take steps to reclaim and preserve it.”

This resolution was proposed by Rai Pyari Mohan Dasu Bahadur, President and Chairman, Betka Union, who, in doing so, remarked that the Settlement Department has shown in the cadastral maps only some of the more important pathways and that there have been many omissions. In cases of omission the Union Committee should be empowered to reclaim the paths, this being specially necessary in Munshiganj subdivision.

Appendix.

He suggested that any such halot (pathway) should be demarcated by iron pegs after a resolution has been passed by the Union Committee declaring it to be a public thoroughfare.

Mr. S. G. Hart remarked that it is well known and admitted by the Settlement Department that many public thoroughfares have not been recorded in the Settlement maps and records. If a formal resolution is passed by a Union Committee to the effect that a certain pathway is by established user a public thoroughfare, this will help very materially to establish the fact for practical and even for legal purposes.

12. Resolution :—

“That Union Committees should be empowered to pass bye-laws to enforce the clearing of jungle and the cutting of branches of trees overhanging public paths and waterways.”

This resolution was proposed by Rai Ramesh Chandra Guha Bahadur, President and Chairman, Bajrajogini. In doing so he remarked that the prevalence of overhanging branches and of Mander trees has gradually narrowed the village roads and pathways till they have become almost impassable and shrouded in darkness even at midday. In some places this has become a serious nuisance and Union Committees should be authorised to clear jungle and overhanging branches and to pass bye-laws for that object.

13. Resolution :—

Proposed by Babu Rajendra Kumar Datta, President Panchayat and Chairman, Fatulla: “That when sending a criminal case to a member of a Panchayat for local enquiry it should be permissible for the Magistrate to order what amount, if any, should be paid to meet the Panchayat's actual travelling expenses, the payment being made to the Panchayat through the Court.

The mover remarked that President Panchayats are doing their honorary duties at the sacrifice of much time and labour and if the expenses of going out to make local enquiries have to be met by them it becomes a serious hardship especially to the more capable Presidents to whom more enquiries are entrusted. He suggested that at the time of ordering a preliminary enquiry the Court should estimate the cost and order the parties to deposit that amount.

The resolution was supported by Babu Kulada Kinkar Bhoumik, President Panchayat of Gala.

Babu Kali Kumar Banerjee, President of Beherak Union, remarked that his practice, when making enquiries, is to use boats supplied by the parties, usually the plaintiff. He suggested that a mileage allowance should be given to the Presidents during the rains.

Babu Aswini Kumar Chaudhury, President of Harirampur, suggested that whenever a case is sent to a President for enquiry the parties should deposit Rs. 3 as preliminary costs.

The general feeling of the Conference was that the actual expenses incurred by Panchayats in making magisterial enquiries should be recouped.

14. Resolution :—

“That the Madaripur system of whole-time dafadars should be extended to Dacca district.”

This was proposed by Mr. J. N. Banerjee, President of Joydebpur, who strongly urged the introduction of the dafadari system on the lines followed in Madaripur, where it has been a great success. He added that the increased power of the dafadar would need be accompanied by increased powers for the Presidents which are very urgently wanted.

Babu Srish Chandra Choudhury, President of Nawabganj Union, suggested that poor gentlemen living in the village may be appointed dafadars and also that the name dafadar may be changed.

Some one in the audience urged that dafadars' pay should not be increased as this would make the chaukidari tax still more heavy. On Mr. J. N. Banerjee's explaining that half the increased pay of the dafadars would be met by Government, the resolution was carried unanimously.

15. Resolution :—

Proposed by Babu Jatindra Nath Chakravarty Bidyabhusan, President Panchayat of Suapur. “That under the control of the thana Police and the supervision of the Panchayat working in co-operation, the system of patrolling by chaukidars should be made more effective. Chaukidars should be provided with up-to-date lists of all the Dagis and bad characters in their own and all the adjoining Unions (including Unions of other thanas). Every night they should go round their beats and take special care to look up persons of bad or doubtful character and watch their doings on dark nights. The dafadars should be provided with bull's eye lanterns instead of ordinary hurricane lanterns."

Appendix.

The mover remarked that in his Union by the system of patrolling described in the resolution he had detected and caught red-handed many criminals. He added that hurricane lanterns supplied to dafadars are not suitable for patrolling as they scare away the bad characters who take precautions when they see the light. Bull's eye lanterns are required for night-patrol work.

16. Rai Ramesh Chandra Guha Bahadur, President and Chairman of Bajrajogini Union, in a forcible speech urged that at present great difficulty is experienced in realising taxes from persons who lock up their houses. Most of the well-to-do people of Munshiganj Subdivision live away from their villages in the pursuit of their avocation. Being well off they cannot be exempted from taxation. They make no provision for the payment of their taxes but lock up their houses; and even though there is moveable property within, it cannot be distrained for the realisation of the taxes. The result is a deficiency in the Union Chaukidari fund which has to be met from the pocket of the President Panchayat, which is most unfair. The trouble arises from the fact that there is no provision in the law for the realisation of taxes of assesses who lock up their houses.

The speaker moved the following resolution: That a new section to be numbered 27A, should be inserted in the Chaukidari Act to the following effect:—

"On receipt of a report attested by the collecting member and the President of Panchayat that the moveable property of any defaulting absentee cannot be distrained except by breaking open the house of the defaulter, the District Magistrate or the Subdivisional officer may issue an order, authorising the President for that purpose, to break open or cause to be broken open, in his presence, any door or window of the house."

Rai Sahab Pramatha Nath Ghose suggested that the certificate procedure might be followed in such cases.

Babu Lal Mohan Bose, President of Rajnagar, suggested that the procedure sanctioned by the Municipal Law for realising arrear taxes should be followed.

The general feeling of the Conference was strongly in favour of action to enforce payment of taxes by absentee defaulters.

17. Proposed by Lalit Mohan Sen, President of Aminpur: "That a section should be inserted in the Local Self-Government Act enabling a Union Committee to elect one of its members to be Vice-Chairman."

The mover pointed out that there is provision for a Vice-Chairman in all other local authorities, such as Municipalities, District Boards or Local Boards. Nowadays when the Chairman is absent from the Union for some time the work of the Committee comes to a standstill and nothing can be done until the Chairman returns.

This closed the discussion.

18. Mr. Milligan, Director of Agriculture, then addressed the meeting thanking the Presidents for their help in popularising the new varieties of paddy and jute which the Department is introducing. Mr. Milligan clearly explained the system by which it is hoped to effect the distribution of seed of the new varieties into every Union, every village and every field where the conditions are suitable.

At the Director's request many of the Panchayats rose and testified to the excellent results obtained in their Unions from seed supplied by the Agricultural Department.

19. His Excellency the Governor then arrived and addressed a cordial speech of encouragement to the Presidents.

20. The Conference then dispersed, many of the members on their way taking the opportunity to further examine the experiments and demonstrations in progress on the Government Farm.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 1.Oath of Allegiance.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. A. BAYLEY made an oath of his allegiance to the Crown.

The President's address.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I think it will be well if I say one or two words describing the procedure which I propose to follow in the course of the proceedings to-day. This meeting of the Council, as Hon'ble Members will remember, has been called at the request of the non-official members in order that they may have an opportunity of expressing their opinions upon the Reform Scheme. Under those circumstances since it is the opinions of the non-official members that we are to receive I have asked the official members of the Council either to abstain from attending or if they attend to take no part in the proceedings. At the same time Government are naturally anxious to give to the Council any assistance which they may require, and all the members of the Government are therefore present and should they be able to assist the Council in their deliberations by giving them informations as to facts upon any point which may crop up they will be very pleased to do so. But apart from that they will make no attempt of any kind to influence the decision of the Council. I should like to call the attention of Hon'ble Members before we start on our discussions to items Nos. 10, 11 and 12 which stand upon the agenda paper. The proposal there put forward is that the non-official members should resolve themselves into a Committee for the purpose of considering the Reform Scheme and submitting a report thereon to the Government of Bengal. I would point out to Hon'ble Members that if any such resolution is carried it would render any further proceedings in open Council to-day somewhat irregular. It would indeed be wholly contrary to the recognised practice of deliberative assemblies, for the Council to hold a debate and record its decisions upon the matters under discussion, and after having done so, to resolve itself into a committee for the same purpose. There is one obvious objection to such a proceeding which is, I think, of itself, conclusive. The authority of the Council is superior to the authority of any committee of the Council, so that the position would be this: the Council would have recorded its decisions and with those decisions the subsequent committee could either agree or disagree. There would be no other course open to it. If it agreed with them its formation would have been thereby proved to have been superfluous. If, on the other hand, it disagreed with them, its formation would have been proved to have been both futile and mischievous—futile because its views could not prevail against the superior authority of the Council itself with which it disagreed, and mischievous because although its views could not prevail against those of the Council itself, they would obviously do much to stultify the decisions deliberately arrived at and recorded by the Council in open session. Under those circumstances it appears to me that there are only two courses open to the Council. If they decide to move item No. 10 on the agenda paper and if it is carried I should have to rule further proceedings in open Council to-day out of order. On the other hand, if the Council prefer to hold their discussion in open session to-day and to record their opinions in open session, then I shall have to rule that items Nos. 10, 11 and 12 should not be moved. I have no desire to influence the Council one way or the other. I have merely explained the position as it appears to me and I have informed you of the ruling which I shall have to give. I would suggest that Hon'ble Members should think over what I have said while we are proceeding with the first resolution which stands upon the paper and which is a resolution of a general character. In the event of the Council deciding not to move items Nos. 10, 11 or 12 but to hold their discussion in open Council to-day, I would point out that there are, of course, a large number of motions on the paper which are covered by others. Then again there are some motions standing on the paper which it will be more convenient to move as amendments to other substantive motions. I shall be prepared to give rulings on each item so far as that is concerned as it comes up for discussion. I will now call upon the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur to move the first resolution."

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"May I, with Your Excellency's leave, say a few words so far as I am concerned. My lord, in sending this resolution I was only following the line which was followed in the Supreme Council at Simla with notable results. Having regard, however, to what Your Excellency has just been pleased to say and having regard to the discussion which I have just had with some of my European friends here, I am prepared to say that I would not wish to move my resolution if it really retards business. I do not know what my other colleagues would do....."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Order, order. I think it would be more in order if the Hon'ble Member will make any observation on that point when I call on him when we reach item No. 10."

THE VICTORY RESOLUTION.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"An Hon'ble Member has asked my permission to move formally a resolution which he desires to submit to the Council and which under the exceptional circumstances at the present time I am prepared to admit."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"On behalf of the Indian members, I beg to submit the following resolution :—

'This Council receives with profound joy the happy news of the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany marking the final victory of the allied army after four long years of strenuous fighting for the vindication of the cause of liberty and freedom, and is grateful to His Excellency the Viceroy for his kind communication on behalf of India to His Majesty the King-Emperor of the exact feelings of His Majesty's Indian subjects at this hour ; this Council further very gratefully appreciates the announcement that India will be represented and her interest protected at the Peace Conference.'

I need not say much on the resolution. It is a very happy hour no doubt. It is the final triumph of justice over violence. The Prussian militarism which it was sought at the very outset of the war to crush has been crushed, and, I believe, militarism with all the horrors of its vandalism has now come to an end ; and I hope Your Excellency will accept our appreciation of the situation as well as the great faith which the Government has shown us particularly by receiving one of the representatives of India to represent her interests at the coming Peace Conference."

Victory Resolution ; Resolutions.

Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri; Mr. P. C. Mitter; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari; Mr. Crum; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur.

The Hon'ble MR. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

“ On behalf of the Muhammadans especially I have the greatest pleasure in supporting this resolution and in expressing the sense of its extreme satisfaction at the conclusion of the peace.”

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said :—

“ As the representative of the landholders' interests in this Council I have much pleasure in associating myself with the resolution.”

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

“ Representing the citizens of Calcutta in this Council I have much pleasure in associating myself with the resolution which has been so ably moved by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.”

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

“ ‘ We want King George ’. That was the cry raised by the crowd which assembled before the Buckingham Palace when the terms of the armistice were announced. In the sense that I read the call, it was a fitting counterblast in advance to the world-wide revolutionary ideas preceding and following the armistice. His Excellency the Viceroy has done exceedingly well—if one may say so without impertinence—to give expression to the feelings of unalterable loyalty of India towards the Throne and the person of His Majesty the King-Emperor. India whole-heartedly rejoices with the Empire at the approaching peace and all that it would stand for towards progress, civilization, humanity and righteousness.”

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM said :—

“ I should like to associate myself with the resolution proposed by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. I am sure we are all unanimous in congratulating the Viceroy and the British Empire on the great victory that they have won.”

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

“ As a representative of the Municipalities in the mufassal I am glad to associate myself with the object of the resolution and I heartily support it.”

The resolution was then put and unanimously agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM Nos. 2 AND 6.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER GHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

“ This Council is of opinion that the Constitutional Reform proposals laid before this country and the Parliament in England, by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State for India, are a genuine effort and a definite advance towards the progressive realization of responsible Government in India.”

He said :—“ Peace reigns over the earth. The world's tribulation has come to an end, and people of every land, except perhaps those of an accursed country, are beaming with joy. By the heroic part which England has played in the greatest war since the birth of humanity, she has more than justified the old saying, 'righteousness exalteth a nation.' Good will to mankind, especially to India, England has not only expressed in words and declarations during the progress of the war, but she has during that period made a serious effort to raise us in the scale of nations by devising a workable scheme of progressive self-government for this ancient land within the British Empire. Her promises will no doubt be fulfilled, and now that the distractions of war are over, we of the older generation will live the remaining span of our life, in the hope that, through God's blessing and England's generosity, we shall soon have the privilege of administering our own affairs to some extent. This hope we have been cherishing in our mind since the memorable declaration in the House of Commons made on the 20th day of August, 1917. There was then, however, one cause of uneasiness. With all our faith in the might of England and of her allies in the field at that time, there was no near vision of victory, and our political life was bound up with decisive success to their arms. This uneasiness did not trouble the Cabinet at Home and England's Minister and India's Viceroy who were commissioned to formulate a workable scheme have between them produced one which is certainly a genuine effort to give the people of this country a measure of self-government hedged in no doubt by conditions dictated by considerations of prudence and caution, but not of mistrust. It is a distinct, definite and substantial step towards the gradual and progressive realization of responsible government, as promised in the declaration of the Cabinet made in August 1917, for which we cannot be too grateful to the illustrious authors of the Reform proposals. The scheme will be as it were an inclined plane to us which is bound to lead us to full responsible government at no distant time. Probably there will be a weaker degree of efficiency in the administration of affairs connected with transferred subjects in the beginning, and probably there will be more mistakes than when their conduct was in the hands of British Civil Service men. Mistakes and the remedying of the evil arising out of mistakes are a part in the growth of a nation, and such a state of things in the near future has to be tolerated as a normal state leading to better things. The illiteracy of the masses for which the East India Company and subsequently the Crown are responsible, ought not to stand in the way of the introduction of representative government in this country. The political reforms of 1832 and 1868 in England were introduced when the masses there were no better. But this educational and social defect did not stand in the way of democracy in that country, and the democratic plunge made by Mr. Disraeli in 1868 led to the passing of Mr. Forster's Education Act in 1870. In the matter of mass education in India, with the fate of Gokhale's Education Bill of 1910 before our eyes, I can only say that not till there is some sort of self-government in the matter of finances and primary education, the dumb millions will ever see the light of knowledge, and it would be arguing in a circle and it would not be fair to say, you cannot approve of the introduction of representative government because in the beginning it will be an oligarchy and not democracy. People of the last conquering nation—the British—do not choose to live permanently in this land as their predecessors the Moguls and Pathans did. If they did that, they would have felt that their interests and our interests are identical, and this country would have got a representative and responsible Government long ago. As it is, the European commercial community, if they had their own way, would put off the introduction of any form of self-government in their day. People in England are more generous in instincts. I appeal to my European friends here—and they are all picked men—to forsake their narrowness, to rise equal to the occasion and join in the holy work of the inauguration of responsible government in this ancient land of the Aryans."

Resolutions.

The President ; Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Rai Debender Chander Ghose Bahadur.

The PRESIDENT said :—

“ I would call attention of the Hon'ble Members to the fact that items Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 are all covered by the motion which is now before the Council. It will not be in order, therefore, to move any of these motions but any Hon'ble Member, of course, can speak upon the motion which is now before us. There is a small difference in one or two of the motions to which I have referred in which one or two Hon'ble Members desire to point out that the Reform Scheme may be imperfect or defective in certain respects. It will be open, therefore, for the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, if he wishes it, to move as an amendment to the motion now before us the following :—

“ To insert after the words “ Secretary of State for India ” in line 3 of the original motion the following words—“ even though they may be imperfect or defective in certain respects.” ”

If the Hon'ble Member wishes to move that as an amendment he should do so now.”

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

“ May I suggest that if the resolution standing in my name is made a part of the original motion, then it will not be necessary for me to move an amendment.”

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

“ I beg to submit, my lord, that my resolution is differently worded. My resolution begins with the same words as his, but it is otherwise quite different.”

The PRESIDENT said :—

“ I am prepared to accept the suggestion of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. He will move his resolution as an amendment to the original motion.”

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved, by way of amendment, that the following be added to the resolution, namely :—

“ and also desires to record and offer its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India for their Reform proposals.”

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said :—

“ I accept the amendment.”

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

“ My lord, while the Council welcomes the first modification on the resolution, I desire to draw attention to the second paragraph of the resolution.”

The PRESIDENT said :—

“ If the Hon'ble Member reads out the exact amendment which he wishes to move I will consider it. In the meantime the discussion on the main point may continue.”

Resolutions.

Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur ; The President ; Babu Mahendra Nath Ray.

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My lord, I have accepted the first portion of my hon'ble friend's resolution, but I have got another clause in my resolution which is 'and it is further of opinion that the Government should adhere to the policy and principle of responsible Government which have dictated those proposals and give effect to them, with such modifications and improvements as have been urged by the majority of the Indian public, in fulfilment of the memorable declaration of the 20th August, 1917.' This is my addition. If my hon'ble friend will accept it I believe the debate may go on upon his resolution as a whole."

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said :—

"I have felt some difficulty in accepting the proposed amendment : it appears to me to be a little vague and indefinite and that is why it is difficult to agree with my hon'ble friend."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"In that case, subject to Your Excellency's decision. I shall have to move it as an independent resolution."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I think the amendment which the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is about to move will cover the point suggested by the Hon'ble Member. I understand that the Rai Bahadur would like to move the second part of item No. 7 as a separate motion. I think that will probably meet the Hon'ble Member's object."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My lord, the motion which is before the Council and which, in terms, is similar to item No. 5 which stands in my name, and which is probably identical with the one before the Council, is made with a special point of view which I shall respectfully ask the Council not to overlook. The educated Indians who have expressed their opinion on the Reform proposals are generally agreed that they should be accepted, but they suggest that they should be accepted with certain important modifications, especially in the direction of the Government of India being made more responsible to the Representative Assemblies : but many of us are of opinion and hold that even if such modifications are not conceded at present we should be content with the reforms as proposed in the report as a substantial first instalment. It was with that point of view that I drafted the resolution which stood in my name, and I take it that is also the point of view from which my hon'ble friend, Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, made his motion. Let it, therefore, be distinctly understood that the motion which has been put before the Council which is substantially the same as the motion of which I had given notice takes this position and takes this position with perfect clearness. So far as educated India has expressed itself, it has said that certain important modifications, specially in respect of the Government of India, are desirable, but it does not say that even if such modifications are not allowed at the present moment, the people do not desire to have the Reform proposals as they are embodied in the Report."

Your Excellency, the only additional observation which with Your Excellency's leave I would venture to make before the Council is this : We cannot ignore the chief objections which have been urged against the Reform proposals as embodied in the Report and with Your Excellency's leave I shall notice only two of them. It is said that the reforms are demanded only by a very small minority of people, the educated and the higher classes, and that

Resolutions.Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar:

India is not and ought not to be the home of democracy. Of the many eminent critics who have said so one may single out two very distinguished names—Lord Sydenham, a great Engineer and the ex-Governor of Bombay, and Sir John Hewett, a distinguished member of the Indian Civil Service and an ex-Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces. The Times of London never said a wiser thing than when it referred, in refutation of this view, to Japan. We all remember that before representative Government was granted to Japan 30 years ago the reformers who fought for it consisted of a very small proportion of the population, the Samurai, and a small band of young men and thinkers who had returned from a direct observation of the working of the constitutional system in Europe and America. I am quoting Captain Brinkley, the famous authority on Japan, who says 'The bulk of the people—the agricultural, the industrial and mercantile classes—remained outside the sphere of politics not taking any serious interest in the great questions of the time.' And Constitutional Government in Japan has proved a success. The lessons of the great war which is just over ought not to be lost upon us. It has brought home the triumph of responsible Government all over the world. The other objection which has been very strongly urged by the two distinguished statesmen I have just named and others appears to me to be this—that the proposals, if adopted, will lead to complications in the administrative machinery. It is said, for instance, that one of the most important reforms proposed—that dual system of reserved and transferred subjects—will lead to serious complications in practice, and the ex-Governor of Bombay actually said that as the Indian genius excels in intrigue Indian legislators will take advantage of such complications to oppress his fellow countrymen. I have no doubt that the British people would refuse to listen to such suggestions but will accept the unavoidable complications which are due to the very necessities of the case. These complications are a compromise between, on the one hand, the paramount duty of the Executive Government to safeguard the interests of peace, order and good government and, on the other hand, the necessity of at least a partial realisation of responsible government in India as a first step in accordance with the announcement of the 20th August. The people must be taught, as my hon'ble friend the mover has already said, in the art of self-government. Your Excellency, with these words I shall support the motion of my hon'ble friend Rai Debender Chunder Ghosh Bahadur, and the motion which stands in my name, No. 5, which is practically identical with No. 2, necessarily drops."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My lord, I have already said in my note submitted to Government that it is impossible to rise from a calm and dispassionate perusal of the elaborate and masterly report of the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy without being profoundly impressed with the sincerity and genuineness of the policy which have dictated the proposals formulated in it. It cannot be doubted that these proposals, however imperfect or defective they may be, are honestly intended to form the nucleus of a constitution which, if whole-heartedly and systematically fostered and developed, is purely calculated to prove at no distant time a real and substantial measure of responsible government in India. It is easy to point out defects of these proposals—in fact the illustrious authors of the scheme nowhere claim for perfection or finality for it. It may be also possible to say that some of these proposals in their present form even go to militate to some extent against the fundamental conception of the scheme; but it would be difficult for honest criticism not to admit that the constitution as proposed is a clear and decisive advance upon the existing unconstitutional constitution of the country, and to ignore the broad fact that underlying these defective proposals there is the germ of responsible government which may require only time and opportunities to grow and expand in the process of our national evolution. My lord, it is some of these defects which has evoked sharp criticisms from certain quarters ; but I sincerely believe that those of my countrymen who have assumed a hostile attitude towards this scheme have their eyes more upon these defects than upon the real principles underlying this scheme. To some of these defects I reserve my right to speak later on when my hon'ble friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, will move his resolution as I have accepted it. But before I do so, I think I ought not to pass over some of the criticisms which have been made both here as well as in England against the scheme without a passing notice. My lord, the Reform proposals have been subjected to flanking attacks from two sides, each of which is diametrically opposite to the other. In the first place, those who are firmly wedded to the fetish of traditional prestige and are labouring under long-standing prejudices, shudder at the very idea of a change and would have none of it. The sum and substance of their opposition seems to be that they are afraid that any change in the present constitution would mean the beginning of the end of their only interests in this country and lead to the utter collapse of the British enterprise in India. My lord, I do not blame those critics. Any people similarly circumstanced and enjoying similar privileges, immunities and advantages during the lifetime of four or five generations, would be naturally seized with such fears. But is there any reasonable or rational ground for such fears? These fears were seriously expressed by the British settlers in South Africa on the eve of the South African Union, but to-day there are perhaps no more staunch supporters of the British Empire outside Great Britain than Generals Smuts and Botha, and British capitalists perhaps are now as safe in Pretoria as in London.

I admit that there is not much of cordiality at present between the two communities ; in spite of the repeated efforts of Government to bring them together, there are still lurking jealousy and distrust between the two communities, but the thing is that it is only among fellow citizens and not among fellow subjects that there can be mutual trust and confidence and it is only mutual trust and confidence which go to dissipate prejudices, harmonise relations between the different communities and inspire their minds with respect and regard for mutual interests. Those critics imagine that it would be a mistake to introduce responsible government in India at the present stage. It seems to me that not exactly knowing their own minds and having no clear idea as to when and under what circumstances they might be disposed to recommend such a change in the constitution, they simply want to take comfortable shelter under an indefinite postponement. My lord, is there any ground for such fears on their part? It is nearly 70 years to-day that Macaulay in his prophetic vision foresaw the present situation when he said that the minds and ideas of Indian people widened by western education will aspire to western institutions, but he would not be sorry for it, for he said if that day ever came he would regard it as the proudest day of England. My lord, the 'proudest day of England' has come ; unfortunately, however, there are those who, with their judgment crowded by selfish considerations or through timidity, cannot appreciate their own national greatness and are not able to rejoice in their own triumph. It is really a day of triumph of England in the East. My lord, I will not argue with the Noble Lord who, having eaten the salt of India and after either ruling or misruling an Indian province for five years, is now leading a crusade against her in England and who has engineered an organisation whose very name is a deception and fraud and which has now come forward as a desperate effort to avert the inevitable, with a grotesque suggestion for the establishment of a few model farms in a few selected districts in each province for the cultivation and demonstration of responsible government in India. My lord, it is more regrettable than surprising to find that Lord Curzon, at the top of these reactionaries, has come forward with a statement which has startled the Indian public. Speaking in the House of Commons His ex-Excellency is reported to have said that the Government has not yet committed itself to the Reform proposals. I really wonder if His Lordship really means what he says. Was not the declaration of 20th August an act of Government? And I ask in the name of my countrymen—was not the expensive mission of Mr. Montagu in pursuance of that declaration, an act of the Cabinet in England, and are we to understand that a report of a Secretary of State and a Viceroy is to be treated as a mere 'scrap of paper' without any binding force? My lord, the fortunes of war have happily changed entirely in favour of the Allies and Teutonic militarism with all the horrors of Teutonic vandalism has come down on its knees begging for peace. The complete victory is now in our hands. At such a moment—at such a happy moment—to suggest anything so mischievous as to lead the people of this country to suspect that the Government may go back upon its own pledges or promises, and to whittle down the Reform proposals would be, to say the least of it, very deplorable if not disastrous. It is to be hoped that the British public will strongly repudiate any such unworthy suggestion and strongly denounce such a change in the angle of vision. Above all, it is to be hoped that the British statesmanship will rise to the full height of the occasion and vindicate British justice and British faith which more than anything else, even more than the Grand Fleet, is the strongest bulwork of this vast Empire.

My lord, I have done. I will not take up much of Your Excellency's time. After centuries of dismal darkness in which the people lay in deathlike slumber and during which a civilization more ancient than that of Greece and Rome and even older than that of Babylon and Niniveh was swept away by successive convulsions and revolutions unparalleled in the history of nations, the light which in the early morning of this world travelled from the East to the West has come back from the West to the East and revealed to the astonished gaze of modern civilization that if there is one India above, there is another India not far beneath its surface; at the touch of that magic light the people have been rudely awakened to a sense of self-consciousness and during the last thirty years or more they have struggled hard, though struggled in vain, to recover their long-lost birthrights. After years of weary wandering in the desert the hour of deliverance has at last come and we are in view of the promised land. A calamitous war, the most terrible recorded in history in ancient or modern times, has proved a great blessing in disguise to the world; to us it has furnished an opportunity of not only conclusively proving our reasoned attachment to the British connection, but also our capacity to share the burdens of that connection as equal partners of this vast Empire. To the British public it has revealed the fact that if the liberties of the great nations of the world have to be maintained, those of the smaller and the less fortunate ones must also be respected. It has been truly observed by the greatest political philosopher of Great Britain that a great Empire and a little mind go ill together. Let England extend the right hand of fellowship to us, and we shall grasp it with all the fervour and warmth of an Indian heart, and the Indian heart is as warm as the Indian sun. Let her raise us from the position of British subjects to the proud position of British citizens and she may rest assured that India and England will ever remain indissolubly bound together by hooks of steel."

The Hon'ble RAJA HRISHIKESH LAHA said :—

"Your Excellency, the memorable announcement made by His Majesty's Government on the 20th August, 1917, has been taken as the basis of the impending reforms, and we have to see as to how far the reforms now proposed seek to give practical effect to the announcement which has been truly characterised as 'making the end of the epoch and the beginning of a new one.' The changes proposed and the modifications suggested in the present system of administration are intended, as I understand, to place India in a position to reach the final goal of responsible government within a measurable distance of time. It is for the first time in the annals of British Administration in India that the desire for self-determination on the part of the people has been recognised by the authorities as the natural outcome of the work of a hundred and fifty years of British rule, and the aim of the illustrious authors of the Report in formulating the scheme which is now before the country is obviously that 'of enabling Indians in so far as they attain responsibilities to determine for themselves what they want done and how they want it to be done,' and for this the people have every reason to be grateful to them. It is but meet that my countrymen should be extremely grateful to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India for the genuine spirit of sympathy with the hopes and aspirations of the people which they have evinced in this momentous document.

So far as the present system of Government is concerned, three defects have been pointed out in the Report, viz., (1) that the present machinery no longer meets the needs of time, (2) that it works slowly, and (3) that it produces irritation. The people fully endorse this view and the reforms proposed will be acceptable to them in proportion as they seek to or succeed in removing those defects from the body politic.

We have no desire to make any detailed criticism of the scheme, and while we reserve to ourselves the right to take exception to such of the details as may call for amendment, we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the scheme as a whole, expressing as it does the intention of the illustrious authors, is to open wide to the people of this country the gates of opportunity, and if the educated classes would only show their fitness by their integrity, energy and public spirit in the faithful discharge of their public duties, the clear conception of India's future as summed up in paragraph 349 as stated below stands to be realised within a measurable distance of time.

Our conception of the eventual future of India is sisterhood of States, self-governing in all matters of purely local or provincial interest, in some cases corresponding to existing provinces, in others perhaps modified in area according to the character and economic interests of their people. Over this congeries of States would preside a central Government, increasingly representative of and responsible to the people of all of them; dealing with matters, both internal and external, of common interest to the whole of India; acting as arbiter in inter-state relations, and representing the interests of all India on equal terms with the self-governing units of the British Empire.

We must always keep the above ideal in view and if at the commencement we can pilot the ship through the shoals and narrows and reach port in safety our claims to higher powers and preferment would be indisputable.

There are two points to which a brief reference is made in the Report but which have been unfortunately left out undisposed of as having been outside the purview of the Report, viz.: (1) the Army, (2) Industries and Tariffs. Both these are of vital importance to India, if she has to occupy and retain her position in the world as a self-governing unit of the British Empire. The two most essential conditions of a self-governing country must be fulfilled, namely, that it should be able to defend itself and secondly, that it should be self-contained. To achieve these ends it is absolutely necessary that the future military and the industrial policy of the Government must be radically changed and definitely settled: as for the military policy of the Government it has long been a source of great disappointment to the people, and the whole country is grateful to His Majesty's Government for the announcement that 'the bar which has hitherto prevented the admission of Indians to command ranks in His Majesty's Army should be removed.' I would rather suggest that it should be expressly provided that no racial bars shall henceforth exist in regulations for appointment to the military service, and that in accordance with the statement of the authors 'it is not enough merely to assert a principle, we must act on it' and 'that a considerable number of commissions should be given,' a liberal percentage should be fixed to satisfy popular demand.

With regard to the second point, namely, the question of industries and tariffs, I need only say that the authors of the Report have truly voiced the opinion of the Indian public on the subject in paragraph 342. India demands fiscal autonomy as nothing short of that will enable India to stand upon its own legs. As stated in the Report 'India rightly wishes to find another substantial base than that of the source for Indian Revenue and it turns to a tariff to provide one.' Unless fiscal autonomy is granted to India and until the Government of India is allowed to pursue its own policy with the sole object of improving India's own industries and commerce, the resources of the Indian Government could never be sufficiently developed to cope with the fresh responsibilities which the new reform scheme will entail. The demand for fiscal autonomy on the part of India is genuine and in the very interest of the country it is essential. It is hoped that His Majesty's Government and the British Parliament will realise this, and under the new scheme of reforms the Government of India will be authorised to control their own fiscal policy.

I cannot do better than conclude my remarks in the words of His Excellency the Viceroy 'Diversity of opinion there must always be; diversity indeed is the very law of life. But there is a higher law still, the law of unity, and it is the task of the Council to reconcile the many divergent interests of India into one whole and to bring her ever nearer to the goal towards which we are all striving.' I hope His Excellency's anticipation will be verified and that by a spirit of sympathy and co-operation the different races will do their utmost to bring about the happy consummation of the scheme which is expected to bring contentment to the people of the country. We must record our general approval of this epoch-making measure. It immediately gives us much that we had hardly dreamt of before and promises us more in the not distant future. It marks a satisfactory advance upon the past policy and professions of our rulers, and holds up before our eyes a glorious vision of the future which will mark the fulfilment of England's mission in India than which a nobler one has never inspired the energies of man or deserved to win the blessings of the Most High."

The Hon'ble DR. ABDULLA-AL-MAMUN SUHRAWARDY said :—

"I rise to support the resolution before the House. I have no hesitation in declaring that the Reforms constitute a distinct advance upon existing conditions and mark a substantial step towards the progressive realisation of the goal of responsible government. But I cannot lend my whole-hearted support to the resolution without inviting Your Excellency's attention to the keen sense of disappointment, dissatisfaction and dismay with which the Reforms are received by Muslims of all shades of opinion. I cannot sit down without placing prominently before Your Excellency the principal modifications which the Muslims demand and without which the Reforms lose their significance for them.

The Muslim demands have been placed before Government in forcible terms by the All-India Muslim Association, and the Central National Muhammadan Association, and I need not repeat them here. All that I need say is to declare my full concurrence with the views expressed by these two important Muslim Associations. But I shall, with Your Excellency's permission, dwell on one of the main demands in order to show that the Muslims are not an unreasonable people, that they have no desire to retard the progress and arrest the growth of national sentiment in India, but that they have a just cause for alarm and discontent. That demand is the demand for the adequate representation of Muslims through communal electorates. Let me briefly recount the history of this demand. It was in October 1906 that the first sign of the awakening of Muslim political consciousness became distinctly visible. It was in that year that the memorable Muslim deputation headed by His Highness the Aga Khan waited upon His Excellency Lord Minto and obtained from him those words of assurance of the protection of Muslim political rights and interests as a community that are justly regarded by them as the Magna Charta of the political rights and liberties of minorities. The assurance given by Lord Minto was confirmed by Lord Morley in the House of Commons in the following words :—

'The Muhammadans demand three things. I had the pleasure of receiving a deputation from them and I know very well what is in their minds.

They demand the election of their own representatives to these Councils in all the stages just as in Cyprus, where, I think, the Muhammadans vote by themselves Secondly, they want a number of seats in excess of their numerical strength. These two demands we are quite ready, and intend, to meet in full.'

Your Excellency is well aware that in spite of the assurance thus given in clear and unmistakable terms statements were made by persons in authority both in India and in England which 'created a suspicion in Muslim minds that these promises were liable to violation, that the Government in England were deliberately trying to find a way out of redeeming the express pledges they had given to various Muhammadan deputations which attended upon the Viceroy and the Secretary of State.' However, the Minto-Morley Reforms came and our own Council is a standing testimony of the way in which pledges given to Muslims were redeemed. In a province which may well be described a Muhammadan province we are given only five seats through communal electorates and we are given the very remote and distant chance of returning as many Muslims as we can through mixed electorates. The result is that there are only six elected Muslim members in the Council to-day against seventeen Hindu and five European elected members. It is thus that the Muslim demands have been met in full by Lord Morley. Far from assuring us a number of seats in excess of our numerical strength, he has allotted us a number of seats far below it. Yet the Muslims acquiesced in the arrangement and accepted the Morley-Minto Reforms without murmur.

The Muslim attitude continued acquiescent till the fateful 12th of December 1911—a day which is the starting-point of that strong current of Muslim dissatisfaction and discontent which culminated in the Congress-League Concordat of December 1916. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal came as a severe shock to the faith of the Muslims in the Government. Whether the revelation of the dangerous secret that the pledges of a Governor-General or a Secretary of State can be broken by his successor, whether this breach of faith has inspired others with greater trust and confidence in the words of Ministers and Viceroys, I do not care to ascertain. But this unsettling of a settled fact has undoubtedly shattered the implicit faith of Muslims in Government and has made them extremely suspicious of Government promises. Then came the world-wide war which has happily just terminated in the unqualified triumph of the principles for which England arrayed herself on the side of the Allies—the principles of justice and humanity, the defence of the rights of small and weak nations and the sanctity of pledges and promises. The participation of Turkey in the war followed and with it there has grown 'a feeling among Muslims that Government is less mindful of their interests than in the past.' In the appointment of only one Muslim out of three Indians in the Secretary of State's Council, the absence of a Muslim representative from the War Cabinets and the Peace Conference although the future of the sacred places of Islam—Mecca, Medina, Baghdad, Kerbela and Jerusalem—is involved, the absence of a Muslim in the India Council to-day in the place of Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad—these, amongst others, are regarded as indications of Government's change of attitude towards Muslim.

The Indian Muslim Association in its address to the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy expressed itself as follows:—

In conclusion, we venture to express the hope that you will redeem in full the promise Lord Morley had given us and recognise the just claims of our community. We do not rest our claims on any concession or favour granted by the Great Moguls to the East India Company. We do not base our demands on any Sanad or Firman of Shah Jahan, Alamgir or Shah Alam—faded and forgotten parchments, grown musty with the march of time. But we do base and rest our claims and demands on the assurances given and accorded to us by responsible ministers of the Crown and representatives of His Majesty the King-Emperor whose utterances are fresh in the memory of living men. In considering our claims, we beg of you to remember that they rest not only on the numerical strength of the followers of Islam, great as it is in India, and greater still in the British Empire; not only on their historic and political importance, great as it is in this country, and greater still in the history of three different continents, but also on our profound, continued and proved loyalty to the person and throne of the King-Emperor, a loyalty which has stood the severest of tests on many occasion in peace and war.

But to their great disappointment the Muslims find their loyalty strangely rewarded. They find a homily preached to them on the evils of communal representation: 'It is against the teachings of history.' The history of what nation, what country, one naturally asks? With due respects to the authors of the Report, I submit that their conclusions are due to a misreading of the teachings of history. If one goes to history for assistance one stands upon dangerous grounds. In the history of what nation, and of what country, have we got an example of the system of Government which is offered under the reforms scheme? We cannot find a historic precedent and example anywhere. The only reasonable reply to a demand for historic example would be that the conditions and circumstances of India are unique and unprecedented. It is on these unique and unprecedented conditions and circumstances peculiar to India that the Muslims base their claims for communal representation. 'It perpetuates class divisions.' This proposition provokes the smile of every student of Indian history. Class and caste divisions stereotyped in the adamant mould of immemorial custom going back to the days of Asoka and Vikramaditya and beyond, do not, for their perpetuation, stand in need of a council election every three or five years, which touches only the barest fringe of the vast population of India. Finally the authors of the report take away with the left hand what they grudgingly give with the right. They plainly indicate that the communal representation granted to Muslims is temporary and liable to be withdrawn. Paragraph 262, line 8 of the Report reads as follows:—

'Lastly the Commission should consider the working of the franchise and the constitution of electorates, including the important matter of the retention of communal representation.'

Now, I ask the House, have not the Muslims just cause for alarm and discontent? My lord, I cannot do better than to conclude by quoting the words of the Raja of Mahmudabad which voice the feeling of the Muslims as truly to-day as they did in 1909 when quoted by Your Excellency in the House of Commons:—

'..... I can safely state that the general state of feeling amongst the Muhamadans at the present moment in regard to the question of their rights and privileges under the Reform Scheme. but specially in regard to the matter of a separate electorate, is one of utter confusion. They fear, however, that a great wrong is about to be inflicted upon them; that they are to be treated with an injustice wholly undeserved by them and undreamed of, and they are deeply disappointed. They are not politicians, they do not understand the language of diplomacy, they are a patient, loyal, God-fearing people, who have trusted in solemn pledge given to them by their rulers and who ask for a sign that that pledge is about to be fulfilled.'

My lord, on behalf of the Muslim community I urge that the Muslim demands be satisfied to the fullest extent possible, and that assurance be given to them in clear and unmistakable terms that this will be done. Otherwise I am afraid, with a sullen and discontented Muslim population the vast and bold experiment of responsible Government upon which we are about to embark is doomed to failure. I yield to none in my desire to see the dawn of responsible Government in India. But I know and realise that the path to responsible Government is long and weary and full of dangers and pitfalls. The Reforms, undoubtedly, mark a substantial step towards the goal of responsible Government. but it is long, long way to Delhi هنوز دلي دور است and one is liable to go astray. Let us not deviate from the path of right and justice, lest the words of the Persian poet come true:—

تو هم نرسی بکعبه ای اعرابی کن ره که تو مهروی به تورستان است

'I am afraid thou shalt never reach the Mecca of thy destination. O Bedouin, for the way thou wendest leads, not to Mecca but to Turkestan.'

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said:—

"My lord, I rise to explain the language of the resolution which stands in my name on this subject. I have stated in clear and unmistakeable language in submitting my opinion to Government that the proposals are a decided and distinctive improvement upon the existing machinery of Government, and we are grateful to the illustrious authors of this scheme. It has been suggested in several quarters that some modifications are necessary. They are necessary no doubt, but at the same time it is to be made clear to the Government that while we accept the proposals we suggest modifications only expressing a hope that there may not be any difficulty in the smooth working of the proposals and it may facilitate the early realisation of responsible government in the near future. It is better no doubt that there should be two resolutions on the subject, and I am grateful to Your Excellency in ruling that there should be one resolution for this and another in which we should suggest the modifications which we think will be necessary as I have just now stated. Doubts are expressed in some quarters that the scheme will not work well, and as stated by the previous speaker, the Moslems are not satisfied with the proposals and they apprehend that their rights and privileges will not be protected. It is to be borne in mind that this is an experimental measure and we must proceed cautiously. The announcement in the House of Commons was that this should be a progressive step towards responsible government in India and in that view the proposals have been submitted; so that we may gradually demonstrate our ability to manage affairs and that we may gradually succeed in obtaining the privileges which will now be reserved. I do not for a moment think that there will be any deviation and that the Government will not adhere to the principles enunciated in the Report, and I fully believe that they will be worked out in a sympathetic spirit to make the experiment a success. When I submitted my resolutions, there were two things uppermost in my mind; one was the reports of the two Committees which have been constituted and upon which much of the success depends, are not known; and the other was: there may be long delay as has been expressed in paragraph 289, in the latter part of which it has been stated that full responsible government will be granted to the Provincial Government first and then a beginning will be made in the Government of India; that is not the question, but there is a natural desire and the natural aspiration of our countrymen that we should be placed on an equal footing with the other Dominions. We are proud of the achievements of India in the battlefield of Mesopotamia and their material contribution in other fields of war at a very great sacrifice, and it is but natural after the demonstration of the loyalty by the people and their participation with full responsibility in the defence of the Empire, we should be granted an equal position which every self-respecting man wishes to enjoy and in that hope we express a hope that there may not be delay, and therefore we suggested modifications. It is not in the spirit that unless these modifications are made we are not prepared to accept anything; we say clearly that it is a distinct advance; but at the same time we say that some further modifications are necessary and we express a hope that the working out of the scheme by the Sub-Committees will be made in the sympathetic spirit in which the proposals have been conceived. It is in that view that while drafting this resolution, I expressed a hope after stating that it is a real advance, that this might be done. The language may be misunderstood in some quarters, and therefore I rise to clear my meaning. In fact, I fully agree with the previous speakers, but I disagree with the speaker who has just spoken before me, that it will not be carried out in the spirit in which it has been conceived, but I hope that our suggestions about the modifications will be received in the spirit in which they are offered."

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ, said :—

"My Lord, although I heartily support that portion of the resolution which seeks to record the grateful thanks of this Council to the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy for the very genuine and earnest endeavours they have made towards liberalizing India's political institutions, I regret, I cannot subscribe to the terms of the resolution in the form in which it now stands before the Council. I agree generally with the remarks that have been made by the Hon'ble Dr. Sukhāwardy regarding the Moslems' position in the proposed scheme of reforms, but I go a little further and say that although there has been a genuine effort and the sincerest appreciation of India's political aspirations, there have been reasons why the illustrious authors have not been able to succeed in propounding a scheme not only free from objections, but also free from very serious defects. My Lord, we have got to test the proposals that have been made in the light of the announcement of the 20th of August. We are all agreed that this announcement is one of the most momentous ever made in the history of India's political institutions; inasmuch as it embodies a solemn pledge that responsible government is the final goal of British rule in India. I think that if we are to accept this announcement as the fundamental basis of a scheme of reforms, we cannot go beyond the terms of the announcement itself. Looking to the terms of the announcement, we find that there is also a declaration that substantial steps towards the grant of responsible government should be taken as soon as possible, and it is in pursuance of that declaration that the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India and His Excellency the Viceroy have promulgated the present scheme of reforms. If therefore, the present scheme of reforms in the form in which they now stand do really constitute a substantial step towards responsible government I submit there is no reason why a substantial modification should be proposed, because on our own showing they fulfil the very terms of the announcement. In my opinion, once we take up that position, we stultify our own criticisms and from this point of view I beg to submit that the phrase which originally stood in the resolution which was going to be proposed by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, as regards the limitation to the scheme, should be clearly emphasized. In other words, the phrase that "although the proposals may be defective and imperfect in certain particulars" should be inserted in the resolution. My Lord, so far as the reform schemes are concerned, they have got to be taken with reference to the limitations which the distinguished authors themselves had not failed to recognise. There is the question of the communal representation. There are questions as regards limitations that have got to be placed even when some sort of responsible government is introduced, and I fully endorse the remarks of the Hon'ble Dr. Suhrawardy, that in many instances the distinguished authors have unfortunately and unconsciously it taken away with one hand what they have given with the other. After what has fallen from the Hon'ble Dr. Suhrawardy, I do not think that this Council can endorse the resolution in its present form, without some sort of limitation like the one which was suggested in the original motion of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. Without taking up the time of the Council, and without going into details, because occasion for a detailed discussion will come when individual resolutions are discussed, I propose that the words even though they may be imperfect or defected in certain respects, be added as was pointed out by Your Excellency. If this is done, I shall give my wholehearted support to the resolution. If this is not done, I shall deem it my painful duty to oppose the resolution. I do not know how my friends can say that the scheme in its present shape is a genuine and distinct advance towards the realisation of responsible government when it requires 240 resolutions in one provincial Council alone to set matters right. With these few words I beg formally to press that these words may be added to the original motion."

Resolutions.The President; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Does any Hon'ble Member second the amendment?"

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, I beg to second the motion moved by my hon'ble friend to my left, and I do not think it requires many words from me to recommend it to the Council. I agree in his statement that the very fact that we want so many modifications in the reform proposals show that it is neither perfect nor free from defects, and therefore I think the Council will accept the motion as has been moved by my hon'ble friend.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"To the original motion the following amendment has been moved :—

"That the words 'even though they may be imperfect or defective in certain respects,' be added at the end of the resolution."

Resolutions.Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

A division was taken with the following result :—

The resolution was then put in the following modified form and agreed to :—

"This Council is of opinion that the Constitutional Reform proposals laid before this country and the Parliament in England, by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State for India, are a genuine effort and a definite advance towards the progressive realization of responsible government in India, and also desires to record and offer its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India for their Reform proposals."

LIST OF BUSINESS—Items Nos. 3, 4, 5, 7 and 8.

The following resolutions were held to be covered by the debate on the previous resolution as amended and were deemed to be withdrawn :—

By the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha :—

This Council records its sense of gratitude to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for the Reform proposals formulated in their joint report, which are in accord with the memorable pronouncement made on behalf of His Majesty's Government in the House of Commons on the 20th of August, 1917, and are calculated to lead, by gradual stages, to the attainment of responsible Government.

By the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar :—

This Council is of opinion that the Reform proposals formulated by the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy, even though they may be imperfect or defective in certain respects, do constitute a distinct step in advance towards progressive realisation of Responsible Government in India; and it is further of opinion that the Government should adhere to the policy and principle of Responsible Government which have dictated those proposals and give effect to them, with such modifications and improvements as have been urged by the majority of the Indian public. in fulfilment of the memorable declaration of the 20th August, 1917.

By the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray :—

This Council is of opinion that the recommendations made by the Viceroy and the Secretary of State in the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms constitute a substantial first step towards the progressive realization of Responsible Government in India.*

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur :—

This Council tenders its grateful acknowledgments to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India for their earnest endeavour to devise a scheme of Constitutional Reforms, such as, in their opinion, would fulfil the terms of the announcement of the 20th August, 1917, and for the deep and sincere sympathy with Indian political aspirations, and the large-hearted statesmanship which they have manifested throughout their report.

By Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri :—

This Council is of opinion that—

- (a) the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms is a genuine effort for improving the existing Government machinery; and
- (b) that the scheme, if worked out in a sympathetic spirit with modifications to make it effective and to meet the natural aspirations of the country, will prove a real step towards the realization of responsible Government in India.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, by leave of the President, moved the following resolution, in place of the original resolution* which stood in his name :—

This Council desires, while welcoming the proposals generally, subject to such modifications as have been urged by the majority of the Indian public, to record its acceptance of the policy of the gradual realization of responsible Government.

He said :—

"My Lord, at the outset I desire to say one or two words with reference to what has fallen from my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. I believe that I echo the voice of the entire Indian community when I say that we all desire some modification of the scheme as published, but even if there is no modification of the scheme we are not prepared to throw it away. In such a case will the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq say 'No, we discard the scheme altogether': that is my question to him. What we want to say to the British people and the British Cabinet is that we welcome the scheme thankfully and whole-heartedly but that we should like to have some modifications

* The original resolution ran as follows :—

This Council welcomes the proposals generally, subject to such modifications as may appear feasible, and accepts the policy of the gradual realization of responsible Government.

Resolutions.Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

of the original scheme, but even if that is not granted we are prepared to accept it and that we will continue to urge modifications till they are granted and they are bound to come under the aegis of British rule. That is the position we have taken up.

The Report of His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State is one of the most thoroughly sincere documents ever placed before the Indian public. It deserves to be read, and re-read, and the more we read it, the more are we struck with the enlightened and generous statesmanship with which every line is instinct. The Report is not simply a blind plea for self-government for India. It contains a review of the past policy of the Government, takes stock of the present situation, of the present limitations and future possibilities. Even a national Government could not have written more frankly about India's political destiny and place in the Empire. I do not claim that the work of Government will in the first instance be done better than if it remained in the sole hands of Government officers. The present Constitutional Reforms have been put forward not for the improvement of administrative efficiency, but with a view to furnish an instrument of political and popular education, and to lead us on in course of time to the realisation of full responsible government. The policy hitherto has been to keep the people in perpetual leading strings, and to treat them as if they have no national rights as a political entity. It was left to His Excellency Lord Chelmsford and Mr. Montagu to inaugurate the new era of genuine self-government. To critics who point to the possibility of failures, I would reply in the words of Lord Ripon's resolution on local self-government as follows :—

'At starting, there will doubtless be many failures, calculated to discourage exaggerated hopes, and even in some cases to cast apparent discredit upon the practice of self-government itself. If, however, the officers of Government only set themselves to foster sedulously independent political life, if they accept loyally and as their own, the policy enunciated; and if they come to realise that the system really opens to them a fairer field for the exercise of administrative tact and directive energy than the autocratic system it is proposed to supersede, then it may be hoped that the period of failures will be short, and that real and substantial progress will very soon become manifest. If it be said that in some cases the experiments in this direction have not been encouraging, there is reason to fear that previous attempts have been too often overridden and practically crushed by direct though well meant, official interference.'

After all, My Lord, democratic institutions are not altogether exotic in India. It has been said that the East is the parent of municipalities. From the early days of society, the people of this country have been acquainted with forms of local self-government. The village institutions which still survive in many parts of the country are living monuments of the national capacity in this respect. It is true as was observed by Lord Ripon that the people of India are remarkably tolerant of existing facts. The people of no other country are so mild, so patient, so uncomplaining as the people of India. Even the wildest caprice, the most arbitrary conduct and the bitterest antipathy are passed over by them with the coolness of a philosopher or an ascetic. The people of India, however treated, are loyal to the backbone to the powers that be. But the time has arrived when the educated classes of India ought to be allowed a better scope to their advanced thoughts and aspirations. It is England which has educated them, and it is therefore befitting that it should accord to them the rights of educated intelligence. By recognising such rights England will fulfil her mission in the East and Lord Chelmsford and Mr. Montagu are truly representing her in the fulfilment of that mission.

We are frequently reminded that the educated classes are only a handful, and that the vast mass of the population are illiterates. Critics who advance this argument conveniently forget history. I ask how far was England educated when the Reform Bill of 1832 was passed ; how far was she educated at the time of the passing of the Act of 1867. Only since 1867 which gave household suffrage, has England possessed a system of free and compulsory education. Then again how far was Japan educated when the Samurai renounced power and popular Government was introduced. Our masses may be illiterate, but they cannot be called ignorant. The educated classes are a minority everywhere, but they are not quite so small as the handful of Europeans in whose hands are centered all authority and power. The masses, will I have no doubt, gradually understand and appreciate their new role. It would be contradicting human nature to say that man, intelligent man, will not prefer freedom to fetters in the administration of national affairs. Those who are now in leading strings will be the first to appreciate their freedom when they will see that they are no longer the slaves of the official kuzur, that as he is a tax-payer, he has the right to say how the tax paid by him is to be disposed of and that the district officer shall not be the perpetual keeper of his conscience. If once this feeling gets root in the popular mind, the people of India will become a new race of men altogether.

My Lord, it was Lord Cornwallis who reduced the chaos of British Indian administration to order by enacting the regulations. It was Lord William Bentinck who first recognised the right of the people of India to serve their country and sovereign in the higher offices of the State and this gave them a share in the practical administration of their fatherland. It was Lord Canning who established a mixed Legislative Council in which non-official members however few in number, were declared to be at liberty to discuss measures of State with the rulers of the land on an equal footing. It was Lord Ripon who accorded to the people of India the Magna Charta of local self-government. Although the Legislative Councils were expanded in the time of Lord Lansdowne it was not until about 16 years later that they were given a certain amount of representative character. It was Lord Minto and the illustrious Lord Morley who gave practical and tangible proof of the theory which had too often been overlooked in practice that colour was no bar to the highest offices of the Crown by admitting a coloured man to a share in the executive Government of India. It was Lord Hardinge and Mr. Austen Chamberlian who secured the admission of Indians to the innermost councils of the British Empire. It has now been the proud privilege of His Excellency Lord Chelmsford and the Secretary of State, Mr. Edwin Montagu, to put a coping stone to the edifice by granting to us the first substantial instalment of self-government and to help us to realise by successive stages our political destinies as an integral part of the British Empire. Their names will for ever remain enshrined in our hearts. May they stay long to carry the schemes through and to nurse into a vigorous growth the magnificent experiment connected with our national advancement.

In a large scheme of political reconstruction, acute differences of opinion are inevitable. A section of my countrymen want responsible government all at once, some want larger subjects, while some are content with only a modicum of changes. I do not propose to enumerate all the differences of opinion that divide Indian public men into opposite camps. Suffice it to say that the country as a whole welcomes the measures generally, but legitimately expects some modifications in certain directions. For instance we want that the salary and status of Ministers should be the same as those of members of Executive Councils and that Ministers should be liable to removal on an adverse vote of a substantial majority of the Legislative Council. We want that the list of transferred subjects should embrace a wide field and include all departments which afford the greatest scope for local knowledge and initiative. We want that there should be greater representation of the elected element on the Grand Committees and that resolutions of the Council on transferred subjects should be binding. Some of us want that the constitution of the Government of India should be modified on the lines of the Provincial Constitutions. A large section of my countrymen consider that additional members of the Executive Government without portfolios are not necessary, that the proposed Council of State is not required and that there is very little use of a Privy Council for India. There are some of the principal items in regard to which Indian opinion demands a change.

In the discussions of the scheme, much is said about the Home Rule party being opposed to the scheme but on a critical examination it does not seem that there is much difference in the ideals of the Home Rule party and the non-Home Rule party. My Lord, in my view every Indian is and ought to be a Home Ruler. I am myself a Home Ruler, but Home Rulers may agree to differ among themselves as to the measure of our advance to reach the desired goal of full responsible government. I am proud to say that I am a keen aspirant after the political advancement of my country, but I sincerely believe that it is, in our own interests, necessary that we should advance by successive stages, that we should be educated, trained and drilled in the art of government at each stage, so that we may march onward with firm and unfaltering steps to the promised land. This is the difference, My Lord, between me a Home Ruler and my brother Home Rulers. But unfortunately the very words Home Rule stink in the nostrils of some people. A Home Ruler is shunned as a most dangerous, seditious and disloyal element. Time will arrive when this aversion will pass away and the Home Ruler, working with a devotion, energy and patriotism will be recognised as an indispensable factor in gathering up his distracted fellow-countrymen together into one fold of a happy, contented and prosperous self-governing nation under the ægis of England. I feel justified in hoping for such a consummation when I remember how the very name of the Congress was anathema, and how the bare sight of a swadeshi rivetted the attention of the C. I. D. Happily a marvellous change of attitude has come over. I hope for a similar change in the attitude of Anglo-Indians towards my educated countrymen, who have the interest of the country at heart, and whatever their differences with individual rulers or the bureaucracy, recognise the value and the necessity of the British connection and long to remain as an integral part of the British Empire.

My Lord, Sir John Howett said the other day that India is a caste-ridden country and that, under the Reform Scheme, Brahmins will have everything in their own way. I do not know whether the statement refers to Bengal. I cannot speak of any other province, but so far as Bengal is concerned, I may say, that a more untrue statement has never been made. My Lord, I am connected with the political affairs of this country for two generations. Pardon me for my egotism when I say that I bear a name which led the public opinion of Bengal for over a quarter of a century. The bearer of that name was not only the people's representative and the trusted interpreter between the rulers and the ruled and vice versa but also the representative of the territorial aristocracy of the land and he was neither a Brahman nor a Kayastha but belonged to a humble trading caste. Another name which occurs to me, was the name of the late Dr. Mahendra Lal Sarkar, C.I.E. Your lordship is comparatively new to this country; otherwise you would have known that this great man, belonging to the agricultural class, was considered one of the leaders of thought in Bengal. He was one of our foremost public men and the Bengali public never grudged him his leadership. Then there was the Revd. Kali Charan Banerji—a convert who had renounced his caste and community—who led the public opinion of Bengal for very many years, and would have occupied the chair of the Indian National Congress had he not been cut off prematurely from among our midst. There was also the Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerji. He was persecuted when he first turned a Christian, but when the people found out the sterling qualities that were in him they chose him to be one of their leaders and he became the President of the Indian Association a public body consisting mainly of middle class and poorer middle class men. I need not multiply instances. These examples will show that so far as the Presidency over which Your Excellency presides is concerned there is no distinction between a Brahmin and a non-Brahmin in public life, and for Sir John Hewett's statement I see no justification in Bengal. Then it has been said with reference to the Indianisation of the public services that Europeans would not submit to medical treatment at the hands of Indian doctors. My Lord, in this connection I am reminded of the late Surgeon-Major Chandra, Dr. Goodeve Chakravarti and others, and how their services used to be in great demand by the European community. I don't know how Sir John Hewett in order to damn the Reform Scheme could make such a statement in the face of these facts. Let it go forth from this Council Chamber and I hope it would reach his ears, that I challenge him to contradict the statement that I make now. It has also been said that the scheme if given effect to would diminish the power and authority of the Civil Service. My Lord, are we to understand that we will always remain hewers of wood and drawers of water for the sake of seven or eight hundred members of the Indian Civil Service. My Lord, pride of race is a noble feeling—it is the mother of great deeds, but when it degenerates into a mere race antipathy it creates mischief. I know there are several members of the Indian Civil Service who can rise to the height of the occasion and can sympathise with our aspirations. I am sure the Indian Civil Service recruited as it is, from that great nation which has held aloft the standard of freedom for centuries, will adapt themselves to the altered circumstances of the time and will not grudge giving up some of the powers, which it has exercised for over a century and a half, to the Indian people who are devoted subjects of the British Crown.

In conclusion, my Lord, I welcome the scheme. I welcome it not because I hold that the bureaucracy cannot serve India any more, but because I believe that the time has come when Indians can, and should be allowed to, govern themselves under the fostering care and guidance of England. The bureaucracy has done splendid work in the past which I gratefully acknowledge, but the bureaucratic system has, as was observed by one of our public men, acted as a dead-weight on the soul of India, and cannot be prolonged without doing irreparable injury to the cause of our national development. It has been said that we lack experience, administrative capacity and the powers of initiative. But, my Lord, if we are ever to remain in our present position as irresponsible critics we will never learn to rely on our own initiative. The scheme furnishes a training ground for Indians in the art of self-government under adequate safeguards. We will learn by experience, and we will emerge stronger and wiser through our mistakes and failures and ere long develop a capacity for larger powers of responsibility in the administration of our own country."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

My lord, the first portion of the resolution which stood against my name, I have given to my hon'ble friend Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur and the second part to the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. In connection with the second portion of my resolution which is covered by the resolution just moved before Your Excellency I wished to refer to certain defects of the scheme which have given rise to sharp criticisms among certain sections of my countrymen. To a very few of these vital defects I wish to refer very briefly. My lord, the minister with the transferred subjects included in his portfolio is the most important feature of the whole scheme.

Resolutions.Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

In fact to my mind it clearly foreshadows the future cabinet form of Government in India. Unfortunately, however, it is proposed to make this minister entirely irresponsible to the Legislative Council during the tenure of his office. It is certainly not open to any reasonable objection that the minister will be appointed by the Governor; for even under the British Constitution the Premier has to be chosen by the Crown, but once he assumes office he at once becomes responsible to Parliament. That, my lord, constitutes the essence of responsible government enjoyed by Great Britain. Of course the illustrious authors of this scheme appear to be fully conscious of this defect and it is therefore proposed to put the responsibility of this irresponsible minister to its test at each general election. In the first place, such an indirect test of responsibility is perhaps not recognised in the constitution of any country which enjoys self-government. In the second place, such a limited and shadowy responsibility over the head of the elected representatives of the people would, it seems to me, defeat the avowed objects of the scheme, would eliminate the very substance of responsible government, would weaken representation and would reduce the Legislative Council to the position of a mere deliberative body without any touch with the real administration, and the worst of all is, my Lord, that such a system will leave the elected representatives of the people exactly in the same position which they now occupy, namely, that of irresponsible critics of the Government without the sense of responsible partnership in the Government, with this difference perhaps that the target of their criticisms will henceforth be shifted from the members of Your Excellency's Executive Government to this newly created minister of your Government.

My Lord, the minister ought to be somewhat responsible to the Legislative Council. As an additional safeguard it may be provided that he shall not be liable to resign his office except by a very substantial majority of votes, say of two-thirds of the members and as a further safeguard it may be provided that he shall not be liable to resign his office except in certain important matters to be determined by the Governor or the President of the Council.

My lord, these safeguards ought to satisfy the most cautious Government. Without some such responsibility the minister, I am afraid, will only add one more irresponsible Indian official in the higher administration of the country. I therefore cannot too strongly urge the necessity of making the minister to some extent responsible to the Legislative Council.

My lord, it is justly proposed to make the electorates as large and as wide as possible and in a country like this where the electorates must be varied and many it would not be at all difficult even for the most unpopular minister, with his official prestige and support at his back, to get himself returned through one of these electorates. Last of all Your Excellency will consider that the hydra-headed mass in no country are ever so much guided by judgment but are led by various extraneous influences, and it would be too much to expect them to form a correct estimate of the work done by the minister after a lapse of five years. Under all these conditions and circumstances I earnestly hope that the great Reform may not be reduced to a disappointing minimum by making the minister entirely irresponsible to the Council.

My lord, as regards the Grand Committee I have been unable to satisfy myself as to the necessity for its introduction. It seems to me that it is going to be a grand nonentity. It will have no vote and it will simply encumber the machinery of the Government. If a difference arises in respect to any matter or Bill or motion referring to a reserved subject, the matter could be referred to the Supreme Government for their decision which should be final. My lord, I am one of those who are in favour of having a division between the reserved and transferred subjects at the very outset. You have

Resolutions.Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

'Law and Justice' as reserved subjects and I submit that the reservation should be preceded by a complete separation of the Judicial and the Executive functions. The scheme stands emphatically for good Government and I do not know what other measure can be given effect to for the purpose of good government more effectually than this separation. The matter has been before the Council for the last 30 years, and it is a matter of great regret to me that in the report which is now before us the matter has been altogether lost sight of both by the Secretary of State and the Viceroy. There is no mention of it in the scheme.

I find that there is another subject mentioned in the reserved list which is 'Appointment.' If I understand that all the appointments are meant to be reserved, then I submit that a serious injustice will be done to the minister. As regards appointments connected with the departments proposed to be transferred to him, I think he should have a potential voice, otherwise he will only be a more figurehead and his position will be an extremely awkward one.

The next point to which I would draw your attention is the Public Services. It is gratifying to find that it is proposed to increase the percentage of persons in the Public Services recruited in this country, but the report is silent as to the method of their recruitment. I hope and trust it will be by open competitive examination. Unless this is done then the ever-increasing percentage of recruitment in India will be a fruitful source of ever-increasing demoralisation in the public services.

My lord, these are some of the defects to which I draw the attention of the Hon'ble Members though there are other defects too. I believe however that they will be fully considered by the Committee which it is proposed to appoint in this House. However, I need not take the time of the Council any further. I hope and trust that this great experiment which is going to be made will prove success and I also trust that Government will not support any scheme which stands the risk of failure. My lord, I again repeat that it is apprehended that if we make the minister to some extent responsible to the Council the position would be very intolerable. But I do not think that there is any reasonable ground for any such apprehension. A House consisting of not less than 100 members cannot be so perverse as to oppose Government for the mere fun of opposition only. I appeal to Your Excellency to consider for a moment how often have we not in this very House in our present irresponsible position stood divided amongst ourselves, how many motions, resolutions and amendments have we not lost during the last 3 years and did we lose them all because of the loud cry of noes which invariably rises in an unbroken chorus from your right or because some of the left have gone over to the right to divide them? My lord, responsibility is the strongest safeguard against lightheartedness and Co-partnership—a sovereign remedy for all political distemper. If you make the minister responsible the responsibility will be shared by all the members of the House and I daresay they will never show any vagary or lightheartedness merely for the sake of showing them. At the same time if no responsibility is attached to the minister he will stand isolated, and he will be regarded in the same light as the Hon'ble Members of the Executive Council are regarded now. There will be no danger in making him responsible but there are positive dangers in making him irresponsible. With these few words I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

"My lord, I did not intend to take any further part in the business of this Council to-day but I just want to say a word or two with reference to what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mover. I suppose I am expected to explain my position. But before I do that I would like the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to tell me whether he is going to approve my speech before it is delivered. I do not know what the total number of elected members will be, I do not know what number of seats are going to be given to my community, and before I know all these, before I know that our interests are properly safeguarded, it is impossible to say whether I accept the Reform or not. That is my position. If then he insists on knowing whether I approve of the scheme in its present shape, without the slightest change or modification, I will say 'No'. So far therefore as his question to me is concerned, I answer it with a most unqualified and emphatic negative."

Resolutions.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I have listened to the observations of my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. The resolution which has been moved by my predecessor the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur and the one moved by me are quite two distinct things as I have already explained. I want to ask the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq again—though I am sorry he will not have any chance of replying—whether he is prepared to accept the policy laid down in the report by the distinguished authors for the progressive realisation of self-government, whether the items to which we have referred are not acceptable to him and whether if he does not get all of them or some of them, having regard to our present position here, he will be quite content with the continuation of the existing situation. Of course I do not say that there are not defects in the scheme or that it cannot be improved, but I challenge my hon'ble friend to deny that definite steps are clearly laid down in the scheme—steps which if clearly followed will lead us to the goal of self-government. I do not know whether he will deny this fact but if he does, I could only attribute it to prejudice.

The Resolution was then put and agreed to.

The Council was then adjourned for lunch till 2-30 p.m.

AFTER LUNCH.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble Mr. F. W. Carter moved the following resolution :—

"This Council is of opinion while accepting the ideal of eventual self-government for India, that the present time is not opportune for making changes in the administration of the country."

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE said :—

"My lord, after the acceptance by this House of some of the resolutions this morning, I do not know how the present resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Carter can be considered by this House."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The motion of the Hon'ble Member is in order. It does not negative the decision which has already been come to by the Council in respect of the other resolutions. The Hon'ble Mr. Carter in his motion proposes to accept the ideal of self-government for India, but he wishes to record an opinion as to the time at which these steps should be taken ; that does not negative anything which has already been decided by the Council."

Resolutions.Mr. F. W. Carter ; The President.

The Hon'ble MR. F. W. CARTER said :—

"My lord, my resolution was framed before the successful completion of the war and the position has therefore changed to a certain extent ; that being so with Your Excellency's permission I will withdraw the resolution as it stands, but I should like to say a few words on the question of the time at which these reforms should be brought forward. Although the war is over and does not now fully occupy the attention of the Government of Great Britain, I still think the time is inopportune as the Government of Great Britain will now be entirely occupied with the terms of peace. The war we will all admit has been without precedent and the peace which ends it will be of a character wholly unique. I speak not merely of the infinite number of questions, territorial and otherwise, which will have to be settled with : I have in mind chiefly the fact that this is to be what no other peace has been, a final peace, a permanent settlement of world-wide disputes, a complete chaining up of the forces which drive nations into war. It looks therefore as if the Montagu-Chelmsford Scheme conceived amidst the distractions of such a war as the world has never known, is to be born amidst the distractions of a peace equally beyond the experience of mankind.

In such circumstances no Cabinet can judge it rightly, no Cabinet can secure from Parliament a well-considered verdict on the scheme. I content that the reforms cannot be rightly judged now by the Government of Great Britain. Moreover, the unseemly haste which is being displayed in appointing the Committees to consider the details under the Reforms does not allow of full consideration being given to such momentous changes in the Government of this country.

I also consider the scheme inopportune because it was not produced in response to any general demand by the peoples of India. It is practically admitted in the report that the proportion of politically minded Indians to the total population does not exceed 5 per cent. Moreover, the authors of the report clearly admit that the changes they are introducing are not in response to even a minority demand but are due simply to 'the faith that is in us.' It is this faith, the report tells us, and not any demand, which constrains them to disturb what they describe as 'the placid pathetic contentment of the masses.'

Now, had there been a general and insistent demand for some such scheme as Mr. Montagu and His Excellency Lord Chelmsford have produced, there would have been some excuse for putting forward new constitutional reforms. But there was no such demand ; they expressly disclaim having acted in response to any demand ; they declare that even if the politically minded classes were 20 per cent. of the total population, instead of only about 5 per cent., that would not have counted with them. What justification, therefore, is there for the hasty introduction of these reforms ?

The people in general do not demand them and the British Parliament cannot, under existing circumstances, judge them. The authors of the scheme are the two highest representatives of the British authorities in India and therefore all criticism in regard to them must be done away with. Much of what I have said may not be pleasing to the ears of my Indian friends. We are in favour of progressive reforms. We fully realise the natural aspirations of Indians to take a large part in the government of the country. Put the discussion of those reforms off for a year and we are ready to listen to any proposal that may be brought forward. We are not narrow-minded as my hon'ble friend Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur has said."

The PRESIDENT said : "Do I understand that the Hon'ble mover is asking or permission to withdraw his resolution ?"

The Hon'ble MR. CARTER said : " Yes, my lord."

The PRESIDENT : " Is it your pleasure that the resolution be withdrawn ? "

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR at first objected to the resolution being withdrawn, but on reconsideration withdrew his objection.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following resolution :—

" This Council is of opinion that a Committee consisting of its non-official members should be appointed to consider the Reform proposals and submit their report thereon to the Government of Bengal at an early date."

He said : " My lord, after Your Excellency's opening remarks this morning and in view of some of the difficulties that Your Excellency pointed out, I was inclined to think that it would perhaps be best for me to withdraw this motion and to let the consideration of the 240 resolutions go on in Council. This morning's experience, however, has made me change my mind ; and with Your Excellency's permission I propose to move the motion standing in my name.

My lord, there are on the business paper two other motions in similar terms. We had not had an opportunity of consulting one another, and yet three members independently thought that a matter like this is best considered in Committee. I am not acting without precedent. Such a procedure was followed with marked success in the Supreme Council and I am sure that if the Council adopts my motion there will be considerable economy of time and much needless heat will be spared. Of course as Your Excellency has pointed out, the authority of the Council is supreme and after we have done Committee work, all that would be necessary is for the report to go before the Council to be confirmed and forwarded to the proper quarter. Owing to Your Excellency's kindness we have had this debate adjourned longer than has been possible in the other Provinces. This delay had its advantages and probably its disadvantages also. But one advantage that can be claimed for the situation is that much—almost all that could be said on one side or the other—has been said in the Press, on the platform, here and in England, in Parliament and in the different Councils here, Imperial and Provincial, in the Congress and in the Conference at Bombay and various other Conferences that we have had over this question all over the country among different communities. There is hardly therefore much scope for a debate—far less a lengthy and acrimonious debate—such as is bound to be attendant upon the consideration of the question in full Council when there is so much difference of opinion. In Committees, my experience tells me—and that must be the experience of others—we get on much sooner and much more pleasantly round the table, away from limelight than in Council. If that is so, and having regard to what Your Excellency has pointed out, the overlapping nature of some of the resolutions, and the possibility of treating others as amendments would enable us to finish our work much quicker. Possibly we shall be spared some demonstrations, I shall not call of temper, but of indiscretion, of which we have had illustrations this morning—questionings and cross-questionings across the floor of this Council do not advance the deliberations such as those in which we are engaged. However fitting and necessary they may be deemed outside the Council they are useless and gratuitous in Council. Ours is not propaganda but consultative work. All that need be done in Committee is to enunciate the contending propositions and quietly to take the opinions of the members or to take their votes and formulate a business-like report amidst serene peace environments. We have all sent our individual opinions to the Government as Members of Council, to be forwarded to the authorities; and the resolutions of this council obtained in the way I indicate will be before the authorities; they must be put as majority resolutions as happened this morning, as we cannot expect to be unanimous with regard to all of them. Having regard to those circumstances, my lord, I should like to move that the Committee that I propose be appointed with instructions to submit an early report."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, my motion stands on the same lines as those of my friend the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. The difficulty was this, my lord, that during the Puja time we were scattered in different places and therefore could not meet and come to a definite understanding as regards the resolutions to be moved, and that is why Your Excellency has before this Council 240 motions on the different items. I support the motion which is practically the same as mine to appoint a Committee of non-official members. In the Committee long speeches will be avoided, and as we have all got our views already settled one way or the other, we shall probably be able to submit a joint report even if there be some dissentients on some points. For these reasons I support this resolution and I do hope that our hon'ble colleagues of the European committee will cordially join and help us in drawing up a unanimous report for the consideration of the authorities. That will have a very marked effect on the country at the present moment as showing their practical sympathy with our aspirations to attain the goal of self-government within the Empire."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My lord, as I understand the motion the report of the Committee is to be submitted to the Government of Bengal and not to this Council. I think I am right in this view."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"As the Hon'ble Mr. Ray has pointed out that is the form of the motion before the Council."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"I do not know, my lord, whether this is in order, but perhaps in order to save time it would be better if the Committee were permitted to submit their report direct to the Government of Bengal. I do not know however whether this is in order and whether the report of a Committee of this House can be submitted directly to the Government of Bengal."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I see no objection to that under the particular circumstances under which we are meeting now. This is not exactly a meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council in the ordinary sense, because I have asked the official members to take no part in the proceedings. Under the circumstances I see no objection if it is the desire of the non-official members to submit their report to Government instead of to the Council."

Resolutions.

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhari; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHARI said :—

"My lord, I support the motion moved by my hon'ble friend. When I submitted my resolution it struck me whether I should state that the report should be submitted to this Council or to the Government of Bengal. Without saying anything I simply said 'to make their recommendations' in whatever shape it may be thought convenient. As Your Excellency has observed that is the real form—that the recommendations should be submitted to the Government of Bengal; and though my friend suggests that they may be put up before this Council again for confirmation, I think if all the non-official members form a Committee and make their recommendations they may be submitted to Your Excellency and then dealt with and submitted to the Government of India as Your Excellency thinks fit and proper. I support the motion as it would be convenient to deal with the recommendations in the Committee—probably no lengthy discussions will be necessary there, and that will be the more convenient form of dealing with the subject."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My lord, I have welcomed the proposals though I have suggested a few modifications. I have suggested the modifications because I welcome the proposals and I welcome the proposals because I consider them to be susceptible of modification and gradual improvement. The motion which has been brought forward by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has my fullest support for the very reason which Your Excellency pointed out at the opening of this Council. The question raised by my hon'ble friend to the right was to clear up whether the recommendations of the Committee will again come up before this Council for discussion. If that is to be so I do not see any use whatever of going into Committee. It will bring us again into the same troublesome discussion which we want to avoid at this Council. I think that if a Committee is formed and the whole House of non-official members go into it they will have their suggestions there and the suggestions embodied in the report by the majority ought to be sufficient for the purpose of explaining our views before Government. I do not think it will be necessary and I think it would be positively harmful if after the recommendation is made we have to discuss it again in this Council. It will make confusion worse confounded. I heartily support the motion made by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari that it should go into Committee and the Committee submit their recommendation to Your Excellency's Government and Your Excellency's Government will forward it to the Government of India and that I think is the proper procedure and in that view I heartily accept the motion which has been moved by my hon'ble friend."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My lord, I heartily support the motion which has been made. I consider it necessary that the non-official members should sit together and discuss the various modifications which are in their minds and to be in a position to submit a representation to Government. We have already submitted our individual opinions on the various points that have been raised, and it would be far better if, by the light of the representations which we have individually put forward, we also jointly discuss the various questions at issue. It will be very convenient if this procedure be accepted by the non-official members, both Indians and Europeans, and to come to a conclusion which will be satisfactory to all. To my mind, this procedure is a simpler one; to discuss the various resolutions which have been brought forward before the Council will entail much time ; but at the same time, if that procedure be adopted, we think that we will not be in a position to come to a satisfactory conclusion. In that view of the matter, I do support the motion which has been moved."

The Hon'ble MR. CRUM said :—

"My lord, when I came to this Council this morning I had a talk with the proposer on the question of the proposed Committee and I told him that it was my intention to oppose this motion. After this morning's debate I have however changed my mind, and I agree now that probably the most expeditious way of getting through the business would be to accept his motion. But I accept it with a proviso, and that proviso is very important. I understand Sir Deba Prasad to say that he proposes that the 'majority' report should come before the Council and be submitted to Your Excellency. Now, one advantage of discussing subjects in public, as we have been doing this morning, is that the views of the minority are also made public. If, as he suggests, the majority report is to be sent either to Government or to Council, as a report of the Committee, then I am not certainly prepared to accept the resolution, and I think that this will affect not only the position of my community which is in the minority, but also possibly all other communities which are in the minority. What I propose is that the House do go into Committee as is suggested ; but not only the majority report be submitted, but that if any gentlemen wish to submit either separately or in agreement as bodies minority reports, they could be allowed to do so and these minority reports should really carry as much weight as the majority reports as representing the views of these particular communities."

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My lord, as the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has framed his resolution it says that a Committee of the non-official members of this Council be appointed to consider the Reform proposals and submit their report to the Government of Bengal at an early date. Therefore so far as the resolution goes, he does not intend that merely the majority report should go in. No doubt in his speech he said that the majority report should go in. I entirely agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Crum that it is only proper that the majority report as well as the minority report, if any, should be sent in, and I do hope and trust that the Hon'ble Mover will accept this suggestion."

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said :—

"My lord, nothing was further from my mind than to exclude the minority report. When one talks of majority report, the minority report is always there. My resolution does not exclude minority reports being forwarded, and I fully appreciate what the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has said and I cordially accept his suggestion."

The resolution was then put and agreed.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Under these circumstances the Council will now resolve itself into a Committee of non-official members. The Hon'ble the Vice-President of the Council will be glad, as soon as I leave the chair, to take my place informally."

in case Hon'ble Members desire the assistance of Government before they start their deliberations. I shall also ask the Legislative Department and their staff to remain at the service of the Committee. It will be for the Committee to elect or nominate their own Chairman, and for the Committee to decide the hours at which they should sit. So far as the Government is concerned, there is no objection to the Committee commencing their sitting in this Chamber forthwith, and if the Committee desire the use of this Chamber on future days, they are at liberty to have it."

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"Will your Excellency fix a date within which the report should be submitted?"

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I think it would be preferable if the Committee would fix their own date, and they are at liberty to do so."

Head-quarters proposed Dhanbari

sub-division

(a) Have the Government received a representation from the people of North Tangail objecting to the election of Dhanbari as the head-quarters station of the new sub-division proposed for that area? If so, are the facts stated therein as regards the comparative advantages and disadvantages of Pingna and Dhanbari substantially correct?

(b) Have the Government finally decided to make Dhanbari the head-quarters station of the proposed sub-division? If so, upon what grounds?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

(a) The representation, which takes no account of the relative positions of the two places within the sub-division, has been received and considered, and Government still adhere to the view that Dhanbari is better suited to be the head-quarters than any other site which has been proposed, including Pingna

Timber

district.

(a) How many timber merchants are there at Rajabhatkhawa and other places in the district of Jalpaiguri carrying on timber business with the Forest Department; and how long have they been carrying on such business?

(b) Is the timber annually sold direct by the Department by public auction to the highest bidder? If so, how long has this practice been in force?

(c) Is it proposed to supersede this system by farming out the forests either annually or for a term of years to middlemen who will thus stand between the Department and the merchants, who are the actual buyers and dealers in timber?

(d) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of inquiring whether such a change in the system is, or is not, likely to result in loss both to the Government as well as to the merchants who have so far invested large sums of money in this business?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. McALPIN :—

(a) The exact number cannot be ascertained, but a very considerable number of timber merchants living at Rajabhatkhawa and other places in the district of Jalpaiguri attend auction sales held by the Forest Department for the sale of timber.

(b) Yes. The practice has been in force for 6 or 7 years.

(c) and (d) No. Government do not intend to initiate any system of sale which would be likely to prejudice the interests of Government or of the established traders."

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

(Answers to which were laid on the table).

By the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI :—

I.

(a) Is it a fact that, by certain conditions laid down by Government for the continuance of the grant-in-aid, the public of Manikganj have been deprived of the privilege of having a few elected representatives of their own on the managing committee of the Manikganj High English School?

The Manikganj High English School.

(b) If so, what are the circumstances that led to the imposition of the said conditions?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all correspondence between the District Magistrate of Dacca and the Director of Public Instruction on the question of the grant-in-aid to the Manikganj High English School and the new constitution of its managing committee?

(d) How long has the said school enjoyed the grant-in-aid, and at what rates?

(e) How many high English schools at present enjoy the grant-in-aid and in how many of them does the constitution of the managing committee not admit any elected representatives of the public as members thereof, as in the case of the Manikganj school; and for what reasons in each such case?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) The previous managing committee consisted of the Sub-divisional Officer, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, the senior Munsif, the Headmaster, a teachers' representative and five elected non-officials. There was a vacancy in 1917 owing to the resignation of one of the non-official members. On the expiry of the term of office of this committee, the Director of Public Instruction approved of its being re-constituted so as to include the Sub-divisional Officer, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, the senior Munsif, the Deputy Inspector of Schools, the Headmaster, a representative of the teachers, and four non-officials to be chosen by the District Magistrate. It was at the same time laid down that the continuance of the grant-in-aid would be conditional on the acceptance by the school authorities of a committee so reconstituted. The reconstitution was accepted by a majority of the old managing committee in April 1918.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to clause (a) of unstarred question No. XII.

(c) Government are not prepared to lay the correspondence on the table.

(d) It is understood that the school has drawn a grant-in-aid since it became a high school in 1884, but figures for the last century are not available. The school has drawn a grant-in-aid at the following rates during the present century :—

			Per mensem.
			Rs.
1901-02	40
1903-06	35
1906-08*
1908-10	110
1911	130
1912-14	120
1915-17	150 + 15 for medical supervision.

* Figures are not available.

(e) The number is 244. There are two schools of which the managing committees do not contain elected representatives of the public. In one case there is a committee drawn from the family of the founders, proprietors and managers of the school; it is considered to be in the interest of the school to have a committee so constituted. In the other case there was a dispute between two sections of the managers of the schools, and representatives of all parties requested the District Magistrate to appoint the members of the managing committee."

c. Will the Government be pleased to state—

Managing committees of aided schools.

- (a) the reasons for promulgating a new set of grant-in-aid rules and introducing certain provisions therein laying down a rigid constitution for the managing committees of aided schools and generally making for an increased amount of control by the District Magistrates over the management of schools;
- (b) whether recognized public bodies, or any non-official educationist or the school committees themselves were consulted in the matter before the promulgation of the said rules;
- (c) how many managing committees have been reconstituted in accordance therewith, in what particular school, and in what manner, since the promulgation of the said rules;
- (d) whether the said rules permit the Director of Public Instruction or the District Magistrate to dispense wholly with the election of representatives of the public as members of the managing committee of any school, and substitute nominated members therefor? If so, what are the circumstances in which such a step may be taken;
- (e) whether the constitution of any managing committee has been altered in the manner indicated above, and the right of the public or subscribers to the school or guardians of the boys to elect their representatives on the managing committee taken away? If so, where and for what reasons; and
- (f) whether any representation has been made against such a step in regard to any such school? If so, what is the purport of each such representation and by whom has it been submitted, and what, if any, action has been taken thereon?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) There were formerly different sets of grant-in-aid rules for West Bengal and Eastern Bengal, and, as it was necessary to co-ordinate them and establish uniformity, a new set of rules was approved by Government in February, 1918. The rules regarding the constitution of managing committees, to which the Hon'ble Member refers, were intended to secure the association of the District Officer with the management of secondary aided schools in his district, as well as to ensure the representation of the teaching staff, of parents and guardians of pupils and of founders and benefactors.

(b) The draft rules were circulated for opinion to Commissioners of Divisions and Inspectors of Schools. Full information as to the bodies and persons consulted by them is not available, but it appears that some District Boards, municipalities, secretaries to managing committees and non-official educationists were consulted.

(c) The rules in question were revised in September 1918. Up to date of revision, the managing committees of the following 29 schools are reported to have been constituted in accordance with their provisions, viz:—

Rules referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY to Question No. II (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY at the Council Meeting of the 26th November, 1918.

RULES FOR MANAGING COMMITTEES.

1. The management of every aided school shall, unless specially excepted by the Director, be in the hands of a Managing Committee. The Secretary of this Committee will be the corresponding agent of the school recognized by the department.

2. The minimum number of members of the Managing Committee should be 6 and the maximum 10, including the President and the Secretary. The Managing Committee unless, specially excepted by the Director, should include the following members:—

- (1) The President, who should be either the District Magistrate or some other person appointed by him.
- (2) The Headmaster of the school.
- (3) A representative of the teaching staff who should be nominated by the staff.
- (4) & (5) Two members representative of the parents and guardians of the pupils of the school.
- (6) One or more representatives of the founders or benefactors of the school.

NOTE.—The District Magistrate shall, if possible, himself take the office of President of aided high schools at district headquarters. In other cases and when the District Magistrate is unable, owing to pressure of work, to take the office of President of an aided high school, he shall appoint the President.

3. Arrangements shall be made for the election of the representative members by such methods as may appear suitable. (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Divisional offices of the Public Works Department and the District Boards and Municipalities generally confine their call for tenders to a limited number of contractors? Mode of call for tenders by certain offices

(b) Is there any practice for them anywhere to call for tenders in every matter by advertising in the newspapers or otherwise?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) and (b) So far as the Public Works Department is concerned tenders for all large and important works are invited by advertisement in the press and by notices posted in suitable public places. Several Divisions maintain lists of known and tried capable contractors who are invited to submit tenders for less important works which are not expected to attract contractors living at a distance. In the case of petty works and repairs the contractors usually employed in the Division are either invited to compete by tender or the works are distributed amongst them, as the majority of the contractors willing to take up petty works and repairs are not sufficiently educated to frame tenders, but are capable of satisfactorily carrying out works at the rates prevalent in the locality.

As regards local bodies the practice is not uniform. As a rule the call for tenders is not confined to a limited number of contractors but is open to all, but in a few District Boards and a number of municipalities the call for tenders is confined to registered contractors: it is also not uncommon for local bodies to offer contracts for petty works to local contractors only.

Tenders are advertised in the newspapers only in the case of large and costly works and the general practice is for notices to be posted in public offices and conspicuous places and sent to contractors and to have announcements made by beat of drum.”

(c) Is it the usual practice to keep a Judicial or Executive officer in charge of any particular district for such a long time? If not, why has a deviation been made in the case of Mr. Cargill?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

"(a) Yes.

(b) Six years, approximately, is the longest that any other Judge has been at his present station.

(c) The general policy of Government is to make transfers only when they are necessary in the interests of the public service. The unusual conditions arising out of the war, which have restricted the grant of leave, have tended to protract the term of individual tenures of particular appointments."

Chaukidari assessment.

(b) What considerations generally determine the amount of assessment in each case?

(c) Are there any uniform principles of general application throughout the Province in this behalf, or are such principles susceptible of variation in different areas?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table any circulars or instructions that may have been issued in regard to the principles of assessment?

(e) Are the Government aware that in many cases the rates of assessment vary greatly, to all appearance, as between neighbouring villages?

(f) How many assesseees are there in each district, including (i) Muhammadans, and (ii) Non-Muhammadans, paying an annual chaukidari tax of Rs. 4, Rs. 2, and Re. 1, respectively; and what proportion of the rural population of the respective districts do they represent?

(g) Are the Government in a position to state how many of each such class of assesseees are literate?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“(a), (f) and (g)—The material necessary to answer these questions is not immediately available, and, as its collection would involve the expenditure of an entirely disproportionate amount of time and labour, Government are not prepared to undertake it.

(b) and (c)—The general principles on which the assessment should be based are contained in sections 13 to 15 of the Village-chaukidari Act. The application of these principles rests with the panchayet of each union, and they are to this extent susceptible of variation.

(d) The Hon'ble Member is referred to rules 48 to 73 of the Chaukidari Manual. No other instructions have been issued.

(a) Are the Government aware that some vagueness is felt as to the particular authority who is to prescribe text-books for the primary and secondary schools from the present heavy list of approved text-books? Text-books for primary and secondary schools.

(b) Are the Divisional Inspectors or the District Boards and Municipalities authorized to select and prescribe text-books from the approved list for the schools in their charge?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what, if any, departure has been made in policy in this matter, and for what reasons?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) No such complaint has reached the Director of Public Instruction.

(b) Headmasters of secondary schools and local bodies in charge of primary education are authorised to select and prescribe text-books from the approved list.

(c) Formerly the Director of Public Instruction prescribed definite text-books for all schools intending to compete for scholarships, but now the Director of Public Instruction recommends a large number of approved text-books from which such schools can make their choice. The change of policy is due to the fact that the number of suitable text-books in each subject is nowadays not so limited as before and it was considered inadvisable to continue a system which conferred exceptional advantages on a small number of authors or publishers."

Will the Government be pleased to state—

(a) the circumstances in which the Manikganj High School has been placed under a managing committee entirely nominated by the District Magistrate of Dacca; The Manikganj High School.

(b) when the Manikganj High School was established, and by whom, and who have managed it since its foundation; and

(c) when the grant-in-aid was first given to the said school, and what has been the constitution of the managing committee since then?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) The school had had a bad record for some years past, and it was considered desirable that the committee should be reconstituted in order to secure better management.

(b) The school was formerly a middle school and was raised to the status of a high school in 1884 through the exertions of the then Sub-divisional Officer of Manikganj. Since then it has been managed by the Sub-divisional Officer and a committee of officials and non-officials.

(c) The school has enjoyed a grant-in-aid since its foundation. From 1886 to 1906 it was managed by a committee of 22 to 25 members consisting of officials and non-officials. In 1906 the number was limited to ten, of whom two were Government officers, two were Muhammadans, two were pleaders, two were mukhtars, one was a private medical practitioner and one was a merchant. From 1908 to 1916 the committee consisted of 2 officials, 2 members of the teaching staff, 2 pleaders, 3 mukhtars and a private medical practitioner. In 1916 the committee appointed the Deputy Superintendent of Police to a vacancy caused by the death of a mukhtar. In 1917 the committee consisted of the Sub-divisional Officer, the senior Munsif, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, the Headmaster, a teachers' representative, one pleader, two mukhtars and another private gentleman; there was one vacancy due to the resignation of a pleader. The present committee consists of the Sub-divisional Officer, the senior Munsif, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, the Deputy Inspector of Schools, the Headmaster, a teachers' representative, and 3 pleaders and mukhtars."

If so, will the Government be pleased to state the purport of the complaints made on each occasion, and whether any inquiries were made thereinto, and the result thereof?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) So far as Government are aware, the question of confirmation was not raised on the expiry of the period of probation and the Headmaster continued to hold his appointment with the concurrence of the Committee, by which he had been appointed.

(c) The Headmaster was appointed by a majority of the votes of the Committee, 5 voting for and 3 against his appointment. It is understood that the minority was of opinion that the Headmaster would be unpopular with the other teachers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“ The form of the question is ambiguous.

The acquisition of land which is held sacred injures religious feelings. But the land which is placed in trust with a view that the income derived therefrom shall be devoted to the maintenance of a mosque is not thereby made sacred, nor are Government aware that its acquisition offends any one's religious feelings.”

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. McALPIN

" (a) Government are aware that the price of cattle has risen during recent years, and that cattle are a source of livelihood to Bengal raiyats.

(b) The rise in the value of cattle is believed to be due primarily to the rise in the value of agricultural produce, which tends to the utilization of land for agriculture in preference to cattle-breeding."

(ii) if so, what was the number of those prosecutions; and

(iii) for what reasons the number of prosecutions from the reserved forests has been so very high?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

(c) It is not a fact. There is a well-defined cleared boundary line six feet wide with boundary pillars in conspicuous places and at suitable intervals between the Government khas forests and the reserved forests.

(d) (i) There were prosecutions for infringing rules in the Government khas forests.

(ii) Three, all in Fatikchari thana.

(iii) It is natural that there should be more prosecutions with reference to reserved forests than with reference to Government khas forests. In the two thanas in question the area of khas forests is small, and they contain little valuable produce. In the reserved forests supervision is strict, and the presence of a large number of casual purchasers in the reserved forests is likely to result in forest offences.”

- (c) within what time a new bridge is going to be constructed: and
- (d) what steps have been taken for the purpose of constructing a new bridge?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

" (a) The President of the Committee appointed to examine the bridge structure under Bengal Government Resolution No. 78-86 T.—I. of the 2nd May, 1918, reported to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Irrigation Department, on the 4th September, 1918, that in the opinion of the Committee, immediate steps should be taken to stop all heavy vehicles, including tramcars, from using the bridge. It was closed to heavy vehicular traffic and to the tramcars from the morning of Saturday, the 7th September, 1918. The full report of the Committee was issued on the 14th September, 1918, and after a careful consideration of the report, all vehicular traffic over the bridge was stopped from midday of the 27th September, 1918.

(b) The Commissioner of Police in July, 1913, invited the attention of Government to the congestion of traffic on the Kidderpore Bridge and its approaches and suggested that either the bridge should be considerably widened or a subsidiary bridge constructed by the Hastings Bazar. Since that time the question has been under discussion with the Corporation of Calcutta and the Calcutta Improvement Trust.

(c) It cannot be definitely stated within what time a new bridge will be constructed.

(d) As previous knowledge showed the existence of bad quicksand underneath the site of the bridge, borings have been made on the Kidderpore side of the bridge to ascertain definitely the nature of the subsoil in which the foundations for a new bridge will have to be laid. The results obtained from these borings are being examined."

(b) Is it a fact—

(iii) that the statements made in the Annual Reports on the Land-revenue Administration, and also in some of the Government resolutions thereon, regarding the net income of the landholders and the percentage which the land-revenue is said to bear to the gross rental, are incorrect and misleading?

“(a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) (i) The valuation of a raiyat's holding for cess purposes is the annual value as defined in section 4 of the Cess Act.

Will the Government be pleased to state why, in the matter of apportionment of Settlement costs, the superior landlords of permanent tenure-holders in certain districts of Bengal are exempted from paying any costs while in others they are made to pay a certain portion thereof? “The distinction is based on grounds of equity. In districts where the cases in which the landlords of permanent mokarrari tenure-holders derive substantial advantage from a record of rights of such subordinate tenures are negligible, and where the record of such subinfeudation does not present any unusual difficulty affecting the cost of its preparation, the landlords of such tenure-holders are exempted from paying any share of the cost in respect of the tenures. extension.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) the number of District Sub-registrars who are on extension of service; and

(ii) in each case for how long they have been on extension?

(b) Is it a fact that under the rules now in force extensions are not granted to any officers unless the services of those officers are indispensable or are absolutely necessary in the interest of the public service?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“(a) (i) and (ii)—

(1) Rai Sahib Tarapada Ghosh—Has extension of service for three years from the 3rd December, 1915.

(2) Khan Sahib Sattar Baksh—Has extension of service for one year from the 29th November, 1917.

(3) Babu Tarak Nath Biswas—Has extension of service for two years from the 8th February, 1917.

(b) The latest rule on the subject is contained in article 459 (b) of the Civil Service Regulations, as recently revised, which states that officers other than ministerial, who have attained the age of 55 should ordinarily be required to retire, and should not be retained in service except where unquestionable public grounds for retention exist, and there is no doubt as to the physical fitness of the officer.”

The case of Mokbul Ahmad.

Will the Government be pleased to state the facts, in detail, of the case of Mokbul Ahmad, a respectable Muhammadan of the Kustia subdivision, who was convicted in the criminal court, and was engaged in clearing the jungle in the compound of the Sub-divisional Magistrate the same afternoon?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DUVAL :—

“Mokbul Ahmad was convicted on the 10th June, 1918, of theft by the Sub-Deputy Magistrate of Kustia and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for 15 days. The conviction was upheld on appeal, and the High Court on a motion declined to interfere. He figured several times as an accused in criminal cases during the last two years and a case under section 211, I.P.C., is still pending against him.

It appears that the sentence was passed at about 1 P.M. on the 10th June. Mokbul Ahmad was taken to the court lock-up and thence at about 2 P.M. to the sub-jail which is close by. At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Deputy Superintendent of the sub-jail sent him to work with other prisoners to clear jungle (as is frequently done) in the compound of the Sub-divisional Magistrate. He worked there for about an hour.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.

The HON'BLE MR. KERR laid on the table a paper* containing the information promised in his reply to question No. III (unstarred) regarding the Nawab of Dacca's steam launch at Barisal, asked at the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council held on the 3rd September, 1918.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL, 1917.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY moved that the Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1917, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukharji Bahadur, and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation at the December meeting of the Council.

He said :—

"My Lord, in December last when I had the honour to introduce the Primary Education Bill in Your Lordship's Council, nothing gave me greater pleasure than the welcome it received from the member in charge of the education portfolio, Sir S. P. Sinha. He considered that it was a necessary and long due measure and commended my Bill on behalf of Government for the earnest consideration of the Council and the country at large and trusted that there will be a burning desire on the part of every one to contribute to the best of his capacity for the purpose of providing education for the poor. The country has had an opportunity of giving its opinion on the Bill, and it is a matter of sincere satisfaction to me and to those who are interested in the spread of primary education in the province to know that the Bill has received almost the unanimous support of officials and non-officials, public bodies, municipalities and district boards and last but not least of the Calcutta University. There is one other fact which has struck me while going through the opinions which have been forwarded to us by the Legislative Department, and it is this. The Muhammadan Associations throughout the province have with one voice given the Bill a hearty, I may say an enthusiastic, support. While approving of the principle of the Bill very valuable suggestions have been received by Government as regards its detailed provisions. They will no doubt be duly considered by the members of the Select Committee. Some have suggested that the Bill should be so modified as to extend its provisions to girls. To them I can only say let us proceed step by step. I shall first quote the opinions of some of the municipalities because the Bill will principally affect them. In my own district, the district of the 24-Parganas, the Chairman of the Naihati municipality, an European gentleman, writes as follows to the Magistrate of the district :—

'The Commissioners concur with the general principles of the Bill, and do not think that the measure is likely to result in hardship, in view of the safeguards provided in clauses 17 and 18, under which it is contemplated that the payment of fees shall not be obligatory in all cases and that primary education shall be given free of charge in any municipality where Commissioners may in their judgment impose an "Education Cess" with the previous sanction of Government, the revenue derived from it being ear-marked exclusively for this purpose.'

The Magistrate of 24-Parganas writes to the Commissioner of the Presidency Division :—'The Commissioners of the Garden Reach, Baruipore, * Vide Appendix A.

Baranagore, Baduria and Kamarhati municipalities support the Bill as it stands. The Chairmen of Navadwip, Santipore, Ranaghat and Kusteia municipalities intimate that the Commissioners of these municipalities are entirely in favour of free and compulsory primary education being introduced within the municipalities as provided in the Bill. The Chairman of the Krishnagore municipality, Rai Biswambhor Roy Bahadur, and the Vice-Chairman of the Bhatpara municipality, Rai Syama Charan Bhattacharji Bahadur, both approve of the Bill. The municipalities of the Burdwan Division generally approve of the provisions of the Bill. The Howrah municipality, under its able and enlightened Chairman, not only approves of the Bill but has expressed its willingness to impose an education cess, if necessary. The Commissioners of Bally, Hooghly-Chinsura and Serampore, Kutrung, Bansbaria and Arambag municipalities all support the Bill. The opinion of the Chairman of the Champdani municipality approved of by the other Commissioners of the municipality is as follows:—‘In my opinion the Bill, if passed, would undoubtedly in time be of the greatest advantage not only to the public but to the country itself.’ The Chairman of the Uttarpara municipality, whom I am glad to see in this Council to-day, in supporting the Bill says: ‘The importance of mass education as a necessary factor in the political life of a nation has long been recognised,’ and he quotes the following passage from Mill’s treatise on ‘Liberty’:—‘Is it not almost a self-evident axiom that the State should require and compel the education up to a certain standard of every human being who is born its citizen?’ The Chairman of the Burdwan municipality suggests that when the Primary Education Act is found to be working successfully within the urban areas, it may be extended to rural areas. The Commissioners of the Ranigunge municipality resolved at a special meeting that the provisions of the Bill should be adopted within the municipality. So also those of Kalna and Katwa.

The Commissioners of the Midnapore municipality passed the following Resolution:—‘That this municipality accords its complete support of the principles involved in the Bill and holds that the primary education should be compulsory and free, and while assuring the Government of complete co-operation, desires to lay stress on the fact that the income hitherto received is completely ear-marked, and requests it may be apprised of the extent to which state-aid may be expected to enable the municipality to see how the balance, if any, is to be raised.’ In the district of Midnapore the municipality of Ghatal thinks that there are no doubt many difficulties that might stand in the way of introducing compulsory primary education in the country. But there is no help for it. The masses should be raised at any cost from the depth of ignorance. Welfare of the people and the country demand that some beginning should be made in the direction. The Bill as framed will afford facility for paving gradually the way to the spread of primary education. Most of the other municipalities of the Midnapore district approve of the Bill. The municipalities of the districts of Birbhum and Bankura support the Bill. In the Dacca division, the Municipal Commissioners of the Dacca municipality approve of the Bill. It has been favourably received by the Municipal Commissioners of Narayanganj, who have passed a resolution that the municipality will be glad to take advantage of the Bill, if passed into an Act, provided the Government be pleased to contribute a reasonable share of the cost in that connection. The Commissioners of the Mymensingh municipality are unanimous in their opinion that primary education should be compulsory in the municipality, and in approving of the general principles of the Bill in the Rajshahi division, the Rampur-Boalia municipality accepts the principle and the main features of the Bill. The Commissioners of the Rangpur municipality are in full sympathy with the object of the Bill and they are of opinion that the Bill, after necessary amendments, should be passed by the Legislature into law. The Commissioners of the Bogra municipality think that there is no difference of opinion about the general principles of the Bill. The Chairman of the Pabna municipality says: ‘In my opinion the extension of primary education in all the municipalities in Bengal is a necessity.’ The Commissioners of Darjeeling municipality are in favour of compulsory primary education and support the provisions of the Bill, provided education is made free, while those of Kurseong approve, after careful consideration, of the general principle embodied in the Bill. There are other municipalities in the Rajshahi division which also approve of the Bill.

In the Chittagong division the Municipal Commissioners of Chittagong are of opinion that primary education may be made compulsory provided no education cess is imposed upon municipal rate-payers, whereas those of Cox's Bazar approve of its provisions. In the district of Tippera in the Chandpur municipality the Commissioners resolved that the introduction of compulsory primary education within their municipality be approved, whereas the principle of compulsion and the power of levying additional education cess are generally appreciated. As regards the Noakhali municipality, none of them raised any objection to legislation for the extension of primary education in all municipalities in Bengal.

Having quoted the opinion of many of the municipalities of the Presidency, I shall now quote the opinions of some of the Union Committees. Your Lordship knows that it is sought to extend the provisions of the Bill to municipalities as well as to Union Committees. The Chairman of the Kotalpur Union Committee in the district of Bankura says: 'The labouring classes are most likely to improve and prosper by the spread of primary education among them.' The Chairman of the Polashdanga Union Committee says: 'The Primary Education Bill has been very judiciously drawn up, and if steps be taken, according to the Bill, when it will be the law of the country to make primary education compulsory and free throughout Bengal, then a long-felt want will be satisfied and the aim of primary education will be fully attained.' The Chairman of the Holepore Union Committee in the district of Birbhum says: 'I perfectly agree with the general principles underlying the Bill which, in my opinion, ought to be passed into law.'

I shall now quote only one paragraph from the opinion of the Corporation of Calcutta: 'That the Corporation approve the principle of the Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1917, in so far as it seeks to make primary education compulsory.' The Calcutta Corporation as well as the Indian Association suggest that there should be a Provincial Education Board to control the whole of the primary education of the Presidency in so far as it is governed by this Bill. My Lord, it was for the constitution of this Education Board that I moved a resolution in Your Lordship's Council on the 4th September, 1917, but it was opposed not only by the officials but also by a large number of non-official members, and at least two of them were also Commissioners of the Corporation of Calcutta, and I now find these members supporting the constitution of an Education Board, probably suggested by the official Chairman.

I shall now quote the opinions of some of the Commissioners of divisions and district Magistrates and subdivisional officers as well as district deputy inspectors of schools who have to do so much with the primary education of the province. The Commissioner of the Presidency Division says: 'So far as municipalities are concerned, I see no reason to oppose the Bill.' The Commissioner of the Burdwan Division writes: 'The municipalities of the division generally approve the provisions of the Bill. The municipalities are reluctant to impose taxation to meet the additional expenditure, and it seems clear that unless Government bears a considerable share of this expenditure very little will be done by the municipalities.' The Commissioner of the Dacca division writes: 'I have consulted the district officers and through them the municipalities and individual gentlemen and associations of local importance in the division. From the opinion received it appears that the Bill is welcomed by almost all classes.' The Commissioner of the Rajshahi division speaks in the following terms about the Bill: 'Non-official opinion is strongly in favour of the Bill. All District Officers support it except Mr. Lindsay, who thinks that the cost will be prohibitive. I do not share these fears. Mr. Ray has made a genuine attempt to solve a difficult problem, and his Bill deserves the most careful consideration. Its great merit is that it aims, not at improving the education of the literate classes, but at extending elementary education to the illiterate classes. Bengal's greatest need at the present time is to make a practical knowledge of the rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic universal among the masses, and as quickly as possible. Without this, self-government will be government not by the people but by the demagogues of a bad type; the people will be undone and Bengal will not take any appreciable part in the history of the world. I unreservedly accept the principle of free elementary education. Free education should be suited to the requirements of the masses who cannot afford to pay and who will not ordinarily continue studies further. The Commissioner of the Chittagong division writes: 'There is a general agreement to the provisions of the Bill. I am in entire agreement with the provisions of the Bill and recommend that it may be passed into law.'

I shall now quote the opinion of some of the District Magistrates. The District Magistrate of the 24-Parganas says that the general desire is not to oppose the Bill but to extend it so as to suit local conditions. My own view is that the Bill should not be opposed. The District Magistrate of Nadia writes: 'Personally I am in favour of the Bill being passed as it stands,' whereas that of Jessore says: 'In my opinion the provisions of the Bill appear to be good enough to begin with.' The Magistrate of Hooghly writes: 'On the whole I think the Bill might be accepted, and it is certainly a move in the right direction.' The District Magistrate of Dacca says: 'The Bill is welcome by all classes and if passed into law there is good reason to hope that it may soon be brought into effect in some parts of the district, and seeing the benefits derived from it, the residents of other areas will gradually become eager to participate.' He also says 'that opinion generally is in favour of the Bill being made applicable to Union Committees.' The Magistrate of Faridpur sees no objection to the introduction of the Act and observes that the safeguards appear to be sufficient and it is an experiment which is worth a trial. The District Magistrate of Rungpur says 'that there is a consensus of opinion both amongst official and non-official gentlemen and public and local bodies regarding the desirability of the passing of the proposed Bill into law. Personally, I am in full sympathy with the objects of the Bill and consider that the draft Bill is suited for the attainments of these objects.' The District Magistrate of Bogra considers that a Bill of this nature is now required and all those whom he consulted are agreed on the point. The District Magistrate of Pabna says that all whom he consulted supported the principle of the Bill. His own individual opinion was that 'on the existing state of public feeling an Act of the kind has become a necessity. The Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling says: 'I am strongly in favour of the general principles of the Bill. The introduction of a measure of compulsory education in the more advanced areas of the Presidency is long overdue and it is right that local bodies should be responsible for it, but the cost of compulsory education should, in my opinion, be met by a rate and no fees should be charged.' The Deputy Commissioner of Jalpaiguri thinks that from his own experience of the way in which municipal affairs in some municipalities are managed he considered that any measure calculated to raise the standard of education and intelligence amongst the inhabitants of the towns is a step in the right direction.

In the Chittagong Division, the Magistrate of Tippera says that on the whole he is in entire agreement with the provisions of the Bill, whereas the Magistrate of Noakhali says that the public are generally in favour of the measure.

I shall now quote the opinion of some of the district deputy inspectors of schools. It is they who are in charge of whatever primary education there is in the Presidency and their opinion is therefore valuable. The district deputy inspector of schools of Rungpore observes: 'It cannot be gainsaid that compulsory education is the only means to uplift the masses of the people steeped in ignorance, and, as such, it should be introduced not only in municipalities but district board areas also. In my opinion, the provisions of the Bill offer sufficient safeguards to any oppression on poor and indigent persons. It might have been argued that compulsion without exception would bring distress to those who cannot depend on the earnings of boys of school-going age, or who are not in a position to pay for books, papers, etc., but in the face of clause 16 such an argument will not hold. I for one would like to see compulsory primary education introduced in those areas also where Union Committees have been established, along with the municipalities in view of the fact that in those places greater funds are available to help the introduction of the system and that the surrounding people would then be able to realise its importance and necessity and thus like it.' The deputy inspector of schools of Bogra says: 'The clauses of the Bill which aims at the extension of primary education will serve the purpose for which they are intended and have no objectionable features in them.'

The district deputy inspector of schools of Burdwan is of opinion that the provisions of the Bill have generally been most carefully and cautiously prepared and as such they may be passed. As regards Inspectors of Schools, I find that the Inspectors of Schools of the Rajshahi and Chittagong Divisions approve of the Bill in its present form, whereas that of Burdwan approves of the Bill with certain modifications. The Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education observes: 'As general compulsion is not possible at present the choice of municipalities for the experiment is wise.'

Many of the subdivisional officers have generally approved of the provisions of the Bill.

The British Indian Association suggests that the scope of the Bill should be limited to the mufassal municipalities of the Presidency. The Bengal Landholders' Association give it their entire support. They consider that in a province like Bengal primary education is a vital necessity for the elevation both of the intellectual and social welfare of its people. The North Bengal Zamindars' Association fully sympathise with the object of the Bill and generally approved of the scheme as contained in the same. The Indian Association have given their whole-hearted sympathy with the objects and aims of the proposed Bill.

It is a matter of great satisfaction that the Muhammadan Associations of the province have with one voice expressed their approval of the Bill. One of the Associations suggests that the operation of the Act should be extended at once to Union Committees. The Muhammadan Association of Rangpur fully approve of the Bill and would like to see it passed as soon as possible. The Provincial Muhammadan Association of Dacca observes: 'There is no gainsaying the fact that illiteracy in this land is almost scandalous, and illiteracy among the Moslems is unfortunately more deplorable than among any other community in India. It being so, the principle embodied in the Bill has the whole-hearted support of the Association.'

The Calcutta University agrees with the principle of the Bill in so far as it aims at making primary education compulsory. Some gentlemen connected with Co-operative Credit Societies warmly welcome the Bill. A large number of non-official gentlemen were invited to give their opinion and they have done so. They are generally in favour of the Bill. I shall quote only two of them. Maharaja Kshounish Chandra Roy Bahadur of Nadia generally approves of the provisions of the Bill. Rev. Dr. Sutherland of Darjeeling observes: 'Such a modest measure seems an excellent introduction to some sort of compulsory primary education. The Bill, I hope, will soon be passed and action taken throughout Bengal. It will be a great thing to have a beginning made.'

If there have been in some instances—and they are few, very few—any note of dissent against the Bill it is on account of the poverty of the country. There are some who think that the country is too poor to afford to pay for primary education and they are against the imposition of an 'education cess.' To them I can only say that I am fully aware of the poverty of the country and difficulties in the way of promoting education, specially among the masses. Without substantial help from Government the work of education, specially primary education, cannot spread. But we have got the example of the Bombay Government before us. As soon as the Bombay Primary Education Act came into operation the Governor in Council wisely announced in Council that substantial provision would be made in the Budget for carrying out the policy of introducing free and compulsory education in those municipalities proposing to take advantage of the new Act.

We all know that primary education is one of the subjects to be included in the transferred subjects under the Reforms Scheme. It will then be the duty of the members of Councils to find out ways and means to make primary education a success in the country. I have already quoted the opinion of the Commissioner of the Rajshahi division. He is probably in a position to speak with greater authority than many of us because he is no other official than Mr. Samman, who was only the other day the Secretary in charge of the Education Department of this Government. I cannot resist the temptation of quoting another portion from his letter to Government on the Bill, because, I think, he has clearly demonstrated and that within a few lines that the cost of introducing primary education in municipalities will not be prohibitive. This is what he says: 'All district officers support it (the Bill) except Mr. Lindsay, who thinks the cost will be prohibitive. I do not share these fears. At the last census, boys between the ages of six and ten formed about 6.32 per cent of the total population, and according to the last report of Public Instruction in Bengal, lower primary education cost Rs. 3 per head a year. The cost of teaching all boys between the ages of six and ten the rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic should, therefore, not exceed Re. 1 for every five of the total population. This is about the cost of the village watch. Municipalities already spend more than a lakh of rupees a year on education of all sorts. With a population of less than two millions only four lakhs would be required for universal free education of boys between the ages noted. The difference of three lakhs represents an incidence of 2½ annas a head of the municipal population of Bengal, outside Calcutta.' My Lord, there is a class of critics in this country who consider that primary education cannot be made compulsory in the country and as such the Bill ought not to be supported because the money necessary for the proper accommodation, proper equipment and proper staff would not be forthcoming. There is an idea among some of the critics of the Bill that unless you have marble palaces for accommodation, mahogany chairs, tables and benches and a library with up-to-date standard books and Smith prizemen as teachers, primary education cannot and ought not to be introduced. They forget that the class of boys who will attend these schools live in huts and that if they read in a school which has a hut or couple of huts for accommodation they will not be worse off and they will not consider it infra dig. They lie and sit upon mats in their houses and it will not be beneath their position if they have to sit on mats in schools. The old Guru Mahasaya or the class of teachers who now form the teaching staff of the existing primary schools of the province will be sufficient. We do not want expensive board schools for boys for whom the Bill is intended. There will be the short and simple accommodation and equipment for the poor. India has been a seat of learning from time immemorial. The Rishis of old never imparted their education in palaces. Naya, Sankhya and Patanjali were taught in huts, on naked floors and amidst blank walls. Poor school accommodation and poor school equipment never stood in the way of ourselves or our fathers from getting the benefits of education in our boyhood. There are primary schools at present in the whole of the province scattered over municipal as well as rural areas. There is an Education Committee attached to each district board. The result of passing of the Primary Education Bill will be practically to increase the number of such schools and to compel boys of school-going age residing within municipal areas and within Union Committees to attend schools.

These are, My Lord, the very critics who say in season and out of season that self-government cannot be given to the Indians because the masses are uneducated. But when an attempt is made for the spread of primary education in the country they try to lay down certain impossible conditions under which alone they say primary education can and ought to be given.

It is a matter of regret that primary education has not made that progress in British India which it has made in some of the Indian States. In answer to my question I received the following reply from the Commissioner of Education, Baroda State, only in August last :—

'(1) that primary education is free and compulsory in the Baroda State, (2) that the State bears all the expenses of such education, (3) that it is compulsory in respect to both boys and girls and (4) that the standard age of admission to schools under the compulsory Act is seven complete years in the case of boys and girls; but that the age for leaving schools is complete fourteen years for boys and twelve for girls.'

A similar reply has been received by me from the Mysore Government. The Secretary to the Education Department of the Mysore Government has written to me as follows :—

'The introduction of the Compulsory Education scheme has been sanctioned in the case of 238 centres and the scheme is in full operation in 144 centres. Primary education is free in all the Government schools, but small contributions from the villagers are levied in the case of village aided schools.'

There are some who consider that primary education should first be on a voluntary basis, that there must be sufficient number of schools in the province before the compulsory system is sought to be introduced. I think if they carefully go through the provisions of clauses 3 and 4 of my Bill they will find that, whereas it is sought to invest Municipal Commissioners with power to declare primary education compulsory within the municipality or any part thereof under clause 3 of the Bill, clause 4 of the Bill expressly lays down that no such notification can be issued unless the Commissioners have made such provision as the Local Government consider necessary and sufficient for the primary education of all children within the area mentioned in the notification for whom such education would be compulsory on the issue of such notification. It will therefore be seen that not only the Municipal Commissioners will have to take necessary steps to provide schools and make other provisions for primary education of boys but that they should satisfy Government that this has been done, and it is only when Government are satisfied that the notification empowering Municipal Commissioners to declare primary education compulsory shall be issued. If you leave the matter of primary education to the voluntary system it will never spread, it will never prosper. It has not done so in any country and it cannot be expected to do so in India. I find that the number of those under elementary education in Baroda has risen greatly since compulsion was introduced and now stands at 12 per cent. of the population.

That the Government of India have been taking a sincere interest in the primary education of the country is well known to everybody. In February 1918, in opening the Imperial Legislative Council, His Excellency the Viceroy said :—'Of education at the other end of the scale—of primary education—I made some mention in addressing you last September. I said that we were agreed that a definite advance must be made in this sphere, and it was only the fact that there were other connected problems awaiting solution which prevented my giving an indication of the policy which we had in view on this most important question. The support of primary education is a function of local bodies and its extension is, in the main, an operation of finance. While, therefore, the future powers of local bodies and the future relations of local, provincial and Imperial finance are still undetermined, it is, as you will readily understand, a matter of no small difficulty to set forth a definite policy of future development for our primary schools, and it will be necessary for us to wait a little longer before we can take definite steps for the realisation of such a policy. In the meantime, we have determined to place no obstacle in the way of such local legislatures as may decide on any reasonable measures to forward the same end, whether those are the precise measures which we would ourselves be prepared to initiate or not. The last few months have accordingly seen the first beginnings of legislation to allow of compulsory education in this country. A private Bill has been introduced and passed into Law to admit of the adoption of compulsion by district municipalities in Bombay. Arrangements have been made for the introduction of similar Bills in Bengal, and in Bihar and Orissa. The Punjab Government has drafted a Bill dealing with the same subject on comprehensive lines and has published it for criticism. I need hardly say that I shall watch with deep interest the use which local bodies make of the powers conferred upon them by measures of this description.

The Industrial Commission have recommended universal primary education in India.

My Lord, we are now passing through a critical period in the history of our country. The dawn of a new era is breaking. Industrial development and popular education will bring about a state of things which it is the desire of the best well wishers of the country to effect and which they are striving to attain. There is a cry to elevate the depressed classes and I need hardly say that this can be done only by educating them. Lord Chelmsford and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State have justly said in the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms: 'There is an immense work of education to be done throughout the countryside. Everything that tends to waken the Indian raiyat's intelligence, that helps him to be an independent self-determining man, everything that breaks down the barriers between communities and makes men regard each other as neighbours, and not as the wearers of some caste or creed insignia, hastens on the day when self-government within the Empire will be attained. All this is work that the educated Indian can and ought to undertake.'

The reasons and arguments that I have had the honour to lay before Your Excellency and the Members of this Council, I believe, must have brought conviction to their minds as to the vast importance of educating the masses of the people, for in education alone lie the germs of the progress and advancement of a country in its political, economic and social spheres. It is this advancement that I have sought to bring about by the introduction of this Bill and it remains for Your Excellency to give life and animation to the scheme and to make the country you have the honour of governing a power in the world."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord. I rise to add my humble voice to the general chorus of approval that has been given to the Bill introduced in this Council by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. The special reason why I wish to speak is, that this Bill interests the members of my community more than that of others, and that the general approval which Muhammadans of all shades of opinion—those who are politically minded and those who are not—have accorded to it shows that there is a great demand for the introduction of a measure like this among Muhammadans. Some time ago when my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul Huq tried to introduce a Bill in this Council for the levy of an Education Cess on Muhammadans, and although it was received sympathetically by Your Excellency's government, the Bill could not be introduced owing to the opposition of the Government of India. I believe, my Lord, that the introduction of this Bill will, to some extent, satisfy the demand made and will do the work which was intended that we would be able to do by the imposition of an Education Cess. I only wish to submit to Your Excellency's government that so far as the Muhammadans in general are concerned, the extension of the provisions of the Bill to municipalities only—of course it will be of some advantage to have it extended to some municipalities—will not be of much use unless it can be extended to rural areas, and I hope that the Select Committee will take the matter into consideration and will see their way to extend it to rural areas in the near future. With these few words, I support the motion."

The Hon'ble Mr. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, I have only to say on behalf of Government that Government are agreeable to the reference of the Bill to Select Committee. In Committee certain suggestions will be put forward on behalf of Government and it will be necessary also to consider many suggestions made by the gentlemen and public bodies to whom the Bill had been circulated for opinion. Many of these suggestions are of so detailed a nature that they can best be considered across the table in Committee, at least in the first instance, and of such importance that their inclusion in the Bill would considerably modify the principle on which the Bill is based. For these reasons Government propose to offer no further observations now, and to reserve the definition of its attitude until a later stage."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

THE BENGAL TENANCY (AMENDMENT No. 2) BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING moved that the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Bill, 1918, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Hon'ble Rai Priya Nath Mukharji Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali, the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali, the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur, and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation at the December meeting of the Council.

He said :—

"Your Excellency, opinions have been received on the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Bill, 1918, which was introduced in this Council in July last, and the next stage would naturally be that these opinions should be considered in Select Committee. I therefore beg to move this motion."

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY said :—

"My Lord, this is another patchwork amendment of the Bengal Tenancy Act within the year. When the first one was brought before the House, I objected to this sort of patchwork legislation. The Bengal Tenancy Act requires a thorough overhauling to secure a harmonious co-operation and mutual understanding between the landlords and the tenants. Instead, I find, with grave concern, that only such amendments are being brought forward before the Council, which are only advantageous to the raiyats. I do not grudge them their good fortune, but I most respectfully submit that this kind of preferential treatment cannot but engender a feeling of bitterness and resentment in us, and in the long run must widen the gulf of misunderstanding and distrust between the two great communities vitally interested in land. But let me hope, My Lord, that before Your Excellency leaves Bengal something will be done to foster a more pleasant relationship between the zamindar and his raiyat."

I now turn to the proposed legislation before the House. It involves two important questions. First it imposes a further reduction on the right of contract of the people, a right which is an essential factor in the economic development of our lands. Secondly, it proposes to carry a retrospective effect along with it to the utter disregard of the interests of the people who based their land transactions on documents hitherto held valid by High Court rulings. It was on the grounds of public policy that in 1885, the freedom of contract as to rents and other incidents of tenancy, was taken away from the raiyats. It is on the same grounds again, that further restrictions on the right of contracts as to cesses, are being imposed. 'On grounds of public policy' is a very convenient phrase as it saves a good deal of explanation and furnishes an excellent cover against unpleasant criticisms. But I cannot help remarking that the restrictions imposed in 1885 are primarily responsible for our apathy towards the agricultural development of our lands. Who would care to invest capital on land improvements, when no agreement between him and his raiyat as to the returns on his outlay, could be valid in the eyes of the law? My Lord, after an experience of 35 years, we expected that the Government would realise the disastrous economic consequences of curtailing the freedom of contract, and that there would be a change in the angle of vision regarding the matter; but instead I find that Government is bent on perpetuating its policy by extending the restrictions to contracts regarding cesses.

The other matter involved in this legislation is rather serious. I mean the question of giving a retrospective effect to its operation. I wonder the unfairness of the whole thing was not apparent to the learned framers of the Bill. It is like punishing the people for the blunder of the official law-scribes of 1885. How can the Government set at naught, by the stroke of of a pen, a claim which was hotly contested in the highest court of the land and allowed. My Lord, whatever the all-powerful Executive might think of a peoples' right, British Justice does not fail us. Let me read what the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court say on the subject, in their notes dated the 5th August 1918:—'Retrospective operation of the section would also effect persons who have dealt with properties on the basis of contracts which have hitherto been declared valid by courts of law.'

After this, I think I may safely hope that the Select Committee would set the matter right.

Then, my Lord, there is another little matter to which a passing reference should be made. I refer to paragraph 3 of the Statement of Objects and Reasons, which says that this legislation will not affect permanent leases. But it is not so. Section 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act on which this statement is based does not apply to permanent leases created before the said Act came into operation. There is also no saving clause regarding contracts by rent-free holders. I think that these defects should be removed by clear and unambiguous provisions in the law."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said:—

"My Lord, referring to the remarks of the Hon'ble Member regarding certain details of the Bill, I can give him every assurance that the points which he has mentioned will receive due attention." Possibly in some of them he will find that there is a misapprehension which I trust we shall be able to remove. As regards the main question, namely, that this is a piecemeal legislation, of course that cannot be denied. No one is more conscious than I am and the Bengal Government too, that before any large change in the Tenancy Act be effected, it will be necessary to have another Rent Law Commission. Until such a thing can be completed, we can only carry out changes, as we find it necessary to do so."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.THE CALCUTTA HACKNEY-CARRIAGE BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta Hackney-carriage Bill, 1918, be taken into consideration.

He Said :—

"My Lord the most important question which arises out of the report of the Select Committee is whether control should be transferred to the Commissioner of Police or remain with the Corporation. This question is dealt with in the motion about to be moved by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to which I shall reply on behalf of Government. I hope then to explain the attitude of Government towards the proposal for transfer."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved, by way of amendment, that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, with the Report of the Select Committee, be republished.

He said :—

"My Lord, my object in moving this amendment is this : that the Bill as originally published and which was circulated to public bodies and local authorities concerned, for their opinion, did not contain, this most important provision, that the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department be transferred from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police. On this point, the public bodies who were invited to give their views on the original Bill had no opportunity to express their opinion nor had the municipalities concerned. Of course, Sir, I am aware that the two public bodies, namely, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and, I believe, the Calcutta Trades' Association, and also the Corporation by a bare majority—the suggestion in the case of the Corporation came from the Chairman first,—agreed to the transfer of the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department to the Commissioner of Police ; the Corporation making it a special condition that as a quid pro quo the Calcutta Fire Brigade should be transferred to them. On that condition they consented to the proposal. I think, my Lord, that this is a most fundamental change in the Bill and therefore this Bill should be republished, and that the opinions of the public bodies and municipalities concerned should be invited on this most important point.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

My Lord, in reply to this motion I may remind the Council of the long time this Bill has already been under consideration. The present Act was passed in 1891, and since then various proposals had been brought forward from time to time with the object of improving the hackney-carriage service in Calcutta. Eventually the Calcutta Corporation appointed a special Committee in 1910 to consider the whole question. In 1911 their proposals were submitted to Government with a recommendation that the Act should be amended so as to ensure stricter control of the service and enable improvements to be made in it. The proposals of the Corporation were generally accepted by Government, and an amending Bill was prepared and sent to the Corporation for their views in 1912. They replied in February 1913, asking for the acceptance of certain recommendations and suggestions almost all of which were agreed to by Government. In the meantime, the Commissioner of Police proposed that the Hackney-carriage Department should be transferred to his control. The Corporation were consulted, but at that time they were opposed to the proposal and the idea was dropped. Further alterations and additions were made in the Bill, which was at last introduced in Council in July 1916 and referred to a Select Committee. The Select Committee came to the conclusion that the Bill did not go far and that a more extensive measure was necessary. A new consolidating and amending Bill was then drawn up, in accordance with the suggestions of the Select Committee, embodying the provisions of the former Bill as well as other modifications which were found necessary. The Bill, which is now before Council, was eventually introduced in February 1918.

It is now eight years since the special Committee of the Corporation dealt with the question of improving the Hackney Carriage service and it cannot be said that there has been precipitate haste over this legislation. If the Bill was republished, there would be still further delay without any corresponding advantage. It cannot be said that the question of the transfer of the control to the Police is a new one; it has been under discussion from time to time for the last eight years. It has been more recently considered by the Corporation and the Commissioner of Police. It has been specially dealt with by different public bodies in giving their opinions on the Bill. If the Bill were to be republished, it would only enable any one who wished to do so to volunteer his views on its provisions. There would be no circulation of the Bill to the different local bodies or associations; and the practical effect would be to postpone still further the enactment of a measure which has been pending for eight years. I would therefore deprecate further delay and urge that the question be settled in Council without republishing the Bill.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I am fully aware of the history of this measure as described by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley; but my Lord, if the Bill as originally drafted and placed before the Council in 1916, and considered by the Select Committee, had been before us, and if the original Bill as introduced before it was committed to the Select Committee had been before us with other amendments without this fundamental change involving the transfer of the administration en bloc from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police there would have been no necessity for moving for the re-publication of the Bill. The Hon'ble Member is well aware that this most important proposal was not in the original Bill which was published in the Calcutta Gazette, and on which Government invited the opinion of the public bodies and the Municipalities concerned. The Hon'ble Member has stated that the Commissioner of Police had been asking for the transfer of the administration of the Hackney Carriage Department from the Corporation into his own hands. The Corporation was opposed to it; but, of course, the Corporation, constituted as it is, can easily change its views by a bare majority and I believe I shall not be far wrong if I say by the casting vote of the Chairman. As this is a radical amendment of the Bill, I think this Bill should be republished. My original motion as I sent it to the Legislative Secretary, suggested, that the Bill should be republished and circulated to the Public bodies and local authorities for an expression of their opinion on the proposal to transfer the administration of the Hackney Carriage Department from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police. I understand that there are some technical difficulties in moving the amendment in that way according to Rules. This amendment has been put in this shape under the advice of higher authorities; but my main object is to have public opinion on this subject. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley says that even if the Bill is republished, it will not be circulated to public bodies—if I understood him aright. I do not think, my Lord, that Government should assume such an attitude. If the Council consents to the re-publication of the Bill, there will be no loss to Government if the attention of the public bodies and local authorities concerned is drawn to the important change and their opinion asked for. I do not think it will involve much clerical work in the office of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, it will take only half a minute to obtain the Secretary's or the Under-Secretary's signature to it. On these grounds, my Lord, I would press my motion. I reserve my remarks on the merits of the question in connection with further amendments.

The motion was then put to the vote and a division was taken with the following result :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved, by way of amendment, that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, be recommended to the Select Committee for modification of the Bill so as to provide for the retention by the Corporation of Calcutta of their control over hackney-carriages, and for that purpose to amend clauses 6, 7, 17(2), 30(2), and other clauses of the Bill.

He said :—

“ My Lord, in this connection I have to acquaint the Council with the history of this legislation : it is, indeed, well known to some of the members of this House. It was in 1864 that the first Act was passed called ‘ the Hackney-carriage Act ’ to restrain the extortion of native livery-stable-keepers, to provide a regulated scale of fares and otherwise to place the relations of the carriage-hiring community and the owners and drivers of gharries on a satisfactory footing. Then, in 1878, an amending Act was passed, authorising the local Government to place the administration of the Hackney-carriage Act under the control of the Corporation of Calcutta : that is to say, from 1864 to 1878, the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department was under the Commissioner of Police ; but in 1878 an amending measure which is ordinarily called Mr. Reynold’s measure was introduced. It authorised the Local Government to transfer at its discretion the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department from the Commissioner of Police to the Corporation of Calcutta. My Lord, that was merely the power of delegation that was vested under that Act in the Local Government, and the Local Government, in exercise of their power, transferred the administration of that department to the Corporation in 1878, and from 1878 to 1891 the Corporation administered the department under the delegated authority of the Local Government. In 1891 a Bill was introduced, on the representation of the Corporation, asking for several modifications of the Act of 1878 with a view to more efficient administration of the Hackney-carriage Department.

In introducing this Bill, the Hon’ble Mr. Cotton observed :—

‘ The Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta, responding to the public sentiment on the subject, took the matter into their consideration last autumn, and appointed a Committee to enquire into the working of the Act and to suggest amendments. In this Committee, the leading members were two representatives of the Trades’ Association—Mr. Phelps and Mr. Remfry—and it is to those gentlemen in particular, as well as to the Committee in general, that the thanks of the Calcutta community are due for working out a scheme to improve the working of the hackney-carriage service of Calcutta. The Committee sat several times and their report was laid before this Government on the 30th of March last. Their recommendation was that legislation should be resorted to and that further powers should be given to the Corporation to carry out the objects of the Act. It was felt by the Government that it was very necessary to assist and encourage the Corporation in their praiseworthy endeavours to improve the administration of the hackney-carriage service, and no time was lost therefore in preparing a draft measure and in obtaining the permission of the Government of India to introduce it into this Council.’

Further in another part of his speech, he said :—

‘ That Act (i.e., Mr. Reynolds’ Act) empowered the Local Government to make an order authorising the Corporation to exercise the powers exercised by the Commissioner of Police, and under that law the necessary order was passed ; and since 1878 the registering office and the administration of the Hackney-carriage Act have been transferred from the Commissioner of Police to the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta.’

Then, My Lord, he said :—‘ The first of the changes effected under the new Bill is to lay down that the working of the Act is to be entirely under the control of the Corporation of Calcutta.’

My Lord, I need not tire the Council by quoting the opinions of Government and of the public bodies concerned on the labours and untiring efforts of the Corporation of Calcutta to improve the hackney-carriage service, but it will be seen from the speech of the Hon’ble Mr. Cotton, who was the Member in charge of the Bill, that Government was so fully satisfied with the working of the Hackney-carriage Act by the Corporation, that they not only amended the Act of 1878 with a view to place the entire working under them, not by a mere delegation from the Local Government, but as a matter of right conferred upon them statutory authority to control the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department : that took place in 1891. In these days of constitutional reforms, the withdrawal of that authority is a striking example of retrogression. The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton observed that the most important thing was the framing of bye-laws. The bye-laws used to be framed by the Commissioner of Police and sanctioned by the Local Government ; but Mr. Cotton stated that the bye-laws would be framed by the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta subject to the approval of the Local Government. Now, My Lord, these were the two important changes made in 1891. In 1891, these important changes were made to encourage a popular body to discharge the duties much more zealously ; and in 1918 it is proposed to go back to the old system—to take away the powers which they possessed and which they exercised so efficiently—with a view to restore the one-man rule, because the Commissioner of Police has for some years been trying to get that power ; and he has however succeeded now in getting it, although Government has not yet expressed any decided opinion on the subject. Look at that picture and this picture. I find on looking through the list of transferred and reserved subjects in the Chelmsford-Montagu scheme that the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department is included in the list of transferred subjects. Well, in the face of that and in the face of the improvements that have been made by the Municipal Commissioners, I do not think that this should be transferred back to the Commissioner of Police.

Then, My Lord, in 1914 the Corporation did not agree, in 1918, the Corporation as constituted at present is of such a chameleon character that it has changed its views. At the beginning of the year when the question was first raised at a Committee meeting, Mr. Phelps stated that the hackney-carriage service had attained a certain amount of efficiency after many years and the Police had a lot of important things to do, and he therefore failed to see what advantage would accrue from the transfer. Of course, My Lord, this opinion gradually metamorphosed and underwent a change. The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Law, representing an important section of the community, thought that the public would not like the transfer, because they would not be able to approach the Police so easily as the Corporation. That is a fact, My Lord. It is not very difficult to approach the Chairman, because he sits in our midst and he can be heckled. If any one wants to see the Commissioner of Police, he will have to pass through a number of Barkandajes and policemen. My nerves shake within myself to go and see the Commissioner of Police and to acquaint him with our grievances. Therefore, My Lord, even if it is said that it should be in the hands of a very high officer, I do not think that the Chairman of the Corporation is in any way an officer who occupies a position lower than that of the Commissioner of Police or has less administrative capacity. My Lord, it may be said, and I anticipate it that as the Police regulate the traffic the Police should have the registering business in their own hands. My Lord, private carriages are registered by the Corporation and carts are also registered by them. To direct the traffic 'dyna jao' or 'bya jao' is quite different from the registration of carriages which requires looking into the condition of horses, carriages and other things. The Corporation have got an expert department with an expert officer—a European—with some European and Indian assistants as Inspectors. It is admitted on all hands that there have been some steady improvements, what have they done that this department should be snatched away from them and handed over to the Commissioner of Police ? It will be seen that since 1895 the Corporation have always been keeping an eye on this administration. In 1895 the Corporation appointed a Committee ; and in 1910 they appointed another Committee, they have always been thinking about this matter how to improve the hackney-carriage service—and they have done a lot in this matter. The outcome of the latest Committee of 1910 was the Bill that was introduced in 1916. If the Bill that was introduced in 1916 had been passed and if the Select Committee had not on the further suggestion of the Corporation made certain material alterations which in the opinion of the Hon'ble Nawab Syed Shams-ul-Huda, the then Member in charge of the Bill, did require the sanction of the Government of India, this question of transference to the Commissioner of Police would not have arisen. But, unfortunately, the Bill had to be sent back to the Government of India for sanction. That sanction was obtained with reference to certain provisions of the Bill and there would have been no trouble about this Bill but in the intermediate stage when the redrafted Bill came, the attempt was again revived by the Commissioner of Police and supported by others to secure the transfer of the administration of the Hackney-carriage Act to the Police. My Lord, of course I admire the tenacity of the Commissioner of Police:—the Commissioner of Police has won and his tenacity has been rewarded. I hope the Hon'ble Council will wait and pause before it gives its final seal to this proposal. My Lord, I do not want to cast any reflection on the Commissioner of Police. I should like to read to Your Excellency the observations of one or two members of the Calcutta Corporation who are members of the Trades' Association and who have taken a good deal of interest in the matter of the administration of the Hackney-carriage Department. Mr Shelton said 'that the control exercised over the taxi-cabs in Calcutta was not as it should be. There was no classification of the taxi-cabs, no uniformity in the dress of the drivers, and no inspection of fittings or machinery. He, therefore, suggested that the taxi-cabs should be brought under the control of the Corporation.' Further, Mr. Shelton said: 'When this question of controlling the taxi-cabs in Calcutta was discussed previously, it was thought that under the Police they would be more efficiently managed; but it proved otherwise. As they had a well-organized department in the Corporation, namely, the Hackney-carriage Department, he thought they could very efficiently deal with the taxi-cabs. These vehicles were generally in a dirty condition, and therefore, stricter supervision was necessary.'

My Lord, it will, therefore, be seen that even some of the European Commissioners, representatives of the Trades' Association on the Corporation, were not quite satisfied with the administration of the Police in regard to taxi-cabs, and having regard to this fact and to the fact that the Corporation of Calcutta managed the Hackney-carriage Department for the last 40 years so satisfactorily, received encouragement and encomium from the public and Government, I do not see why in this progressive year—the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen—we shall go back to the period anterior to 1891. Your Excellency is presiding over our deliberations in this Council here as an impartial dispenser of justice, and I appeal to Your Excellency's sense of justice. If Your Lordship thinks that my submission has appealed to you, I hope you will kindly veto the proposal. The administration of the Hackney-carriage Department is a small matter, it will neither increase the prestige of the Commissioner of Police nor invest him with any higher authority than he already possesses. We, the children of the soil, are fighting for some little crumbs of power and Self-Government from the British Government and I hope, My Lord, that the little crumbs which we possess will not be taken away from us."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

My Lord, Government are unable to accept this motion, and I propose to give a full and frank explanation of their reasons for opposing it. The control of hackney-carriages, palanquins and rickshaws in Calcutta is a matter merely of local administration, and being a local matter Government thought it would be better not to come to any decision before it received the report of the Select Committee, on which there was a strong majority of members with local knowledge. There were only four official members on the Committee, and, they had no mandate from Government. With the exception of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, the official members were either past or present officers of the Corporation. On the other hand, there were seven non-official members fully representative of the interests of Calcutta and other municipalities, such as Howrah and Hooghly-Chinsurah. I mention these facts to show that Government gave practical expression to its belief that this was a measure which should be dealt with in Select Committee by those who have local knowledge, local experience and local interests to represent. The report of the Select Committee showed that, with only three dissentients, all the members, official and non-official, were in favour of transfer of control to the Commissioner of Police. All but two of the residents of Calcutta advocated it. The views of the Select Committee so constituted naturally carried weight with Government. Government were also impressed by the arguments in favour of making the Commissioner of Police the controlling officer as well as by the fact that the two authorities concerned, the Corporation and the Commissioner of Police, agreed to it, while important associations like the Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association had advocated it. Although therefore the Bill introduced by Government provided for the continued control of the Corporation, Government felt that they should agree to the recommendations of the Select Committee.

It is an acknowledged principle that the Police are responsible for the safety of the public streets. On this account, the control of vehicles plying for the hire of passengers in the streets, hackney-carriages as well as taxi-cabs, is vested in the Police in nearly all large cities. Not to multiply instances, this is the case in London and Rangoon. It scarcely needs demonstration that the existence of a single superior authority serves to secure efficient supervision and regulation of vehicular traffic, which cannot be so well secured under a system of dual control, under which also there are possibilities of friction. Calcutta has been in the anomalous position of having its taxi-cabs regulated by the Commissioner of Police and hackney-carriages by the Corporation. The Commissioner of Police in his opinion on the Bill pointed out the practical inconvenience he is put to in effecting the arrest of drivers. He is ready to take over control not because he is anxious to increase his work, but because he considers that a distinct improvement would be affected thereby, which would be in the best interests of the public. The Corporation has also consented to the change. It is true that it also desired to have the transfer of the Fire Brigade made over to it and that Government cannot at present give any promise about that matter although it realises that there is much to be said in favour of the proposal. The amendment of the Licensed Warehouses and Fire Brigade Act would be necessary in order to enable the control of the Fire Brigade to be made over to the Corporation, and Government must ascertain the views of Howrah and suburban Municipalities, which contribute to the upkeep of the Brigade as well as Calcutta, before agreeing to an amendment of the Act. Their views have been asked for and after they are received Government will consider whether it should undertake legislation: the Howrah municipality has already replied and declared itself in favour of the proposal.

Apart from the question of the transfer of the Fire Brigade, Government is satisfied that the transfer of the control of hackney-carriages and the licensing of drivers to the Commissioner of Police would be a move in the right direction as securing unity of control over traffic plying for hire of passengers in the streets of Calcutta—bullock carts, which are intended for the transport of goods and not of passengers, are outside the scope of the Bill. The arguments in favour of vesting the control of public vehicles in the same authority have been forcibly and clearly presented in the letter of the Chamber of Commerce, from which I may quote: 'The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce believe that it will be only by the unification of control that a good service of cabs—whether horse or motor—is likely to be provided, and it is, they think, not unreasonable to expect that the difficult problem of traffic regulation might likewise be to some extent simplified if authority were centralised in that authority. Seeing also that the regulation of traffic in the city is in the hands of the Commissioner of Police, it follows that he should be the authority for registering, licensing and controlling all classes of public vehicles. The Committee urge, therefore, most strongly that Government should accept this proposal, and, further, that the registering officer, in view of the great responsibility attaching to his work, would be a Police officer of seniority and standing."

The Hon'ble Mr. EDEN said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from Mr. O'Malley and after the arguments deduced by him, I do not propose to use any arguments against the amendment which the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur has proposed. I would, however, like to remove a little misconception regarding the attitude of two of the members of the Calcutta Trades' Association who were members of the Corporation. Mr. Phelps is reported as having given his opinion that the control of hackney-carriages should remain with the Corporation. So recently as March or April this year, the matter was very thoroughly discussed in the Calcutta Trades' Association and Mr. Phelps withdrew his objection and supported the proposal that the control of hackney-carriages should be transferred to the Police. As regards Mr. Shelton, he is now away in England. He has taken a very active part in looking after the Hackney-Carriage Department of the Corporation, but in 1916, before I spoke on this subject at the Dacca meeting, I consulted Mr. Shelton as to what his opinion was on the matter of transfer, and although he expressed himself as having strong feelings in favour of the control remaining with the Corporation, he said he was not unwilling that if the whole department could be transferred to the control of the Police, he would withdraw his objection."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My Lord, I deem it my duty to give to this Council my reasons for supporting the proposal which has been made or mooted in the report of the Select Committee regarding the transfer of the control of the hackney-carriages from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police in Calcutta. The first thing that I would ask this Council to remember is that this legislation affects Calcutta, and it does not directly affect the question of the control of hackney carriages which may be established regularly in any city or town in the district. I do not know whether every member of the Council is aware of the difference in the control which prevails in England as between the metropolis and the boroughs. In the boroughs the control of hackney and stage carriages is vested in the local authorities. In the metropolis, that is, in the city of London, the control of hackney carriages or rather hackney and stage carriages as they are called there, and of drivers and conductors, is in the hands of the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, who acts as the deputy of the Home Secretary. This distinction is, it seems to me, based upon sound reason. Ordinarily, no doubt, one would sympathise with the feelings of my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that hackney-carriages should be controlled by local authorities, but in the metropolis where the traffic is excessively heavy, even the British people, to whom local self-government is so dear, do not object to the control of hackney and stage carriages being vested in the Commissioner of Police under the Home Secretary. Now the reason which induced me at any rate to support the proposal in the Select Committee was simply this. We all know that the heavy traffic of the streets is controlled by the Police. My hon'ble friend Mr. Pal has suggested that the argument that there is much efficiency in the unity of control is a hackneyed argument which does not appeal to him. It is not a hackneyed argument; the principle of the efficiency of united control is one of the soundest arguments which should regulate the conduct of the executive. If I may compare very small things with great, if the efficiency of this principle was not realised in England soon the war would not have ended so early. I do not desire to detain the Council at any length upon this point, but it seems to me that to overlook the principle of efficiency and to try to raise the question of encroachments upon the sacred principle of local self-government in a side issue like this, is to miss the whole point. I am, I hope, as strong an advocate of responsible Government as my hon'ble friend Mr. Pal, but I do not lose sight of the fact that real responsible Government does not consist in controlling hackney carriages in the town of Calcutta. My hon'ble friend has referred to a matter, occurring in the Schedule, which was tentatively prepared, in the joint report of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State as to the subjects which should be treated as transferred subjects. Well, one may endorse the soundness of the principle without quarrelling with the recommendations of the Select Committee, because legislation may be deemed necessary in the near future for the control of hackney carriages in the districts. I do not suggest, and I do not think that Mr. O'Malley would suggest, that even in the districts in the mofussil, where legislation is deemed necessary for the purpose of controlling the service of hackney carriages, the police should necessarily there do the work which might better be done as it is done in the boroughs in England by the local authorities, so that keeping the subject of the control of the hackney carriages generally as an item in the list of transferred subjects, does not militate against the special provision that we may feel it necessary to make for a town like Calcutta, in view of the extremely heavy character of the traffic."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BANADUR said :—

"My Lord, in the first place I would reply briefly to the Hon'ble Mr. Eden. It is quite obvious I believe to the Hon'ble Member that the two representatives of the Trades' Association, until March last, were strongly of opinion that the continuance of the administration of the Hackney-Carriage Department should continue in the hands of the Corporation. Mr. Phelps changed his views in March 1918, and Mr. Shelton although retaining still his strong feeling for the retention of the administration in the hands of the Corporation, found that he had no objection to the transfer after Mr. Eden had a talk with him. It will thus be seen that two of the members of the Trades' Association who had at one time very strong feelings against the transfer, and who had practically taken part in the administration of that department, subsequently changed their minds, and thought that that department should be transferred from the Corporation to the Commissioner of Police. I must give them credit to say that whether they agreed whole-heartedly to the transfer or not, they have got the unity of action which we perhaps lack very much, and if that were not the case, the spectacle of European non-official members voting in favour of Government proposals in some of the contested divisions, would never have been seen, and we might have defeated the Government on many occasions. I cannot divest myself of the impression that Messrs. Phelps and Shelton, two of the most active members of the Corporation, who were against this transfer, afterwards changed their views only in deference to the views of their colleagues in the Trades Association. Further I may inform the Council that another European Commissioner, Mr. Jones of the Statesman—I do not think that he is very anxious that we should have an over-abundance of self-government—was also against the transfer.

I would not dwell on the speech of the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray. My Lord, much has been said about dual control. I repeat this is a hackneyed phrase which has been used with a view to effecting this transfer. What is this dual control? The control of traffic is one thing, and the examination of horses and carriages and the licensing of them is a different thing. All the latter has been carried on by the Corporation for the last 40 years. Past Commissioners of Police and past Governments have never raised that question, my Lord. Am I to understand that the present generation is infinitely wiser than the past generation so profoundly as to see the folly of leaving the control in the hands of the Corporation. On the contrary, I find from the proceedings of past Councils that with a view to encourage the Municipal Commissioners in their good work, the Government amended the law and placed the control entirely in the hands of the Corporation, they also amended the law in other directions in order to give them better control over horses, carriages, etc. The only argument that has been put forward against my proposal is that of dual control which has been in existence for the past 40 years. On the one side, there is the examination of horses, carriages, etc., including those of livery stables, such as Messrs. Hart's, Cook's and others; they are not licensed by the Commissioner of Police. On the other side, there is the regulation of traffic which is under the control of the Police. Where then is the clashing of interests even under this dual control? Therefore I do not see that any case has been made out for a transfer. As regards the question of self-government, it has been stated that in London, hackney carriages are under the Commissioner of Police. I do not know how far the Police there is under popular control. When it suits their purpose, people would compare London with Calcutta, and say that such and such a practice prevails in London and therefore it is good for Calcutta, but when we say that such and such a thing prevails in London or America, or in other self-governing dominions, they say, 'No, this cannot be applied to an Eastern people in India.' My Lord, 'the proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof.' I have ransacked the Police Administration Reports covering a period of 40 years, and I have not been able to find out that a single complaint has been made by the Police about the so-called dual control. In order, however, to help the Police in the matter of service of processes, etc., in the course of their duties in connection with the regulation of traffic that the Bill has provided that the name of every driver and his address, or change of address should be inserted in a register and a copy of that register forwarded to the Commissioner of Police. This was in the original Bill. All this has been transformed and the term Commissioner of Police has been substituted for the term Chairman of the Corporation. I do not think I should occupy more of the time of the Council, I will leave my motion to the Council.

The motion was then put to the vote and a division was taken with the following result :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved, by way of amendment, that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the Select Committee for modification of the Bill so as to provide for the transfer of the control over hackney-carriages to a Board consisting of the Commissioner of Police, two representatives of the Corporation, and one of Howrah and of each of the other municipalities concerned, and for that purpose to amend clauses 6, 7, 17(2), 30(2), and other clauses of the Bill.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is a sort of compromise that I have suggested—a sort of half-way house—with a view to having the representatives of these municipalities associated with the Commissioner of Police: the Commissioner of Police instead of himself performing the functions of the Act will be associated with the representatives of the Municipalities concerned. The framing of by-laws is a most important part of the function and then there is the appointment of officers and all that. As regards the traffic, I may say that the proposed Board will have nothing to do with that matter because the traffic is regulated under the Calcutta Police Act, which has nothing to do with the Hackney Carriage Act. This Act extends to the outside Municipalities of Howrah, Cossipore-Chitpur, Maniktollah, Dum-Dum, Garden Reach and Tollygunj; the registration business is done in the office of the Calcutta Corporation. These are matters relating to the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act. This Board will be composed of people's representatives and will be associated with the Commissioner of Police, and therefore I hope, my Lord, although it is a very distant hope, that this motion may be accepted. The members of the Board will not take any participation in executive work, they will be sitting round the Commissioner of Police and will make suggestions in the same way as the Board of Visitors of jails. In the jail administration there is some exchange of views regarding the treatment and diet of prisoners—we get some sort of chat round and across the table with the Commissioner of Police. This is a sort of benevolent despotism. The people will have the privilege of having some conversation with the Commissioner of Police."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, I oppose this motion for the reasons I have explained in reply to the previous motion; and I need not recapitulate the reasons I then adduced. It seems to me, however, that there are other objections also to this proposal. It does not appear to me that a Board of this kind will be likely to be very effective. Its members will be drawn not only from Calcutta but also from Howrah across the river and also from each of the other Municipalities concerned, e. g., Baranagore, Dum-Dum, Tollygunj. I should anticipate not only difficulties about holding meetings but also divided counsels, as there would be such different interests represented, and I cannot believe that a Board of this character would be likely to take prompt action in case there was any serious trouble with owners or drivers such as a strike. These are some of the difficulties which suggest themselves to me. The main objection to the proposal is that it is another expedient for perpetuating a system of dual control and preventing the unity of control which Government consider desirable."

The motion was then put and lost.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's original motion (item No. 6 in the List of Business) was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY moved that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 1.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved that in clause 4 the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :—

(4) "The Corporation" means "The Corporation of Calcutta."

He said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to make a speech and I simply move this formally."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, Government would have no objection to accepting this amendment if it were necessary; but I fail to discover any reference to the Corporation in the Bill. The expression 'The Corporation' does not occur. The only object of this amendment would be to enable further amendments to be made, vesting the control of hackney carriages and other vehicles in the Corporation; and this is a subject on which the Council has already pronounced its opinion. I therefore oppose this amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved that in line 3 of clause 5 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the word "Corporation" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, I oppose the amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 3.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved that in line 3 of clause 5 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the words "Chairman of the Corporation" be substituted.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, I oppose the motion."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, it is useless for me to trouble Your Excellency and I would ask for permission to withdraw this amendment."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"How many of the Hon'ble Member's amendments does he propose to withdraw?"

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I withdraw all the amendments under clause 6."

The following motions were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn:—

That for "clause 6" the following be substituted, namely :—

- "(1) The Registering Officer shall be appointed by the Corporation, and shall keep a register in which he shall enter every hackney-carriage under the class prescribed therefor by by-law made under section 71:
- (2) Every act, matter or thing done by the Registering Officer, under or by virtue of this Act, shall be subject to the control of the Chairman of the Corporation.
- (3) The provisions of section 63 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, shall apply to the appointment of the Registering Officer."

If motion No. 4 be not carried, also to move that in lines 1 to 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 6 for the words "a Deputy Commissioner of Police specially appointed by the Local Government for this purpose" the words "appointed by the Corporation" be substituted.

If motion No. 4 be not carried, also to move that in lines 3 and 4 of sub-clause (2) of clause 6 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the word "Corporation" be substituted.

If motion No. 4 be not carried, also to move that in clause 6 the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :—

- "(3) The provisions of section 63 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, shall apply to the appointment of the Registering Officer."

AMENDMENTS Nos. 8, 9 and 10.

The following motions were also, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

That for clause 7 the following be substituted, namely :—

- "The Registering Officer may, with the sanction of the Chairman of the Corporation, by general or special order in writing, delegate to any officer all or any of the powers and duties conferred or imposed upon the Registering Officer by this Act or any by-law made thereunder."

If motion No. 8 be not carried, also to move that in line 2 of clause 7 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the word "Corporation" be substituted.

If motion No. 8 be not carried, also to move that in lines 3 and 4 of clause 7 for the words "police-officer not below the rank of sergeant" the word "officer" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 11.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that at the end of clause 11 the words "and a certified copy of such particulars shall be furnished to every person applying for the same on payment of a fee of eight annas" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this clause refers to the details specified in the license. I think that these particulars should be available to every person on payment of a certain fee; and this is provided in another place with reference to the particulars of drivers, horses, etc. Therefore, with regard to carriages, I submit that this provision may be inserted."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, Government are pleased to accept the amendment."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 12.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that at the end of clause 13 the words "or the horse used therewith is not licensed for that class of carriage, or the harness used with such horse is unfit for public use" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this clause provided that the Registering Officer may cancel or suspend for such period as he thinks fit, the registration of any carriage and the license granted to the owner under this Act, whenever it appears to him that such carriage is unfit for public use. I think that some provision should be made for the contingency that if the horse or harness, is unfit for public use or if an inferior class of carriage is used, the registration of such carriage may be suspended. I hope this amendment will be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, Government agree to this amendment."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 13.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

That in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 17 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the word "Corporation" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 14.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that at the end of sub-clause (1) of clause 27 the words "and a certified copy of such particulars shall be furnished to every person applying for the same on payment of a fee of eight annas" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this amendment is the same as the previous one (No. 11) which has been accepted by Government. Clause 27 relates to the particulars of the class of hackney-carriage, the name and residence of the owner and the number assigned to the horse. I think that these particulars may be supplied to any person requiring them on payment of a certain fee."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, Government agree to this amendment."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 15.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, was, by leave of the President withdrawn :—

That in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 30 for the words "Commissioner of Police" the word "Corporation" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 16.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in line 3 of sub-clause (2) of clause 49 for the words "five miles within one hour" the words "six miles an hour in the case of first and second class carriages, and five miles an hour in the case of any other class of carriage" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the limit of 5 miles which is prescribed by this clause is not suitable for all classes of carriages. I therefore suggest that a limit of six miles an hour be prescribed for first and second class carriages and a limit of 5 miles an hour in the case of any other class of carriage."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY, said :—

"My Lord, this is a matter which Government are content to leave entirely to the discretion of Members of Council. The present law requires a minimum speed of four miles an hour. The Select Committee considered that this should be raised to five miles an hour; and the Hon'ble Mover proposes to raise it to six miles an hour in the case of first and second class carriages and to five miles an hour in the case of other classes of carriages. It is an open question whether considering the class of ponies used, the food they get, the work they do and the risk of cruelty if they are made to do six miles an hour, that speed should be fixed as a minimum for first and second class carriages."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 17.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in line 5 of clause 50 after the word "shall" the words "on the complaint of the aggrieved party or of any public officer or servant" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this clause lays down that any owner, driver, or person in charge of any hackney-carriage registered under this Act, who, without sufficient excuse (the burden of proving which excuse shall lie upon him), refuses to let such carriage for hire, shall be liable for every such offence to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, and, in default of payment of fine, to simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding fourteen days and shall also pay to the party complaining such compensation as the Magistrate thinks fit.

I think it will make the matter clear if the aggrieved party has the right to make a complaint. I hope my amendment will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY, said :—

"My Lord, Government accept the amendment."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 18.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after sub-clause (m) of clause 51, the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :—

"(mm) refuses to let a carriage on hire by time or distance as the hirer may require."

He said :—

"My Lord, this clause imposes a penalty on a driver for certain offences which are enumerated in it. I want only to add after clause (m) that if a driver refuses to let a carriage on hire by hour or distance as the hirer may require. As frequently happens the drivers refuse to let the carriage on hire and for these things one has to run to the Police which no one ordinarily does. This is a clause which, I think, may be inserted."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, the amendment is accepted by Government."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 19.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that in the penultimate line of clause 51 after the word "or" the word "to" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord this is a purely formal amendments which is intended to improve the phraseology."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 20.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 57, the words "the Court of" be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the clause states that 'the hirer may require the driver to drive to the Court of the nearest Magistrate or to the Registering Officer.' My object in moving this amendment is that the occurrence may take place at night or after 5 o'clock in the evening when the Court of the Magistrate may be closed. It would afford great facilities to the public if it is stated that the hirer may drive to the nearest Magistrate, which expression I believe will include the Honorary Magistrates. There may be some Honorary Magistrate living close to the complainant's house. The Registering Officer will probably be in Lall Bazar."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, this amendment, if carried, will order a new terror to the life of Magistrates in Calcutta. The law at present provides that if there is a dispute between a hirer and a driver of a carriage and if any Magistrate is then sitting, the hirer may require the driver to drive to the Magistrate's Court, or, if no Magistrate is sitting at the time, to drive to the Registering officer. Clause 57 of the Bill, as now drafted, gives the hirer the option of requiring the driver to drive either to the Court of the nearest Magistrate or to the Registering officer. Naturally, if the dispute occurs at a time when the Magistrate's Court is not open, the hirer will elect for the Registering officer."

If this motion were accepted, the driver would be able to go to the Magistrate, wherever he chanced to be and whatever the hour. The Magistrate would be liable to be wakened out of his sleep or called out from his dinner to settle a dispute between an angry passenger and an obstreperous driver. This would be an unfair tax on the Magistrate, whether honorary or stipendiary. He ought to be called on to settle disputes only in Court hours and in his Court; and his private life ought to be free from interruptions of this kind. In the interests of the Magistrate, Government feel that this amendment should be opposed."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, the Registering officer, who will probably be the Deputy Commissioner under this Bill, will be in Lall Bazar. I do not think that Magistrates, honorary or stipendiary, who are for administering justice, will ever grudge this task, as this work will be something like a Kazir Bichar. As we all know, the garrywallahs are not very reasonable and they have the upper hand of the bhadralog class, as the latter feel shy to go to the Magistrate's Court. I think that in the interests of the public this amendment may be accepted."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 21.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley to move that in line 1 of clause 58 after the words "disputes as to" the word "the" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is a purely verbal amendment, due to a clerical error."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 22.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (1), of clause 60 the words "in consultation with the Commissioner of Police" be omitted.

He said :—

“ My Lord, in this case, as a matter of fact, the Corporation always consult the Commissioner of Police. As the Commissioner has been put on the top that is why I have sent this amendment, which however, I do not want to press.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President. withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 23.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that in line 3 of sub-clause (2) of clause 63 after the words “ of the owners ” the words “ and drivers ” be inserted ; and in line 5 of the same sub-clause after the words “ to the owners ” the words “ and bearers, respectively ”, be inserted.

He said :—

“ This is what is known as a consequential amendment. The Select Committee added to the Bill a new clause requiring that notice should be given of changes of driver's address or driver's residence, in order that the registering officer should know where the driver actually lives. It is obviously desirable that there should be a similar provision in the case of palanquin bearers.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 24.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in line 1 of sub-clause (1) of clause 71 for the words “ Local Government ” the word “ Corporation ” be substituted.

He said :—

“ My Lord in clause 71 the term ‘ local Government ’ has been inserted in lieu of ‘ the Corporation. ’ I want to re-insert the term ‘ Corporation ’ here. It is a legislative power ; it has nothing to do with the regulation of traffic or with the registration of hackney-carriages or with any other administrative work. It is simply legislation, and therefore without any way militating against the principle which has been adopted by the House that the administration should go over to the Commissioner of Police, the law-making function should be left to the Corporation, subject of course, to the approval of the Local Government. The Bill as amended by the Select Committee will not be affected in any way ; this will not go against the principle of the Bill in any way ; but will prevent the Commissioner of Police from framing whatever by-laws he chooses and submit them to Government. I do not mean to say that Government will accept everything he suggests, but it is better to have the by-laws framed by the Corporation subject of course to the approval of the Local Government.”

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

“ My Lord, I am afraid that on behalf of Government, I must oppose this amendment. The Select Committee have stated in their Report their reasons for putting in the words “ Local Government ” : they say that now that the control of hackney-carriages is to be transferred to the police it is advisable that by-laws under the Act should be made by the Local Government. It is realised that by-laws cannot be made by the Commissioner of Police and it is felt that if the Corporation had independent power to make by-laws, it would militate against the control of the Commissioner. It is therefore necessary that this power of making by-laws should be entrusted to the superior authority, namely, Government, and I have no doubt that, where necessary, before making by-laws, the Corporation of Calcutta will be consulted by the Government.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

My Lord, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said that before making by-laws, Government would consult the Corporation, but if you consult the Corporation, their suggestions might also militate against the control by the Commissioner. What I suggest is this : let the legislative power be exercised by the Corporation, subject to the approval of the Local Government. I understand that Government will frame the by-laws. Why not let the Corporation do it ; they have been doing it for a long time and they know everything about hackney carriages and stands, etc., therefore I fail to understand why the legal power should not be vested in the Corporation subject to the approval of the Local Government. Nothing will be lost thereby. It is the law making power that I want to be left in the hands of the Corporation.

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 25.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

If motion No. 24 be not carried, also to move that in line 1 of sub-clause (1) of clause 71, before the words "The Local Government," the words "The Corporation with the sanction of" be inserted.

AMENDMENT No. 26.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that in sub clause (1) (d) of clause 71 the following words be added, namely :—

"and the manner in which the mark is to be used."

He said :—

This amendment relates to the marks of identification of horses to be used in hackney carriages, and so I wish to add these words. Unless this is done, there will be difficulty, my Lord, in having that particular by-law carried out. I therefore move this amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, Government accept this amendment."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 27.

Amendment No. 24 having been lost the following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, was deemed to have been withdrawn :—

If motion No. 24 be carried, also to move that for sub-clause (2) of clause 71 the following be substituted, namely :—

"(2) By-laws made under this section shall be subject to the sanction of the Local Government and shall, if sanctioned, be published in such manner as the Local Government may direct."

The Council was then adjourned for lunch.

AFTER LUNCH.AMENDMENT No. 28.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that in line 2 of the proviso to clause 79 after the words "the Commissioner" the words "or such other officer" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is a formal amendment. The first Part of clause 79 provides that the Commissioner of Police or other police officer appointed by him shall return lost property to the owner, but the proviso omits the other officer. It is necessary for the sake of both uniformity and consistency that there should also be a reference to the other officer in the proviso.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 29.

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY moved that in line 6 of clause 79B for the word "rule" the word "by-law" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is a verbal amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 30.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that sub-clause (a) of clause 79B be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, clause 79B is a new clause added by the Select Committee. They considered it 'necessary to provide in the Bill that the driver of a hackney carriage or the bearer of a palanquin should not be arrested nor the carriage or palanquin seized when it is actually used for the conveyance of a passenger until some arrangement is made for the passenger to proceed to his destination.' 'We have suggested,' they added 'two methods by which this may be affected.'"

"Government sympathise with the object the Select Committee had in view. Government quite realize the delicate situation pardanashin ladies may be put in if a driver is arrested and they are left stranded in the Street. Government feel, however, that there are practical difficulties in working the first of these two methods. As the clause runs, if a passenger tells a police officer that he must provide another ticca-garry, the police officer has no alternative but to provide another. If he is in an unfrequented part of the town, the policeman must either go off to get another, in which case the driver will probably whip up his horses and be off, or he must detain the carriage until another ticca-garry turns up, which he can engage. This would put him in an awkward predicament. It is unfair to the policemen to lay this statutory obligation on him. It should be quite enough to provide (as will be provided if this amendment is accepted) that the passengers shall be allowed to proceed to their destination before the arrest is made."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 31.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR moved that in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 80 for the word "Government" the words "a fund called the Hackney-Carriage Fund" be substituted.

He said :—

"This clause runs as follows :—

'(1) All fees and fines realized under this Act shall be credited to Government, and all charges incurred on the administration of this Act shall be met from such fees and fines. At the end of each year the balance of fees and fines realized during the year, after all such charges have been met, shall be paid to the Calcutta Municipal Fund.'

I think it will make the matter more clear if it is stated that all fines and fees realized under this Act shall be credited to a fund called the Hackney-Carriage Fund. I do not know whether the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has any objection to accepting this amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, I regret that Government are unable to accept this amendment. The clause, as it stands, has been copied from the Burma Act; and it is felt that it is a practical method of dealing with this matter."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 32, 33 and 34.

The following motions, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, were, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

To move that in line 2 and in lines 4 and 5 of clause 81 for the words "Commissioner of Police" in the two places where they occur the words "Chairman of the Corporation" be substituted.

If motion No. 32 be not carried, also to move that in lines 1 and 2 of clause 81 the words "the Commissioner of Police or" and in lines 4 and 5 of the same clause the words "the Commissioner of Police or of" be omitted.

To move that in line 7 of sub-clause (1) of clause 82 after the words "Corporation of Calcutta" the words "the Chairman of the Corporation" be inserted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that the Secretary be directed to renumber the clauses and sub-clauses of the Bill in consecutive order and to make corresponding alterations in all cross-references thereto.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

He said :—

"My Lord, it only remains for me to express the thanks of Government to the members of the Select Committee for their labours and to acknowledge the improvements which have been made in the Bill by the amendments moved by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. I now formally move that the Bill as settled in Council, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

THE BENQAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1918.

13. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved that the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1918, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Hon'ble Mr. Hart, the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray, the Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali, the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur, the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, the Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman, the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri, and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation at the January meeting of the Council.

He said :—

"My Lord, the Bengal Self-Government Bill was introduced in this Council by Sir S. P. Sinha on the 4th April 1918, and I am sure that, while we much appreciate the reasons which have taken Sir S. P. Sinha elsewhere, yet we all regret that this Council will not have the advantage of his presence and advice in the later stages of this measure. Owing to that fact, and also to the unfortunate illness of the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, the task of moving this further motion has devolved upon me."

The Bill has now been before the province since its introduction, and a large number of valuable opinions have been received upon it, to which the Select Committee will have to give its most careful consideration will be of great value in arriving at possible improvements. As a general statement, I think it may be said that, welcomed on its introduction, so it has received further circulation for public opinion. The whatever may be the views held on matter, main principles of the Bill, welcoming needed direction. There are naturally differences in detail, and, in particular, as the Hon'ble Member will have seen, a considerable number of recommendations made in connection with the respective powers of the union committees and the District Magistrate in the matter of the village chaukidar; that, of course is a very ancient subject of discussion in Bengal. It will now come under the examination of the Select Committee, which will have to deal with the different points of view placed before them in the replies that have been received.

"Another matter, which has attracted attention, is the judicial powers which the Bill seeks to confer upon village courts and village benches. There is a certain amount of opinion expressed that the clauses dealing with these points give somewhat wider powers than is altogether wise; but I think it has been overlooked in some of the criticisms which have been made that the conferment of these powers is at the discretion of Government, which in a matter of this kind will move slowly. Certainly Government would only select first those village committees which are clearly fit for the exercise of these powers; also, under the Bill as it stands, resort to the village courts will be optional, the concurrent jurisdiction of the ordinary courts remaining. Therefore, people, who do not trust the village courts need not go to them.

"These are two main aspects of the bill towards which criticism has been directed, (though, of course, many other details have been touched upon), but there is also one large issue of principle that has been raised to which

I would like to invite the attention of the Council, and that is with regard to the whole proposed constitution of circle boards. As those who have read the District Administration Committee's Report will be aware, the proposal for the creation of circle boards emanated from that body, the idea being that district boards covered too large a unit for effective supervision over these village bodies; experience has shown that local boards have not been altogether a success in the general scheme of local self-government, and it was thought therefore, that it would be an improvement to substitute a body having jurisdiction over a smaller area and therefore able to take a more direct and personal interest in the village unions within its charge. The general purpose of the circle board, as explained in clause 49, is to superintend the working of the village unions, to exercise their powers in the event of supersession, and to distribute among them the grants made by the district board, since they should possess the local knowledge which will enable them to make an equitable division. In the replies received there is a fair body of opinion that the circle board is an unnecessary addition to the Bill, which will render superior supervision top-heavy, and will add another body between the union committee and the district board which may not altogether make for ease and smoothness of working. That is a view which the Select Committee will have carefully to examine. If we do away with the circle board the question will then arise: what is to be put in its place? There are various expedients conceivable, one of which is that it would be feasible to leave the local board as it is; that would involve, possibly, the minimum of dislocation of the existing system; but against that, you have the fact—to which I have already referred—that the local board has not altogether given satisfaction in the past in the matter of the value of the work which it has turned out. There may be reasons for this result. It may be said that local boards have not had enough funds to distribute, since the district boards do not trust them with responsibility, and that therefore they have not done as much as they could. However, the fact remains—and I think it is the general opinion—that the local board has not been a great success. Another solution of the matter which is mentioned in the replies is that we might constitute standing committees of the district boards for the supervision of smaller areas within the old jurisdictions of the local boards. That is a point, Sir, which will merit examination. It would eliminate an intermediate body, and possibly stimulate greater interest on the part of the district board in the working of these union committees if it had some of its members directly cognizant of the details regarding them.

Apart, however, from the issue whether the circle board is or is not a desirable part of the future machinery, there is another matter to be considered. The Bill, as framed, would be fairly simple and easy of working, provided it was introduced throughout a district or even throughout a subdivision. But in the opinions which have been received there is the view expressed that it will not be found feasible, as a matter of practical working, to make an extension covering as much even as a whole subdivision, as there are not many subdivisions throughout which these village bodies could be constituted with any very hopeful certainty of success. The view is also expressed that it would not be expedient to take a larger unit than the thana, and that even within the thana there is the risk of a certain amount of unsatisfactory working in the more backward portions of its jurisdiction. But if, retaining the system of circle boards, the Act is extended to an area smaller than a whole subdivision, we are likely to get into rather deep water; that is to say, there might be the circle board exercising its jurisdiction in one part of the subdivision and the old local board controlling the balance, and if either the transferred part or the residue were small, one of these bodies would obviously exercise its authority on an insignificant scale, while the existence of both simultaneously would be awkward; again, the existing system of election by local boards to membership of the district boards would be complicated. That is a point which will have to be carefully gone into. If standing committees of the district boards were constituted it might be possible to get over part of the difficulty, though it might be objected that this entails needless interference with the areas over which the present local boards exercise jurisdiction, since areas within which village unions will not be created under the Bill would still pass under the jurisdiction of the standing committees.

That is, I think, the largest issue of principle which it will be for the Select Committee to tackle, and apart from it, it will be mainly a matter of examining the detailed suggestions with the idea of seeing whether they suggest any improvements in the clauses of the Bill."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"The people of Bengal welcome the Bengal Village Self-government Bill, 1918. I may be permitted to discuss some of the underlying principles enunciated in it, namely, (1) the protection of the village by rural police, and (2) the exercise of municipal administration in rural areas.

The growing popular feeling was that the Bengal Village Chaukidari Act of 1870 did not prove successful by the interference of the police. The provisions of Bengal Act I of 1886 and of Bengal Act I of 1892 disturbed the object and policy of the Chaukidari Act. The present Bill has affirmed the main principle of the Chaukidari Act. It aims at local self-government from the lower stratum and therefore the amalgamation of the panchayat and the union committees has secured considerable improvement of local self-government in villages. But while recognising this principle, I find there is a departure in clauses 23 and 24 of the Bill. The appointments of the village chaukidar and daffadar lie with the District Magistrate although their salaries are to be paid by the village committee. Restricted powers are given to the village committee under sub-clause (2) of clause 24 of the Bill as regards the dismissal of chaukidars and daffadars. The punishment to be awarded is authorized to be given by the District Magistrate. He is authorized to appoint a daffadar. This seems to be an inconsistency in the provisions of the Bill. The principle to my mind is that larger powers are to be given to the village committee. I notice that the control of the District Chaukidari Reward Fund is given to the Magistrate in preference to the village committee.

There is another idea prevailing in the scheme of the Act. The Bill provides for the formation of the circle board. To guarantee the success of the work of the village committee these boards are to be constituted. There is a difference of opinion as to the abolition of the local boards and the substitution in their place of the circle boards which are considered unsuitable to the condition of Bengal and are viewed as more expensive.

I suppose the Select Committee will modify the various clauses of the Bill and I shall not enter into details as for example the meaning of the word resident in clause 5 of the Bill.

There is another principle which has been lost sight of in the Bill. I contend that all roads and drains existing at the time of the establishment of a village committee or of a circle board, not being private property and not being maintained by Government or by the District Boards, shall also vest in the village committee or circle board. The formation of village courts is a marked and distinctive feature in the Bill. These courts are to be established for the convenience of the rural population.

I venture to think that it will not be to the interest of suitors, if legal practitioners are not allowed to appear in these courts, otherwise suitors will be in the hands of touts. Besides, these suitors and the judges are not expected to know much of law and therefore justice demands that pleaders should not be prohibited to conduct such cases which are tried by these Courts. The words in clause 83 of the Bill appointing all or any of the members of the committee to be a village court is open to criticism. There ought to be a bench of two or more judges. The judgment of a single judge is not expected to be more satisfactory than that of many. Besides, the member or members are untrained lawyers. It is satisfactory to note that in this Bill the trial of civil cases by a bench of judges is an indication of the trial by a jury. No doubt the value of suits must be small, but it is gratifying to the people that Government have recognised to a small extent the trial of civil cases by a bench of judges. The success of the scheme depends in the selection of the judges of the court. The same argument mutatis mutandis applies to the formation of the bench for trying criminal cases.

There is one clause in the Bill which demands the consideration of the Member in charge. The necessity of the final framing of the rules by Government after due publication. Rules are framed by Government on the authority given by the Legislature. They have the force of law. The Executive Government frame them and not the Legislature. This practice has been observed for sometime, but, I venture to think, that if they are drafted by Government and legal force is given to them, it is just and proper, at any rate, that Government will be pleased to accept public criticism on the publication of these rules.

The Village Self-Government Bill shows a desire that the administration of local affairs ought to be in the hands of the people. Any one who reads the Bill carefully will be convinced of the fact that village committees ought to be independent units in the administration of local affairs. They may prosper if there be less interference by the District Magistrates and if the several clauses of the Bill divest the interference by the Magistrate."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I am unable to agree with the previous speaker and the Hon'ble Member of Government. It seems to me that the better course would have been to wait for some time than to proceed with the Bill at present. The main idea of the Bill is to improve the village sanitation, the village drainage and conservancy with power for taxation if necessary under the supervision of the local officers who will be under the supervision of the District Magistrate and the Commissioner; and when these new bodies contemplated in the Bill will come into existence the existing local Boards and Union Committees, wherever they are in existence, would be abolished. For the last quarter of a century, ever since 1885 I believe, the District Board administration was under the supervision of the District Magistrate and the Commissioner; it is only recently and in a few instances that non-official chairmen have been appointed. I could not understand why Union Committees were not established all over the country and why real improvement could not be effected in this direction. Funds for the purpose have only to be taken out of the district fund which is at the disposal and the management of the District Board, and with some taxation that fund shall have to be augmented and utilised for effecting this improvement. In the Local Self-government Act of 1885 there is a provision, I believe it is section 118, which gives such power for assessing any taxes in the Union Committees. Unfortunately, however, only local Boards were established in many places and not Union Committees. The real work is to be done by Union Committees. The local Boards being only the supervising authority, it is not possible for the local Board to pay proper attention to the needs of the several thanas in their jurisdiction. If anything is to be done it is to be done by the Union Committee, but unfortunately that could not be done. My Lord, it may be asked why at a time when larger questions are as Union Committees were not established being considered as to how far popular control should be established upon local bodies such a proposal has been put forward. As I was trying to show, all these improvements could be carried out by the District Board and Union Committees, and special officers could be appointed in the District Board to supervise and train villagers in that direction. If that could not be done under the supervision of the District Magistrate and the Commissioner for so long a period, where is the guarantee that it would be done now? If the funds are to be taken from the District Board, why should they be deprived of the power of supervision? These are things which it seems to me can be best considered in the Reformed Council. I do not know how long it will take to establish it, but at any rate, it seems to me there is no hurry about the present Bill. The Bill has been circulated, and opinions have been received. There is difference of opinion as to the special provisions that have been introduced by the Member in charge. As to the Chaukidari Act, the Act of 1870 was more useful; the Act of 1892 created difficulty and some of the powers given in the Act of 1870 were taken away by the Act of 1892. Now, there are two bodies side by side; one is the village panchayet and another the Union Committees in some places, and the Local Boards in another. There is not much power in the hands of the panchayets and in the present Bill, also I do not find that it is proposed to give them much power. As to the judicial work, I am not sure how far it will be a real benefit to the people, or whether it will be at all possible for the proposed village court to come to a decision on points of res judicata and so forth without the help of trained lawyers, or whether it will be only the village touts who will get the advantage. Of course there are some safeguards that the people, if they are not satisfied, will go to the district headquarters or subdivisional headquarters for the purpose. However, I am not concerned with these and such other details at present; my idea is, and I respectfully submit for Your Excellency's serious consideration, whether it would not be better to postpone the consideration of the Bill for the present and let us see how far over the local bodies popular control would be established, and in what better way that can be done.

With these remarks, I oppose the reference of this Bill to Select Committee."

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHHERESWAR RAY said :—

"My Lord, I shall make only two suggestions in connection with the Bill now before the House. First, I suggest that a maximum rate of assessment should be fixed by law. Section 39 empowers the Village Committee to assess according to circumstances and the property within the village of the person liable to assessment. This gives an extremely wide power to the Committee and might prove dangerous in cases of strong party feelings in the village. Maximum rates of Chaukidari Tax and Road and Public Works Cesses are fixed by statute and I would strongly urge that some such rate should be fixed for the Village Fund requirements.

The other point that I would like to suggest for the consideration of the Select Committee is that petty rent suits, not exceeding Rs. 25 in value, should be included within the jurisdiction of village courts, with the proviso that on application to the Munsiff, by the defendant, they should be transferred to his own file. This will be of immense advantage both to the ryots and the zemindars. It is a general complaint of the ryots that they are unnecessarily harassed by repeated and vexatious rent suits. They say that if they have to attend far-off courts, in addition to their personal inconvenience in a strange town, their work at home also suffers considerably by their absence; and oftentimes these suits are instituted, they allege, in order to make them submit to illegal exactions of the zemindar. Admitting for the sake of argument, that their allegations are true, it would be considerably to their advantage if the petty rent suits are tried in their own village. As for the zemindars, it is an outstanding complaint that petty rent suits, thanks to the legal formalities and enforced exactions of court people, are not at all a paying affair from a financial point of view. Thus, if the tenants of small holdings, resist the payment of rents, as they generally do if there are joint landlords, the latter find it extremely difficult to realise their dues. It is therefore to the advantage of zemindars as well, if petty rent suits are tried by village courts. I therefore, urge that provision should be made to make these suits triable by village courts.

There is one further point to which I should draw Your Excellency's attention. It is regarding the composition of the Select Committee. The zemindars are vitally interested in this legislation. The burden of local taxation will fall heavily on the zemindars and there are also other matters which affect our interests. But I am sorry to observe that not a single representative of our community in this Council has been taken on the Committee. The same remarks apply to the Select Committee on the Primary Education Bill. I do not know whether it is a studied neglect of our representatives. But I think I ought to make my humble submission to Your Excellency regarding the matter.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

My Lord, of the three Hon'ble Members who have spoken on this motion, the speeches of two deal mainly with matters of detail arising out of the Bill, and I can only assure the Hon'ble Members that these details will be duly examined by the Select Committee. With reference to the remark of the last speaker regarding the constitution of the Select Committee, I can assure him that there was absolutely no intention whatever on the part of the Government not to consult the zemindars in a matter of this kind. As a matter of fact, in selecting names for the Select Committee we first took those of some members representative of District Boards, as the subject of District Boards enters so largely into the Bill, and following upon that, we tried to make the Select Committee representative of official and non-official interests and of the two great communities of Hindus and Muhammadans. I do not think it can be said that there are many points in the Bill which so distinctly refer to zemindars that they cannot be adequately dealt with unless the special representatives of the latter sit on the Select Committee—moreover there is always the right of moving amendments in Council—and some members of the Select Committee are zemindars themselves, although not representing special zemindari constituencies.

The only point of principle that has been raised is that taken by the Hon'ble Babu Kisor Mohan Chaudhuri, who has, as I understand him, suggests that we should postpone the Bill on the ground that its introduction at the present moment is inopportune. I am afraid I cannot agree with the reasons which he has advanced. Even historically this is not a new subject. The desirability of encouraging and advancing village self-government, even taking modern times, certainly goes back to the days of the Police Commission. It was advocated in the Decentralisation Commission's Report, and it was also urged in 1913 by the District Administration Committee. It is constantly referred to as the burden of many newspaper articles and it is frequently mentioned in the speeches of public men as one of the crying needs of the province. It cannot be said that we have suddenly hit upon a novel idea and are going to rush it through with indecent speed. On the contrary, this Bill might well have been introduced by the late Government of Lord Carmichael, and it would have been a matter of satisfaction to the present Government if the Bill had been passed through by our predecessors in whose time it originated in the report of the District Administration Committee. Secondly, apart from the fact that it is not a new subject, it is particularly opportune at the present moment, as it seems to me, to pursue it. The air is just now full of proposals and suggestions for extensive alterations in the superstructure of Government. It is a matter of common agreement that for the successful working of that superstructure we must look to the soundness of the foundations, and it is also a matter of common agreement that those foundations are to be found in the villages, and in small bodies composed of the villagers themselves doing work in the immediate neighbourhood of their homes. The point is dwelt upon in the report of the Secretary of State and the Viceroy, and I do not wish to elaborate it, but it appears to me to be particularly appropriate, that, simultaneously with this large advance which is coming in higher spheres, we should endeavour to enlarge and improve what after all is the immediate local foundation of Government in this country, the administration of the village itself. Therefore, Sir, I can not advise the Council to accept the view which has been put forward by the Hon'ble Member—a view which reading the opinions received on this Bill and the views as expressed on platforms and in the press, is one which is held, if at all, by a small minority, even if it be not by a minority of one.

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.THE BENGAL JUVENILE SMOKING BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Juvenile Smoking Bill, 1918.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.RESOLUTIONS

(under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest).

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government do take steps for the prevention of the pollution of the water of the Bhagarathi (especially near the Municipal areas which are not provided with the supply of filtered water) by trade waste waters, mineral oils, other washings, and trade refuse from neighbouring mills, factories, workshops and distilleries, etc., in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Howrah and Hooghly."

He said :—

"My Lord, the water of the Bhagarathi is nowadays polluted to a larger extent than before by trade waste waters, mineral oils, and other washings by cleaning the different parts of the machinery and trade refuse from the neighbouring mills, factories, workshops, etc., which are evidently on the increase. In 1879-80 there were in India 22 jute mills at work with 4,964 looms and 70,840 spindles only. But now (1915-16) there are jute mills in Bengal as shown below :—

Jute Mills.
Districts.	No. of mills.	No. of looms.	No. of spindles
24-Parganas	42	24,032	478,875
Hooghly	12	6,693	141,236
Howrah	12	8,518	178,730
Total	66	39,243	798,841

Besides there are on the river side 11 cotton mills, 2 paper mills, 2 distilleries and various other kinds of large industrial establishments in the above-mentioned three districts.

The subject of the disposal of trade waste demands serious attention of Your Excellency's Council. The unfiltered water of the Bhagirathi taken very near the edge, is the drinking supply of many millions of the population in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Hooghly and Howrah. Only a very small number of municipal towns in these districts is provided with filtered water, but in the majority of municipal towns, viz., North Dum-Dum, Boranagore, Kemarhatty, Panihatty, Barackpore, North and South Barrackpore, Titagarh, Garulia, Bhatpara, Naihatty Halisahar in the district of 24-Parganas, Rishra-Konnagore, Baidyabatty, Bhadreswar and Kotrung in the district of Hooghly and Bally in the district of Howrah, there has not as yet been any arrangement for the supply of filtered water to the people.

The question connected with the sanitary condition of the water of the Bhagirathi of the present day in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Hooghly and Howrah has as a matter of fact become a very complicated problem on account of the presence of the sewage of effluents from the manufacturing processes of the neighbouring mills, factories, etc.

The principal kinds of trade refuse and washings of the different parts of the machinery met with in these places in ordinary practice are derived from following heads :—

- (1) Waste waters resulting from the cleansing and other preparatory processes connected with jute and cotton fibres,
- (2) Paper making,
- (3) Distilleries, and
- (4) Various chemical works, etc.

1. Jute cotton—Raw cotton as it reaches the spinner contains about 5 per cent. of impurities, which, if not removed would impair the whiteness of manufactured goods and would interfere with subsequent dyeing and printing operation. These impurities, according, to Dr. E. Schunck, comprise—

- (1) A cotton wax.
- (2) A fatty acid which appears to be either margaric or a mixture of palmitic and stearic acids.
- (3) Nitrogenous colouring matters.
- (4) Pectic acid, which forms the greater bulk of the impurities.
- (5) Albuminous matter.

The bleaching of raw jute whether in the yarn or the piece is essentially the same as the process used for cotton. It is however longer and more tedious and the various processes, boiling, chemicking and souring must be repeated several times before a satisfactory result is obtained. The raw jute contains a greater proportion of impurities than raw cotton.

Dr. H. M. Wilson, M.D., B.Sc., and Dr. H. T. Calvert, M.Sc., P.H.D. E.I.C. (the former being the Chief Inspector, West Riding, of the Yorkshire Rivers Board and the latter Chief Chemical Assistant, West Riding, of Yorkshire Rivers Board), Authors of a Text Book on Trade Waste Waters ; Their Nature and Disposal. Published by C. Griffin & Co. Ltd., London, state "that septic tank treatment of liquids containing organic matter can never by itself suffice to produce effective purification and the opinion is now generally held that it does not serve to bring them into the best condition for subsequent biological treatment, as they are also wholly robbed of dissolved oxygen and contain sulphuretted hydrogen. Septic tank treatment is seldom to be recommended for trade waste waters....."

2. Paper making—Esparto grass is used for the highest class of printing papers. For writing paper, rags are used, whilst for news-papers wood-pulp is largely used. The quantity of water used is generally greatest at mills where rags and esparto are used. The waste liquors produced in the manufacture of paper from esparto grass are very often found polluted. The liquid from the boiling process is usually mixed with the liquor obtained from the first washing of pulp. In the manufacture of brown-paper, the dirty nature of the materials creates very strong polluting liquids. Owing to the large amount of caustic soda used, in nearly all the processes of paper making the effluents from paper mills are almost invariably exceedingly alkaline, and therefore very injurious to fish life and streams in general. The adequate treatment of the strong 'kier' liquors is very difficult and up to now there seems to be no efficient and economical way of dealing with them.

3. Distilleries.—The waste liquid derived from distilleries is mostly water which is always polluted and it speedily decomposes, lactic and butyric acids being formed. The presence of distillery waste in any quantity is apt to cause considerable nuisance. Distillery waste has been successfully treated on land and also in percolating filters, the usual course being to precipitate with lime as a preliminary process. The great point appears to be to deal with the liquid, before it becomes acid.

4. Various chemical works.—The refuse from chemical works is generally poisonous and polluting.

Mineral oils.—Various kinds of mineral oils are often used in cleaning machinery in mills, factories and workshops. These oils are sometimes visible on the surface of the water of the Bhagirathi and pollute the river to a great extent.

In the majority of cases, the solutions of the problem have been found signally wanting when actually put to the test. There is no best method of the disposal of the trade waste and mineral oils used in cleaning machinery, into the river, the unfiltered water of which is the drinking supply of many millions and which can be universally adopted regardless of local conditions in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Hooghly and Howrah.

To mention all the various trade processes in detail and the different waste produced by each, would require a much longer time than the limit of time at my disposal in moving this important resolution concerning the welfare of many thousands of the population. Under the circumstances, I do not intend even here to mention very briefly the mass of most valuable information which exists in the reports of the various committees formulated by civilised Governments in Europe and in America, and Royal Commissions which have been appointed in England from time to time, giving the best views of the period on the subject.

It would be quite impossible within the short limit of time at my disposal to-day to deal with all the points connected with the trade waste waters, mineral oils mainly used in cleaning the machinery, other washing and trade refuse which now pollute the water of the Bhagirathi.

Trades are carried on where there is generally no means of access to sewers and consequently pollution of the Bhagirathi generally occurs.

Trade wastes may consist of solids or liquids. As a general rule, however, the bulk of trade waste is in liquid form consisting of water used for trade purposes, and for carrying various impurities both in solution and suspension.

The fact must not be lost sight of" that solids in the form of heaps of chemical refuse may, through the agency of rain water, become a most serious source of pollution, either continuous or intermittent.

The Government of India in a recent resolution on sanitation concludes that "the Governor General in Council appeals with confidence to all who have interest in the well-being of India to join with him and the local Governments in a sustained endeavour to give effect to His Imperial Majesty's most gracious wish that the homes of his Indian subjects may be brightened and their labour sweetened by the spread of knowledge with all that follows in its train, a higher level of thought, of comfort and of health."

With these words, I beg to move this important Resolution on sanitation in which Your Excellency takes a keen interest. And I hope and trust that this Resolution may be accepted by all the members—official and non-official European and Indian Members of your Excellency's Council.

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My Lord. I whole-heartedly associate myself with the resolution which has been moved by my hon'ble friend, though I am not prepared to travel over the ground of the scientific researches to which my learned friend has referred. It is an admitted fact that the River Hooghly, from Calcutta upwards, to a distance of over 20 miles, as far as the tide goes, is a receptacle of all sorts of pollution; and it has to be admitted also that in spite of the few water-works that may have been established in some of the riparian municipalities, a large number of the population of the towns and villages on both sides of the River Hooghly, who have scruples to use filtered water, do actually use the river water both for drinking as well as culinary purposes. If Government feel that it is justified in suspending Municipalities for defects of water-works, I think it cannot ignore its own responsibilities of giving as much protection as is possible to the river-water of the Hooghly from Calcutta upwards. With these observations I support this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, the resolution is somewhat wide in its scope, for it refers to the discharge into the Hooghly of trade waste and refuse from all kinds of industrial undertakings, whether big or small, and whatever the nature of the material they deal with; and the Hon'ble Member seems to think that all trade waste is noxious. Legislation would be necessary to give full effect to the resolution; for in Bengal there is no such measure as the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, which is in force in Great Britain. Government cannot at this stage undertake to introduce legislation of this character, as there are not sufficient data to show how far legislation is necessary, and what form it should take. The Sanitary Commissioner has made an enquiry and finds that while some of the industrial works on the Hooghly discharge trade waste into its water, others do not. Some have installed recovery plant to prevent waste or loss of material, others have not. The Sanitary Commissioner's enquiry, however, is only a preliminary investigation. It is not exhaustive, and Government have at present not got full information as to all the discharges that come into the Hooghly and as to their hygienic effects. Dr. Fowler stated in a report on rivers that 'rivers may be polluted with trade effluents that will give all manner of strange chemical analysis, but these will not materially increase the number of pathogenic organisms. The question of river pollution is not a simple and easy one. It is also not concerned merely with trade waste but extends to other things, for instance, the dumping into the river of municipal refuse and street sweepings by the authorities of riparian municipalities, etc. Before undertaking legislation it is necessary to have a full enquiry to show exactly how matters stand, what nuisances should be provided for and in what way. Otherwise there are certain to be omissions which would defeat the object of legislation. Again, it may not be necessary to prohibit some matter from being discharged into the river; other discharges may be permissible if subject to proper safeguards and so on. Government are also bound to see that any action which may be taken, while providing proper safeguards for the public health, does not imperil the industries, large or small, on which the prosperity of Calcutta and the riparian towns so largely depends. While, therefore, Government is unable to accept the resolution as it stands, it is ready to institute a full enquiry in order to ascertain whether legislation, and if so what kind of legislation, is necessary; and I trust the Hon'ble Mover will be satisfied with this assurance."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, as far as I understand the words of Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, Government intend to make a full enquiry and then, if necessary, to introduce legislation. It is very gratifying to get this information. There cannot be any doubt, Sir, that it is very uncomfortable for one who lives on the river side and the people who go to bathe in the river to see trade-refuse and other filthy things floating on the river. Thousands and thousands of applications have been made to many persons and authorities but they have been of no avail. Therefore it is highly necessary that step should be taken by Government in this connection and I approach Your Excellency's Government with that object and that object alone. Your Excellency will consider that time will be necessary to make an enquiry on the subject and legislation, if introduced, will take further time. What shall be done in the meantime is a problem which Your Excellency will have to consider. If I do understand that the people who are complaining of this nuisance are perfectly right in putting their complaint before their authorities, it is a question for consideration whether immediate steps should be taken or not. My Lord, I am not in a position to suggest to Your Excellency's Council what these steps will be, but it is for Your Excellency's Council to consider that if legislation is necessary upon the materials and facts which have been supplied to the Council, it is also necessary that immediate steps should be taken in this connection. It is a growing complaint and I cannot emphasise my idea better than this—that Government ought to take immediate steps to put a stop to the commission of this nuisance. We can trace, Sir, the place where the nuisance is committed and if we do that then certainly some kind of injunction, some kind of steps—effective steps—should be taken immediately. Your Excellency will consider that, after a good deal of consideration, after studying the various reports of the authorities on the subjects and after personal inspection of the locality, I have come to Your Excellency's Council, complaining of the very fact which is the daily complaint of those who live on the riverside. This is all that I can say.

* The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Government High English School be established at Cox's Bazar in the district of Chittagong.

He said :—

“My Lord, Cox's Bazar is a subdivision of Chittagong. Its population is about 7 lacs; its income from Khas Mahal only is about 7 lacs. It has come under British sway nearly 200 years ago. It is a matter of regret that up to now it has no Government or aided school there. It is not half a century that the Hill Tracts in Chittagong has come under the British rule. It has got a Government Middle English School some 20 years back at Rangamati. The inhabitants of Cox's Bazar consist of mugs, lower class Hindus and uneducated Muhammadans. It being situated far away at the east extremity of this Presidency in the south-east is left uncared for in the matter of education, though it has been given a munsif's court, a subdivision office, a Khas Mehal office and a Sub-registry office, and several police thanas; though there is a good number of pleaders, muktears, revenue agents and amlas to meet the requirements of the several offices of the court, but among them, Your Excellency will be surprised to learn, not even one of them belongs to this unfortunate subdivision. The reason is not far to seek. It is in want of English education. I believe this fact alone will commend itself for the establishment of a Government school there.

This subdivision had once the good fortune to have the advent of the Director of Public Instruction with the Inspector of Muhammadan schools, and a deputation headed by the Subdivisional Officer waited upon him, and the Director of Public Instruction was pleased to tell them that if a High English school be established there it would be a Government High English school. It is a talk of some 6 years back—no indication of establishing a High English school is yet visible. Last year Mr. Biss, Assistant Director of Muhammadan Education, went there and gave them hope that a High English school would be given. Some 60 boys belonging to this sub-division reading in Chittagong flocked there, but unfortunately the Director of Public Instruction did not fulfil their expectation and they had to revert to Chittagong again. According to the report of the Buddhist Association more than 100 students read in Chittagong; most of them read in several schools in class VII and upwards. Complaints from Amlas of several offices and even from Hakims such as Munsifs, Sub-divisional Officers, Khas Tahsildars and Sub-Registrars are heard that they cannot give their children education at Cox's Bazar, there being no High English school. Similar complaints are heard from the people of the legal profession and from Amlas. I trust complaints like these are not unworthy to be heard. I asked the present Director of Public Instruction to visit that place, but I think that he could not find time perhaps owing to pressure of work.

My Lord, the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam had given this sub-division a Government Middle English school and had given hope of raising it to the status of a High English school. With the disappearance of that Government that expectation has disappeared like several other hopes.

My Lord, this Council will be struck with surprise that, under this Presidency, which is known to be a most advanced one in British India, there is a sub-division having no High English school. Government have given Government High English schools in several places. I fail to understand why this sub-division which is most backward is not given a High English school. Nature is not unkind to this place; many European gentlemen far from this place frequent Cox's Bazar for change of climate and to take sea baths to remove skin diseases. In point of climate it is congenial to health. In point of education it is lamentable, it is very backward. It requires the special care of the Government, a Government which is famous for taking care in order to ameliorate the condition of its subjects.

Further delay for improving the condition of this sub-division in the matter of education will bring blasphemy upon the good name of British rule.

The Middle English school is located in Khas Mahal land. It has a boarding house, and the land in possession of the Middle English school is quite sufficient for a High English school. Additional expenditure for the erection of 4 upper classes is necessary, and if the present Government expenditure be doubled all the requirements for a High English school will be quite enough. Now by the grace of God, the financial difficulty has gone with the close of the unfortunate war. With these observations, I beseech Your Excellency's Government on behalf of lacs of Your Excellency's subjects to award a Government High English school to Cox's Bazar by accepting my resolution.

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the resolution which has been moved by my hon'ble friend to the right. I only want to say that if the Government find it difficult, as I believe they will find difficulty, to accept the resolution as it stands to pledge themselves to establish a Government High School at Cox's Bazar, I hope my friend and the people interested in Cox's Bazar and residing therein will be satisfied if the Department of Education only promise to help towards the establishment of aided High School and also encourage the local people with a grant-in-aid. I believe that is a more practical way of dealing with this matter. Considering the situation and the fact that there are no high schools, I think the matter will receive careful consideration at the hands of the Director of Public Instruction."

The Hon'ble MR. WORDSWORTH said :—

"My Lord, the subject of this resolution is one that has received long attention departmentally and particularly at the commencement of this year when a petition was submitted to Government making the same request. The matter was then investigated carefully, by educational officers on the spot, by the superior administrative officers of Government in the district and division and by educational officers who went from Headquarters at Calcutta; and it was the deliberate decision of Government, after a long and careful enquiry, that no case had been made out for the establishment of a Government High English School in the subdivision. The words of Government were that Government were unable to accede to the request inasmuch as it was not the general policy of Government to establish Government High English Schools in subdivisions. The circumstances of the situation are briefly these. In this big sub-division, Government is a large landlord. The population are diverse in caste, creed and customs, and are backward in education, using the words in the ordinary sense; they have not made much advance towards what we call secondary education. Government, however, mindful of its position as landlord, and also in accordance with its general policy, has done much and is doing much to encourage education in this subdivision, and I have amongst my papers a long list of the various schemes which Government has worked out and put into operation for the educational welfare of this district. They touch mainly primary and vernacular education and the training of teachers: they include special facilities for the education of Burmese children, and Mohamedan children, Government also ten years ago provincialized, i.e., turned into a Government school, a local Middle English school and so has afforded facilities here for giving education to boys up to the age of 13 or 14. This was intended to be a test of the position and of the needs of the district. This Middle English school has not flourished. It has been a great expense to Government and the expense appears to be increasing as the roll number is steadily diminishing. There is in this experiment nothing that will warrant us in going forward confidently to the establishment of a Government High English School, for in this matter of the establishment of Government High English Schools, Government has a practice and a policy. Government High Schools are regularly maintained at district head-quarters. It is true that we have in Bengal a few Government schools at subdivisional head-quarters, but there are special reasons for them. Those in Western Bengal are mainly survivals from a very early date of English education in Bengal when schools were established near Calcutta. In Eastern Bengal we have some Government schools at subdivisional head-quarters as a legacy from the late Eastern Bengal and Assam which took over temporarily and turned into Government schools certain schools at subdivisional head-quarters which there was reason to suspect were being used for purposes other than educational. This is our practice and it is based upon a policy on which the most recent authoritative statement is this. The Government of India in a resolution of 21st February 1913, stated the policy in these words: "Subject to the necessities of variation in deference to local conditions their policy in regard to secondary education required among other things the establishment of Government High English Schools in such localities as might on a survey of local conditions and with due regard to educational effort and expense be proved to require them."

It was by this test that the needs of the Cox's Bazar subdivision were considered this year, when Government decided that no case had been made out for the establishment of this school.

The appeal to the Government is an appeal partly to Government's duty as a Government, partly to Government's duty as a landowner, and partly to Government's compassion. I have amongst my papers letters written from these different points of view, and the appeal to Government's compassion is, I believe, a confession that the local public do not believe that a high school in the Cox's Bazar subdivision can be a successful high school judged by ordinary standards. Usually when there is a real need for education in a district or locality not served by a Government school, the local public transform and put this need into effect; they establish a high school which as soon as it can prove that it is likely to be successful establishes a claim to Government's interest and assistance. This has not been done in Cox's Bazar. I believe one or two sporadic attempts have been made to form a High English school, but they have not flourished long enough to attract the attention of Government and the appeal now is that we should establish a Government High English School there because the local public are diffident about moving on their own initiative. Government therefore has considered that the need is not proved, and while I am not able to say what may happen in the future, and while I cannot recommend the Council to accept this resolution, I do ask the Council to believe that we are not insensible to the difficulties of a place like Cox's Bazar, or to our obligations as an Education Department."

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI said :—

"My Lord, the Director of Public Instruction has been kind enough to admit that Government is the landlord of that subdivision, and is the ruler of it also. There is no denial of that fact. Government realises several lacs of rupees annually from that khass mahal as a zemindar and there are besides other sources of income. Several thousands of people live in that subdivision. But what steps have the Government taken for the good of the people of that division within the last hundred years? We are fully aware that Government is in full sympathy with the educational needs of the people. Government has recently taken over Rangamati and has already established the Chakma High School there at a heavy cost. Government has given the people a chance there, without knowing whether it is going to be successful or not, and yet no steps have been taken for the improvement of the Cox's Bazar Subdivision which is inhabited mostly by Maghs and some low class Hindus. The Director of Public Instruction has admitted that for special reasons in certain sub-divisions Government themselves established High English Schools. This sub-division should, I think, also be treated in the same way. There are many public offices in this sub-division and the local people cannot be appointed because they are not educated sufficiently in English. I have been told in answer to a question of mine that the initial expenditure would be Rs. 3,000 on a High English School. If we consider the income Government derives from that sub-division, then, I think, that a High English School can be easily established and supported there. The school can be situated on khass mahal land and there will be no necessity for acquisition of land. The school which is already there has a few classes and a few more classes can be added thereto. Then if Government see that the people do not appreciate the school, the matter can be dropped at once. If Government start one class just now, they will see that it will be filled up with students who have to live in Chittagong now. Cox's Bazar is a very healthy place, and the people pay a sufficient amount on rates and taxes, and Government as a zemindar have got a duty to perform by the people and they should establish a High English School in this sub-division."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

17. The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

(1) that a sifting inquiry be made by a committee, consisting of experts and non-official gentlemen, to ascertain—

(a) the causes which led to the recent unprecedented flood over a large area in the districts of Rajshahi, Bogra, and Dinajpur ; and

(b) the conditions of the Atrai, the Gadai, and the Baranoi rivers and the waterways connected with them, and, in particular, if the recent lowering of the railway bridges by about 3 feet in or near the affected localities has caused serious obstruction to the natural waterways of the country and has made the recurrence of such a flood possible ; and

(2) that such remedial measures be adopted as may be recommended by that committee.

He said :—

My Lord, it will perhaps be needless for me to dilate at length on the ravages caused by the recent flood in parts of the districts of Rajshahi, Bogra, Pabna and Dinajpur because details have been published in the newspapers, from which the Hon'ble Members must have already come to know of the nature and extent of the same. I can only say this that the suffering has been very great and more so because the people of the affected area are not habituated to such floods. I, for one, do not remember such a flood ever having taken place in this part of the Rajshahi Division within my life-time. Therefore, my Lord, what I want is a prevention of the recurrence of such floods in future for, as we all know, prevention is much better than cure. Of course the Government has done much to relieve the sufferers after the flood came and it will be sheer ingratitude on my part not to express to them and especially to the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, who went to the locality for a personal inspection, my sincere thanks on behalf of the people of the Rajshahi Division, and I shall also be failing in my duty if in this connection I omit to mention the splendid services rendered in this respect by Mr. Cassells, the District Magistrate of Rajshahi, but for whose prompt action the suffering of the people of the Naogaon subdivision would perhaps have been double, the District Magistrate of Bogra and other Government officers and non-official bodies such as the Ramkrishna Mission and other relief committees local or otherwise whose genuine sympathy and untiring personal labour, at considerable self-sacrifice, for the people, have evoked great admiration and respect. But, my Lord, when the suffering caused by the flood is so great, something ought to be done, if that is possible and within our power, to prevent the annual visits of such devastating accidents and I want a committee of experts and non-officials to enquire into the causes of this flood and suggest remedial measures.

It has been suggested that heavy downpour continuously for 48 hours was the only cause. But, my Lord, to my ears this seems rather strange because the natural drainage in that part of the country has always proved adequate on account of the existence of several rivers passing through the Chalan bil and further there is no explanation why the flood was confined to limited areas and did not extend to the whole area through which these rivers pass. My information, on the other hand, is that water logging on account of the Railway bridges over the rivers and other waterways is rather the main cause of this unprecedented flood. There has been an interruption to the natural drainage by the lowering of, and diminution of spans, in the Railway bridges in the newly constructed Broad-gauge Railway lines from Pakshi to Santahar and Ishurdi to Serajgunge.

I have been credibly informed that the two rivers, the Jumna and the Atrai, meet at Suktigachha on the west of the Atrai bridge on the Northern Section of the Eastern Bengal Railway, but the waterways through the Railway line being insufficient, the water level on the west of the line after the heavy rain became 4 or 5 feet higher than that on the eastern side; and this resulted in the sudden flood in parts of the Naogaon Subdivision and Dinajpur drained by those two rivers. Similarly obstructions in the river Nagor by the Santahar-Bogra Railway line caused the flood in Bogra. The Gurnadi which is the confluence of the Jumna and the Atrai meets the river Baranai near Sherkole in the Nator Subdivision and then the river Barole or Gadai near Shaoil to the west of Chalan bil and then these rivers pass through it; but the Chalan bil water being obstructed at Bera Faridpur by the Ishurdi-Serajgunge Railway line caused the heavy flood in the areas covered by Singra and Panchupur police-stations in Rajshahi a few days afterwards. In the Kalikuri bil again the water level on the west of the Serajgunge line was 4 or 5 feet higher than that on the eastern side. This heavy rush ultimately washed away a portion of the railway line and then only the flood began to subside. It is also my information that over 500 feet of the waterways were closed when the broad-gauge line from Pakshi to Santahar was constructed. It is rumoured that the Bogra line has recently been inspected and widening of several bridges advised. Such arrangements are also necessary in the Pakshi to Santahar and Ishurdi to Serajgunge lines. If the facts, as stated by me, are true, then there is, to my mind, a clear case for a sifting enquiry for which I appeal to Your Excellency with as much earnestness as is in me and I fervently hope Your Excellency's Government will see their way to accept my humble request. As the Railway administration is with the Government of India, whatever is to be done is to be done by them. This is another reason why a sifting enquiry is necessary in this case."

The Hon'ble Mr. ASHRAF ALI KHAN CHAUDHURI said:—

"My Lord, it requires very few words of mine to support this resolution, in view of the sympathetic interest taken by Government and the prompt and effective measures which were taken by the authorities on the spot, and besides a Member of the Government, the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, personally went over and inspected the place. We all know how much of this distress has been caused by the recent floods and it will only be a sheer waste of time to repeat all that has been said in the papers and in the recent Government communiqué on the subject. I need only say that about 80 square miles in the Rajshahi Division and 40 square miles in Bogra were under flood and people were put to much distress by it. This flood is unprecedented in the annals in the history of Rajshahi; nobody knows when they will occur again, and when it does occur, how are we going to combat it? Some attribute these floods to the railway embankment for the new Sara-Seraiganj Railway running from Ishurdi to Seraiganj, obstructing the free passage of water to the Padma and Jamma, a length of about 50 miles, and it has only one or two openings. It is therefore absolutely necessary that a sifting enquiry should be made, and if it is found that it is due to these railway embankments, more openings should be constructed and other action taken on the advice of experts. I alluded in my budget speech last year to this Sara-Seraiganj Railway and I drew attention to the fact that on one side of the embankment, water was found to be lying stagnant and crops were being damaged. My Lord, I support this resolution heartily, and I take this opportunity of thanking the Government officials who were on the spot at the time of the floods, and especially Mr. Cassells, who went waist deep into the water in Nowgong to rescue children one after another."

The Hon'ble Mr. HELY-HUTCHINSON said:—

"My Lord, I should like to associate myself with this resolution, though I think that I should not like to dictate to Government what should be the composition of the Committee of enquiry which they appoint. The hon'ble mover of the resolution has said that it should consist of officials and non-officials, but I should leave it to Government to decide what form the Committee should take. The motion under discussion raises the question of railways in a river country. When railways are constructed in this country it is to the interest of the engineers who make a preliminary scheme to see that this scheme gives as much chance of profit as possible, and it is my experience that they are apt to do so at the expense of the flooding of the country and at the expense of waterways, and, to a certain extent at the expense of the agriculture of the country generally. I therefore feel very strongly that an enquiry should be made to prove whether this flood is due to the embankment of the Sara-Seraiganj Railway or not. If it is, then I think that steps should be taken as soon as possible to provide adequate culverts and sufficient places for the water to go through in times of flood. I beg to associate myself with the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said:—

"Sir, the resolution of the Hon'ble Member is to the effect that a sifting enquiry should be made by a Committee consisting of experts and non-official and official gentlemen, first, into the causes of the great flood in certain districts of Northern Bengal; and secondly, regarding certain waterways and certain railway embankments."

The Hon'ble BAHU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said:—

"I accept the suggestion made by the Hon'ble Mr. Hely-Hutchinson as to the constitution of the Committee."

The President said:—

"Order, order. the Hon'ble Member will have an opportunity of explaining when he replies."

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING (continuing) said :—

"He further suggests that some remedial measures should be proposed by such a Committee. I can at once reassure the gentlemen who have spoken on this matter that Government desire an enquiry; in fact they have been making an enquiry; but the only point on which I draw issue with the Hon'ble Member is whether the Committee that he proposes is the more satisfactory way of dealing with the situation. A Committee is undoubtedly a useful agency when data are available; but, as I shall shortly show, that is not the case here; and I think I shall be able to show also to the Hon'ble Gentlemen that Government will be able to follow out the enquiry which he desires by its own agency. I must thank him for his appreciation of the two officers of Government intimately connected with this recent calamity, namely, the District Officers of Bogra and Rajshahi who gave most devoted work on the occasion of the flood and of the fact that Government have shown themselves not insensible to the sufferings of the people of the locality. Nevertheless, I must ask him and others to refrain from exaggeration. Undoubtedly, it was a severe flood, but many of the statements in the press are an over-coloured picture; and, although undoubtedly the sufferings were considerable, they were only temporary.

In the first place, I wish to deal with the question of the causes of the flood. As it was an exceptional natural calamity, we should look for some exceptional cause. It may be that the railway embankments in question, some of which are comparatively modern, have contributed; but nevertheless, there is one exceptional cause which can explain the great flooding of particular places quite apart from the railway embankment, and that is the exceptional rainfall. In that part of the country there were floods in 1830, in 1865, and again about 50 years ago; but for the last 50 years there has been no such untoward rainfall in a very defined and restricted area. I shall make that clear by stating that in one place which bore the brunt of it, the rainfall was four times what it usually has been. Furthermore, this extensive rainfall in a very restricted area, which has not occurred for the last 50 years, happened at a time when both the Brahmaputra and the Ganges were themselves in high flood; and embankment or no embankment, the gradient was not very steep towards these rivers. That, I may shortly say, is the reason for the great flood; and the facts being so, it does not require a Committee to find out a reason for the flood.

As regards the condition of these waterways principally in the south of Rajshahi district, the unfortunate fact is that Government are not in possession of hydraulic data for the area; and the reason is obvious. If big floods of this description occur at long intervals of 20, 30 or even 50 years, the necessity of keeping hydraulic data does not arise. However that may be, we have not the data in sufficient quantity and we desire to obtain information. In order to obtain information, we require a staff and time; and it should be remembered that at the present time the Public Works Department is 40 per cent of its normal cadre. Therefore, I say that the Committee would not be in a position to deal with the matter, even if it were appointed at once, inasmuch as it could only come to conclusions on the basis of material, and that material does not exist at present.

As regards the railway embankments, that is a matter in regard to which an enquiry has already been instituted, and Government are quite conscious of the countervailing points of view which have been put forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Hely Hutchinson, the point of view of the railway administration on the one hand and of the people who reside in the vicinity on the other. The actual facts regarding the allegation which have been made are under investigation; and until the investigation is completed, a committee would be unable to form any conclusion. Therefore, Sir, I say that we are prepared to give an undertaking that we shall examine the matter as soon as possible when staff is available; but I am unable to accept the resolution in the form in which it stands. I trust that on that assurance the Hon'ble Mover will not press his resolution.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My lord, I desire to say a few words on this matter. I am glad to find that Government has already taken some steps to enquire into the matter; but there are certain points which, it seems to me, require further investigation. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has stated that the main causes of the flood are excessive rainfall in a limited area and the fact that the Brahmaputra and the Ganges were full at the time. But I understand from people of the locality that the flood on the offside of the embankment was much less than that on the other side; that water on the offside subsided much more quickly and that there was no appreciable distress on the offside of the embankment. That is a point which goes to indicate that the embankment had something or other to do with the matter.

My lord, as regards the question of distress, I do not know whether it was exaggerated in the press; but it must be admitted that the necessities of the matter require that the matter should be attended to as soon as possible. Not only should the matter be attended to but the public ought to be taken into the confidence of Government. If as a matter of fact the railway embankment had nothing to do with it, then it ought to be made possible for the Government to explain that fact to the public. From that point of view, I suggest that a sifting and open enquiry be made by the Government. My lord, my whole object is that in that enquiry the public will be entitled to place before either the Committee or the Government officials who hold the enquiry their point of view. I further suggest that the result of the enquiry be published at an early date. I quite appreciate the difficulties of the Government at the present moment. Government is no doubt shorthanded in regard to officers of the Public Works Department; but the question is one which does not admit of delay. The Council has heard from the Hon'ble Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan that about 120 square miles suffered, it may be temporarily. In a question like this it may perhaps be necessary that additional officers should be appointed. If officers have to be drafted from other provinces, they should be so drafted. I therefore suggest that Government should make a sifting and an open enquiry and should publish the result of that enquiry and, if necessary, should take adequate steps.

If Your Excellency will permit me, I should like to move an amendment to this resolution to the effect that "a sifting and open enquiry be made by Government as regards sub-clauses (a) and (b) of clause (1) of the resolution. As regards clause (2), I suggest that the result of such enquiry be published, and if necessary adequate steps be taken at an early date."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"It is a question for the Hon'ble Member in charge to decide whether he objects to this amendment being moved."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My Lord, under the rules, we are required to give 7 days' notice but the list of business was circulated to us only on Thursday last (21st). I was not in town on that day and if I were in town I could have given only 3 days' notice."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I am told that this particular resolution was circulated 11 days before the meeting of Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I made an incorrect statement due to a misapprehension. I was referring to the list of business. I now remember that copies of the resolutions were as usual circulated earlier."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"My Lord, I am in some difficulty in replying to a matter of this kind at such short notice. I do not wish to take advantage of the fact that such short notice has been given; but I should like to have time to consider this proposal for an open enquiry. I am not prepared at the present moment to agree to such an arrangement. The matter primarily concerns the Railway Board and the Government of India. I am not quite sure whether the Hon'ble Member, in making this suggestion, was thinking of some of the arrangements which the local Government have made to meet the unfortunate results of the floods, or whether he was referring to the enquiry proposed as regards the cause of the flood and its connection with the railway embankment. If he was referring to the latter matter, then at the present moment I am not prepared to accept the arrangement that there should be a public enquiry. As I have already stated on behalf of Government, we are quite prepared, when we get men and material,—which I hope will be in a short time,—to continue the enquiry which we have already started."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Under the circumstances, the Hon'ble Member in charge objects to the amendment and I cannot accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, it is not necessary for me to add anything to what has already been said by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter. Of course, it would have been better if my friend's suggestion could be accepted. I am however glad and thankful to Government that an enquiry has already been instituted in this matter. My only suggestion is that a public enquiry be made, or at any rate the public may be taken into confidence and that the result of such enquiry be made public. As an enquiry is being held, if there are persons who have local knowledge, they may be asked to submit their suggestions; and I shall be quite satisfied if that is done. I have submitted to Your Excellency the fact—and if it is true it demands consideration—that on the west bank of the railway embankment the level of the water was 4 or 5 feet higher than that on the east. This clearly shows that this was due to obstruction and that is what caused the flood. That is a matter on which special attention may be given and all possible assistance from the public may be taken. Of course as there is an assurance from the Government I do not press this resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the orders of supersession of the Municipalities of Burdwan and Hooghly-Chinsurah be reconsidered and withdrawn.

He said :—

"My Lord, it is with some amount of diffidence that I rise to move this resolution before this Council. The question of the dignity and of the honour of the towns of Burdwan and Hooghly cannot be a matter of greater concern to anybody else more than it is to the Hon'ble Member in charge of the portfolio of Local Self-Government, and it would look that it is a bold step on my part to question an order passed by him. But my Lord, as a non-official Member representing the Burdwan Division in this Council, I felt it my duty to bring forward this motion because the question had caused great excitement not only in the two Municipal towns but throughout the Province, and I felt that I would be shirking my duty if I did not do so. My Lord, I do not hold any brief on behalf of the Municipal Commissioners neither am I a great admirer of the defunct body nor was I one of their supporters; but I must say and I also feel that the drastic measures adopted to punish them have not been justified. I know the faults of the Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan, and I know their failings and shortcomings and also I know that they are not few, but still the extreme measure was not called for. Besides they had some extenuating circumstances in their favour, as the body of Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan had done also some good works at critical times. Their difficulty arose since the days of the floods of 1913 when their roads were swept away, houses were practically levelled to the ground and great damage was done to property and to the town and to municipal works and on account of that there was a large accumulation of arrears and a great change in the condition of rate-payers, which made it very difficult for the Municipal Commissioners to realize their dues; and it is for this reason and other causes that large arrears were allowed to accumulate. As has been explained by the Municipal Commissioners, these are the arrears about which a good deal has been said in the Government resolution. The arrears were also delayed on account of the difficulties of realization of the assessments on holdings and the appeals that had to be disposed of before any taxes could be realized. It has also been said that there was want of control over municipal employees.

In the first place, My Lord, so far as that part is concerned, I cannot agree with the Government resolution that there has been any marked want of control on the part of the municipal executive over the municipal employees. No doubt, there was a case of embezzlement and some other cases of theft, so far as the municipal properties were concerned. But, my Lord, that does not show necessarily that there was want of control. Have not there been cases of embezzlement in Government treasuries as well as in Collectors' offices and District Judges' offices also? Does that mean to show that there was want of control? These things do happen now and then. Even only the other day a Post office clerk embezzled a large amount of money out of the Savings Bank account and he was not detected in this embezzlement till the Accountant-General of Posts and Telegraphs found it out some months after. The man was arrested, prosecuted and sentenced to imprisonment, but nobody ever suggested that because there was such an embezzlement, either the Department of the Post Office should be suspended or superseded or the Postmaster-General should be punished on that account. Then, again, my Lord, the Municipal Commissioners have this much in their favour that they have during the period they have served increased a large supply of water to the town of Burdwan. The number of house-connections has been vastly increased; and they were also going to almost complete the elevated reservoir for a better and continuous supply of water to the town of Burdwan. Unfortunately, however, they could not complete it owing to the contractor not being able to supply certain instruments and materials which he wanted in this time of the war. Besides that, my Lord, the difficulty in these days of transit and of getting materials and the rise in the prices have not enabled them to carry out many improvements which they would have otherwise done.

A reference has been made in the resolution itself about the fact that no arrangement had been made for flushing the drains. But, my Lord, I wish to tell this Council that when Government sanctioned the drainage scheme for Burdwan some people of that place said: "Before we start the drains you should arrange for their proper flushing and a system for the supply of unfiltered water to the town." Then the Sanitary Engineer and other advisors of Government said:—"Let the drains be completed first and the question of flushing will be taken up later on"; and for this reason there is no supply of unfiltered water. But, at the same time, it must be said that the drains have not been allowed to remain uncleansed, and every attempt was made by the defunct Municipality to do all that should have been done.

Above all, my Lord, my objection is not so much about Municipal Commissioners because we ourselves have a good deal of complaint about them. But my objection is that we, the ratepayers of Burdwan, had done absolutely nothing to justify the punishment meted out to us. The Municipality was established in Burdwan nearly 33 years ago and it was, I am told, the first Municipality which enjoyed the rights of election and since then the citizens of Burdwan have exercised their franchise with credit and advantage to themselves and to the satisfaction of Government officials. Till now nothing can be said against us; and, I may inform this Council and the Hon'ble Member in charge of the department, that it was only nine months back that the ratepayers of Burdwan found it necessary and desirable to start a Ratepayers' Association to see for themselves, to supervise and at the same time help the Municipal administration and also to see that the necessities of the ratepayers were carefully looked into. What was the significance of the establishment of this Association after 32 years, if it was not that the ratepayers perceived that there was some apathy or neglect on the part of the Municipal Commissioners to do their work properly, and as soon as they found slackness on the part of the Municipal Commissioners, their masters, the ratepayers of Burdwan established their association to put a check on their work and conduct and they proved themselves to be hard taskmasters. I might also inform the Council that the ratepayers appointed ward committees to look into the matter and to advise the association on the working of the municipal questions. There were some Commissioners who did not give satisfaction and, I believe, those Commissioners included both the Commissioners appointed by Government, as well as those elected by ratepayers. The ratepayers have been punished for the faults of those Commissioners; but Government has not punished those whom they appointed as Commissioners of that Municipality. Then we were anxiously looking forward for these Commissioners should to be brought before the Tribunal of the ratepayers at an early date to receive the verdict on their work, and, I think, the verdict of the ratepayers would fully justify the confidence that has been reposed in them. But that opportunity was denied. The present body of Municipal Commissioners, who have been superseded, had served the full term of their office and they ought to have gone out by the 16th of December last but they were allowed to remain as fresh elections were to be held, and it was notified towards the end of September that the general election of the Commissioners would be held on the 8th November 1918. Unfortunately this privilege was denied to us by the order of supersession passed on the 1st October and we were not given an opportunity of exercising the right that we had of choosing our representatives and of passing our judgment on the work of these Municipal Commissioners. I see no justification, my Lord, even admitting that the Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan and their executive were guilty of gross neglect and misconduct, for disenfranchising the whole body of the ratepayers because they had the foolishness or stupidity to elect these men. If there had been cases in which Government officials were found guilty of gross neglect, nobody would ever challenge that Government were guilty for the conduct of these men. Here justice demanded that the Municipal Commissioners should have been punished and not the ratepayers of Burdwan.

"With reference to the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality, I think, my Lord, that I speak the sense of my non-official friends when I say that a great wrong has been done to a worthy body of public men and public workers. Nothing has been said either in Hooghly or elsewhere about the public spirit, the zeal and the energy displayed by the Executive and the Commissioners of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. In the Government resolution much has been said about the water-works, about meters, about the supply of coal and about the mis-spent expenditure of water-works money and about the waste of water. But it must be remembered, My Lord, that it is due to the energy, zeal and enthusiasm shown by the present body of Municipal Commissioners and especially their worthy Chairman that the present water-works came into existence. It was his exertions and endeavours which made it possible for the Municipality of Hooghly-Chinsurah to have the advantage and luxury of the supply of filtered water. The late Chairman of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality was the leading spirit of the whole movement which brought about the establishment of water-works. No doubt the Municipal Commissioners and the Chairman received a good deal of help from Government and a great deal of sympathy and assistance too, but the idea originated with them and they worked hard for it, and the late Chairman himself contributed a princely sum for the establishment of water-works. Is it reasonable to expect that a man who worked so hard for the establishment of water-works and to whom the question was so dear, will do anything which will cause the mismanagement of the same fund or bring the whole administration into discredit? It has been reported, My Lord, that there was some difference of opinion between the Municipal Commissioners and the Sanitary Engineer at the very start and it was through the intervention of the then Collector of Hooghly, Mr. Prentice, that matters were set right. But, my Lord, since then, there have been some differences of opinion between the Sanitary Engineer to the Government and the Municipal Commissioners about many things. The principal charge against them is that they have persistently neglected to have a storage of coal for six months' consumption. The Municipal Commissioners say that they wrote to several firms, both Indian and European for the supply of coal, but they were told that they could not get that supply. My Lord, even then what was the harm if they had a month's supply? The water-works never stopped for want of coal supply; nor was there any imminent danger on that score.

The greatest offence of the Municipal executive was that they refused to put in meters in those houses where there was water-connection. My Lord, I am told—and I think a statement has been publicly made in the Press and elsewhere—that the Government asked the Municipal Commissioners to put up meters and that they agreed to do so. A challenge was however drawn up by the ratepayers that they were not bound to do it and that if the Commissioners wanted to put up meters, they must pay for it themselves. The Commissioners being thus in a dilemma did the only thing they could possibly do—to approach the Legal Remembrancer through the Collector for an opinion as to whether they could or could not realise the money from the ratepayers for the installation of these meters. They had not at any rate received the reply from the Legal Remembrancer when the order of supersession was passed. There can be no doubt that they wanted to put up meters but the only thing they wanted to do was to satisfy themselves that they would not be legally liable for the cost of the same. I am told that there are two cases pending for judgment in the High Court, regarding the setting up of meters in private houses, when they were not sure that they could realise the money from the rate-payers. As regards the Municipality paying it themselves, their funds would not permit it. I am told that they also appealed to Government for a loan for the purpose, if the Government insisted in having those meters set up, but the prayer was not acceded to. Then again, why should the question of not putting up meters affect the Municipality. Has there been any considerable wastage of filtered water in Municipal towns? The average consumption of water in Hooghly is not much more than it is in other Municipalities of a similar nature. It has been stated that the roads are not good and the streets not properly lighted. But my lord, the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality is in a very unfortunate position in this respect. They have got a large area to administer, and a very large area of roads to maintain, and these roads pass through jungles and mango groves; they realise a very small amount in taxes and they have to maintain very long roads, and for this purpose their roads cannot be kept in a condition they would like to put it. But I want to know whether the condition of roads in Burdwan and Hooghly are in any way worse than those of other Municipalities, whether under non-official or official chairmen. Of course, they cannot compare with the roads of the southern portion of Calcutta or the new Capital of Dacca, Ramna, but speaking of other towns, I think they are not worse than other Municipalities. My Lord, so far as my countrymen are concerned, we have not been convinced that there was any case made out for the supersession of these Municipalities, and in the case of the Hooghly Municipality, the Commissioners when they found that the Government was pressing them hard to do things they could not reasonably perform, I may say that as trustees to the rate-payers, they did the best thing they could and they resigned in a body and the only Commissioner now left is the Civil Surgeon of Hooghly. If the Government thought that they mispent the rate-payers' money or mismanaged the rate-payers affairs, the proper course would have been to sit on judgment on those Commissioners, and to pass their verdict on their conduct. It was not fair to disenfranchise the ratepayers for the crime of the Commissioners.

In the case of Burdwan there may be some justification for punishing the Commissioners, but there was absolutely none for the disenfranchisement of the citizens of Burdwan, and especially when it was only recently that they had begun to show a greater interest and more activity in municipal affairs and in matters of municipal elections. My Lord, the citizens of Hooghly and Burdwan say that if they had an opportunity of drafting resolutions, they could make out a better and more convincing and stronger case for the abolition of some of the departments under Your Excellency's charge, and I think my lord, that considering the circumstances and considering the fact that in these days we are looking forward to greater liberty in the matter of local self-governing bodies, I think it is very unfortunate that advantage has been taken of one or two mistakes to supersede two of the most important municipalities in this Presidency. Up till now, there has been only one case of supersession of a municipality and it was that of Santipur many years ago, and that municipality was superseded because the Commissioners persistently refused to carry out Government's orders regarding the supervision of conservancy. But in this case when the Municipal Commissioners of Hooghly and Chinsurah found that they were unable to carry out Government orders, they resigned making room for a fresh set of Municipal Commissioners to see if they could carry out those orders. The rate-payers were not given an opportunity of passing judgment on the conduct of the Municipal Commissioners, and in justice to the Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan, I must say that had as they were, they were never called upon to offer an explanation of the charges that were brought against them, and they were never even apprised of the fact that a measure like this was in contemplation, and they were taken aback—the citizens much more so than the Commissioners themselves.

With these words I beg to move my resolution and I hope Your Excellency's Government will see their way to accept it, or at any rate to see that the citizens of Hooghly and Chinsurah are allowed the privilege of choosing a new set of representatives for the working of their local affairs.

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My Lord, I have gone very carefully through the papers connected with the case of the Burdwan and Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipalities as far as they were available to me. I am not quite sure that the order against Burdwan was altogether unmerited, and it would have been very desirable on the part of the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution to divide the two cases, and to ask the vote of this House first on Burdwan and then on Hooghly-Chinsurah municipality. However, I am free to say that I am not fully satisfied that the Commissioners of the Burdwan Municipality did not or rather had not failed in their duty, strictly speaking. Whether there were actual cases of embezzlement and of theft as my hon'ble friend said, I do not understand what more is required to condemn the Commissioners of a municipality where theft can take place and embezzlement can be possible. Of course the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem is perfectly right in saying that for the offence of the Municipal Commissioners, it is the rate-payers who have been really punished. To that extent I fully agree with him, and the proper course for the Government would have been, not to supersede the Municipality, but to have watched a few weeks, and then to have another election which was coming on. But, my Lord, I am studied the working of Municipalities in any Indian town that these Municipalities are extremely poor so far as finances are concerned and in the vast majority of cases, they have got an area to administer for the administration of which the funds at their disposal happen to be absolutely inadequate. One reason for this is that the people who are taxed to supply the finances to the Municipalities are extremely poor. I think I do not exaggerate when I say that, speaking generally, in the vast majority of cases, a very overwhelming number of the majority of ratepayers cannot pay the taxes that are imposed although these taxes are really very low. The people are too poor. My Lord, we read in the Montagu-Chemsford Report that the people in this country generally are poorer far below the standards of Europe. Examples have been given showing how poor really the average Indian is and I think it is a matter well-known to your Excellency's Government that the average Indian who has got to pay his Municipal taxes really finds it difficult to pay those taxes in time. The result is that the money that is raised by Municipalities by taxation is absolutely inadequate. In these circumstances the proper duty for the Government is not to pass extreme measures like the one under discussion but to come forward with generous grants from provincial revenues. In reading the Resolution of the Government of India on Local Self-Government I find these two observations which I would certainly think puts the whole case in a nutshell. There is a growing demand, says the Resolution, on every side for improvements. Speaking of Municipalities it says, it is not possible for all Municipalities to finance large schemes of water-supply and drainage. Then the Resolution goes on to say that the Government of India have also accepted the further recommendation of the Commission—referring to the Decentralization Commission—that assistance should be given by Government to poorer Municipalities which, without it, would be unable to carry on the normal administration required of them. My lord, historians tell us that amongst the ancient Arabs there was a horrible custom of infanticide which was as revolting to the finer instincts of human nature as could possibly be. We are told that when children were born in a family and their number was increasing, the Arabs used to decide how many children should remain and for the rest the decision was that they should be killed in order to relieve the family. This may be a short and safe method of dealing with an uncomfortable situation but it is hardly a pattern for a civilized Government to follow. Because a municipality is poor, because it cannot get on with its work and because Government is not ready to offer financial help—therefore according to the principles laid down by Government the municipality must be superseded! Is it necessary, is it fair, is it just, it is consistent with all the principles on which civilized Government is based, that the municipality should be throttled and the custom of the pre-Islamic Arabs should be adopted? I submit, to a question like this, there can be but one answer.

The second charge against these municipalities is that there was a prevailing corruption and that the administration of those municipalities has been disgraced by cases of theft, embezzlement, etc. My lord, as my Hon'ble friend has already remarked—where is the department under Government which will be free from such charges? The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray is going to give us today a lengthy statement so far as corruption in public offices is concerned and we expect, if the matter is taken up at this late hour, to listen to a tale of bribery in public offices. What about that fancy department of Government—which should be nameless for the present—which is always being pampered and which has become a blot in the fair fame of the British Administration in this country? Can it be suggested that because this corruption existed, the head of the department should be held responsible and punished with extreme penalty for faults which he has not the power of controlling? My lord, I have not had the honour nor the privilege of knowing the conditions of things in Europe, but I do think that if an inquiry is made, it will be found that bribery and corruption do exist in European municipalities also. But would anybody suggest that because these defects do exist therefore the one punishment to which the municipalities can be subjected is that of immediate strangulation? I submit that even accepting the case, other punishment could have been deemed adequate to the requirement of the situation.

Then my lord, my Hon'ble friend the Mover has made a reference to the fact that the punishment has been inflicted not on the Municipal Commissioners because they had already served out their term, but to the rate-payers, and that in the case of the Burdwan Municipality it was hardly necessary, because the Municipal Commissioners there had been mismanaging the work of the Municipality in such a way that they had already lost the confidence of the ratepayers and in the election which was to have been held in November it was quite on the cards that they would not be given another opportunity of coming into office and mismanaging the affairs of the Municipality. That right has been rudely taken away from them for practically no fault of their own.

"My Lord, I do not wish to take up further time of this Council. If one reads the report of the Mesopotamian Commission I think he would come to the conclusion that a heavier indictment was made against the Government of India than that made by the Government of Bengal against these Municipalities."

(At this stage, the Hon'ble Member having reached the the time-limit, had to conclude his remarks).

The Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY said :—

"My Lord, in reply to the resolution I may say, at the outset, that the view of Government in passing orders of supersession was that, considering the long continued mismanagement, the persistent neglect and incapacity of both municipalities, it had no option, if it was to be true both to its trust and to its position as the supreme controlling authority over local bodies, but to supersede them. It is an essential part of local self-government that Government should reserve to itself, and unhesitatingly exercise, powers of external intervention in case of grave and gross maladministration. Self-government has its responsibilities as well as its rights, and it is the duty of Government to see that municipalities discharge their responsibilities. The Hon'ble Mr. Fazlul Haq has said that the Bengal Government have sinned against the principles of self-government and their development. I may quote from the resolution of the Government of India on local self-government from which he himself has quoted. The Government of India there say : "It is certainly necessary to maintain ultimate powers of intervention which are in no way peculiar to India, and which carry out the view that the control of Government over local bodies should be exercised from without rather than from within." At the same time, Government is extremely chary of exercising its power to supersede incompetent municipalities. As was pointed out by one Hon'ble Member, there has been only one previous case of supersession during the 34 years the Bengal Municipal Act has been in force. Apart from other considerations, it means a heavy addition of work to an already overworked District Officer, and I can assure the Council that Government would not add to the burden he bears except under the compulsion of grave necessity. If further proof of the unwillingness of Government to supersede is needed, I may point to the long time that elapsed before Government took this step—how patient it was with both Municipalities in spite of their persistent neglect of advice, instruction and warning. In both cases again it was careful to supersede not for a long time but only for one year, and the state of both municipalities is so bad that although the District Magistrate will undoubtedly reform the administration, he will find it a hard and difficult task to bring the administration up to the standard which Government would desire to see established before the year expires and the Municipal Commissioners resume management.

"Government, however reluctantly, felt that it was their bounden duty to discharge the trust vested in them. It is not a case of one or two or of a few mistakes as stated by the Hon'ble mover. There was long continued constrained to say that as regards Hooghly-Chinsurah, I have gone carefully through the papers, and I am sincerely of opinion that the Commissioners of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality have been more sinned against than sinning. Two indictments have been brought against them, viz., shortness of the supply of coal and secondly of insufficiency of meters. With regard to coal, it was said that they had only one month's supply, whereas there was a large order from the Sanitary Engineer for six months' supply. My Lord, I know of cases of jails, which are departments of Government, where the whole concern of brick manufacture failed at the time for want of an adequate supply of coal. That was a very critical situation, which we all know, and which ought to have been taken into consideration in the order of the Sanitary Engineer. - My Lord, on the 9th of October, the supersession was passed by Government and it would be interesting to know how many months' supply of coal has been collected in Hooghly during the time the District Magistrate has been in charge of this municipality. I do not think that he has collected six months' supply of coal, although times are now altered, and the war is now practically ended. Then, with regard to meters, I understand from the papers that have been supplied to me that a number of meters had been purchased by the Municipal Commissioners, but the ratepayers objected to purchase them, and there was a question pending as to the legality of putting up meters by the municipality and trying to realise the actual cost from the rate-payers. That question was not also settled, and I would like to know, as I have already said in the case of coal, it would be very interesting to know how many meters have been fixed by the District Magistrate of Hooghly since the 9th October up to date. The thing is I cannot for a moment divest myself of the conviction that the order of Government in the case of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality was a hasty order. More inquiry should have been made and more opportunities should have been given to the Commissioners to comply with the wishes of the Sanitary Engineer, and it is still more deplorable that simply because the Sanitary Engineer had his own fad, viz. that you must have a supply of six months' coal, and because they failed to do so, they should have been superseded. It is a very drastic measure and it augurs not at all well for other municipalities in the country. If the commissioners of Hooghly-Chinsurah after having themselves initiated this great improvement in the town and having spent so much for the installation of water filters, have come to grief simply because they were unable to stock six months' coal, I doubt whether it would not be a positive discouragement to any other municipality to come forward to inaugurate similar improvements in their town. They had established this water work in 1914, as I understand, and within four years and under such trying circumstances as were created by the war, Government did not pause to consider whether such a drastic step should or should not have been taken with regard to the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. I fully believe there is greatness in owning one's mistake; there is no greatness in persisting in error and I hope and trust that Government will rise to the fullest height of the occasion and admit their mistake, and then restore the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality to its former position and allow them sufficient time and opportunity to deal with the difficult situation. Whether official prestige will suffer or increase in the estimation of the public, it will of course be a matter for the Government and the public to decide. If I am to give my own opinion my free conviction is, as I have already said, that the Municipal Commissioners have been more sinned against than sinning, and the Government would rather rise in the estimation of the public if the error which it has committed in regard to Hooghly-Chinsura, were sooner than later rectified.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, at this hour I do not like to take up much of the time of the Council. All I can say is that the decision with regard to the late Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality has not satisfied the public, and as far as we have been able to gather, they are not seriously to blame, and I suggest the explanation which has been submitted may be accepted, and that Government would reconsider its decision, and the punishment that has been meted out to this municipality may be withdrawn. As regards the Burdwan Municipality it is very difficult for us to know all the facts, but this much I can say that we sympathise with the rate-payers. There may be some shortcomings on the part of the Municipal Commissioners, but why were the rate-payers deprived of the privilege of electing a new body of Commissioners to set matters right we fail to understand. Whatever may be the real facts, at least they have a just ground of complaint and we hope that in these two cases the Government will reconsider the situation and restore their privileges.

The Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ said :—

“My Lord, the question raised in this Resolution is of such paramount importance to the growth and development of self-government in this country that I feel I cannot record a mere silent note when this matter is being discussed in the Council. I therefore propose to say a few words in support of the resolution, but having regard to the lateness of the hour, I promise to be very brief in my remarks. My Lord, I cannot help beginning by saying that it is a matter of very great regret that at a time when the whole world is emerging towards freedom and progress it should have been left to the Government of Bengal to sound a retreat by adopting a policy which I very much regret to say is somewhat inconsistent with those enlightened principles which have hitherto formed the key-note of British administration in this country. I beg to assure your Excellency that my feelings are very strong in the matter as I feel that the decision that has been arrived at, if pushed to its logical length, means the deathblow of the progress of self-government and the development of self-governing institutions in general and I consider it heretofore a matter of great regret that this decision should have been taken at a time when for all nationalities and for all races the right of self-government has just been so triumphantly vindicated by the shedding of the best blood in the world.

My Lord, the resolution relating to the two municipalities although worded in one sentence and although permitted to be discussed together, will be, as I understand, open to voting separately. I do not wish to go over the ground already covered by the Hon'ble Member or the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, but I wish to make one or two remarks as regards some particular points that arise for discussion and for consideration. I may say at once that the position I take up is this. to use a legal phraseology, that although in these cases the evidence justifies a verdict of guilty against the accused the extreme punishment was certainly not called for. I thought I noticed a sort of diffidence in both my Hon'ble Friend Maulvi Abul Kasem and Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar when referring to the case of Burdwan as if, so far as the order with reference to that municipality is concerned, their hearts were not moving with their tongues, or in other words, they were full of eloquent words so far as the condemnation of the decision is concerned, but that they were not quite satisfied that the order was not justified. What I submit is that whatever the evidence against these two municipalities may be, as I have already submitted, some punishment other than that already meted out to these municipalities should have amply met the requirements of justice. It is not therefore necessary for us to apportion the measure of guilt or blame to the Commissioners and the ratepayers or to differentiate between the exact nature of the offence committed by either of the Municipalities concerned. Reading the Government Resolution on the subject I find there are two main charges standing out prominently amongst the various charges that have been levelled against these two Municipalities. The first charge is that these Municipalities are practically on the verge of bankruptcy, that the Municipal Commissioners have shown the most extraordinary slackness in realizing taxes, and that works of public utility have had to be postponed for lack of funds. My Lord, I think it is a matter of almost every day experience with those who have mismanagement in both municipalities. In Burdwan, year after year, the same gloomy tale of faction, inefficiency, waste of public money—in fact, general mismanagement and maladministration—had to be told. The Collector, the Commissioner and the Government had stigmatized the laxity of administration throughout the time the Municipal Commissioners had held office, but no attention was paid. There was no attempt at reform: things went from bad to worse. There were undoubtedly some Municipal Commissioners who were anxious for reform, but either their energy or their power was insufficient and they failed to effect any improvement. The influence at work, the prevailing spirit, is sufficiently clear from the fact that when a special enquiry was held this year by a Deputy Magistrate under the District Magistrate's orders, it was impeded by efforts to suppress the facts and to alter or destroy incriminating documents.

"In Hooghly-Chinsura, the Municipal Commissioners failed to fulfil their primary duty of managing their affairs so as to pay their way. The District Magistrate had the unpleasant task of taking over a Municipality with arrears of Rs. 32,000 and a cash balance of only Rs. 850. Collections had been neglected; there were arrears of taxes aggregating Rs. 12,000: no warrants had been issued for the first quarter of the year, and as the period of limitation is 3 months after the demand is presented, they cannot now be issued. All that can be done is to hope that the defaulting rate-payers may be persuaded to pay up or forced to do so by the slow and tedious process of civil suits. Bills were unpaid for over two years and more: the unpaid bills for coal alone amount to Rs. 5,000. Much has been made of the difficulty about getting coal, but it is fairly obvious that contractors must fight shy of supplying people who do not pay their bills.

"Much has also been made of the general difficulty of ways and means. I do not propose to go into details about this. But the broad issues may be summarized in two proverbs: One is, you must cut your coat according to your cloth, which, in this case, means that if you want a pure water-supply and other civil amenities you must tax yourselves properly and sufficiently to get them and keep them up. If you do not, you must go without them. The other is, when there's a will there's a way; and the Municipal Commissioners of Hooghly-Chinsurah showed no willingness to put their house in order.

"So far to the contrary—so far did the fatal habit of procrastination prevail—that a month before supersession, at a time when the Commissioner had insisted on their facing the growing gravity of their financial position, at a time when their unpaid bills amounted to over Rs. 30,000 and their cash balance to a little over Rs. 200, they deliberately resolved to postpone the consideration of the question. And a month later, when Government superseded them, they had only Rs. 850 in hand to pay bills amounting to over Rs. 30,000.

"As regards the question of meters, the Government Resolution speaks for itself. Briefly the facts are: Nearly three years ago Government published rules under the Act prescribing meters for house-connections, the object of which is to prevent the interests of poor people, who have to get water from street hydrants, from being sacrificed to their richer neighbours who have private house-connections and can afford to pay for an excess quantity of water. So far from observing these statutory rules, the Commissioners had within seven months after the issue of these rules given nearly 300 house-connections without meters. Even after Government issued orders insisting on the rules being observed, the Commissioners procrastinated, and while they procrastinated, prices rose and the supply of meters on the market grew less. I need not recapitulate the correspondence. Matters came to a head at the beginning of this year (January 1918) when the Municipal Commissioners were told that they would be superseded unless they took effective action. The Commissioners then followed the instructions of Government by buying meters but took no steps to get them fixed. By September this year only 55 out of 400 connections were metered. Of these, 40 were on Government buildings, and there were only 15 on private connections. It was at this time—and this is a point to which the Hon'ble Mover has referred—nearly 3 years after Government orders were issued that the rules must be carried out—that the Commissioners went into legal questions and stated a case for opinion. All this time the consumption of water was rising and the cost of the water-works increasing without proper payment being made by the well-to-do for private connections.

“As to the supply of coal for the water-works, I may merely point out that for 2½ years the officers of Government had been trying to get the Municipal Commissioners to realize their duty and make proper business-like arrangements which would not only prevent a breakdown, but also be economical. There was, however, a breakdown, and there was a serious outbreak of cholera which the Civil Surgeon attributed to the failure to keep up the supply of filtered water from the water works and that again to the neglect to get sufficient coal. The Sanitary Board itself addressed the municipality a grave warning: but the warning produced no effect, and in the last month before supersession the management of the water-works was as bad as ever.

“In spite of this, Government decided to allow the municipality a last chance and the Hon'ble Member-in-charge of the Municipal Department gave the Chairman and Vice-Chairman an interview, in which they were informed that the Commissioners might save themselves from supersession if they took steps to do all that was necessary. So far from endeavouring to do anything 17 Commissioners resigned. It is difficult to resist the suspicion that their action was designed to prevent supersession, their idea being that if they resigned, Government could not supersede them or would at any rate be embarrassed or have its hand forced. If this view is correct, their action bears some similarity to that of culprits to whom a merciful Judge offers the chance of reformation instead of sentence and who think that they can avoid sentence by absconding. The idea that they hoped to prevent supersession has some support from the articles contributed to the newspapers which use almost identically the same words. They say: ‘It is clear that the action taken by the Government in superseding gentlemen who were not in existence as Commissioners is quite illegal, improper and ultra vires.’ ‘I do not wish to enter into legal niceties. I may merely say that when Municipal Commissioners are superseded they are superseded not as individual persons but in their corporate capacity; and I can assure the Council that the question was considered by Government before their orders were passed and that Government acted on the highest legal authority.

“It has been asked, and this has been the chief point raised in the debate, why should not Government have left things as they were till a fresh election was held. In the case of Hooghly, a peculiar situation had been created by the resignation of the 17 Commissioners. Having resigned, there would have had to be a bye-election for each vacancy among the elected Commissioners. A new Municipal Board would have had to be formed which would hold-office till the general election was due, and the Commissioners who had so long mismanaged the Municipality would have managed to get the opportunity of carrying the bye-elections and continuing their mismanagement. In the meantime the town would have suffered, and this was a contingency which Government could not tolerate.

“In the case of Burdwan, there was good reason to believe that there would not be a straight election. A ratepayers' association had, it is true, been formed to voice public grievances, as pointed out by the hon'ble mover; but it was of comparatively recent birth and public opinion was not strong enough to counteract the influences at work. Those who are familiar with municipalities know that there are various ways in which a party in power can maintain its position—for instance, by enhancement or reduction of the valuation on holdings, condoning licenses for trades, granting or withholding facilities of water-supply, instituting or omitting to institute prosecutions for breach of bye-laws, suffering decrees to be time-barred, and the like. These practices are known to have gone on, and it is significant that there were over Rs. 30,000 of arrears of taxes outstanding just before the election. And if the Commissioners had been allowed to remain in office, it was practically certain that there would not have been a free and fair election."

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHANDRA GHOSE BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I would only refer to one or two facts in connection with the charge brought against the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality, i.e., the shortage of the coal supply for the water-works. As I gather the facts, in the Bengal mofussil municipalities, where water-works are in existence and in question, the Government Sanitary Engineer rules the situation. His instructions are to be carried out by the municipality and if there is a failure on the part of the Commissioners to carry out his instructions, then the Government condemns the Commissioners. I understand that the instruction of the Sanitary Engineer was that there should be in stock a six months' supply of coal for the water-works. These instructions were not carried out and they had just sufficient coal for one or two months. As there was a disobedience on the part of the Commissioners to the orders of the Sanitary Engineer, Government took it very seriously and chose to supersede the municipality.

I happen, my Lord, to be connected with a municipality and I have the honour to represent the Corporation of Calcutta on this Council. The resources of the Calcutta Corporation are very large and the resources of our coal-suppliers are also very large. We are going to have a meeting of the Corporation tomorrow in which we have to consider—how to deal with our coal supply. The coal is supplied by a firm of great repute and standing—I shall not name the firm as it is not necessary. They are unable to supply coal of the required quality and quantity as per contract and they say that unless the relations between the parties are re-adjusted they will stop the supply. The executive, who are responsible for the facts being placed at tomorrow's meeting, say that the supply which their firm is making is sufficient for two or three days and that is the way in which supplies have been made for some time past. Of course, every one knows that there is a coal difficulty and there is also railway difficulty, but in the case of Calcutta we do not feel that difficulty to any extent, because the Chairman of the Corporation makes it his business to ease the situation by communicating with the proper authority; the difficulty is felt by the coal supplier for reasons I need not mention. There is the fact, however, that we have in our pumping station coal for two or three days' consumption and that has been going on for some time. It is fortunate that we are not controlled by the Government Sanitary Engineer in this matter. If it had been so, probably we would have been hauled up before Government for our laches. I believe the shortage of coal supply is the principal charge, but not the only charge against the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. I think that the shortage in the supply of coal is due to the circumstances created by the war."

The PRESIDENT, said :—

"There are a number of gentlemen who wish to take part in this debate. I regret to say that I have an engagement myself at 6 o'clock of a public character. Under these circumstances, I propose to adjourn the meeting now until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning when we will take the remainder of the discussion of this motion and of the other motions which stand on the paper."

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned till Wednesday the 27th November at 11 A.M. in Government House, Calcutta.

[REFERRED TO IN ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. III (UNSTARRED) OF THE 3RD SEPTEMBER 1918.]

Paper referred to in item 3 of the List of Business for the meeting of the Council held on the 26th November, 1918, containing information regarding the Nawab of Dacca's steam launch at Barisal. The information was called for by the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI in Question No. III (unstarred) asked at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd September, 1918.

By the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI :—

Is it a fact that a steam launch is maintained at Barisal Ghat for the estate purpose? How much does it cost annually? For how many days from 1907 to the 31st March 1918, was she out from the Barisal Ghat for the estate purposes?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

Yes. The average annual cost is Rs. 2,351. No record has been kept of the number of days on which the launch was used for estate purposes."

RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18—contd.

The PRESIDENT said :—

“ We will continue discussion on item No. 18.”

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said :—

“ My Lord, I listened with great attention to the discussion on this item yesterday, and I for one think that in the interests of Local Self-Government, if the interests of the situation demand it, if there has been gross maladministration, then the Government would be perfectly justified in suspending the municipality as it has done. But, My Lord, although I venture to think that the order of suspension perhaps was justified—I say perhaps because I can only proceed upon the Government resolution on the subject—beyond certain observations I heard yesterday, I had no opportunity of examining the facts, and not having that opportunity I prefer to follow the facts as stated in the Government resolution. Taking that as my standpoint, I desire at the same time to bring to the notice of Your Excellency's Government and of this Council, certain points which struck me on reading the Bengal Municipal Act.

In the first place, section 65 of that Act undoubtedly authorizes the Government to suspend any municipality if the contingency referred to in that section occur, but it also authorizes the Government to direct that the supersession should be the period to be specified in the order. If that section stood by itself, there would be nothing to prevent the Government from superseding a municipality for two or five or even ten years if the interest of the situation demand it, but, My Lord, there is another section, section 21. That section lays down the term of office of a Municipal Commissioner. Under that section every Commissioner shall vacate his office at the end of three years from the date of his appointment or election as such Commissioner. Now, My Lord, I take it the position is this. The ratepayers elect certain Commissioners, and those Commissioners for the time being are the representatives of the ratepayers. Section 65 speaks about the suspension of Commissioners, that is, the representatives of the ratepayers. I understand, My Lord, that in the case of the Burdwan Municipality, election was due in September, and I understand, further, from certain observations of the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem that, as a matter of fact, the election was to take place in November. Assuming that the Government was perfectly justified in suspending the municipalities, I venture to think that the order of suspension for one year was beyond the spirit of section 65. I do not propose to discuss the point as a lawyer, nor do I propose to discuss the point on mere technicalities, but looking broadly at it, I would like to know what is the object of the Government. I have not the slightest doubt that the object of the Government is to improve the administration of local self-government. If that be the object of Government, that object is perfectly vindicated by this order of suspension, and that object will be equally vindicated after the lesson that these municipalities have had, if an early order were passed to the effect that there should be a fresh election in January or February. That is my humble suggestion which I lay before Your Excellency's Government, and my position with regard to the matter is that while I do not see eye to eye with the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem that the order of suspension was bad, at the same time I do not feel justified in accepting the position of the Government that the suspension for one year was good.

"There is only another point on which I would like to address the Council very shortly. It may be said that unless the suspension be for one year, the district officer will have no chance of really putting the administration of these two unfortunate municipalities on a proper basis. To this, my answer is that at any rate, speaking for myself, a trained administrator will always administer more efficiently than any local self-governing body, however anxious they may be. But, at the same time, for several reasons, it is an accepted proposition that local self-governing bodies should be allowed to do their best. They may lose in point of efficiency, but there are other advantages in allowing local self-governing bodies to administer their functions in the best possible way. Regard being had to that position, it may be said that if you look to the question of mere efficiency, perhaps administration by a trained administrator would be better for all times. If, for other reasons, we want to give a real chance to local self-governing bodies, then I should think that these municipalities have had their lesson, and I should think the new Commissioners should be allowed to do their best. From the point of view from which I look at the question I think that will give them a chance of really trying to do away with the past bad administration."

The Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY said :—

• "My Lord, I do not propose to go over the ground already covered by the previous speakers to this resolution. The charge against the two now defunct municipalities is, I take it, one of gross inefficiency, coupled in one case with corruption, and in the other heightened by a reckless disregard of consequences to public health that might easily have followed.

Unfortunately, My Lord, inefficiency is not confined to the domain of local government, and oppression were not very uncommon attributes of municipal bodies even in the land of our rulers prior to the Municipal Corporations Act of 1882, after years and years of its inception. But, so far as we were, these circumstances were never made the pretext for official self-government or setting back the hands of the clock. There is no doubt, provisions in England for compelling inefficient or unwilling local bodies to do their duty. But there is one fundamental difference in the case. In England, it is one popular and self-governing body controlling another, the central authority itself being responsible to and composed of the representatives of the people. And, to be frank, here in India there has grown up through years past a barrier of mutual distrust—a sort of lurking suspicion and antagonism—between the self-governing bodies and the central authority. The controlling authority appears more in the light of the Grand Moghul—a hectoring, dictatorial, fastidious personality—nothing of that friendly task-master which the English local bodies have in the central authority as represented by the Local Government Board. It is a position which does not benefit either Government or the local bodies. I concede that the control over these bodies is always exercised by Government with the best of intentions. But, unfortunately, Government do not very often get any credit for their bona fides in these matters—the result being that neither the local bodies themselves, nor the people at large, are satisfied with any exercise of extraordinary powers on the part of Government. I need not remind Your Lordship that it is necessary not only that justice should be done, but that the people should be made to feel that justice and nothing but justice is actually done.

“My Lord, I plead for a greater patience with our self-governing institutions which have yet to attain maturity. As I said, inefficiency is not their exclusive characteristic. The record of our provincial administration itself is not an unbroken and glorious stretch of success and efficiency. Without raking up the past, I would just refer to the cloth question with which we are all familiar. What a sad story of fatal inaction and bungling—that has cost the lives of so many of our poor brothers and sisters—not to mention terrible sufferings of the people in general. Here it was not a case of problematical loss of human life, as in the case of Hooghly-Chinsurah shortage of coal over which Government have shown so much concern—but actual death of men and women who were driven to seek it at their own hands as a deliverance from nudity and dishonour. Since the 4th September, 1917, when attention was first drawn to the cloth problem by me in this chamber, Government succeeded in finding very many excuses on various occasions for not interfering with a situation which was certainly remediable to a great extent. And when the psychological moment had slipped by, Government awoke from their stupor.

“My Lord, one should not judge others by too exacting a standard, lest he himself is judged as strictly!”

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

“My Lord, I want to say only a few words with reference to this resolution. As Chairman of a mufassal municipality, I know the difficulties of Municipal Commissioners and of Municipal Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen, especially when the municipality is not a very solvent one. I know the difficulties they experience in making two ends meet. With reference to the Burdwan Municipality it is alleged that defalcations had been going on for years, and that there was nobody to check those defalcations. That may be a fact against the municipality, but I know defalcations have taken place in District Boards under official Chairmen and large sums of money—lakhs and lakhs of rupees—have been defalcated from Government treasuries without the official head knowing anything about it. With reference to the Burdwan Municipality, it has been urged by some of my hon'ble friends that the ratepayers should not suffer on account of the neglect of duty on the part of the Commissioners and the municipal executive. I think that is a very powerful argument in support of the resolution, especially when you know that the 8th November was fixed as the date of election. If the ratepayers had persisted in electing the same Commissioners, Government probably would have been quite justified in suspending the municipality or in taking such action as they thought proper under the circumstances. We hear that a Ratepayers' Association has been formed there, and such an association is generally formed when the ratepayers are dissatisfied with the working of the present staff of the municipality. An opportunity ought to have been given to the ratepayers of Burdwan to elect new Commissioners and new executive officers to guide the affairs of the municipality.

"Then with reference to the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. There are two charges against it. I mean two serious charges, one is shortage of coal, and the other is indiscriminate house connections without meters. Well, I may say without any breach of confidence that, being a member of the Sanitary Board, we brought this matter to the notice of Government, but it was further from our wish that Government should take such drastic steps as to suspend the municipality for neglecting to keep coal for six months or for this indiscriminate house connection. There is one fact which may not be known to many of us, but which is known to the Hon'ble Mr. Payne and the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, and it is this, that when Howrah was under an official Chairman, there were indiscriminate house connections, and the result was that the people of Howrah got water only about four or five hours every day, never more than that. Well, that was the result of indiscriminate house connections during the time of the official Chairmen. Did the Government take any steps to suspend the Howrah Municipality when it was under the official Chairman because the public of Howrah did not get a sufficient supply of water? It is only now, under a non-official Chairman, that steps have been taken to fix meters whenever there has been a new house connection.

"Then, as regards this shortage of coal. Government wanted that six months' coal ought to be stored; there were difficulties in getting this six months' supply, as explained to Your Lordship. As regards meters, it is well known that the price of meters has gone up very much, probably more than twice the original price. And because a poor municipality like the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality could not purchase meters worth Rs. 40,000, which is probably the net annual income of the municipality, therefore they have been suspended. I ask one question. Your Lordship must have heard, or must be aware, of the breakdown of the Kidderpore bridge. I should like to ask whether this is not a greater scandal than the breakdown of the Burdwan or the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipalities. Here you have a bridge, an important bridge over which thousands and thousands of people cross, over which tramcars run and probably about 10,000 carriages, horses, and motor-cars run every day; well, one evening, about 4 o'clock, the Tramway Company received notice that from the next morning the tramcars should cease running over the bridge. What was Government doing all along? Is it for the first time that they came to know that the bridge was not in a proper condition and was not safe? It was a Government department, the Public Works Department, who should have brought this to the notice of Government, but it was the engineer of the Calcutta Improvement Trust who brought this matter to the notice of Government. What was the Government of Bengal doing all along with its large establishment? Then, I may tell Your Lordship that for the last 7 or 8 years I myself have been telling the heads of the Public Works Department who are in charge of this bridge that a new bridge ought to be built; the Tramway Company have been telling the Government the same thing, and I myself saw Mr. Green, who was a Secretary to the Government, and then I found from an answer given to a question which I asked in this Council yesterday....."

The PRESIDENT said : " Order, order. I must point out to the Hon'ble Member that he is getting a little bit wide of the question under discussion. The question under discussion is the supersession of the municipalities of Hooghly-Chinsurah and Burdwan. I have no objection to the Hon'ble Member referring to the Kidderpore bridge in passing, but I think that I must call him to order if he goes into that question at any great length."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDBA NATH RAY continuing said :—

" Government, with its large resources, are not in a position to say when the Kidderpore bridge will be put in order, and a poor municipality like the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality, with its small income, is required to spend Rs. 40,000 on the purchase of meters. These are facts which ought to have been taken into consideration before superseding this municipality. It is thus that the death sentence has been passed. Government ought to have given proper warning to these municipalities before suspending them. I think the best way of getting out of the difficulty would be to withdraw the order of suspension and allow these municipalities to elect new Commissioners and a new executive. With these remarks, I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU MAHENDRA NATH RAY said :—

" My Lord, the municipalities which have been superseded are two of the most important of my constituencies and of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Dutt. I have naturally taken a very keen interest in the orders of supersession. These orders coming in quick succession within an interval of a week have created very great consternation in the province, and one section of the Press has not missed the opportunity of basing upon the facts of these two successive supersessions a strong case against constitutional reforms. The statutory powers under which Your Excellency's Government superseded the two municipalities are contained in section 65 of the Bengal Municipal Act. Your Excellency and the Council will forgive me even at this late stage of the debate if I venture to refer to the provisions of that section. That section empowers Your Excellency's Government to supersede Commissioners who are not competent to perform or persistently make default in the performance of duties imposed on them by or under the Act or otherwise by law, or exceed or abuse their powers. These powers are based on the law. I might remind the Council that side by side with this extreme penalty there is a provision in section 64 of the Act which empowers Your Excellency's Government in case of a default of Commissioners in certain particulars, or in respect of certain works, to take over the management of that work, on condition that the cost of management comes out of the municipal fund.

" My Lord, I am aware of the reasons which Your Excellency's Government have given in writing for the supersession of these two municipalities. I am aware, My Lord, of the fact that in the case of the Burdwan Municipality there were serious malpractices or abuses of power within the meaning of section 65 of the Act, for it was pointed out that, when an enquiry was made into certain alleged cases of defalcation, papers were suppressed in many cases on the plea that they could not be traced, neither the Chairman nor the Vice-Chairman showed alacrity in assisting the investigation, and the Municipal Commissioners would not disclose facts that might reflect discredit on their administration. There is the further fact pointed out that the collections were very very badly in arrears, and, as the order says, the two grounds upon which this particular municipality has been superseded were, first, incompetency as provided in section 65 and then abuse of power; the incompetency being a general one involving incapacity to collect arrears and inefficiency involving waste of public money. I am bound to say that if all these facts are well founded—and we must take it that Government proceeded upon proper materials—it is perhaps a case where Government would have the power to supersede the municipality, under section 65. But one thing, My Lord, is obvious. The supersession of the municipality involved disenfranchisement of the people of an important town, and unless Your Excellency's Government were convinced that there was such an identity between the Commissioners for the time being and the whole body of ratepayers in the town that even if a fresh election was directed the result of that election would be the reappointment of all the Commissioners, it would be, I submit, although Government has the statutory power, not a case where that power should be exercised. We all know that section 65 of the Bengal Municipal Act and the corresponding section of the Local Self-Government Act make provisions for extreme cases which should only be exercised if there is no other alternative, and the question is whether Government could not have remedied or improved the affairs which were certainly passing from bad to worse by ordering a fresh election. We have been informed that the fresh election was due in the month of November.

"My Lord, with regard to the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality the matter, I think, stands upon a different footing. There the grounds upon which supersession is directed are, as I find, grounds of incompetency and persistent default in the performance of duties. The specific cases which are set out to support the indictment under those two heads—incompetency and persistent default in the performance of duties—are these. I am sorry I may have to go over the same ground which has been traversed so many times by all the speakers in the Council Chamber this morning and last evening. But one of the first points which were made was that the municipality, in spite of persistent directions, defaulted in securing a supply of six months' coal in advance. Well, My Lord, whether the municipality was failing to do a statutory duty imposed upon it because it failed to carry out the order of keeping six months' stock of coal in advance, is a question which is not free from doubt. There is no law which requires that every municipality should keep six months' coal in advance. One municipality, with the management of which I am entrusted, at the present moment keeps, as Mr. Payne knows very well, two months' stock of coal in advance, and during the stress of the four and a half years through which we have passed, the Howrah Municipality has met with absolutely no difficulty in respect of the supply of coal, simply because it keeps only one or two months' coal in advance. The peremptory order to keep six months' coal in advance was an order which, I make bold to say, is justified by no precedent and is justified by no absolute necessity. With the Sanitary Engineer to the Government of Bengal and with the Sanitary Commissioner to the Government of Bengal we have often our quarrels, and I myself have often quarrelled with them. But I am not convinced that under the instructions of the Sanitary Engineer to the Government of Bengal a mufassal municipality could be directed under the statute to keep six months' coal in advance. It might have been—and I have no doubt it was—a wise advice in view of the difficulties of the times and perhaps the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality should have, if they were able to do so, tried to give effect to the advice; but the failure to keep six months' coal in advance is not a breach of statutory duty nor such as would justify a suspension under section 65 of the Bengal Municipal Act.

"Then, there are other matters, My Lord, for example the alum. Well, I am convinced that something is absolutely necessary to purify water, be it alum or aluminum ferric, and I was really surprised to learn that my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, did not pass stringent orders for the supply of a sufficient quantity of alum for the purification of water with the result, we are told, that the water showed in July last intense faecal deposits, due to insufficient filtration, as a result of which the water was not better than the raw river water. Here, again, there is no breach of statutory duty. The water, at any rate, was not worse than river water, but I am sorry that the result was not satisfactory, and I admit that it was very unsatisfactory. We were then told, My Lord, in the resolution that the municipality failed to perform its duties by not raising the water-rate to an adequate extent. Well, the Act provides for the levy of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent as the maximum. In the Howrah Municipality, we impose 6 per cent, and I believe the municipality of Hooghly-Chinsurah imposes a rate of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Well, if that is so, it can hardly be said that the rate which was imposed in the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality was not an adequate rate. I am not aware of municipalities where water-rates are higher than $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. I am sorry, further, that the meter question presented to them so much difficulty. In the Howrah Municipality we enforce Government rules in spite of the protests of ratepayers, but we are in a very different position. The meter rules came into force in February 1915. Long before that Howrah had a very large number of house connections and the law does not allow retrospective effect being given to the rules in order to require old house-owners enjoying house connections without meters to furnish them now at their own cost. In the case of an old municipality like Howrah, the rule is enforced only in the case of applications for new connections, and we have persistently refused such applications without meters, meters being furnished at the cost of the ratepayers.

"In the case of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality, however, the inauguration of the water-works and the introduction of the rules were simultaneous, resulting in this, that if the rule was strictly enforced no house-owner could have any meter connection from the time of the commencement of the works unless he either paid for the meter or furnished a meter for himself. Well, whether the Municipal Commissioners should have risen up to the occasion and enforced the rules without waiting for Law Courts to decide whether the rules were ultra vires is a matter which I would leave to them. My Lord, my opinion is that the municipality should have enforced the meter rules; that is, however, a matter of opinion."

[At this stage the Hon'ble Member, having reached the time-limit, had to conclude his remarks.]

The Hon'ble Mr. K. B. Dutt said :—

"My Lord, in supporting this resolution I must, in the first place, make my position perfectly clear. I have carefully read both the resolutions—one regarding Burdwan and the other regarding Hooghly-Chinsurah; and I must say that the case of Burdwan stands entirely on a different footing. The resolution clearly states the circumstances which bring the case of Burdwan under section 65 of the Bengal Municipal Act. But, with regard to Hooghly, I myself entertain very grave doubts whether the Government could have taken action under section 65 of the Act. If the Government found that the municipality had been persistently neglecting its duties with regard to a particular matter, section 64 of the Act gave ample powers to the Government to take action under that section. However that may be, what I really felt was that at the time when we had been considering the Reform Proposals and when, with regard to Burdwan, the election was fixed to take place on the 9th November, was it desirable to take the action which was taken in this matter, taking for granted that the Municipality had been guilty of malpractices and of abuse of powers? What the people in the Burdwan Division—and, if I may say so, in the whole of Bengal—have really felt, is: was this drastic measure necessary when the difficulties could possibly have been avoided by a fresh election?

"Then, My Lord, as I have already stated, the supersession of the two municipalities, one coming after the other, certainly created a mischievous impression—I may say, personally speaking, a wrong impression—but it is my duty not to conceal the impression which was being freely talked about not only in Bengal, but all over India, that this action on the part of the Government has been taken with a view to show that the people of Bengal specially are not fit for responsible government. I candidly say that it was far from the intention of Government. However, people say so. A long telegram had also been sent by Reuter to England to that effect. Therefore, the best solution—if I may be permitted to suggest—is to withdraw this order and to order fresh elections. That would satisfy, no doubt, the Government on the one hand and the people on the other."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Gentlemen, I am sure that we shall be at one when I say how deeply we regret the absence from our deliberations of the Hon'ble Member in charge of this department, the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan. We shall be at one in regretting still more the unfortunate cause of that absence, and I am sure that we shall all wish that the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur will be restored to complete health at a very early date.

"Well, in the absence of the Hon'ble Member of the Government who is in charge of the department, concerned with this motion, it devolves upon me to say a few words in explanation of the action which the Government has taken. First of all, let me dispose of the charge against us—if I may say so a very childish charge—referred to by the last speaker that we had taken this action for the express purpose of casting discredit upon the people of this country and for demonstrating their inability to manage their own affairs. Surely, it may be fairly argued that if that had been our object we should have been very much more likely to have achieved it by allowing the two Municipal Boards to continue in office. No, gentlemen, whatever else the Bengal Government may be, they are not a Machiavellian Government. I would respectfully ask the Hon'ble Members of this Council to look at us. Do we look like three Machiavellis? Do we look the sort of people who would sit round in secret conclave, hatching, with bated breath, far-fetched schemes for discrediting the people amongst whom we live and over whom we exercise authority? No, I feel sure that we are in reality, precisely what we look—as to two of us, straightforward and simple Scotsmen; and as to the other, a straightforward and simple Englishman. And if I may say so, this charge is a little ungracious in the case of the present Bengal Government. Have we not, during the comparatively short period of our existence, done more than any previous administration in Bengal to advance the cause of local self-government? Only yesterday we reached an important stage of a Bill, framed and advanced by us for the purpose of laying firm the foundations of self-government in the villages of this Presidency. Does that look as if we wish to discredit the ability of the people of this Presidency to manage their own affairs? And then, again, who was it who gave to certain of the District Boards in this Presidency, for the first time in their history, the right of electing their own non-official Chairmen? Why, it is this Government which, we are now told, is bent childishly and vindictively on superseding municipalities for the express purpose of discrediting the very policy which they themselves are pursuing. Surely, the charge is ridiculous upon the face of it. The action which was taken by this Government was taken with extreme regret; it was taken in the interests of the people and the ratepayers of the two localities primarily concerned; and if, indeed, it be a fact that the failure of the Commissioners in these two cases satisfactorily and efficiently to manage their affairs has had the result of creating in the minds of anyone a suspicion that the people of Bengal are not fit to discharge these duties, then I say that it is not so much to the fact of their supersession that that impression has become due, but to the wide advertisement which has been given to their failure in the Press and still further, I am afraid, by the debate which the Hon'ble Member inaugurated in this Council yesterday. I do not know whether the Commissioners concerned will be grateful to the Hon'ble Member for having given this further advertisement to their unfortunate failure satisfactorily to discharge their duties; but I should be disposed to doubt whether they would. At any rate, from that point of view I myself frankly confess to feeling some regret that this discussion has been forced upon us. I do not propose to travel in detail over the ground which was admirably trodden by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley yesterday and which has been traversed by many other speakers in the course of this debate; but there are one or two points which have been raised by the speakers, to which I feel bound to make some reference.

"For example the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has given it as his opinion that our action in this matter had been ill-considered and hasty.

I can assure the Hon'ble Member that whatever else our action may have been, it most assuredly was not hasty. The facts are indisputable. And what are the facts? The facts are these : that ever since March 1915, a period now extending over "from three to four years, a whole series of authorities have represented to Government the faults and the omissions of duty which they put down to the Commissioners of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. Let me say a word in passing with regard to a remark made by an Hon'ble Member yesterday. Government realise and appreciate, as much as does any other member of this Council, the great service which the late Chairman of the municipality rendered by the zeal, the enthusiasm and the patience with which he laboured to secure for that municipality an adequate system of water-supply ; we appreciate his public service in that respect. But I would respectfully suggest that, while we enormously appreciate all that he has done in securing to the municipality an adequate system of water-works, that does not absolve us at the same time from deploring the administration which has resulted in the fruits of his labours being rendered sterile. I have referred to the fact that these complaints have been made during a period of some $3\frac{1}{2}$ years. It was suggested by one speaker yesterday that the Sanitary Engineer had a personal grudge of some kind against the Municipal Commissioners and that he had succeeded in persuading Government to take this action in order to satisfy his own feelings of vindictiveness. Surely, that is a somewhat unworthy suggestion, and in any case it can be shown easily to be without foundation. The complaints which have been made and the warnings which had been issued to the municipality were not by one man only, but by no less than eight different authorities. We have had complaints from the District Magistrate, from the Commissioner of the Division, from the Sanitary Engineer, from the Assistant Sanitary Engineer, from the Government Inspector of Water-works, from the Civil Surgeon, from the Local Examiner of Accounts, and last but not least from the Sanitary Board itself. In submitting a report to Government which was made by the Sanitary Board, the Secretary to the Board writes as follows, and I would ask Hon'ble Members to give serious attention to these words :—

'The Sanitary Board decided at their last meeting that it was necessary for them to bring to the special notice of Government this instance where the neglect of their most elementary duties by the Commissioners of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality has resulted in serious loss of life. A serious outbreak of cholera recently occurred at Hooghly-Chinsurah, which was due, as pointed out by the Civil Surgeon, to the inadequate supply of water. The shortage of supply was the result of the failure of the municipality to maintain a sufficient stock of coal at the water-works. The Sanitary Board and the Sanitary Engineer have on several occasions pointed out to the Municipal Commissioners the danger of keeping such a small quantity of coal in stock, and in February last the Sanitary Board advised them to keep a six months' supply in reserve.'

"When the Hon'ble Member who presides with such conspicuous ability over the affairs of the Howrah Municipality raises the question of the necessity of keeping six months' supply of coal, I may point out that that is a recommendation not of the Government but of the Sanitary Board. Well, it is possible that four or five months' stock of coal might be deemed adequate. But I may point out that in the case of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality the supply was reduced to one or two days ; indeed they had to burn firewood on one or two occasions in order to keep the water-works going at all, because there was no coal available.

"But although the greatest amount of stress has been laid upon the inability of the Municipal Commissioners to manage the water-works, that is by no means the only respect in which they have failed in the discharge of their duties.

"In the note of the audit of the Municipal accounts which was dated 13th November, 1917, the Examiner of Local Accounts observed that the taxation accounts were in a deplorable condition, and in his annual report for 1917-18, dated 1st September last, the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, after referring to the fact that the Municipal Commissioners had appointed neither a Health Officer nor a Sanitary Inspector as required by the statutory rules of Government, went on to say as follows: 'There has been a lack of supervision over the Municipal staff with the result that serious irregularities and embezzlements have occurred, heavy arrears of taxes have accumulated, large outstanding liabilities have not been met, and the closing balances have been unduly reduced. The outstanding liabilities are considerable and the financial position is very unsatisfactory. This is partly due to the imposition of an inadequate water-rate, the income from which is insufficient to meet the charges for water-supply.' As a matter of fact, a further examination of the accounts by the Commissioner showed that the actual cash balances on the 31st August was only Rs. 225-8, while the amount due on account of unpaid bills which had actually been received by the Commissioners aggregated Rs. 24,368. It was also estimated that in addition to the bills that had been received, there were further outstanding liabilities amounting to an additional Rs. 5,000, so that in all the municipality was in debt to the extent of approximately Rs. 30,000. Well, that was the position when on the 6th September last the Government Inspector of Water-works made a further inspection, and sent in a report to Government which showed that all previous warnings had been quite useless and that no notice whatever had been taken of the repeated and accumulated warnings of 3½ years and it was under these circumstances that on the 8th September I requested the Maharaja-dhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan—as I was very anxious, if possible, that the municipality should get one further chance—to invite the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the municipality to meet him and to inform them that greatly though we should deplore the necessity of taking over the administration ourselves, yet in view of all the past history which lay before us, we should feel compelled to do so unless the Municipal Commissioners found themselves in a position to comply with certain requests which we made to them by a certain date. Well, that in brief is the position so far as Hooghly-Chinsurah is concerned.

"I noticed that the Hon'ble Member who moved this motion described the action of Government yesterday as punitive action. He spoke perpetually of the punishment which Government were inflicting, not only upon the Commissioners but upon the ratepayers and the public. If I may say so, that illustrates the extraordinary difference in the point of view from which the Hon'ble Member approaches this matter, and from which I do. I never regarded this action as a punishment inflicted by Government like a school master inflicting a punishment upon a recalcitrant school boy. Nothing of the sort. I realized that since repeated warnings had failed to effect an improvement and since as a result of continued maladministration of their affairs the Commissioners found themselves on the verge of bankruptcy, the best service which Government could render to the municipality and to the ratepayers was to take over, for such period only as to enable them to pull the affairs of the municipality together, the administration. I do not regard it as a punishment. I regard it as a service rendered by Government to the public.

"The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said yesterday that he wondered very much what improvement had been effected by the Government since they had taken charge. Well, the Government have had charge of this municipality's affairs for a very short time, but I am happy to say, according to the latest report which has reached me, that a very gratifying measure of success has already rewarded the efforts of the District Magistrate in putting the affairs of the municipality into shape. I would like to take this opportunity of publicly expressing my appreciation of the whole-hearted way in which the District Magistrate, Mr. Mookerjee, who has just left Hooghly and who is now succeeded by another very able officer, Mr. Moberley, threw himself into the task, the very thankless task of pulling the affairs of the municipality together. Let me tell you briefly what the report says: It says that when he took over the administration of the municipality he found Rs. 32,000 due to the Board from the ratepayers. Some thousands of this sum had been outstanding for various periods running back as far as 1909-10, which again disproves the suggestion of the Hon'ble Member that we have been acting in haste. Between Rs. 10,000 and Rs. 11,000, over one-third of the total sum outstanding, has already been collected by the Magistrate. In view of the fact that many of these sums have been outstanding for periods of 4, 6, 7 and 8 years and many of them must necessarily be wholly irrecoverable; I think the Magistrate must be congratulated upon the fact that within this very short period of a few weeks he has already been successful in collecting one-third of the total outstanding liabilities of the ratepayers. Then again, so far as the water-works are concerned, since the Commissioners were superseded, about 280 tons of coal have already been secured for the water-works and there is now already more than four months' supply in stock. In view of that I find it a little bit difficult to understand the plea of the Municipal Commissioners that they were unable to obtain coal. When the Magistrate took over charge, the cash balance was Rs. 850 only. The collections which he has made and which I have already spoken of, have enabled him to pay off nearly Rs. 10,600 worth of liabilities, while he has a cash balance in hand of some Rs. 2,300. Nevertheless there are still very considerable outstanding liabilities which it will be essential for us to endeavour to discharge during the coming months, and I fear, therefore, that it may be some time before it will be possible for us to place the affairs of the municipality upon a completely firm foundation once more. We shall do our best.

"Well, then, so far as the municipality of Burdwan is concerned, if I may say so, there seemed to me to be an extraordinary unanimity of opinion amongst Hon'ble Members that the Municipal Commissioners in this case were unworthy of the trust imposed in them. I do not know whether it was the intention of the Hon'ble Member who moved this motion to in any way defend them; I do not think it was. If it was his intention, then he has succeeded only in damning them with faint praise. As in the case of the Hooghly Commissioners, warning after warning has been unsuccessful in bringing about any improvement in their conduct of affairs. When I had occasion personally about a year ago to look into the affairs of this municipality I was so impressed with the astonishing laxity of control over the whole administration that I felt called upon to go the length of issuing a personal warning to them. Speaking in Burdwan on the 9th January, I felt called upon to use these words: After I had referred to the outstanding liabilities and the unfortunate financial position of the municipality, I said:— 'On enquiry as to the cause of this unfortunate state of affairs, I am told that the proper procedure of issuing warrants each quarter has not been followed by you, and that last year very few warrants were issued after the first quarter. From this fact, and from other reports which I have received, I am forced to the conclusion that the affairs of the municipality have not been conducted with the efficiency which the ratepayers are entitled to expect. Where I have found so many grounds for praise—I would mention here that the grounds which I found for praise were in connection with the administration of the District Board not the Municipal Board—it is distasteful to me to have to impute blame and I content myself therefore with expressing an earnest hope that future reports of the working of your municipality will be of a more reassuring nature than those which I have received hitherto.' Unfortunately my warning passed unheeded, and on the 20th August last the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division reported as follows:— 'The collection of taxes in the year 1917-18 were worse than in any previous year. The uncollected balances at the close of the year amounted to Rs. 38,855 or more than a third of the whole current demand.' Later on in the same report, he says 'the serious irregularities and embezzlements which had been disclosed are due to the failure of the Chairman, and Vice-Chairman to exercise any supervision over the municipal staff.' May I here enter a respectful protest against what appeared to me to be a certain indifference with which the Hon'ble Member who moved this motion spoke of irregularities in this connection? He said that in fact they were the ordinary things which we must expect not only in the case of municipalities and District Boards, but in Government Departments, and, in fact, in every department of public life. Well, I very strongly dissent from an attitude of this kind; we have got to do everything that lies in our power to show our horror and detestation and our astonishment at the occurrence of irregularities of this kind; and I would respectfully suggest to the Hon'ble Member, though I am sure he did not mean to create this impression, that it will not help us to spread that attitude throughout the whole range of our public bodies if they read in the reports of the debates held in this Council speeches in which these matters are spoken of as no doubt unfortunate, but still as matters which are more or less as inevitable as the rising of the sun. What we want to do is to do away with that attitude and that idea. What we want to create in the public life in this Presidency is the feeling that these things must not occur, and if they do occur, they must be stamped out with all the vigour which it is possible to apply to them. So far as this particular aspect of the case is concerned in connection with the Burdwan Municipality, I have been so impressed with the seriousness of it, that I consider it necessary to order an enquiry into the matter; a Committee is about to be appointed which will consist of an experienced accounts officer deputed by the Accountant-General and an experienced Magistrate to enquire into and investigate these matters, and pending a report of that Committee, I do not propose to dwell at any great length upon that aspect of the maladministration which has taken place in Burdwan.

"Now, I have explained frankly and I hope clearly, the reason why Government have taken this action. Far from our regarding our action as likely to discredit the capacity of the people for managing their own affairs, it seems to us that when we did find obvious and glaring cases of maladministration covering a long period of time, it would be to the advantage of the cause of self-government if we showed that we should not overlook matters of this kind. And in conclusion I would venture respectfully to make this suggestion to the Hon'ble Members of this Council. No one is more zealous for the honour and reputation of this Council than I am. Let Hon'ble Members realise that when they are asked to cast their vote upon a question of this kind, they are being asked to exercise a grave responsibility. Let every Hon'ble Member consider for himself what will be the effect of the vote which he casts. Is it not obvious in view of the record of these two municipalities that every vote cast for this resolution will be interpreted by those who are looking eagerly at the present time at the working of the Legislative Councils in this country as a vote given in condonation of inefficient public administration. It can be regarded as nothing else by an impartial observer. I can sympathise with Hon'ble Members when they have to come to a decision as to how they are to cast their vote. I know the sympathy which they must feel with the Municipal Commissioners who have for a short time only been relieved of their responsibilities, but they must remember that those who are looking on, who are assessing and estimating the capacity of the members of the Councils in this country to discharge onerous and wider duties will not be impressed by any vote which is given upon sentimental grounds. Hon'ble Members in this Council have the opportunity now to show that they are capable of rising above personal feelings and above sentiment; they have the opportunity now of showing that they are capable of casting their vote not in accordance with personal feelings or sentiment, but in accordance with reason and in the best interests of the public. Let me impress upon them once more, and these shall be my last words, that these supersessions are not punishments. This action has been taken only under stress of what appeared to the Government to be grave necessity. The primary object of the action is so to pull the affairs of these mismanaged municipalities together that when the time comes for the ratepayers to elect new representatives, these representatives will not be hampered by finding themselves placed in charge of bankrupt concerns, but will be given a fair and fresh start which will enable them to display a proof of their public spirit and their capacity adequately to manage their own affairs."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

“ My Lord, after the speech delivered by Your Excellency it will be rather bold on my part to press this resolution before this Council, but I want to offer a word of explanation.

“ In the first place, with reference to the Burdwan Municipality, I began by saying yesterday, and I repeat it to-day, that I did not stand here as an apologist for the defunct Municipal Commissioners. I venture to say that I do not even attempt to give them a whitewash. I told this Council that I shared the opinion of the Government that they had failed in their duty. It was, my Lord, after the 9th of January last—if I am correct, only in the third week of January—that the ratepayers formed that association and in a notice which they issued calling a public meeting of the ratepayers, they said that the meeting was called to form an association as a check upon the neglect of duty of the Municipal Commissioners.

“ My object in introducing this debate in this Council was not to whitewash the Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan, but to inform Your Excellency's Government in this Council that the ratepayers were quite alive to the fact that their representatives in the Corporation had failed to do their duty, and that they were very anxious to pass a judgment on their conduct, and in the course of this speech, if I referred to some of the good works done by the Commissioners, it was to show that I did not come here simply to abuse them or run them down. I am glad to know, my Lord, that a Committee is to be appointed to look into the whole matter, and that will of course clear up many things in connection with the municipal affairs of Burdwan that want clearing up.

“ There was one remark made by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley yesterday, that a fresh election was not allowed because it was apprehended that it would not be a straight election. I know more than anybody else that in the election three years ago there were some grave irregularities. I know that some of my friends submitted a petition to the District Magistrate, Mr. Marr, who was then in charge of the district, stating the irregularities and he sympathetically considered the question, but said that under the Municipal Act he had no authority to interfere. I then brought his written order to the Hon'ble Nawab Syed Sir Shamsul Huda; he also said that the Municipal Act was defective, and remarked that the next time the Act was under amendment, this matter would be taken into consideration. In Your Excellency's speech to which we have just listened, you have said that for three years they have been guilty of these lapses. I admit that it has been so, but during these three years, the ratepayers had no opportunity of judging their conduct or passing their verdict on their work because when once elected the ratepayers cannot unseat them, and it is only after three years that they can pass their judgment and if I asked for the withdrawal of these orders, I did so because I wanted the ratepayers to express their views on the conduct of the Municipal Commissioners and the executive officers of the now defunct Burdwan Municipality.

“ My Lord, the Commissioners complain and in speaking on this resolution I feel it my duty to explain that in the case of Burdwan, of course, warnings were given but no explanation was asked for; as in the case of Hooghly they were not told to do certain things within a certain period on the threat of supersession. However, as regards the supply of coal in the case of Hooghly, much has been said and I do not like to dilate upon this matter further. Besides, I have not much personal experience of this matter beyond those facts which I have placed before this Council.

“ As regards the ratepayers, I can only say that this supersession of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality has caused great excitement among the ratepayers of Hooghly. They held a public meeting and expressed themselves in unequivocal terms and the meeting was presided over by a gentleman who never interested himself with public affairs or at any rate who never appeared on the public platform. He himself remarked that it was the gravity of the situation and the necessity of the case that made him come out of his seclusion and preside over a public meeting; and that public meeting expressed its appreciation of the services rendered by the late Chairman of the Hooghly-Chinsurah Municipality. I am also gratified to find that Your Excellency has appreciated the services which have been rendered by the late Chairman. I still express the hope that the Government will reconsider the resolutions that have been passed, and that a smaller period of suspension will be fixed and that the ratepayers of Burdwan and Hooghly will be asked to elect their representatives much sooner than the period fixed by the Government resolutions.

"My Lord, in view of the grave importance of the questions involved and of the fact that my non-official colleagues have taken a lively interest in this matter, I would ask Your Excellency's permission to allow me a little more time—say five minutes—to consult my non-official friends as to whether I should withdraw or press the resolution."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I am afraid that it would be very irregular to adjourn the debate for a purpose of his kind. The Hon'ble Member has had enough time—the whole of Tuesday and this morning—to consult his friends, and I am sorry that I cannot allow an adjournment for him to consider the matter further."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"May I have Your Excellency's permission to put the resolution in two parts before this Council?"

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I am prepared to meet the Hon'ble Member in his desire that the motion be put in two halves. I will put the motion regarding Burdwan first."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, in view of the fact that a committee is going to be appointed I beg to withdraw the resolution regarding Burdwan."

The following portion of the resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn, namely :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the orders of supersession of the municipality of Burdwan be reconsidered and withdrawn."

The following portion of the resolution was then put to the vote, namely :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the orders of supersession of the Municipality of Hooghly-Chinsurah be reconsidered and withdrawn."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

The PRESIDENT said :—

"I may perhaps add a word in further explanation of the position. As I said in the course of my remarks, our object is to give the new Municipal Boards when they come into existence a clean sheet to start with. That being so, if I find from the reports which I receive that the Government officers have been enabled to pull things round in a shorter period than one year, then I should be prepared to consider the question of ordering election sooner. (Applause.) But from the present reports that I have received I cannot say that I feel very sanguine that it will be possible to do that in less than one year."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The following resolution which, stood in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, was, by leave of the President, withdrawn:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the members of the Provincial Executive Service, acting as personal assistants to the Commissioners of Divisions and to the Inspector-General of Registration be, granted a special allowance.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that an inquiry be made by the Government into the nature and extent of the alleged prevalence of corrupt practices amongst the ministerial staff of the mufassal courts, and that necessary action be taken to improve the existing state of affairs.

He said:—

"My Lord, the Secretary to the Council has put in the word "alleged" in my resolution. English is not my mother tongue and I speak subject to correction, that this word carries with it a challenge that my statement must be substantiated. I did not think that the fact of the existence of corrupt practices amongst the ministerial staff required any proof. As it is, it is a self-evident truth and nothing but the truth. However, if the introduction of the word is meant as a challenge, let me quote a few extracts from some of the many letters which I have received from all parts of Bengal, written by people most competent to express an opinion on the subject:—

British Indian Association:—

'Fully sympathise with your object which is indeed a laudable one.'

East Bengal Landholder's Association:—

'The magnitude and extent of hardships to which the litigant public are often subjected, baffle all description. The committee lend their whole-hearted support to your proposal which should engage the immediate serious attention of the Government.'

North Bengal Zamindars' Association:—

'A very nauseating, not to say dismal, state of things, will present itself before the public eye.'

Dinajpur Landholders' Association:—

'The association fully supports your resolution.'

Murshidabad Association:—

'Your resolution has full sympathy and support of the Association.'

Anjuman-i-Islamia:—

'This Anjuman has full sympathy with the object of your resolution. The sufferings of the public are inestimable.'

Provincial Muhammadan Association:—

'Strongly supports the resolution.'

The Hon'ble Maharaja Bahadur of Cossimbazar, Member of the Imperial Legislative Council:—

'Something should be done to put them down as soon as possible.'

Burdwan Bar Association :—

'The evil has taken possession of all the districts of Bengal, and it is now high time that rigorous efforts should be made to root it out.'

Malda Bar Association :—

'The prevalence of corrupt practices amongst the ministerial staff has become notoriously prejudicial to the parties in civil and criminal courts and seriously affects the public. Steps should be taken to effectively check it.'

Berhampore Bar Association :—

"Inquiry should be made by the Government into the nature and extent of the prevalence of corrupt practices among the ministerial staff."

Fabna Bar Association :—

'Corrupt practices are prevalent amongst the ministerial staff. . . . The Association is willing to make suggestions if the Government be pleased to make an inquiry and take steps to remedy the evil.'

Noakhali Bar Association :—

'Emphatically denounce the corrupt practices that obtain amongst the ministerial staff in mufassal courts.'

Khulna Bar Association :—

'Relieve the poor mufassal litigants from the widespread malpractices of the generality of the ministerial staff of mufassal courts.'

Tippera Bar Association :—

'Court officers take illegal gratifications from litigants. . . . We approve of your moving the resolution.'

Bankura Bar Association :—

'It is needless to say that the practices are rampant.'

Fatikehari Bar Association (Chittagong) :—

'We cannot help blushing with shame and utter disgust when we see the atmosphere so surcharged with the bacilli of this demoralising malady. . . . if evidence of general repute be of any avail as in cases under sections 109 and 110 of Code of Criminal Procedure . . . 90 per cent. of the ministerial staff will be lodged within the high walls of the jails.'

Keshoregunj Bar Association (Mymensingh) :—

'It is a patent fact that, with only microscopic exceptions, corrupt practices have for a long time been prevailing amongst the ministerial staff . . . Every effort should be made as early as possible to remove them, as they are increasing daily in undue proportions and assuming gigantic shape.'

Jhenida Bar Association (Jessore) :—

'Strongly protests against the prevalence of corrupt practices amongst the ministerial staff . . . and urges that immediate and effective steps should be taken by the Government for their suppression.'

Bolepur Bar Association (Birbhum) :—

'There is no doubt that the members of the ministerial staff are corrupt to the backbone and their conscience has become entirely callous.'

Kasba Bar Association (Tippera) :—

'The evil practice is of such long standing and magnitude that it is strange that it has escaped the notice of the Government.'

Satkania Bar Association (Chittagong) :—

'Corrupt practices amongst the ministerial staff have really become a serious menace to the litigants. . . . an effective redress is essentially necessary.'

Feni Bar Association (Noakhali) :—

'The corruptions of the ministerial staff must be put a stop to by all means.'

Basirhat Bar Association (24-Parganas) :—

'We are fully aware of the malpractices which have been going on for a long time . . . and view with alarm the extent to which these corrupt practices have spread.'

Kurigram Bar Association (Rangpur) :—

'If the Government remain indifferent in the matter, corrupt practices will be gradually increased and the litigant public would be put to much inconvenience and difficulty.'

Nator Bar Association (Rajshahi) :—

'We are smarting under the grievances with no prospect of any redress. . . . Things are going from bad to worse.'

"To this I might add my personal testimony. My Lord, fresh from the University, I was sent direct to my father's zamindari, and I carried with me all the high ideals of a young graduate and a sportsman. I remember very well that within a few days of my arrival there I was asked to pass a pleader's bill in which we had submitted to the grossest possible illegal exactions of court officials, beginning from the Sheristadar down to the petty peons. Exactions were made right and left, for filing the plaint, for entering hajira of witnesses, for serving summonses, for drawing up a decree, for returning the papers filed, for cashing the cheque, and I do not know for what not. I can hardly tell you, Sir, what my feelings then were. I could not believe that such things were possible in a British Court of Justice. But our old Dewan pointed out that there was no other alternative but to submit to these extortions. I paid no heed to his words and stopped all such payments. But the result was disastrous. The Dewan was right, and I was overruled by superior authority. Ever after this, through all these years, I have tried my best, in all possible ways, to oppose these exactions, but I have been very seldom successful.

"I hope that these statements would satisfy even the most exacting Judge.

"I do not know whether the Member in charge proposes to argue the point by quoting statistics of formal complaints and actual convictions. I took some pains to get at these figures, but I find that their number is not very high. I do not know whether it is intended to make capital out of this. But I submit that these statistics do not prove anything in matters like these. For obvious reasons, when a man submits to the illegal demands of the court people, he dare not make a formal complaint. Law does not spare the man who pays illegal gratifications. Again in cases where no such gratification is actually paid, no strong case lies against the person who demands a gratification and, moreover, it is very difficult to prove such a mere demand. But let me say without any fear of contradiction that many such cases of unfair demands and illegal extortions are informally brought to the notice of the presiding officers who generally finish them off with a verbal warning to the ministerial officer concerned, a warning which enters through his one ear to get out of the other then and there.. My Lord, I have been told by some officials that the best way to cope with the evil would be not to give any illegal gratifications at all. They, in fact, blame us more than their ministerial staff for the prevalence of corrupt practices amongst the latter. To cherish a good opinion of one's own people is a well-known human failing and I do not blame the officials for their attitude. But I must say that their advice regarding withholding illegal payments has no meaning in practice. We would call a man either a fool or eccentric if he were to allow his case, involving important rights and interests, to be lost simply on account of his conscientious objections to submit to illegal but inevitable exactions of the creatures of the court.

"To try to improve the morals of the ministerial staff of mufassal courts, who are corrupt to the backbone, by asking the litigants not to pay them anything even at the risk of incurring great personal loss is, I should say, the Chinese way of facing a difficulty. The ways of the English are quite different. To be afraid of taking up a good work because it is difficult, is alien to British instincts. I know the work before us is very difficult but I also know that I am appealing to the British Government for redress. I earnestly hope that no attempt will be made by the member in charge to oppose this motion but a helping hand would be stretched out to us to tackle the question in true British spirit. I do not say that matters would be set right at once, but much good would result by an inquiry into the nature and extent of the prevalence of corrupt practices. It would undoubtedly help us to devise means for securing an effective check to these pernicious practices. I consider an official inquiry essential, as it is impossible for a layman to suggest the right course of action. So far as my experience goes, I find that a certain procedure followed in courts greatly help the ministerial staff to carry on their trade of illegal exactions with impunity. To give one example, I might say that all plaints are filed before the sheristadar who without assigning any reason for it in writing is authorised not to admit any plaint which, in his opinion, does not conform to legal technicalities. Under cover of this extraordinary power, he can refuse to admit any plaint for which a filing fee is not paid into his pocket. Now if it be laid down that any refusal to admit a plaint should be reported to the presiding officer and the orders should be passed under his signature, I think an effective check could be put to exactions of this nature. I could give many instances of this kind, but the best course would be to institute an official inquiry into the matter, because official knowledge and experience would be extremely valuable for the purpose of making practical suggestions in such matters. My Lord, I have left to the Government to decide what should be the mode of the inquiry. I would, however, suggest that a special officer of some experience might be deputed to make a sifting inquiry. Much, of course, will depend on the selection of the right man. He must be sympathetic and painstaking and imbued with a desire to get at the root of the matter solely with a view to bring about an improvement in the existing state of affairs. The nature of the inquiry ought to be informal. Witnesses should not be scared away by threats of prosecution for paying illegal gratifications or the like. I do not want him to report against individual members of the staff; this would complicate matters. What I want is that he should make such feasible suggestions as would enable the Government to effect a change for the better at once without incurring heavy expenditure for the purpose. In this connection I might say that some people are of opinion that the pay of the ministerial staff should be increased. But I do not agree with them. Clerks in the Postal and Registration Departments do as much responsible work and are recruited from the same class of people, with same qualifications as the clerks in the mufassal courts, and though they do not get higher pay, yet the Postal Department is one of the best managed and the least corrupt of the Government Departments and the Registration Department, too, is comparatively pure. The real thing is that it is the system that is rotten in our mufassal courts and this requires a thorough overhauling.

The Hon'ble BABU AMBIKA CHARAN MAZUMDAR said :—

"My Lord, I feel a little delicacy in having to speak something against this motion. The resolution before us may be called a 'purity-resolution', and anyone having regard to purity and sanctity would naturally feel some reluctance in standing against a resolution of this kind. But I may be permitted to say to the hon'ble mover of this resolution that anyone who is older than 32 years of age has got a different experience of our courts from what has been given expression to by my hon'ble friend. It seems to be undeniable that the morale of our ministerial services has considerably improved during the last 30 years. My friend has given this Council a harrowing description supplied by a member of Bar Associations in different parts of Bengal which all go to show that there is prevalence of corruption and corrupt practices.

"My Lord, I have been practising in one of the heaviest mufassal bars for the last 45 years, and I think I owe it to myself to bear testimony to the fact that what I have seen of them when I entered the profession and what I now see of them is perfectly different; they are now considerably improved, and my hon'ble friend's remark seems to be rather sweeping; he says that this corrupt practice prevails from the highest to the lowest—from the Sheristadar down to the lowest ministerial officer. But I have experience of a man who drawing the poor pay of a muharrir of a record-room in a collectorate on Rs. 30 a month has never touched a single pice by way of illegal gratification, and this is not a solitary instance; many of the ministerial staff at the present day are above reproach; they live from hand to mouth but still they do not yield to temptation. I do not deny that there are some black sheep even now and they ought to be eradicated. But, My Lord, to ask for an inquiry in a matter of this description would be something like mounting a long-range gun to kill a swarm of gnats. They are ill-paid and they live from hand to mouth. There are corruptions and malpractices even in higher spheres of life, and if we have to begin the operation we have to begin from above, and not from below. I do not for one moment contend that they should not be above reproach but to make them above reproach you ought to make their salaries sufficient to enable them not to yield to temptation. I would have thought that my friend would have brought forward a resolution to increase the pay of ministerial officers, but of course he has told us that he is not in favour of that and he wants that these people might be even starved and still expected to create a Utopia for us. I do not consider that this resolution is at all desirable; no doubt, there are some officers who invariably take illegal gratifications although they are not in straitened circumstances, but still I do not think that their number is so large as to justify an inquiry. There is a standing order of Government that heads of departments ought to see that there are no malpractices in their courts and offices. I know of some officers and some Judges and Collectors who do take care to see whether there is this malpractice or not. A reminder given to them now and then is quite enough. A lengthy process of inquiry into a matter like this seems to me to be quite out of proportion to the evil complained of."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I do not oppose the motion altogether as I see that the Hon'ble Member has been approached by many Bar Associations and other respectable bodies, but at the same time I sympathise with the ministerial staff as regards their very inadequate pay. If anything is to be done—and something should be done—their position should be considered. It should also be considered whether their pay is sufficient to maintain themselves and their families; if it is not sufficient then I think something should be done to raise their pay. They have hardly any time to supplement their income by doing extra work. I do not oppose the motion, but what I want is that something should be done for these ministerial officers. If an inquiry is going to be held, I hope that their position will also be taken into consideration by the Committee."

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR said :—

" My Lord, when I read the notice of motion of the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekareswar Ray it reminded me of the terms of the Government resolution relating to the formation of the late Rowlatt Committee. Most of us knew of the existence of seditious conspiracy, but the Government chose to appoint a Committee to inquire as to whether such a thing, whether such a seditious conspiracy, existed or not. Well, in that view, the terms of the present resolution of the Hon'ble Member may be supported, i. e., if you are going to take measures to check malpractices amongst the ministerial staff of the mufassal courts then you must commence with an inquiry. I do not think that the inquiry will do much good because nobody will come forward to tell the Committee that he has been receiving bribes or giving bribes. Therefore the inquiry will be on the reports of people who have the impression that such malpractices obtain amongst the ministerial staff of the mufassal courts. That is the only way the inquiry can be conducted. My Lord, I was once connected with a court not far from Government House for a pretty long time. I have lost touch with them for about 10 years and, therefore, before making up my mind to take any part in this discussion on this resolution, I thought it better to obtain up-to-date information about the working of the ministerial staff of these courts. After inquiry I was confirmed in the view which I entertained at the time, that at the present time the heads of departments are free from corruption. I suppose that is also the case in the distant mufassal courts. As regards the staff which come in the lower ranks there is corruption, and that corruption is a thing which can be checked.

" My hon'ble friend on my right has sotto voce referred to the Calcutta Small Cause Court. In my opinion the resolution does not cover that court, and I suppose the hon'ble mover is not aware of the state of things in the Calcutta Small Cause Court. There also is corruption amongst the lower ranks. The law is clear in these cases, it requires no amendment. You can punish the giver and the taker of a bribe, but the difficulty is that these things are done in secret and it is only the giver and the taker who can be witnesses, and as they would be liable to punishment under the law neither of them would be keen in giving evidence. If the law requires amendment it would be in the direction of doing something to take away the penalty from one of the parties, but upon that point I cannot express any positive opinion at the present moment. The present attitude of the presiding officers of these courts, I speak subject to correction, is that unless a thing comes directly to their knowledge they seldom go out of their way to take special efforts to check bribery. When a case of bribery comes to their knowledge, if there is insufficient evidence, they do their duty by dismissing the man whom they suspect, but this has not been a great deterrent. Unless you employ special detective officers of the police you cannot ferret out these cases of bribery in the law courts. The remedy lies not simply in punishing the wicked, not simply in punishing the corrupt ministerial officers, or the process-server, who is a great culprit. They have their excuses. The process-server has been only receiving Rs. 6 a month in pre-war times, and during the period of the war he has been paid Rs. 7 or Rs. 7-8, and this rate has been temporarily increased to Rs. 10 now. Committees have been formed who have recommended the increase in the salaries of ministerial officers; the last Committee sat a few years ago with the Hon'ble Justice Holmwood as its president. This Committee did not suggest any real increase of salaries, but revised the rates of increment; there has been no substantial increase, and unless you increase salaries in accordance with the responsibility you place on these people, this state of things will continue. I do not agree with the Hon'ble Member who refers to the Postal Department, a most popular department, as an example. In this country there is no corruption in this department, not in the Registration Department. But their responsibilities are not the same. That accounts for the absence of corruption in these departments and the prevalence of corruption in the law courts. You cannot exactly argue from the absence of corruption in the Postal Department, where the postal peon can tamper with letters without delivering them to the addressee, as the system of supervision in the Postal Department is such that you can easily detect and dismiss the peon at once. That is not the case in the law courts and I would, therefore, suggest that you make an inquiry—it is high time that an inquiry should be made, and something done to check malpractices. Salaries in the lower ranks should also be revised and raised according to the responsibility given to these men and the powers vested in them. The worst offender is the process-server. Something should be done in the same way as has been done in the Police Department. It is a scandal that a suitor has to submit to being fleeced by these people attached to the lower courts before he can get some sort of justice. Something has been said, and I regret that it has been so said by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, that corruption prevails in higher posts and higher quarters, and that these humble people with small salaries should not be judged too harshly. I am very sorry that the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has chosen to give expression to such remarks. I am a student of these things, and I certainly think that the higher services—I mean the Subordinate Judicial and Subordinate Executive as also the Civil Service—are free from corruption in this country."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar interrupting said :—"The Hon'ble Member is not correct in his statement. I never mentioned the Civil Service or the Judicial Service at all."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—"I am glad to hear that. With these observations I do support the motion of my friend the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I am long past the age of 32, and have yet to wait a long time before I can reach the venerable age of my friend the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar and, therefore, I am still in a position to support the motion of my friend the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray. I support this motion, My Lord, because it is an admitted fact, although positive proof cannot be easily given at a moment's notice, that there is a general complaint throughout the Presidency that the exaction in law courts has become intolerable. My Lord, I do not know whether the scandal was greater some 20 or 25 years before, and whether it is less now, but I don't think there should be any opposition to an inquiry. I am sorry this motion has been confined only to mufassal courts. I am not sure whether I shall be in order and, if Your Excellency will permit me to change the word 'mufassal' into 'law courts', it may extend the scope of the inquiry. If Government accept this motion it may embrace both Calcutta and mufassal courts."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"The Hon'ble Member must give notice of amendments when he wishes to move them."

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"I was doubtful, My Lord, whether this would be permitted, and I craved Your Excellency's permission; if that permission were given the inquiry would extend to all courts and not only to courts in the mufassal. I admit frankly that there are a large number of members of the ministerial staff who are honourable men, whether highly paid or not, and who are free from the corrupt practices which have been referred to. But, My Lord, from my experience of law courts, I consider that an inquiry is necessary. My Lord, as regards departmental heads, I have nothing to say. They are all honourable men and they, I believe, try their best to put down this evil, but I am afraid that, notwithstanding their desire to do so, and the existence of a standing Government order to which the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has referred, no effective check has been placed on these exactions."

Then, My Lord, my hon'ble friend to my Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, has mentioned salary of Rs. 6 a month. It is true that they other ministerial officers who are also ill; made it will be found that many of them both in have fallen victims to temptation. Of course, there are ministerial officers who are above temptation. However, I think that something should be done to put an effective check to the evil practice referred to.

the Hon'ble Rai process-servers on a men, but there are a thorough inquiry is and the mufassal

"Then, as regards the increase of the pay of these officers, I am sorry I cannot agree with the Hon'ble Mover, nor do I think that he can expect the Council to share his views, that the salary of these officers need not be increased. I do think that the salary of these ministerial officers requires improvement; they have got to live, and many of them do not earn a living wage and, therefore, they easily fall victims to temptation. If an inquiry is taken up, the Government will also take up the question of the revision of the salary of these officers. I have nothing more to say, but I hope the Government would make an inquiry into the matter and take necessary steps to put down the evil."

The Hon'ble MR. DUVAL said :—

"I fear the taking of illegal exactions in this country is undoubtedly one of very long standing, but it is by no means confined to some Government clerks and servants. To do what they can to prevent such exactions in mufassal offices the policy of Government has been to try and pay its officers a fair wage, and not to entertain unpaid agency. That system of unpaid agency has been abolished in recent years, and so has the system which was prevalent 20 years ago of having, in addition to unpaid assistants, a large number of officers who used to be paid by commission fees. I fear, however, that outside Government offices it is not the invariable rule to pay servants. In civil courts many pleaders employ clerks whom they do not pay, but leave it to the litigant to pay them something when they employ them, nor do I think that landlords pay their servants highly enough to prevent them seeking to add to their pay by petty exactions.

"Government believes that in its officers the evil is decreasing; but it can never wholly disappear except with the help of public opinion.

"As to the question of an inquiry, I would point out that full inquiries into the salaries of ministerial officers were made about 10 years ago, and the pay of lower grade clerks increased. Only a few months ago process peons too had their pay increased. When cases of such exactions come to the notice of District Officers and Judges the matter is always investigated, and the offender severely dealt with, if found guilty. Unfortunately, however, many of the charges made come to the District Officers anonymously in the shape of letters which cannot be investigated, and there is often difficulty in getting persons to come forward to prove allegations made. Government servants cannot any more be convicted on pure hearsay or suspicion. Government is, therefore, not prepared to hold a general inquiry at the present, but must continue to depend on its District Officers and Judges to deal with each charge on its merits as it is made."

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARWAR RAY said :—

My Lord, I admit that I am only 32 years of age, perhaps the youngest Member of this Council, but when the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Masumdar says that my youth stands in the way of properly appreciating the real state of affairs, My Lord, I certainly differ from him. I am rather of opinion that age brings with it a tolerant attitude because of its incapacity, owing to various causes, to move with the times. My Lord, a Bengali poet has sung about the crowning glory of youth "যুগ্ম যুগ্ম যুগ্ম" and I am a firm believer in its truth: it is youth which has won the war.

Even some Bar Associations of Faridpur district from which my friend hails have written to me about the prevalence of these practices. I do not admit that matters have improved. I tell the House from my personal knowledge that the filing fee in some of the courts has been doubled owing to the war. My Lord, I do not make the charge against all officers; there are many honourable exceptions. As for asking the presiding officers to keep an eye on the conduct of their ministerial staff, My Lord, I beg to point out that they are so overworked that it is not possible for them to keep an efficient check on their clerks. I personally know many officials who try hard to keep their courts pure, but they are helpless on account of some defects in the procedure. I am sure the Hon'ble Mr. Duval will bear me out, he has made himself famous on account of the concern he has shown for the morals of his court officials. Unless an inquiry is made, how is the Government to know what actions are necessary?"

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, although the ground on behalf of Government has been covered by what the hon'ble Mr. Duval has said, yet in the regrettable absence of my Hon'ble colleague the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, to whom the reply to this resolution would normally have fallen I might perhaps say a few words in the hope of making it clearer why we do not support an inquiry of the kind outlined by the Hon'ble Mover. It is not that we do not know that, unfortunately, corruption prevails in many Government offices, and it is not that we do not deplore the fact and do not desire by every means possible to root out these evil practices; but it is because we think that the expedient suggested of sending round a special officer to all districts will not have the desired effect. Local officers are aware of the facts and are already trying to check the evil. I know only of four main lines of check. One is to endeavour to improve the class of men recruited for Government services; that Government already does and is doing, and we are constantly trying to raise the standard of education among our officers. The second is to enhance the rate of their pay so as to put them beyond the temptation of taking bribes. As we all know, as funds permit, we are gradually doing this. The third is to adopt an organisation which brings these ministerial officers as far as possible under the supervision of reliable superior officers and does not place it their hands to take the initiative in executive matters. That also is an object which we strive to attain. The fourth is, when malpractices are brought to notice, to try energetically to root them out. When I was a Joint Magistrate and junior Collector it was my lot to be posted to a district in Bihar which had a very bad reputation in this matter. I was then young and energetic, and spent much of my time in seeking to check these evils. I punished a great many, from the sheristadar downwards, at the cost of a great deal of personal effort, and I believe I effected some improvement. That is the experience of most Government officers who are sitting here, but my point is that the remedy devolves upon the local officers and must rest with them. The deputation of one special officer will not help much.

"On the non-official side, there are two matters particularly in which help can be afforded. One is the strengthening of public sentiment and opinion, so as to ostracise and pillory those underlings in our courts who have the reputation of being bribe-takers and corrupt. The second is to come forward and to bring to the notice of superiors instances in which the public have suffered at the hands of subordinate officers. I think I can fairly assure the Council that the average superior officer is perfectly willing to energetically investigate any reasonable charge that is brought to his notice; and I think the Hon'ble Mover has underestimated the value of giving such information and the possibility of doing it. It means, no doubt, a certain amount of trouble to the person who suffers to go and complain to a superior officer, and he may feel that, rather than be so burdened, he would willingly pay eight annas or a rupee. That is a natural feeling. But unless people who do suffer will take the trouble to prosecute their charges and bring them home to those who are guilty, it is very difficult for Government officers to intervene.

“Sir, our position is that we do not deny the evil ; we all wish to see it rooted up, but we do not think that the deputation of a special officer will really help us in achieving that object.”

The resolution was then put and lost.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned to Thursday, the 19th December, 1918, at 11 A.M., at Government House, Calcutta.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the unusually high price of rice and pulses in the various districts in the Presidency of Bengal?

(b) Is it a fact that the price is on the increase?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they are taking in this matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN:—

“(a) The attention of Government has been drawn to the prices of rice and pulses in the various districts of the Presidency. As there seems to be a general misapprehension regarding the state of such prices, or at all events of rice, Government takes this opportunity of laying on the library table certain comparative statements regarding retail and wholesale prices (so far as available at the time of the preparation of this reply), which will show clearly what that state is. In the case of pulses it will be seen from them that, generally speaking, retail prices rose in the years 1914 and 1915, fell in 1916 and 1917 and have risen again above the level of the prices in 1914 and 1915. In the case of pulses there has undoubtedly been a considerable rise in retail prices

The price of rice, the staple food crop, has not behaved in the same manner. If anything, wholesale prices in the first fortnight of November are less than those which prevailed during the same period in the five years preceding 1917. Retail prices differ little from those prevailing at the same time in the years 1914, 1915 and 1916. They fell in 1917 and the first half of this year considerably on account of an abundant harvest last season. In July or August they began to rise again to the present level which, though they may be called high, cannot in these circumstances be termed unusual.

(b) The returns of the retail prices of rice for the week ending the 5th December show a slight increase on those in the return for the first week of November, but in some districts the price has remained stationary or has fallen slightly

(c) The following measures have been taken:—

(1) An arrangement has been come to by which the import of Rangoon rice, both of old and new crops, has been resumed under licenses to be granted by the Director of Civil Supplies of this Province. Dealings by importers in the new rice will only be allowed on condition that certain maximum selling prices are not exceeded. A copy of the terms upon which such import is allowed into Calcutta is laid on the table.

(2) The export of rice by rail from Bengal is prohibited except under orders of the Foodstuffs Commissioner. There are some relatively unimportant exceptions such as the coalfields adjoining the Province. In order to enable the Foodstuffs Commissioner to decide how much rice can safely be exported from Bengal, Government have recently caused special inquiries as to existing stocks to be made throughout the Province.

(3) Pulses can be imported, but in the case of imports from the Punjab, the United Provinces or the Central Provinces, certificates from the Director of Civil Supplies of this Province are required. The question of placing restrictions on the export of pulses is under consideration, but has not yet been decided,

Questions and Answers.

Hon'ble Members will realise for themselves that at the present juncture the distribution of foodstuffs is not a mere provincial matter, but is a matter of importance affecting the whole of India. Therefore such control as may be exercised is not in the interest of any one particular province, but has to be in the interests of all provinces."

Paper referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN to question No. II (starred) asked by the Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR at the Council Meeting held on the 19th December, 1918.

Terms upon which import of Rangoon Rice (new crop) will be allowed into Calcutta.

1. Licenses from the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, will be required for importation of Rangoon rice into Calcutta.
2. Licenses will not be general but will be valid only for the importation of such quantities as are named in the license.
3. They will not be transferable.
4. The names of the licensees and of their shippers in Rangoon and the quantities licensed will be telegraphed by the Director of Civil Supplies to the Rice Commissioner, Rangoon, and such communications will take the place of the formal export license which shippers of rice from Rangoon have to take out from the Rice Commissioner. Licenses will be valid for shipment in the month for which they are granted.
5. The right of granting or refusing a license to any particular firm or person at his discretion is reserved to the Director of Civil Supplies.
6. Licenses will not be granted by the Director of Civil Supplies except on his being satisfied that the applicant will sell at a price in Calcutta not exceeding the maximum selling price fixed by him.
7. Tonnage in Rangoon will be allotted by the Rice Commissioner to the shippers named by the licensees.
8. The maximum selling price in Calcutta for new crop Rangoon rice (Big Mill Specials) has been fixed at Rs. 5-1-0 per maund C. I. F., ^{and} _{or} Rs. 5-6-0 per maund ex godown.

Licenses for Import of Rangoon Rice (old crop).

Licenses for the import of Rangoon rice (old crop) will be granted on the same terms as above, save that there will be no maximum selling price fixed.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

(Answers to which were laid on the table.)

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

1. (a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XIII of the 3rd September last, will the Government be pleased to refer to the University Regulations and state the precise nature of the "information" referred to in clause (b) of the said answer as being "required by the University Regulations"?

University Regulations and uniformity of standards.

Questions and Answers:

(b) With reference to the " uniformity of standards " which the instructions contained in the Director of Public Instruction's letter No. 2253-2259-G., dated the 25th April, 1918, are stated to secure, will the Government be pleased to state whether such uniformity is specially aimed at by the University Regulations themselves, or is a departmental requirement? If the latter, are these instructions issued solely on the responsibility of the Director of Public Instruction?

(c) Is it a fact that these instructions go so far beyond the University Regulations as to require a higher standard to be satisfied by schools than is contemplated by the University authorities?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to regulations 2—5 in Chapter XXI of the University Regulations.

(b) A uniform minimum standard of efficiency is necessarily contemplated by the University Regulations. The instructions which were issued by the Director of Public Instruction departmentally aim at securing this standard and explaining in some detail the requirements necessary to satisfy the University Regulations.

(c) This does not appear to be the case. In these matters the Inspectors of the Education Department merely inspect and report for the Syndicate of the University, and the Director of Public Instruction merely advises the University authority, which is at liberty to accept or reject his recommendations."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

2.

(a) Are the Government aware of certain acts of oppression and high-handedness alleged to be practised by the officers and employes of the Hazidanga Indigo Factory in the district of Murshidabad upon tenants and labourers living in certain villages owned by the Midnapore Zamindari Company?

(b) Is it a fact that several petitions have been addressed by the said tenants and labourers to the District Magistrate and other authorities calling attention to these allegations and seeking redress thereof?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the purport of such petitions and what action, if any, has been taken thereon?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

"(a) Government are aware that certain persons have alleged the practice of some such acts.

(b) Yes.

(c) There were 2 complaints made to the police, 3 petitions to the Chairman, District Board, and 2 petitions to the District Magistrate.

The 2 police cases were dealt with magisterially. One of them forms the subject-matter of another Council question. In the other it was alleged by the complainant that while he was gathering fodder for his cattle, a Factory guard drove him away and took away his sickle. After a judicial inquiry the complaint was dismissed under section 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Questions and Answers.

Of the petitions, one related to the second police case just mentioned. In the second petition it was alleged that the Factory servants had forcibly seized the petitioners' cattle and imposed fines on them for their release. On inquiry by the Sadar Sub-Divisional Officer these allegations were found to be untrue. A third petition alleged the theft of a horse and the forcible seizure of another horse and cattle by the Factory servants. In the remaining two petitions the allegations were that the Factory compelled the petitioners to take advances for the cultivation of indigo and oats and destroyed their other standing crops, that the petitioners were paid insufficient wages and made to supply milk free of charge and that fines were imposed upon them. No action was taken on the last three petitions as they were not stamped."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

3.

Will the Government be pleased to state—

- (a) the approximate total area brought under indigo cultivation by the Midnapore Zamindari Company in the district of Murshidabad;
- (b) the persons in whose occupation the lands were, and the use to which they were put, previous to the introduction by the said company of indigo cultivation there;
- (c) the proportion of the said lands which belonged to the tenants;
- (d) the rates at which the company pay compensation to the tenants for having taken away such lands from their occupation; and
- (e) the average rate of rent payable by the tenants to their immediate landlords in respect thereof?

Indigo cultivation by the Midnapore Zamindari Company in the Murshidabad district.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McALPIN:—

"(a) The final forecast for indigo shows 5,100 acres of indigo cultivation in the district, of which 4,850 acres are probably for the Midnapore Zamindari Company.

(b), (c), (d) and (e) Government have no information on this matter."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

4.

(a) Is it a fact that a complaint was lodged by yats against one Kali Nath Maitra, an officer of the Hazidanga Indigo Factory, and others, on a charge of wrongful confinement, and that two associates of the said Kali Nath Maitra were sent up by the police for trial under sections 341 and 376 of the Indian Penal Code, but were acquitted by the Sadar Sub-Divisional Officer of Murshidabad?

The case of Kali Nath Maitra of the Hazidanga Indigo Factory

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of sending for the records of the said case and consulting the Legal Remembrancer as to the advisability of preferring an appeal against the said order of acquittal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DUVAL:—

- "(a) Yes.
(b) No."

*Questions and Answers.By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—*5.

(a) Are the Government aware that a petition has recently been submitted to the Commissioner of the Presidency Division, on behalf of the tenants, under-tenants and labourers of certain villages in the district of Murshidabad owned by the Midnapore Zamindari Company, calling attention to certain grievances and making serious allegations against the said company, and inviting an inquiry thereinto?

(b) If so, what steps have been taken, or are proposed to be taken, in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McALPIN:—

"(a) and (b) Government have ascertained from the Commissioner that such a petition was received and that it was sent to the Collector of Murshidabad for report. They have no further information."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—6.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) the qualifications of candidates which are taken specially into consideration when making selections for appointments to the Provincial Judicial Service; and

(ii) whether holders of a first class degree of B.L. are usually given preference over others in such selections?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of appointments made during each of the last three years, showing—

(i) how many of them were first class B.L.'s; and

(ii) how many first class B.L.'s were not given any appointment in each year?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DUVAL:—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Statutory rules published in notification No. 1784 A. of the 10th March, 1894.

(b) The number of appointments was six in each of the three years 1916—18. The number of first class B.L.'s appointed was one and four in the years 1917 and 1918 respectively. No first class B.L. was appointed in 1916."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—7.

Will the Government be pleased to state—

(a) what progress has been made in regard to the preparation of the Grand Trunk Canal scheme;

(b) what alterations, if any, has it undergone; and

(c) when it is expected to be taken in hand?

Questions and Answers.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

"(a) The revised project has been accepted by Government; the estimates will have to be modified in some respects owing to altered conditions.

(b) There have been no alterations in the scheme as designed.

(c) The project will require the sanction of the Secretary of State; it will, it is hoped, be submitted to the Government of India within the current financial year."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

8.

Will the Government be pleased to state when it is expected to co-ordinate the two text-book committees in the eastern and western districts of Bengal?

Co-ordination of text-book committees in Eastern and Western Bengal.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"The question of co-ordinating the text-book committees in the eastern and western districts of Bengal will be taken up when a uniform curriculum for the whole Presidency has been completed. It is at present impossible to say when a uniform curriculum will be ready."

By the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur:—

(e) The information is not available.

(k) Inspections are held at monthly intervals and sometimes oftener.
